The matter of student's rights to possession of cars while in school is a serious one; it cannot be dismissed lightly nor can it be decided by any few people. There are probably many students in possession of cars who neither need them nor use them very intelligently, but it is much more probable that the great majority of students who have cars in Chapel Hill have them here out of some degree of necessity. I might enumerate just a few of the reasons why students of the University need to bring their cars to Chapel Hill.

1.) Chapel Hill is without any train service and is accommodated by only partially satisfactory bus service.

2.) Many students now attending the University are forced to live long distances from the campus.

3.) Many students now attending the University are married and have families.

4.) Many students now attending the University are veterans who are either physically unable to walk anywhere they go or who are so pushed for time that they need cars to facilitate their movements about the town and campus.

We feel that, under the present circumstances, students at the University have every right to own and operate cars while attending the University. The matter of traffic regulation is clearly one for the University and the town authorities to work out; but the matter of the right of ownership and possession and use of cars is one of a far more basic nature and must be regarded as such.

The University Veterans Association is in direct opposition to any move to ban possession of cars by students and will fight any such move with every resource at its command.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

April Showers in October

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 25—The already long suffering Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina got another rude wakening this weekend, this time concerning the much ballyhooed Florida weather. The chamber of commerce was never so wrong.

Of course, there are those among the Floridians who will swear the Tar Heels brought the stuff with them, but there seems to be so much of it as to make this explanation a remote possibility. The whole thing sets one to wondering where the devil they got the sun-kissed oranges and sun-tanned baby dolls from. The rain comes down now and then to relieve the monotony of the whole proceedings, and it soaks the stadium and countryside for miles around in an abrupt answer to the prayers of the Florida and fourteen point players. If the Tar Heels have been saving their all for a rainy day, here is the ample opportunity to prove it.

The big entertainment of the whole show, that is withstanding the football game, is an attraction ably entitled the Gator growl. It has all the comforts of home. Precision marching girls, bands, skits, Al Schacht, everyone important in Florida from the Governor down to the janitor of the Capitol building, pajamas parade, and the kind of fireworks display that prompted Mr. F. Scott Key to write the Star-Spangled Banner. Throw in an air show with everything from BVDS to P-30 jet fighters, and you have an idea how some people go to entertain themselves and impress their visitors. They obviously succeeded in both departments.

After all this show, it is too bad that the fighting Gators can not leave the same impressive impression on the gridiron that they do elsewhere. Florida doesn't worry about it all, though, and lifts its head high while relating the story of building for future glorious Florida years. It is a project of terrific size and effort. Physically, like many other of the American institutions of learning, Florida is building too. It has a new gymnasium of mammoth proportions underway with completion date viewed as sometime late next year.

Florida can be a rising athletic power. It has athletic leaders with the energy and ability to raise the school from the depths of the Southeastern conference where it has wallowed in the mud of defeat for the past decade. Fear of the possibility of being dropped from the conference, and the pressure and support of alumni will be the reasons for the Gators' aim of big teams in big time athletics.

A welcoming face seen at the University of Florida is that of genial coach Ray "Bear" Wolf, who has a personality the size of the entire state of Florida. Everybody's friend and a great builder of athletes and men, Coach Ray is possibly the best liked fellow on the Gator campus with a smile for all, and the simple excuse that his boys will do the best, which may or may not be enough to win. Behind him Wolf has a competent staff of assistants, the most familiar to Tar Heel fans being amiable Paul Severin who saved the Duke game in 1940 for the Carolina entry by pulling Steve "Lookback" Lach down from behind in the now immortal Tar Heel 6-3 triumph. Wolf was at the Carolina helm at the time himself.

A forgotten bunch of fellows, who it has been said, can make or break a football team are its managers. Their work is never ended as they will undoubtedly be the first to tell you, but it is essentially important, and there is reason for a rousing pat on each of their supposedly calloused backs.

The boys, who at times seem to outnumber the ball team, fall heir to the transporting, loading, unloading, checking, cleaning, and repairing of the two tons of playing equipment required by a big-time grid aggregation. On the road trips their worries are doubled with the aid of absentminded red caps, porters, and footballers who forget, discard, or mislay something they will later find use for. In reality, the lift-that-barge-tote-that-bail boys are combination piano movers, nurse maids, waiters, and charwomen, not to name a thousand and-one more mentionable and unmentionable tasks that they fall heir to. 'Tis well there is some one to protect the working classes.

Cage List Cut To 42 Players

Over 20 men have been cut from the basketball squad and the remaining 42 will begin more concentrated workouts this week, Coach Tom Scott announced yesterday.

"I'm sorry that we had to turn down so many candidates," Scott declared, "but it's necessary that we pare the squad down to a more workable size. We'll probably have one more cut to about 35 players in another two weeks."

Present plans call for a division of the team some time during the coming week. Half of the players will continue to drill under Coach Scott and assistant Pete Mullis while Jim Hamilton, high scorer on last year's team but whose basketball eligibility is completed, will tutor the others.

The complete list:

W. C. Burgess, Coy Carson, King Cole, Johnny Dillon, Hal Ferraro, Floyd Gillmore, Stan Goodman, Thorne Gregory, Dick Hartley, Bill Harrington, Sandy Hoft, Terry Holmes, Allen Koenig, Norm Kohler, John Langley, H. Lebed, Ad Lineberger, Bill Miller, Norm Mitchell, Jack Moody, and Dale Morrison.

Also, Marvin Nathan, Mark Nathan, Nemo Nearman, Dan Nyimicz, Co-Captain Bob Paxton, Al Peters, George Powers, Rip Ryan, Roger Scholbe, Vic Seixas, John Stratford, Fred Swartzburg, Simon Terrell, Charlie Thorne, Taylor Thorne, John Tsantes, Ed Wagner, Harry Watkins, Harvey Weinstein, Bill White, and Charlie Wilkerson.

Three Teams Stage Saturday Workouts

Despite a calendar reading of Saturday, three Tar Heel teams held drills yesterday morning with two of them running through time trials.

Out on Fetzer field, Coach Dale Ranson sent his cross country team through its second successful time trial run of the week. "I'm really pleased with the great improvement some of the boys are showing," the harrier mentor stated. "We know some of the boys can do well, but it pleases me the way lads like Holden, Herty, Hooper, Hoots, and Bristow are improving. That's just what we need to give us a good team."

Other track news of the week has two of the distance men, Jimmy Miller and Jack Milne, turning in one-mile times of 4:26.5.

Tank Drills

Over in Bowman Gray pool, swimming Coach Dick Jamerson also sent his squad through time trials. Turning in the best times were Steve Osborne in the 100-meter free style, Bob Ousley and Dan Breeden in the breaststroke, and Sam McCauley and Ike Norwood in the distance event. Freshmen Hal Ingram, Joe Wratten, and Bert Sparer also finished in good times.

In the middle of the Fetzer field track, Coach Marvin Allen and his soccer team prepared for Tuesday's encounter against Duke with a morning scrimmage. The booters also oppose Virginia later in the week.

Rodgers Leads Carolina To Second Straight Win

Four plays later the Tar Heels were again ready to score, when Cox recovered a Florida fumble on the home team's 32 yard line. Justice lost three yards on the next play at tackle but Clements then made this up along with eight more. Rodgers gave the visitors a first down with three yards up the middle, putting the ball on the Gator 21.

A bad pass from center on the following play lost eight with Justice recovering, but then Rodgers tossed a short pass to Justice at a flanker position, the Asheville flayer taking the ball, dusting down the side line in and out of the arms of possible tacklers, finally reaching pay dirt unharmed for the third Tar Heel tally of the game. Cox again converted.

The Tar Heels kicked off to the Gators again, who being able to do nothing with the ball, kicked back, Justice kicking a nice return from his own 23 to the Florida 45. The Tar Heels immediately began another march goalward with Pupa and Fitch passing and running the ball to the Florida nine in eight plays. Here the Carolina lads picked up an offensive holding penalty, putting the ball back on the Florida 30.

A pass interception broke up the march at this point with Broadus returning Pupa's aerial to the Gator 34.

At this point Laz Lewis of the Gators started throwing the ball, his first successful venture being a toss to Rushing at the midfield stripe. Bob Forbes took the action into the running department, a few plays later, driving to the Carolina 37, where the Florida entry again stalled and the Tar Heels took over.

Florida Scores

Having little success with three plays, the Carolina boys kicked back, with Justice booting the ball to Beach on the Florida 16, who handed the ball to Loren Broadus. Broadus hit for the side-lines behind fine interference, cut up field, outraced the majority of Tar Heel defenders, then confronted with Justice on the Tar Heel 40, faked inside, the Choo Choo slipping to the turf, and then moving unmolested to the goal line.

Carolina was held scoreless in the third quarter, but the Tar Heels broke lose for two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

After Parker had punted out on the Carolina 40, Camp went 11 yards on a reverse to get things started. Maceyko added four at tackle, and then Rodgers tossed passes to Cox for 10, to Sherman for 12, gained five on a spinner, a play later threw to Maceyko for eight and a first down on the Florida 13. Two More Activities On Open House List

Two more activities will be featured in the third open house sponsored by the intramural department at Woollen gym tomorrow night.

Mural Director Walt Rabb announced that the swimming pool will be open on Monday evenings from 8 to 9 o'clock for all University students. Another new addition to the open house affair is the fencing program. Fencing equipment will be furnished by the mural department for those who are interested.

In addition, the usual activities of badminton, table tennis, handball, volleyball, and tumbling will continue.

If enough interest is shown in the forthcoming events on the open house card, the affair will be staged on Wednesday nights as well as Mondays.

Devils Get Win Over Deac Club

By Dick Jenrette

Wake Forest, Oct. 25—Duke's Blue Devils came roaring through with two last quarter touchdowns before 25,000 excited spectators here this afternoon to post a 13-6 victory over previously undefeated Wake Forest.

The game was scoreless until midway in the third period when Freshman Bill Gregus unleashed a series of aerials, most of which went into the arms of big Red O'Quinn, that payed off with the game's first touchdown. The final pitch was to Wingback Carl Haggard, who gathered in the toss deep in the end zone.

Duke Comes Back

Duke came fighting back, initiating a scoring drive on the ensuing kickoff. This time it was the Blue Devils who were pitching the passes. Fred Folger connected on a couple of aerials to Ed Austin and John Montgomery and George Clark turned in a nifty run to the shadow of the goal to set up the Duke score. Buddy Mulligan made the touchdown on a short reverse over the right side of the line. Paul Stepnanz missed the extra point attempt and the score was tied 6-6.

The Deacons then appeared on their way to another tally, when Bud Wedel blocked Folger's punt midway in the final quarter, scooped up the loose pigskin and galloped to the Duke 12. Wake Forest was penalized five yards, but Gregus and Haggard made that distance up with two short runs. Duke was penalized five yards, for offsides on Haggard's run, so the Deacs had a second down and goal to go on the Duke 7. George Pryor failed to make the necessary yardage for a touchdown in two line bucks, so Wade's determined Devils took over.

A few minutes later Fred Folger returned a Deacon punt beautifully from deep in his own territory to Wake Forest's 45. Folger skirted right end to the 23 for a first down, and the Duke tailback then hit Hughes with a pass on the 16. Folger, handling the ball for the third straight play, then passed to Mulligan on the Deac 3, where a pass interference play gave Duke a first down. George Clark skirted left end behind good blocking for a touchdown, and the extra point conversion made it 13-7 for Duke.

Another pass interference, this time by Duke on a Gregus aerial to the midfield marker was the starting point of a Wake drive that fizzled as the time ran out.

Thirteen Mural Clubs Sport Perfect Records

By Taylor Vaden

As the third week of the intramural football schedule closed, 13 teams still remain in the unbeaten ranks.

Leading the fraternity leagues are four teams with a record of five wins against no defeats. In league 1, Phi Delta Theta and Phi Kappa Sigma remain at the top with perfect records. In league 3 of the fraternity division, there is also a tie for first place honors between DKE No. 1 and Zeta Psi No. 2.

In the fourth fraternity division Chi Psi is in the lead, winning four games and losing none. Beta No 1, in the same league, is also undefeated, but has played only three games thus far.

Remaining in the undefeated column in the dormitory divisions are teams. Lewis, Y-Cabinet, Med School, Law School, and Oakwood Drive have played three and won three. Following close behind with two wins and no losses are Stacy and Grads teams.

Tomorrow's schedule

4:00—Field No. 1; Sigma Chi vs PiKA No. 1; No. 2: Phi Kap Sig vs Phi Delt No. 2; No. 3: Pi Lamb vs Delta Sig; No. 4: Zeta Psi No. 1 vs Sig Ep; No. 5 PiKA No. 2 vs ZBT; No. 6: KA vs Lambda Chi; No. 7: Grads vs Stacy.

5:00—Field No. 1: Beta No. 2 vs SAE No. 1; No. 2: Chi Phi No. 1 vs Sig Nu No. 1; No. 3: DKE vs Phi Gamm; No. 4: Kap Sig No. 1 vs Zeta Psi No. 2; No. 5: Kap Sig No. 2 vs Beta No. 1; No. 6: DKE No. 2 vs ATO; No. 7: TEP vs SAE No. 2.

Army Is Upset

New York, Oct. 25—(UP)—One of the greatest undefeated streaks in the history of football came to an end today when Columbia beat Army 21-20. Before this game, the Cadets from West Point had gone through 32 straight games without a defeat.

The last time the Black Knights from the Hudson had tasted defeat was on the afternoon of November 29th in 1943—four years ago—when Navy scuttled the Cadets 13-0.

Army's streak, unmarred except for ties with Notre Dame last year and Illinois this season, began against the University of North Carolina on September 30th, the first game of the 1944 season. In that one the Cadets won, 46-0.

The Columbia Lions, underdogs by two touchdowns, did it the hard way, too. Lou Little's men, paced by the smart quarterbacking of Gene Rossides, rallied for two touchdowns in that final quarter. And the Cadets went down to defeat. . .for the first time since the last game of the 1943 season.

Winners Asked to Report Outcome

The intramural department desires the winners of the following matches to call the office and report the outcome of the match in question:

If this is not done by 5 o'clock tomorrow, the match will be marked as a double forfeit and the next player will receive a bye.

The matches are: Blount vs Busby, Fitch vs Morris, Billerbeck vs Smith, August vs Ingram, Fineberg vs Boak, Rice vs Cash, Hoffman and Brady vs McLean and Kennedy, Peck and Morris vs Keenan and Kirby, Ingram and Koonce vs Taylor and Rice.

WNC Club Elects Bud Regan President, Arranges Plans for Sadie Hawkins Day

Approximately 125 members of the Western North Carolina club, meeting Thursday night, elected Bud Regan of Weaverville as president of the organization. Gordon Bullock was named vice-president, Merrily Brooks, secretary, and Vick Johnson, treasurer.

John Brady and Betty Brown were elected co-chairman of the club's social committee. Aff Melton was selected for the post of publicity chairman.

Plans for assisting Bill Shuford in putting on this year's Sadie Hawkins day were discussed and committees appointed by President Regan. The square dance committee included Arnold Wilson, chairman, Red Robinson, Ralph Morris, Johnny Orr, Gene Hall, and Bob Callahan. Committee for decoration of the wagon consisted of Eddie Moritz, Mae Belle Enman, Caroline Bishop, Freddie Meekins, and Alfred Cook.

Tentative plans were discussed for the annual club Christmas dance at the George Vanderbilt hotel in Asheville and for having a group picture made for the Yack. The annual dance will be the third since World War II, approximately the thirtieth for the club.

Second Song Fest To Be Held Tonight

A dozen well-known popular and folk tunes, all especially adapted for large group singing, are to be sung in this evening's second Sunday Sing. Bob Andrew fourth year radio student from South Dennis, Mass., is sing leader for the program which will begin at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Feature of the show is an unannounced vocal specialty to be presented by James Caudill, freshman from Wilmington. A popular vocalist with campus musical groups, Caudill is also fullback on the Jayvees football squad. He has a singing part in Sound and Fury's coming musical "Gin Lane," and is a Glee club member.

The eleven songs on the program are as follows: It's a Grand Night for Singing; Levee Song; I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now; Ask Anyone Who Knows; Oh, My Darling Clementine; Whiffenpoof Song; Dixie; Aintcha Ever Comin' Back; Linda; Hark the Sound; and the new Carolina Fight Song.

According to sing director Mark Barker the program will last less than one hour, enabling participants to attend later meetings, or the 9 o'clock movie. Barker added that some of this evening's numbers are scheduled by request of students, and said that ideas for future programs will be welcome.

Other specialists tonight include Coline Smith, who will sing a popular number of her own choosing, and pianist Sybil Drake, playing Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

after losing two on a bad pass from center, the Alabama lad faked a double spinner and proceeded to lift a six-point aerial to John Tandy, who took the ball in as he strolled into the rear of the end zone. Cox ran the score to 28-7.

Carolina's last touchdown came later in the final stanza with another drive. This one covering 62 yards. Gathering steam on the Carolina 38, the visitors moved the first four yards on a plunge by Kennedy, got 12 more on a pass from Maceyko to Cooke, Another 11 on another Kennedy smash and then a long pass to Tandy which pushed the ball to the Gator 3. On this play the Tar Heels were off-side, and had to do it over from the 44. Maceyko repeated a toss to Tandy to the Florida 26, then hit tackle for eight more. Here Pupa took over, passing to Cooke who bulled to the two, from hence the big fullback carried over in two rousing plunges. Cox was again on the scene and the score become 35-7 .

The rest of the ball game was mere formality.

Methodist Group Offers Large Variety Of Activities for Student Enjoyment

Running the gamut of student activities from parties to worship programs and back again, the Wesley Foundation, Methodist student group which is typical of the many religious organizations on campus, strives to meet the interests of a large group of students.

Among its activities are Sunday night suppers followed by programs of worship and discussion, which are usually attended by about 100 students; a class in Christian faith taught on Sunday mornings by the Rev. Mr. J. Robert Nelson, W. F. director; and vespers and a Bible study class held each Wednesday evening.

Special interest groups include the Wesley Players, a dramatics club of which Marge Cameron is president and Marty Pearsall director; "Wesley Worker," the monthly newspaper, of which Bob Dulin is editor; Wesley Rockets, who compete in intramural sports; and the Wesley caravans, newly-formed teams of students who will present programs for youth groups in nearby Methodist churches.

Chapel Hill has the largest Methodist student body of any university in the state, numbering about 1900, and support of this student program is received from the churches of North Carolina.

Beginning Sunday, the local WF is conducting a financial campaign in which every Methodist student will be visited.

Tall, redheaded, "Spike" Nelson, WF director, is a graduate of Yale Divinity school, and a former chaplain in the Marine corps. He and his charming brunette wife, Pat, have an apartment in the University Methodist church, WF headquarters, and practically live Wesley Foundation.

What lies ahead for the UN? No man can say. In its present form, it does not merit the faith it now inspires. Three resolutions for strengthening the UN were introduced before Congress near the end of the last session. These resolutions will come before the Congress again when it next convenes. Let us hope they will act as true statesmen. Their action cannot guarantee peace, but it can at least provide a true basis for hope.

This subject will be more thoroughly discussed at the CPU meeting Sunday night when Lincoln Kan and Randall McLeod of the Collegiate Council for the UN will talk briefly on the status and prospects of the UN

EASY MONEY DEPARTMENT

Sing a song of sixpence, pockets full of dough. Here's the way you'll get it from Pepsi-Cola Co. Make us laugh . . . if you can. We'll pay you $1, $2, $3 . . . as much as $15 for stuff we accept — and print. Think of it. You can retire. (As early as 9 P. M. if you like.) You don't have to mention Pepsi-Cola but that always makes us smile. So send in your jokes and gags to Easy Money Dept., Box B. Pepsi-Cola Co., Long Island City, N. Y.

The very next day you may receive a de-luxe radio-phonograph combination and a nine-room prefabricated house. It won't be from us. We'll just send you money if we feel like it. Easy Money, too.

Little Moron Corner

Mohair Moron, the upholsterer's son, was found huddled up and shivering in his refrigerator one day. He explained by saying, "I was th-thirsty for a P-pepsi-C-cola and was t-told it should be d-drunk when cold. Now I can drink it. I'm c-c-cold!"

You don't have to be a moron to write these . . . but it helps. $2 for each accepted we'll pay you, and not a penny more.

EXTRA ADDED ATTRACTION

At the end of the year we're going to review all the stuff we buy, and the item we think was best of all is going to get an extra $100.00

—HE-SHE GAGS—

If you're a "he" or a "she" (as we suspect) writing HE-SHE jokes should be a cinch for you. If you're not a "he" or a "she" don't bother. Anyway, if you're crazy enough to give us gags like these, we might be crazy enough to pay you a few bucks for them.

He: Give me a kiss and I'll buy you a Pepsi-Cola . . . or something.
She: Correction. Either you'll buy me a Pepsi . . . or nothing!

He: When a man leans forward eagerly, lips parted, thirsting for loveliness, don't you know what to do?
She: Sure, give him a Pepsi-Cola.

He ghost: I'm thirsty. Let's go haunt the Pepsi-Cola plant.
She ghost: That's the spirit!

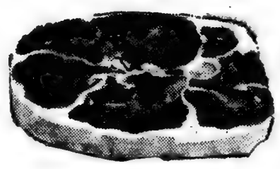
$3.00 (three bucks) we pay for stuff like this, if printed. We are not ashamed of ourselves, either!

CUTE SAYINGS of KIDDIES
(age 16 to 19 plus)

A famoys sage has said that people are funnier than anybody. If that were true, all you'd have to do would be listen to what the kiddies are saying, write it down, send it in, and we'd buy it. If that were true. It might be, for all we know. We haven't the slightest idea what we'll accept. Chances are it would be things like these unless we get some sense.

"My George, who will just be 17 on next Guy Fawkes Day, had his appendix removed last month. When the doctor asked him what kind of stitching he'd like to have, George said, 'suture self, doctor'."

"Elmer Treestump says his girl Sagebrush, only 22¼, brings a bottle of Pepsi-Cola along on every date for protection. She tells everybody, 'that's my Pop!'"



$1 each for acceptable stuff like this.

GET FUNNY... WIN MONEY... WRITE A TITLE

"This is easier than taking candy away from a baby. And less squawking. Maybe you don't want to be rich, but just force yourself. You'll like it. And, if we like the title you write for this cartoon we'll force ourself to give you $5. Or if you send us your own cartoon idea we'll up it to $10. For a cartoon that you draw yourself, we'll float a loan and send you $15 if we print it. Could you expect any more? Yes, you could expect.

Power Failure Plunges Chapel Hill Into Darkness

By Bill Sexton

A fast-developing series of equipment breakdowns threw Chapel Hill into a blackout during the supper hour yesterday evening, as the University Service plant system suffered its first complete power breakdown since shortly after the present plant's completion in 1940.

Some sections of the city, including Lenoir Dining hall and the Hillsboro st.-North st. residential area, were without electricity for more than 45 minutes. Other districts suffered only momentarily, though at least two separate complete breakdowns of several minutes' duration each occurred throughout Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

Service plant engineers reported last night that the University's 2500 kilowatt turbogenerator was out of service as a result of the breakdown and estimated that two to three weeks would be required for repairs.

Grey Culbreth, utilities supervisor, blamed the power failure on a breakdown in the 13-mile auxiliary supply line which links Chapel Hill with the Duke Power co. He said University engineers were using both local and outside power during the peak consumption period late yesterday afternoon, and the Duke line's breakdown threw a 100 per cent overload on the generator equipment here. The University generator burned out.

The Duke Power co. line returned to normal quickly, but terminal connections were not set to operate the

Tinayre Guest Cards Are Still Available

Guest cards for the recital by Yves Tinayre in Hill hall this evening are still available free of charge in the Music department office, and will be honored until 8:20 tonight, concert-time being 8:30.

Mr. Tinayre, a French baritone, made his American debut at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in 1939. Abroad he has appeared before varied audiences ranging from small groups of peasants to royal audiences in European capitals.

YVES TINAYRE

Assisting Tinayre in tonight's recital of ancient vocal music will be the University String quartet, composed of Willis Gates, first violin; Dorothy Alden, second violin; Edgar Alden, viola; Emily Porter, violoncello; and Wilton Mason of the department's piano faculty.

Included on his program will be numbers by composers of the period from the thirteenth through the eighteenth centuries, including Trouveres of Picardy, Guillame De Machaut, Gilles Binchois, John Dewland, Giovanni-Paolo Colonna, Francesco Durante, and Mozart.

"MISS PAYOFF, 1947"

Deadline for submitting candidates for the title of Miss Payoff of 1947 has been extended until Thursday at noon, by which time all names must be in the Y information office. All dormitories, sororities, fraternities, and other organizations are eligible to submit entrants.

DR. W. G. WOLFE

Former Iowan, Wolfe, Is Head of New Division

Dr. William G. Wolfe, formerly of the University of Iowa, has been appointed head of a new division of Special Education in the Department of Education of the University.

This division is interested in the training of teachers for handicapped children, and is sponsored by the North Carolina league for crippled children.

Made possible by donations received through the Easter seal program, the department will conduct classes in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, and Charlotte. An additional class will be held in Charlotte, for Negro teachers.

Teachers taking the course will be acquainted with the problems of crippled children, and will be trained in new methods for instructing these children.

Yackety Yack Board Announces Close Out

Organizational space for this year's Yackety Yack has been closed out as of last night. This fact was made known yesterday by Yackety Yack board of editors Gene Johnstone, Ruth Evans, and Harold Bursley as they mailed the dummy for this year's book to the engravers in Charlotte.

In Charlotte, the Charlotte engraving company's artist will draw it to specifications and return it here. In accordance with their policy of advanced deadlines, the editors have asked that this be done by Friday of this week.

They pointed out that although a few organizations will not appear, it was absolutely necessary to get the work on the dummy done this week." Although some groups were left out in this move," Johnstone declared, "we have been able to include more groups than last year's book had."

According to the editors, one pressing reason for having the dummy returned early was the November 1 deadline on the so-called "color" headings of the book.

Cheered by the progress marred only by the slowness of individual picture taking which has been made thus far, the editors joined in promising once again that this year's book will be the largest, most representative ever to come out of the University.

YACK SCHEDULE

Bill Duncan, Yackety Yack picture coordinator, announced the following schedule for today's organizational photographs:

2 o'clock—Executive branch, GM.

4 o'clock — Campus party steering committee, GM.

5 o'clock—CCUN, GM.

8 o'clock—Aquinas club, Y building.

9 o'clock—Phi assembly, Old East.

Search by Sea, Air Continues for Plane Missing over Alaska

By the United Press

Juneau, Alaska, Oct. 27—A huge search on sky and sea is underway tonight for the big Pan-American clipper which vanished over Alaska yesterday with 18 persons aboard. Army, Coast Guard and civilian rescue planes are flying low across the Alaskan and Canadian coasts in the hope of finding some trace of the four-engined Skymaster.

The DC-4, carrying 13 passengers, has been missing since yesterday afternoon, when Pilot A. N. Monson gave up an attempt for a landing at Annette Island because of rough weather. Monson asked for permission to continue his flight to Juneau, Alaska, 230 miles North, which was granted. But he failed to acknowledge the request.

Military and airline authorities are making every effort to find the plane, in what Pan American officials call the biggest search in Alaskan history. Coast Guard cutters and a fleet of fishing boats are scouring the rugged coastline on the chance the plane might have been forced down at sea, but hopes are slim that the plane could have ridden out the storm.

On the other side of the world, another storm caused the crash and explosion of a Swedish airliner in the mountains near Athens, Greece. When rescuers reached the scene this morning, they found that all of the 45 persons of the four-engined DC-4 were killed. The crash and explosion were so violent that wreckage was scattered over the mountainside for a distance of more than a thousand feet.

In Utah, investigators still are looking into what may have caused the United airliner fire that led to its crash Friday with the loss of 52 lives. Their attention is directed toward the possibility of a defective fire warning system in the DC-6. And they want to know how the fire, which is believed to have started in a baggage compartment, gained such headway that it could not be put out.

INFLATED

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 27—(UP)—Mrs. Clara Sandquist looked long and gravely at the used 1938 car she bought during the weekend for $130.

Her new purchase had cost $700 when it was new, Mrs. Sandquist told her friends. Seven years ago, she said, it was sold for $35—some $95 less than what she spent on it Saturday.

Mrs. Sandquist knew very well what she was talking about—she was the one who bought it in 1938 and sold it in 1940!

At a press conference in Columbus, Ohio, Senator Robert A. Taft (left) was snapped by photographers after tossing his hat into the ring for the Republican presidential nomination in 1948. In a letter to Fred H. Johnson (right), chairman of the Republican State Committee, se said that the race for the nomination was "wide open."

Four-Week Basic Police Procedure Course To Be Begun by Institute of Government

A four-weeks course in basic police procedure will begin here Sunday under the sponsorship of Chapel Hill's Institute of Government, Terry Sanford, assistant director of the school, announced today.

Opening of the new police school closely follows completion of a six-weeks course in traffic law enforcement which ended here with graduation of 120 highway patrolmen Saturday.

Fifty applicants chosen from city, county and state law enforcement agencies will be eligible for entrance on a first-enroll, first-attend basis, Sanford said. Other applications will be accepted for subsequent schools, the next being held in May of 1948 unless the demand is so great as to justify an earlier course. Officers from South Carolina and other states may enroll by paying a tuition fee of $25.

Operating with the cooperation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the state highway patrol, and the State Bureau of Investigation, the school will offer a variety of courses in basic police science.

Subjects to be covered during the first two and last weeks include: firearms, patrol techniques, photography, scientific aids to crime detection, first aid, public relations, courtroom demeanor, criminal law and procedure, evidence, traffic direction and control, police courtesy, fingerprinting, arrest, search and seizure. The third week will feature a special course designed to familiarize the officers with the examination and inspection of motor vehicles.

Operating expenses of the school, said Sanford, including the costs of firearms and ammunition, are covered by the Institute of Government as a part of services rendered cities and counties which are members of the Institute. The officers will be housed in highway patrol barracks on Raleigh road.

Phi Assembly to Discuss U. S. Socialized Medicine

A bill favoring socialized medicine in the United States will be discussed tonight by the Philanthropic assembly at 9 o'clock in the Phi hall.

To be introduced by Chester Zum Brunnen, the bill reads, "Resolved: that the Phi go on record as recommending that the United States government provide a system of complete medical care available to all citizens at public expense." The measure is expected to promote heated discussion with the opposing side being led by John Giles,

Cooley Talks Tonight On European Situation

With first-hand impressions of hungry Europe still fresh in his mind, Congressman Harold D. Cooley from the fourth North Carolina district will reveal some of his personal observations made on both sides of the iron curtain when he speaks tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock from the International Relations club platform in Gerrard hall.

REP. H. D. COOLEY

"If our foreign policy is to stop Communism," Cooley stated on the floor of Congress last spring, "we had better stop it at some place far distant from our own shores." He said further that without our aid the people of Europe "would be easy prey to Communism."

Cooley's "Report from Europe" will be the first public statement from any member of the Herter Investigation committee. "Congressional statesmanship at its highest" was the way Time magazine described the committee last week when it returned from Europe.

Congressional investigations have twice taken Cooley to Europe and once to Asia in the past two years.

Traveling as a delegate to the Inter-Parliamentary Union conference in Cairo last April, the congressman visited the key centers of the near east.

"I left Athens convinced that King Paul and his government represent the people of Greece," he stated during congressional debate on the Truman doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey.

Considered by many to be the top congressional authority on agricultural needs of war-torn countries, Cooley is expected to play a major role in debates on the Marshall plan for European aid when the special session of Congress convenes on November 17.

Representative Cooley made headlines throughout the state last week when he proposed that the government halt sinking tobacco prices by purchasing large amounts for use in Germany. The withdrawal of British buyers caused the critical slump in the tobacco markets normall selling about 30 percent of the crop to England.

Paul Green to Write Drama For Washington Anniversary

Paul Green, prominent Chapel Hill author-resident, has been asked to write a historical pageant for the 150th anniversary of the nation's capital, according to an announcement made by Washington's Sesquitennial committee.

The playwright is now widely known for his two similar works, "The Lost Colony" and "The Common Glory."

Mr. Green, who has just returned from a visit to Washington, told of the plans for the celebration in a talk at the university faculty club meeting last week. It is to be sponsored by a committee consisting of three senators, three representatives, and three citizens of the district. The proposed pageant is to illustrate the historical development of the city from a wide place in the Potomac to its present position as one of the leading cities of the world.

Green emphasized, however, in an interview granted yesterday to the Daily Tar Heel, that the pageant will chiefly concern the development of the capital as a reflection of the spiritual development of a great people. According to the playwright, Washington is the capital of the world's foremost democracy and as such is representative of the dignity of the individual as opposed to the totalitarian idea that he exists for the good of the state.

Present plans for the pageant, as for the celebration as a whole, depend on the granting of an appropriation by Congress. It is expected that a sufficient amount to cover the cost of building a theatre and staging the pageant would be upwards of half a million dollars. The granting of an appropriation of suitable proportions is uncertain at present, but the authoritics concerned with the plan feel that it will go through.

If the pageant is presented, it should, Green feels, be used during the celebration and then revived from year to year as "The Lost Colony" is at present. A search for a site is now in progress with Rock Creek Park and the Anacostia River under consideration.

Green believes that the site finally selected should be one of natural beauty augmented suitably by the theatre constructed there. In view of the fact that the pageant should be one approaching epic proportions, both the site and the theme should illustrate the grandeur of America and the city which is its capital.

The author has considered using the life of George Washington who was chiefly responsible for the city's founding, or of Lincoln who made possible its continued existence as the capital of a unified country extending across the American continent, as possible bases for the pageant. If this is done, it will continue the plan used at Williamsburg where the life of Thomas Jefferson was similarly used.

Green also discussed plans and projects for historical pageants now in process of formation at Charleston, S. C., and elsewhere.

Henderson Donates Library Display

Dr. Archibald Henderson, official biographer of George Bernard Shaw and head of the Mathematics department of the University, has donated material on European productions and on the American premiere of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" for a special library display.

Olan V. Cook, of the library staff, has arranged the exhibit, which includes posters, playbills, and programs from the London, Berlin, Madrid, and Paris productions, in addition to photographs and programs of the New York premiere. A first edition of the play, along with other material, is on display in the rotunda of the library.

Dr. Henderson, who is being honored by the Playmakers on Wednesday night, the opening of their production of "Saint Joan," will be guest of honor at a dinner in the Carolina Inn just before curtain time.

Chain Letter Racket Back with New Format; Latest Manna by Mail Purports to Be Legal

By Raney Stanford

The rush to see the results of a Chapel Hill mailman's visit, always a high spot of the day, is bringing new zest to the lives of many of the local citizenry, for the irrepressible chain letter is back again in new guise. Rumors are rife and reports are rampant; the "brother of a friend of a buddy" is getting hundreds of dollars daily.

The latest manna by mail game endeavors to evade the government postal ban by eliminating the mailed instructions; the participant sends money only, in an otherwise empty letter, to the top name on the chain. The letter itself is passed from hand to hand, upon the receipt of two dollars. The buyer then mails $2 to the top name of the ten on the list, and makes two copies of the letter, leaving out the top name and inserting his own on the bottom. To recoup the $4, the two copies must then be peddled to a pair of acquaintances. And then one leans back and waits for the wealth to roll in.

And waits. To get from the bottom of the letter to the money-making top position, 2048 letters must be sold in each of ten the original chains. And while the letter says this is "fool-proof, cheat-proof" plan for getting $2,048, there is nothing to prevent any number of impatient lads, hungering for a little ready cash, from making and selling many more than the requested two copies. Thus the number of letters that have to be sold to move a name through the ten places is increased manifold. The progression fans out towards the point where everyone has a letter and no one is left to buy one. This will never be reached, but a point where no one is left who cares to buy a letter probably will, and the elaborate device falls of its own weight. The originators reap the harvest, while those on the outer edges just feed the kitty.

W. S. Hogan, local postmaster, could not comment on the legality of the letter huckstering, but said a ruling from the Post Office department should be soon forthcoming. But even if the federal postal regulations have been hurdled, the state legal definition of a lottery can include a lot of such get-rich-quick ideas. State statutes explain a lottery as any scheme for the distribution of prizes by which, on paying money, one obtains a token which entitles him to receive a value, either more or less, according to chance. And acting as an agent for a lottery can bring conviction for a misdemeanor. By selling the letters by hand, the share-the-wealth boys seem to be ducking valiantly, but they still look pretty vulnerable from here.

Gracie Barrie, Who Made Singing Debut at Tender Age of 13, Is Featured on German Club Dance Program This Weekend

Brooklyn-born Gracie Barrie is a girl who's been kicking around in show business for a good many years now.

Due to hit the Carolina campus this weekend with Randy Brooks, his Golden Trumpet, and his orchestra at the Fall Germans, Miss Barrie has a varied career behind her of vaudeville, radio, and top Broadway spots.

Advance literature on the songstress claims that she made her rebut at the tender age of 13 on one of New York's local radio programs.

By the time she reached 14, she was apparently well-established in her field, having breezed through a long and wide-famed run at the Beaux Arts in Atlantic city, New Jersey, the so-called "playground of America's millionaires." There poor little Gracie, as the story goes, hit the rough break which comes to everyone in her profession. She wasn't old enough.

GRACIE BARRIE

She was signed from the Beaux Arts into Broadway's Palace, when the Gerry society, whose exact authority hasn't been explained, said that 14 was just too young for a girl to be running around working in the big bad theatrical world of New York. According to Gracie, this wasn't so rough, however, because it kept her circulating in the country on vaudeville circuits and built up quite a wide-spread reputation for the girl.

By the time our friend Gracie reached a staid and mature sweet-sixteen, she was old enough to take Broadway by storm. But the Palace was now sharing its stage bills with the new sensation of the age, talking pictures!

But with her next contract, Gracie had arrived. She was signed to co-star with Jimmy Durante, Hal LeRoy, and the late Lupe Velez in the musical "Strike Me Pink." The applause, so they say, is still ringing in her ears.

That, aside from a little Hollywood and orchestra-leading work, is Miss Gracie Barrie in a nutshell. She will be here to sing for everybody at the German club dances and concert this Friday and Saturday nights.

Balance: The World, the Campus

War is a check on many things. It curtails one's freedom; it brings on hardship, sorrow, and promotes serious thought. Before Pearl Harbor, this publication devoted its editorial page to campus chatter, continuations of articles from page one, and a few advertisements—together with an editorial column commenting exclusively on campus happenings.

War came, and with it a change in policy. This transformation was first evident under the editorship of Bucky Harward back in the fall of 1942, when an editorial appeared in which it was emphasized that "it has become as apparent as an imitation coke that the Daily Tar Heel cannot serve its readers intelligently, cannot even 'cover the campus' without knowing something of what is happening in Washington and on the Russian battlefield.—There shall be no DTH Washington nor foreign correspondents. We shall not establish competition with Lippmann, Kaltenborn, or Davis. But we can translate their findings and those of other reliables in the light of campus welfare and pass them on to the student body. This we will do."

This reasoning has prevailed in the editorial policies of this publication since Harward's time. Other daily collegiate publications also remodeled their policies during the war years to include a comparable amount of material of national and international interest. But another reason has been added to the arguments for publishing articles on off-campus subjects. The postwar student body is much older and became partially addicted to reading of international news while in the service.

But recently we have devoted much time in trying to establish an editorial page containing balanced subject matter. It is difficult to determine just how much national interest material we should carry along with our campus comments. We readily admit that it is a difficult thing to determine and that it is almost impossible to satisfy everyone. We were in this dilemma when last week we received a telegram from the assistant college editor of "Mademoiselle" magazine stating that they were going to publish an article stressing the "new seriousness in editorials and content with more space devoted to national and local political drives, issues, etc. Not only college news, especially outside issues affecting college students. ....must emphasize newness of trend and seriousness."

This telegram made our task of trying to establish a balance between campus and national-international articles even more complicated. We searched our files of exchange publications for an answer.

The DAILY TEXAN searches out the most important news—local, campus or otherwise and expresses its views. PERDUE EXPONENT's sole daily columnist is Drew Pearson, and they use many editorials of worldly significance. At WCUNC the CAROLINIAN has at least one column devoted to comments on world events. The Duke CHRONICLE devotes at least two columns of each edition to comments on off-campus happenings. The INDIANA DAILY STUDENT and the DAILY TROJAN of Southern California devote much space to student comment on national affairs.

So after much deliberation we made our decisions. Our editorial columns will continue to present our views on the news—according to its importance. The remainder of our editorial page will be balanced with columns written by students who emphasize the campus scene, sprinkled with a few comments on national and world events. In this manner we hope to achieve a balanced publication.

Hollywood: A City of Fear

Over to our right, columnist Bill Buchan has rightly ridiculed the Un-American Activities Committee's nosiy purge of Hollywood. It is ridiculous, we readily admit; but, more than that, it is dangerous and anyone who likes their freedom can view this particular situation with great quantities of alarm.

Director John Huston, a respected artist, has pegged the danger in well-chosen words: "Hollywood is a city of fear." He points out that there is a strict, frightened censorship of every story before it is even considered for a film. He says such excellent Hollywood products as "The Best Year's Of Our Lives" (last year's Oscar-winner) and "Crossfire," a withering attack on anti-semitism, could not possibly be made in the Hollywood of today. They're frightened out there—the producers, the men with the money, everybody.

Hollywood is a city of fear and the motion picture is a medium of expression, a method of "molding public opinion." The Thomas committee is attempting to dictate what the motion picture may or may not say. The Thomas committee can brand a writer as communist, an actor as communist, a director as communist. It's easily done. No proof is needed. We're getting rather like bulls. Just wave the red cloth and we paw the earth. Bulls are color-blind. They don't know the cloth is red—it's the vigorous waving that does it.

At any rate, we begin to feel like pawing the earth. Not about the vigorous waving. That doesn't bother us too much. It's the fact that the Thomas committee is trying to dictate to a medium for forming public opinion.

Radio is a medium. The press is a medium.—R.S.

Short of Bodily Force

The Yackety Yack board of editors have done everything but use bodily force to persuade students to get their pictures taken for this year's Yackety Yack. Still there are 2,300 on the campus who have not been photographed and tomorrow is the deadline.

This year's setup is unique in that the cost of the photograph is taken care of in student fees. There are no fees to be paid and no lines to be waded through. In fact yesterday only two pictures were taken all morning.

Of course, it's no skin off the noses of the Yack editors if you don't get your picture in the yearbook. They just hate to think that you paid your money and then will not get anything in return for it.

Life in USSR

Wives Have a Gay Time

Mexico City (UP)—Misunderstood Latin American husbands and wives can blame their troubles on the capitalistic system, if Soviet propaganda is to be believed.

A Spanish-language article in the information bulletin distributed by the Russian embassy tells about it.

The latest issue sandwiches a meaty dose of love interest in between the usual photographs and statistics on turbines, dynamos and skylarking Russian peasants.

It features a three-page spread of pictures of the idyllic home-life in the USSR with the text by a Russian Dorothy Dix named Vistinevski. Imagining himself in the shoes of unfortunate lovelorn foreigners, Vistinevski asks himself their questions. He—or she—also answers them. The bulletin does not mention whether Vistinevski's is a man or woman.

Plunging into the subject with the statement that "the majority of Soviet families are happy," Vistinevski wants to know why.

The answer is simple:

"Genuine and natural equality between husband and wife."

That means equal contributions to the family till. It is just he continues, since 42 per cent of Soviet workers with higher education are women and many earn more than their husbands. In one respect, however, he concedes that capitalist and communist marital relations may be alike.

"In many families the principal weight of the bills falls on the husband."

There is no such animal in Russia as a misunderstood spouse, Vistinevski says, "because each is interested in the other's hobbies." He explains that "this does not mean the wife has to be as interested in football as her husband is, but in the spiritual world."

Wives have a gay time in the Soviet domestic paradise, if Vistinevski is to be believed. When they are not attending "lectures on politics, science and art," they "frequent theaters, participate in social activities and study at institutes and universities," leaving the children behind in an "extensive chain of cradle homes and kindergartens."

GM GRIND:

The Tuesday evening classical concert will not be heard this evening in deference to the music department's presentation of singer Yves Tinayre.

Director Bill Shuford again requests all recognized campus organizations to submit rosters of members, and names and addresses of officers to the student union office, to be included in their information file.

This evening's recorded dinner music concert, 6:30-7:00 in the main lounge, will include the following selections: Romberg, Desert Song; Gershwin, Somebody Loves Me; Bach, Air in G; Herbert, Indian Summer, Mozart, Sinfonia Concertante (first movement.)

Tain't Necessarily So, but...

American Heroes In Action

By Bill Buchan

The majority of Hollywood's press agents will probably be looking for new jobs in the near future.

At least, if the so-called stars are wise, they'll fire their publicity men and hire members of the House un-American Activities committee to publicize their doings.

No "Life in the Home Of Teena Jones" story in the pulp magazines and no three way romance mixup has ever rated the headlines and pictorial coverage that the "investigation" in Washington is producing these days. Reporters covering the trials are using every adjective known to man in describing the actors who are offering testimony. Not to be outdone, those left at home on the California coast went on the air Sunday to get their share of the free publicity and some even flew to Washington uninvited to join the fun.

Imagine the reaction in little cross-road villages throughout the country. Mrs. Everyday American reads in the Daily Bugle that George Murphy or Adoljou Menjou are playing at the local Bijou. The fact that she never bothered to see either of them before doesn't enter her mind, because every ounce of her patriotism demands that she and the old man go down to see "those wonderful men who hate Communists." And so it'll go for dozens of Hollywood's citizens. In addition to seeing the heroes, movie fans will be on an alert lookout for Communistic "trends" in every movie they see, even the wild westerns.

What are the hearings going to accomplish, besides adding to sky-high expenses? Prove that Communism is active in Hollywood? What if it does? There's no law against it. Will it prove that certain individuals are Communists? What if it does? There's no law that says he can't be.

This committee and others would accomplish much more (although the headlines would probably be fewer) if they put their cart back behind the horse and work their investigations as any well organized program should be worked.

First, laws will have to be passed by Congress making membership in the Communist party unlawful and treasonable. Then, and only then, will be fancy investigators have something to work on. It will not be surprising, however, if such a law failed to pass in Congress. With our renowned system of freedom, those who would oppose it could very probably hire enough "liberal" lobbyists to defend their interests. And then, perhaps, the lobbyists could persuade enough vote-conscious Congressmen that such a law is unnecessary and undemocratic, and out the window it would go. Perhaps it sounds improbable, but it certainly isn't impossible in this wonderful nation of ours.

But instead of considering such things first, the un-American committee (which admittedly is doing a lot of good in some cases) brings Hollywood actors and directors and citizens to Washington for the biggest publicity stunt that has been wished upon the heroes of the screen.

All that Mr. and Mrs. American of Crossroads, USA, will get out of it is another expense bill—to be paid out of their pocket.

Life, Liberty, The Pursuit Of Women

'Year-round sport for males is the pursuit of women. Having conceded this fact, Carolinians chase merrily along on paths and by-paths to follow this conventional custom.

Everybody agrees that the male does the work. Some opinions differ, though, on who provides the stimulus. Says Marvin Morgan: "I like girls, and when I want one I go after her." Bob Couch thinks that "events at Chapel College don't run in their ordinary course," admits that males chase females here.

Opinions of three female characters read somewhat like this: "Man is a born pursuer" (Merrily Brooks); "It's really half and half" (Maybelle Enman); and "It's real art when the girl does all the pursuing and the fellow thinks he is doing it" (Mary Sledge).

Randy McLeod tries to be cautious: "I think they are neck and neck" is his idea.

An appropriate remark comes in from Frank Barr: "Male is running after female for a good time and female is running after a husband. So she lands him while he is having a good time. Albert King gives us the last word on this subject: "The female wants to make it last and the male is in for it on a temporary basis. She has that old maternal feeling."

Defends Coline Smith

Dear Sir:

In a recent article there appeared a statement regarding the selection of the dramatic lead in Sound and Fury's forthcoming musical drama "GIN LANE." I think it only fair to let the Student Body know that the mentioned "Attitude" of Miss Coline Smith has been nothing short of wonderful in this production. Faced with a straight dramatic role which she had had no comparable experience previously, Coline gave an excellent tryout and readily accepted an understudy role when it became apparent that someone else might be more experienced in this particular role.

On behalf of Miss Smith and the directors of S&F, I slightly resent the inferred idea that Coline was shoved aside for someone better. If Lily Pons had tried out for the part she would have done no better, because it is not a singing, but a dramatic part. Coline accepted a singing role in this production in addition to an understudy role, and (perhaps it is because I am music director), but I consider the singing parts as of some importance in Musical productions. I think everyone should know that Coline Smith's "attitude" has been highly acceptable, and I promise that she will be something more than noticeable in "GIN LANE."

Sincerely,

FRANK J. MATTHEWS

CCUN Advances

Sir:

Inconsequential as it may seem, there has been a recent occasion which has not been greatly publicized which I feel merits more attention by the student body of the University than has been shown.

It is the formal formation of the Carolina Chapter of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. What is the significance? Frankly it is one of the first indications that the C.C.U.N. has caught the imagination of the public. There has recently been many volunteers for all types of work in the C.C.U.N. This has been a direct result of the hard work put in by the original members and their staff. Each and every one of those who have so unselfishly given time are now realizing the fruits of their endeavors.

Before I close, I want to state that the class of 1951 (our new freshman class) has produced leaders who have unstintedly given the assistance in C.C.U.N. work. If these freshmen continue the way that they have, Carolina will enjoy a renaissance that has not been equaled in all the years that I have been here. Give them credit, for they will make our University claim the glory that she deserves.

Sincerely,

LINCOLN S. H. KAN

Florida Spirit Is Tops

By R. Foo Giduz

One thing in Gainesville that most impressed us this weekend, besides Hosea Rodgers, was the terrific school spirit which overflows in so many different ways all over the Gator campus. . . And remember, Florida has lost 14 out of their last 15 games!

Sure, that traditional spontaneous Carolina spirit is something that can't be beat. . .But the Floridians have an added element of organization which has been lacking here for more than a decade. . .First thing you notice is that the town of Gainesville (especially the merchants!) are all the way behind the school and football team. For this Homecoming weekend the town was especially dolled up in flags and grid decorations throughout the business district . . .Homecoming exhibits by the fraternities were the greatest splurges and works of art we've ever seen with the same $25 expense limit as UNC. . .KA's actually had a three-ring circus going in and around the house. And the ramshackle choo-choo trains and 'gator extravaganzas of the Sigma Nu's and Kappa Sigs actually covered their entire houses.

Wonder why Carolina doesn't have a Pep Club for ball games like Florida. . .They're still talking about Kay Kyser's 1928 Cheerios, special rooting section which the maestro initiated here in his Tar Heel days. . .Gators reserve a rooting section at each game for the couple-thousand nucleus of the student body which wants to cheer. . .Even have special orange Pep Club T shirts and beanies. Idea of the group is to encourage spirit within new students, but it serves a better purpose.

Many Students around here complain they don't like jumping jack cheering mobs all around them at grid contests. Well, why not put 'em all together and separate the spectators from the cheerers. . .(Univ. club notice.) . . .Florida stadium was just as full for Friday night's Gator Growl pep rally, as for the following day's grid slaughter. . .Included performances by two bands, a varsity skit show, community singing, cheers and jeers, clowning by baseball joker Al Schacht, and a thousand (s)-dollar fireworks display, not to mention two hours and a half of sidelines clowning.

Fla.'s head cheerleader Bill Bracken made an earnest pregame plea to the students not to air their usual chant of "Gator Bait, Gator Bait, Gator Bait," when the Tar Heels team first came out on the field. . .A request which was most emphatically ignored. . .But it all turned out OK. . .Two quarters and three touchdowns later the lads were strangely silent when Carolina again took the field.—No more Gator Bait.

Major Gene Aenchbacher, ex-DTH editorial candidate, associate editor, and campus jack-of-all-trades turned up to see the show, too. Now stationed with the AAF in Tampa. (address: Crescent Apts.) Gene said it was the perfect tonic for the Texas rout. He dropped over for the Austin contest in a spare B-29. . .Also ran into last year's campus glamorist, petite Gloria Gautier, and a score of others who turned the town into a Tar Heels' homecoming, too.

Tar Heel Booters Encounter Duke On Fetzer This Afternoon

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

Ramrod Rodgers

Webster's dictionary defines the word "ramrod" as a device used in ramming home a charge in an explosive weapon which is exactly what big Hosea Rodgers did last Saturday afternoon in Gainesville, ramming, charging—with a load of ad lib passing thrown in—the big gun Tar Heel offense to an impressive win over unimpressive Florida.

The Alabama lad never had it so good. He passed to Weiner, Justice, and Tandy for three of the five Tar Heel scores and showed his versitility by scampering 76 big yards for another score in less time than it takes to say Tar Heel touchdown.

Rodgers—who made his name at Carolina in 1943 by beating Pennsylvania assisted by the great defensive play of Jack Fitch and a big end who became famous under the name of Barney Poole—didn't quite make the grade with the Tar Heels last year because of leg injuries, discharge delay, heir expcting and a nasty set of migraine headaches. There were those who said the hefty lad was through, being nothing more than a wartime flash in the pan. But last weekend the Gators of Florida found early in the game that the pan was sizzling once more and was much too hot to hold or handle. Ramrod is the name—Ramrod Rodgers.

Needless to say, Hosea was not the only Tar Heel on the field. He was ably supported and later ably relieved by a group of Tar Heels who finally played the game the way the press clippings say it should be played.

Little Charlie Justice played his usual fine game, before being slightly injured and being forced to retire to the sidelines. The Choo Choo scored his first touchdown of the season in the first quarter, when after taking a flat pass from Rodgers, he tiptoed through tuliplike Gators, 29 yards for a well-executed touchdown.

Extra Scores

Justice would have had another touchdown in the second quarter had not an official ruled that his knee hit the ground on the Florida nine on another twenty-odd yard gallop in the direction of Miami and the Gator goal line. Justice, cutting back at the point of supposed infraction put his hand down on the ground—a practice not contrary to the rules—but the official ruled his knee touched the turf also, to nullify an otherwise unblemished run. The pictures will throw some light on this manner just for the sake of argument.

Speaking of disallowed touchdowns, the Tar Heels had two more recalled—one a Rodgers-to-Tandy aerial, which was nullified by a holding penalty; and another, a Pupa-to-Weiner pass which the latter gathered in and dove into the end zone right at the corner flag, only to have a mean old official say that the half time was already underway. Weiner quietly gave way to the Florida band. It seems that they have a rule in Florida that limits each player to one touchdown a game, Tandy's, Justice's, and Weiner's second being disallowed, which gives more boys a chance to get into the spirit of things.

Laurels for Linemen

The last, but not the least of bouquets goes to the Carolina line, which played its best game of the season. Kingpin of the seven stalwarts was Bill (Earthquake) Smith, who turned out to be the fifth man in the Florida backfield all afternoon, getting the ball faked to himself by the Gator quarterback on numerous handoff plays. Len Szafaryn, unable to play on offense because of a bad shoulder played a great defensive game along with Smith. Everywhere along the line there were powerful performances, a statement that can be easily substantiated by the Florida forwards.

The Tar Heels now turn to face the Vols of Tennessee who have beaten the locals twice in the last two years, but will need an awful lot of magic wands and double whammies to do it this year. The Tennesseans have yet to defeat a major team this season, showing wins over only Chattanooga and Tennessee Tech both of which are about in the same league as Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward. Besides what they will have to contend with once they get here, the Vols have that rough trip over the Smokies to make. Between them and whatever undisclosed mountains of defense the Tar Heels will throw up, it looks as if old Andrew Jackson may turn slightly before the weekend is over.

Morris Undefeated In GM Tournament

Ray Morris remained as the only unbeaten player in the Graham Memorial ping-pong tournament by topping Bob Goldwater in a five-game match yesterday afternoon. The scores were 21-14, 21-23, 19-21, 21-11, 21-11.

Morris, a former national boys' champion, was forced to come from behind to gain his victory. Behind in games by 2-1, the Tar Heel tennis ace opened up in the fourth game and Goldwater never came close after that.

In the losers' bracket, Jim Jackson advanced to the semi-finals of the once-beaten list with a 21-18, 15-21, 21-7 triumph over Andy Lavin. Jackson plays Clark Taylor at 1:30 this afternoon and the winner meets Tom Wadden in the final of the losers' bracket.

The ultimate winner of the once-defeated side will play Goldwater for the right to meet Morris for the championship.

Rywak Almost Made Second Touchdown In Win over Cubs

By Larry Fox

Pete Rywak, Tar Baby tackle, just missed becoming a double hero Friday when the Carolina jayvees edged the State Wolfcubs.

Everyone knows how the big lineman scooped up a partially blocked pass and galloped 40 yards for the only touchdown of the 6-0 contest, but Coach Crowell Little told yesterday how Rywak almost repeated his unusual feat later in the clash.

At one point in the hard fought contest Bob Youngblood, State fullback, dropped back to punt. The State line gave way and Bob Reynolds, Tar Heel quarterback, charged through and blocked the kick. The pigskin rolled to Rywak who had a clear path to the end zone. If he hadn't stumbled he could have reached paydirt and thus become one of the few tackles to ever register two touchdowns in a single game.

"Our defense was good," conceded Coach Little gloomily, "but our offense was only fair. We couldn't protect our passers and kickers and as a result our passing game suffered. We were also a little rusty when it came to running our plays."

Right end Fred Bauer was the only Tar Baby to be hurt seriously. X-rays of his injured hip have not been analyzed yet and it is not known when he will be able to return to action.

Volleyball Tourney Continues Tonight

The third week of the coed volleyball tournament gets under way tonight when three games will be reeled off.

The Town girls and Alderman battle from opposite sides of the net in the initial fray, starting at 7:15. Spencer runs up against Pi Phi in the second contest, which takes the court at 7:50. The evening's finale at 8:25 pits unbeaten Chi Omega against Smith. The Chi O girls will be shooting for their third straight victory.

Snavely Stages Light Practice In Preparation For Volunteers

Tennessee Club Will Offer Stern Test To Improving Carolina Club Saturday

Coach Carl Snavely let his Carolina gridders off with an afternoon of light work at Navy field yesterday as a reward for the team's fine performance in defeating Florida, 35-7, last Saturday.

Most of the boys were in light togs, and Snavely did not keep the team long for the practice. A slow drizzle of rain was about the only unpleasant feature of the workout as far as the players were concerned.

Heavy Drills

However, Snavely can be expected to settle down to heavy drills starting today through Thursday in preparation for the Tar Heels' battle with the Tennessee Volunteers in Kenan stadium on Saturday.

Tennessee has been a disappointment to most of her grid followers this season, with the Vols dropping games to Georgia Tech, Alabama, and Duke already. But against little Tennessee Tech last week, the Vols turned up with a smooth-clicking outfit that rolled up 49 points to none for the opposition. While Tennessee Tech is not a major grid power, the game at least shows that the Vols have finally got their offense functioning.

Neyland's Record

Coach Bob Neyland, Tennessee coach and possessor of one of the nation's most enviable football records, can be counted on to have his team primed for the Tar Heels. The Vols lost a lot of prestige in their early season losses and will be out for a share of the national limelight.

Carolina also suffered a drop in its football reputation with losses to Texas and Wake Forest, but Snavely's outfit seems to have found itself, with the result being wins over William and Mary and Florida in the last two games.

Another big crowd is expected to turn out to witness the game. Indications point to as many as 40,000 being on hand

Phi Kaps, Zetes Lose First Mural Contests

Two unbeaten fraternity teams had their first taste of defeat yesterday afternoon as intramural tag football opened its third week of play.

Phi Kappa Sigma, who was coasting along with a string of five straight victories prior to yesterday's tilt, was edged out by a fighting Phi Delt No. 2 team, 6-0. Walt Hayward carried the pigskin over for the deciding six-pointer. Zeta No. 2 defeated for the first time by Kappa Sigma No. 1, who scored convincingly for a 21-0 win.

Cross Country Meet Changed to Durham

An eleventh hour change in the cross country schedule sends the Tar Heels to Durham tomorrow afternoon to meet the strong Dukesters.

The event was originally scheduled for Chapel Hill but Duke has no meets at home this year and Carolina has none scheduled for next season. Thus the change was agreeable to both coaches.

The harriers will go through their final drills this afternoon in preparation for a strong foe. The Devils tied Navy at Annapolis last Saturday and seem to have hit their stride after opening losses to Army and Maryland.

Coach Dale Ranson will send the boys of the squad out over the five-mile trail this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Tomorrow's meet will be the first of two this week for the locals, who entertain Tennessee Saturday morning.

Durham Eleven Is Rated Slight Favorite As Local Outfit Seeks Second Triumph

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's one-game winning streak will be at stake this afternoon on Fetzer field when Duke's international soccer team, sporting somewhere around half a dozen members from south of the border down South America way and boasting a four-game winning streak over the Allenmen, tangles with the Tar Heel booters at 3 o'clock.

The Blue Devil eleven, coached by basketball mentor Gerry Gerard, will enter the contest rated as slight favorites since the tobacco cityites will open this afternoon's tilt with virtually the same lineup that handed the Tar Heel booters four straight defeats in 1946.

Pallulat Back

However, an upset may be in the making today for the Tar Heels, bolstered by the return to action of ace center forward Hank Pallulat, sidelined during the High Point clash by a leg injury, will be at full strength this afternoon and raring to make up for their lackadaisical showing against High Point.

Ridrigo Rigioni, the Blue Devils' leading scorer in 1946, and Chico Craniotis, clever ball handler, will lead the Duke eleven into action. Other kingpins in the visitors' lineup include defensive stalwarts Walt Jakob and Jack Edwards.

In three games so far this season the Blue Devils have won one, lost one, and tied one. The Gerardmen triumphed over High Point, 6-1, battled to a 3-3 tie with the rugged Wahoos of Virginia in a driving rain, and were shut out by Navy last Tuesday, 3-0.

Need Better Passing

Coach Allen refused to commit himself yesterday afternoon with a definite statement regarding the game's outcome but he did comment, "I hope our passing is better than it was in the High Point game. The boys are determined to play better tomorrow and they may come up with a victory."

Except for the previously mentioned change in the Carolina lineup, the same team that opened the High Point contest will start tomorrow.

The starting lineup:

Pos.	Carolina	Duke
G	—Williams	Clark
RF	—VanZandt	Edwards
LF	—Nelson	Jakob
RH	—Singer	Tanaka
CH	—Johnston	Kalkbrenner
LH	—Levy	Strauch
OR	—Jackson	Rigioni
IR	—Bach	Craniotis
CF	—Pallulat	Rostad
IL	—Greenbaum	Whetton
OL	—Boak	D'Alonzo

Charlie Barnett Wins Football Contest On Most Correct Carolina-Florida Score

It was a five-way tie, with five misses each last week, as Charlie Barnett, 306 Stacy, was declared winner of the Graham Memorial football contest through having a closer Carolina-Florida score prediction (28-7) than his runners-up.

The quintet of winning grid guessers were all stumped on the same five games: TCU's win over Oklahoma, Columbia's hair-breadth triumph from Army; Ole Miss' loss to Arkansas; the Colgate-Brown tie; and Purdue's upset of Illinois.

Barnett may collect his prize of a book of Carolina theater movie coupons from the Graham Memorial office. The four runners-up were Spencer Qualls, Robert C. Smith, Bob Hines, and Madge F. Johnston.

General trend of the week's 2200 entries listed the Tar Heels as a two-touchdown favorite over the Gators, and the majority had only slighty better than a .500 average. Twenty of the week's toughest games are on this week's contest entries which are to be placed in the YMCA and Graham Memorial offices this afternoon.

Tar Heel laurels of the week go to Roy Moose and William D. Strayhorn who foresaw Carolina's win by the correct score of 35-7. A scant half-dozen of the entire flock saw Florida as the winner of the tussle, and a similar number amazingly prognosticated the Brown-Colgate tie, and Columbia's bare 21-20 win from Army.

Tomorrow's Daily Tar Heel will also carry the blank on the sports page.

SWAIN HALL MOVIES

Two technicolor movie shorts will be shown tomorrow in the projection room of Swain hall. Sponsored by the Department of Art, the shows begin at 3 and 5 o'clock. The titles are "Alexander Calder, Sculptor" and "Rhythms 21."

for the tilt.

Carolina will be after its third win over a Southeastern conference team. The Tar Heels hold wins over both Georgia and Florida, each of which is in that loop. Carolina's record in the Southeastern is better than the club's Southern conference performance.

No Injuries

The Tar Heels came out of their Florida win without any serious injuries, although a couple of the boys have pulled muscles and such. All hands should be ready to go against Tennessee.

The Tar Heel-Volunteer battle will be the only major college tilt played in the state on Saturday. Duke goes to Atlanta to meet undefeated Georgia Tech, State plays Chattanooga in a night game in Raleigh, and Wake Forest plays William and Mary in Williamsburg.

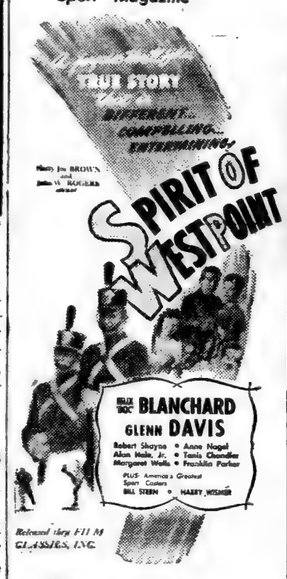
Noted authorities have been contacted by both Zum Brunnen and Giles and have furnished valid material for the debate although it was decided that the discussion should not be led by an authoritative speaker since the question is considered primarily a layman's problem.



All students who have submitted application for membership are urged to participate in the debate and the floor will be extended to visitors for the bill under discussion.

Yack pictures will be made of the members of the Phi tonight at 9 o'clock before the meeting.

entire University system off the auxiliary line. A second power failure was felt while engineers were making the changeover.

Attendants at Lenoir hall reported a delay of nearly 45 minutes durings the middle of the cafeterias' rush hour. Candles were set up as elsewhere in the darkened areas, but food serving could not be resumed until 6:30.

"A few items of food disappeared into the darkness," one cashier said, "but on the whole everyone cooperated."

The Lenoir hall blackout, which darkened the Library and other nearby buildings, was caused by a balky circuit breaker in a campus substation. The equally-lengthy failure on North and Hillsboro sts. was blamed on the same cause.

Though the street and traffic light system was extinguished for several minutes, Chapel Hill police reported no accidents during the blackout period.

Industrial Organic Applications of Metallic Sodium

Sodium for organic reactions is shipped in 80,000-lb. quantities. It is pumped into the car, solidified by cooling and melted by hot oil for removal.

There would seem to be a considerable gap between the electrolysis of salt to make sodium, and research in the field of organic chemistry. However, at Du Pont as much emphasis is placed on organic research to develop outlets for sodium as on its inorganic uses.

For more than 15 years, intensive work on industrial uses for sodium has been carried on in Du Pont laboratories and plants by chemists, physicists, chemical, mechanical and electrical engineers.

In the organic field, this research has contributed a number of important uses for sodium such as the reduction of fatty esters, particularly of natural glycerides, to alcohols.

Du Pont organic chemists have found that sodium with selected secondary alcohols, such as methyl amyl alcohol, in the presence of toluene or xylene, eliminates shortcomings of the classical method involving ethyl alcohol and sodium. Practically quantitative yields of the higher molecular weight alcohols are obtained.

This new method is especially useful in preparing unsaturated alcohols not easily made by catalytic hydrogenation. The process can be carried out at atmospheric pressure and compares favorably with catalytic hydrogenation of saturated, higher fatty esters because of the simplicity of operation and equipment.

The discovery of the new reaction conditions has led to the use of millions of pounds of sodium annually for manufacture of long-chain alcohols for wetting and emulsifying agents and synthetic detergents.

Other important processes developed by Du Pont organic research include the use of sodium for reduction of fatty esters to corresponding long-chain acyloins, and reduction of nitriles to primary amines.

Du Pont has also contributed to the development of many other uses for sodium and its simple derivatives, such as in the manufacture of tetraethyllead, used in high-grade motor fuels, dyestuffs synthesis, and descaling of alloy steels. In the form of sodium hydride or sodium alkoxides, sodium is a catalyst for many Claisen condensations, useful in the manufacture of barbiturates, sulfa drugs, vitamins, keto-acids and diketones.

Preparing to carry out an organic condensation reaction involving the use of sodium, R. S. Clark, B.S., West Virginia University '42, and W. J. Hilts, M.S., Syracuse '36.

Dialectic Senate To Debate New Registration Plan

Administration Plots To Revise Procedure

By Charlie Gibson

Echoes of last year's hottest campus debate will resound through the third floor of New West tonight at 9 o'clock when the Dialectic Senate will discuss the new registration policy soon to be announced for the forthcoming winter and spring terms.

A bill to go before the Di at its third meeting of the year states that the University administration has formulated another plan of preregistration which may prove highly inconvenient to the student body.

Charlie Long, speaker of the Di, emphasized that this is a new grudge battle with other University registrars and not a re-hashing of the set-up which Edwin S. Lanier, director of central records office, initiated successfully in the face of wide student criticism last year.

Praise for Lanier

Long in a release for the press said: "By the nature of this bill the Senate in no way condemns the registration policy followed this fall. We wish to commend the registration committee and especially Mr. Lanier for the efficient way that it was carried out. The Senate, however, does feel that there is room for improvement in registration in both policy and procedure, and that is the reason we have chosen this issue for discussion. Our bill is in its entirety constructive and worthy we feel of consideration by the administration and faculty."

Invitations to attend the meeting tonight have been sent to Mr. Lanier, Dr. E. C. Markham, chairman of the registration committee, and other personnel concerned with registration. Students who are interested in the issue are urged, too, to come to the Di hall at 9 o'clock and participate in the argument which is to be open to the floor with free expression of opinion encouraged.

Bill Under Consideration

The complaint of the bill under consideration is twofold and reads that the newest in registration efforts is to provide as follows:

"(1) Preregistration at one and the same time for winter and spring quarters, without any suitable information to the students of the courses designed to be offered, and without adequate time allowed for the consideration of the courses offered;

"(2) The requirement that students pre-registered under the system present themselves to receive their class tickets on Saturday and Sunday, January 3 and 4, (the first day of classes being Monday, January 5) presumably waiting in an outdoor line in midwinter while an attempt is made to process more than 6500 persons in two days, notwithstanding that only 3500 persons were processed under the same procedure in three days the previous quarter, and while these students are liable to a $2.50 late fee for any classes not attended with class tickets on Monday, January 5."

Suggested Improvements

However, there are several improvements suggested by the Di's bill:

"(1) That on this specific occasion, the class tickets of all students be sent to them through the mails, to avoid the congestion inevitable under the conditions mentioned above, as well as the risk to health, and the use of Sunday for the procedure contemplated;

"(2) That the registration system of the University be re-organized in such a manner as to utilize modern machines designed for the purpose, and to function in such a manner as to accommodate the present large number of students without hardship and inconvenience, there having passed sufficient time for the institution of such measures;

"(3) That there be appointed by the president of the student body to the committee on registration at least two members of the student body to represent the interests and views of the students and to present the possible difficulties of students to that committee;

"(4) That the custom of publishing, well in advance, a schedule of courses to be offered in a given quarter, together with the name of the instructor expected to teach it, the hour of the course, and a summary of the curriculum, be re-established and that such information be made generally available at least one week before registration."

SAINT JOAN by George Bernard Shaw, which is being presented by the Carolina Playmakers Wednesday through Sunday nights at 8:30 for the first time on a North Carolina stage. Left to right are: Frank Groseclose, Atlanta, as the "Dauphin," Robert Barr, Kansas City, as "de la Tremouille," William Ayres, Roanoke, Va., as the "Archbishop of Rheims," Porter Van Zandt, Rochester, N. Y., as "Dunois," Eleanor Ringer, Asheville, as "Joan," and Nat White, Birmingham, Ala., as the "Executioner." In the foreground is Hans Rothe, guest lecturer and European producer, who is directing the play.

Playmakers' 'Saint Joan' Opens Tonight; Ticket Sales Warrant Extra Performance

Coupled with the opening of the Carolina Playmakers production of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" at 8:30 tonight, John W. Parker, business manager, announced that the play will be held over for an extra performance, due to the heavy demand for tickets, and will be presented again Sunday night.

Original plans called for the play to be presented for a four night run, October 29, 30, 31, and November 1, but late yesterday Mr. Parker discovered that only a few tickets for each of the four scheduled nights remained unsold.

Reservations for tickets have come from several other towns, including Sanford, Durham, Burlington, Greensboro, and Raleigh, and the small supply of tickets will not be enough to fill the demand, which is the heaviest in several years.

Mr. Parker said, "We still have tickets for each of the originally scheduled four nights, but not more than twenty for any one night."

Tonight's opening performance of the play about Joan of Arc, considered to be one of the great modern classics, will be the first time that the show has been staged in North Carolina. Tonight's performance is being dedicated to Dr. Archibald Henderson, official Shaw biographer and head of the University mathematics department. Dr. Henderson will be guest of honor at a dinner at the Carolina Inn before the production, and a special program honoring him will be held in the theatre before the curtain goes up.

Scene designer Lynn Gault and shop foreman Gordon Bennett have turned out a setting for the play which they consider, "something new." Lighting is being supervised by graduate assistant James Byrd, and Betty Young is stage managing the production. Costumes are being handled by graduate assistant Mary Jo Cain, in the absence of costumer Irene Smart. W. P. Covington, III, is stage crew chief, and Gloria Gunn is handling the sound effects. Elizabeth Dawson is master of properties.

The play has a cast of 39, and is staged in a preface, six scenes, and an epilogue. The preface is being presented in dialogue form for the first time on any stage.

But Bill Is Proposed To Clear NSA Group

By Bill Sexton

A student government already torn by disputes over the coed visiting agreement and Student council's appellate jurisdiction faces another thorny case following the announcement yesterday that Sam Daniels, secretary-treasurer of the student body, would file charges against the three U.N.C. delegates to the National Student Association conference.

The three — Bill Miller, Johnny Clampitt, and Herman Baker—are accused by Daniels of spending student funds on air transportation to the conference at Madison after he and other student officers directed them to travel by day coach.

Daniels has notified the speaker of the legislature that he intends to appear before the student lawmakers in their session tomorrow evening, presumably to elaborate on his charges against the N.S.A. delegation.

Meanwhile, Basil Sherrill, a member of the Legislature's finance committee, said yesterday he would introduce a resolution declaring the legislature's intention to allow air transport for the delegation.

Legislative Action

"The finance committee based the original appropriation on the cost of airline passage, not rail," Sherrill declared, "and I hope to clear the whole thing up by passing a bill making that definite." The original N.S.A. bill did not specify what means of transport was to be used.

Sherrill said he hoped to get the bill before the Ways and Means committee before the legislature session in Di hall tomorrow evening, so that it might reach the floor of the legislature for consideration without delay.

The controversial case has arisen over use of student funds on air transportation after Tom Eller, Jack Folger, and Daniels—the three student executive officers—directed the N.S.A. delegates to travel by day-coach. Eller, Folger, and Daniels maintained that since the appropriations bill did not specify what transportation was to be used, the executives were empowered to direct use of the funds.

Constitutional Point

In the student constitution the Secretary-Treasurer is held responsible to "disburse all monies appropriated by the Student Legislature."

Ernest House, finance committee member who authored the original bill authorizing the N.S.A. appropriation, said yesterday, "It was definitely my intent and the intent of the committee that the delegates fly to Madison."

Student Council To Air IFC Case; Session Tonight

In a meeting sparked by student body President Tom Eller's remarks on the student constitution, the Student council decided Monday night that they would hear the case of the jurisdictional powers of the Interfraternity council this evening.

Aside from Eller, several other people were invited to present their views at the meeting, which turned out to be a preliminary hearing of the case. Gran Childress, who presented the question to the council, and Basil Sherrill spoke on the fact that the constitution was being violated by the Interfraternity council trying fraternity violations of coed visiting agreement.

Speaking on behalf of the fraternities were Leon Todd, president of the Interfraternity council, Barbara Cashion, Tag Montague, and several other interested parties.

In answer to Sherrill's point that the case being tried involved the violation of the letter of the constitution, Tom Eller, quoting from that document, brought forth the view that the Student council did not have the power to sit in judgment over the violation in question in the first place.

The clause Eller quoted, from article II section 3, reads as follows: "The Student council shall have original jurisdiction in all cases involving the constitutionality of any act of the Student Legislature when such act has actually been violated and its constitutionality questioned by the alleged violator."

The act in question, it was brought out, is not an act of the Student Legislature but an agreement made between the House Privileges board and the fraternities involved.

IFC Presents Bids For New Men Today

All men who have been formally or informally rushed since the beginning of the fall quarter and intend to join a fraternity must report to Memorial hall between 3 and 6 o'clock this afternoon to pick up their bids.

Before a new man may go to the house of his choice, Interfraternity council president Leon Todd warned yesterday, he must pay a $1 pledge fee to the IFC at Gerrard hall.

Following a meeting of the council Monday night Todd announced that Bob Nelson will represent the IFC at the National Interfraternity conference at New York City in December. Another delegate will be chosen later to represent the council executive committee.

Air Reserve Students Obtain Use of Plane

Attempting to organize students at the University who are pilots in the Air Reserve, 28 interested members attended an informal meeting held last Monday night at 7:30 in the Air R. O.T.C. building.

Colonel Switzer, head of the R.O.T.C. unit, presided over the meeting, during which he told what had been done towards obtaining aircraft which the pilots may use to maintain their proficiency. Acting entirely on his own time, Col. Switzer has obtained the use of a C-47 from Pope Field which will be used probably twice a month to ferry reservists to Marietta Field, Ga., the nearest reserve base in the 14th A.F. area.

Following this announcement, a voluntary committee consisting of Master Sgt. Randolph J. Stuart, David B. Stevens and Robert S. Swain, offered to investigate and report on the advisability of forming a local chapter of the Air Reserve Association.

After a spontaneous vote of thanks to Col. Switzer for his efforts, the meeting was closed with plans for another to be held next Monday at the same time.

Report from Hungry Europe Is Topic of Cooley Speech

With members of Congress from both parties preparing to tackle the Marshall plan for European aid at the special session called by the President, students will get a chance this evening at 8 o'clock to hear the opinions of Representative Harold D. Cooley speaking in Gerrard hall.

Mr. Cooley returned two weeks ago from an official investigation of conditions in the war-scarred countries on the edge of the Russian sphere-of-influence.

The International Relations club is sponsoring the congressman's "Report from Hungry Europe" as part of their program to stimulate student interest in world affairs.

"The danger of communism and Europe's economic chaos will be the highlights of Mr. Cooley's report," stated IRC President Bill Patterson, sophomore from Winston-Salem. "We are proud to present the first public speech by a member of the Herter congressional investigating committee. However, it should be emphasized that the IRC is nonpartisan and strives to bring spokesmen of all opinions to the campus."

As a member of the Herter committee and as the ranking minority leader of the House agricultural committee, Mr. Cooley toured Europe talking with government leaders and farmers about the Marshall plan.

"Leave your tuxedoes at home," was the warning given to the committee members before the trip began this summer. Time magazine hailed the investigation as a display of "congressional statesmanship at its highest."

Mr. Cooley was elected to congress from the fourth North Carolina district in 1934 to fill an unexpired term. He is now considered top House expert on the farm problem in this country.

"If our foreign policy is to stop Communism," Cooley said last spring after returning from the Inter-Parliamentary Union conference in Cairo, "we had better stop it in the Black sea, at the Bosphorus, in the sea of Marmora, or at the Dardanelles, or at some place far distant from our own shores."

Two Debate Teams Chosen In Tryouts

Two four-man debate teams were chosen in the tryouts Monday night, Maurice Braswell, president of the debate council, announced yesterday.

One team composed of Merle Stevens and Randall McLeod on the affirmative and Dick Mottsman and Earl Fitzgerald on the negative, will go on a Southern tour of debates that will include Asheville - Biltmore College, University of South Carolina, North Georgia College, University of Georgia, University of Florida, and Miami University.

The other group, having David Cameron and C. B. Hodson on the affirmative and Richard Bowen and Sam Manning on the negative, is to attend the Grand Eastern Forensic tournament in Charlotte.

The best debaters in the two groups will participate in the debate to be held when the Oxford university team is the guest of this university on January 6.

Braswell has requested that the members of the teams meet at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Dialectic senate hall.

Faculty-Student Discussion Held in Coed Get-together

A panel composed of two students and two faculty members discussed student conditions throughout the world at yesterday's Coed Get-together, first of a monthly series of meetings sponsored by the YWCA to promote coed spirit.

Speaking on students in Europe, Mr. Claude Shotts, YMCA secretary, said, "We here in America are uniquely favored, and we have the responsibility to eat less and even go hungry, wear less and even go shabby, to aid our fellow students in Europe."

Dr. Chang W. Lee, a native of Korea, spoke on the history, geography, and industrial development of his country. United Korea became to Japan "as a dagger at her throat," said Dr. Lee, and told of the annexation of the country by Japan in 1910.

Benedicte Santos of Sao Paulo, Brazil, spoke on the educational problems of her country. Although Brazil has high inflation and overcrowding in her universities, her greatest problem is in adult education, Benedicte said.

Lincoln Kan, state director for CCUN, spoke on conditions in China, emphasizing the difficulties brought about by Japan's desire to stamp out culture during her occupation of China. He told of the treks of university students into the interior to escape bombing raids, and the even harder return trips, resulting in lack of books and equipment as well as of personal necessities.

Local Radio Drama Will Be Broadcast

An ensemble of drum, piccolo and flute will provide the background music for tonight's radio drama, "The Small Shepherd—Nathan Hale," from the Communication Center studios at 8:30 over stations WHHT and WRAL.

The play was written for the series of broadcasts called "Thirty-Three By Air" by alumnus Violet Fidel, last year's winner of the Koch award for playwriting.

Conrad Steward and John Kiser will play the three instruments as transitions during the program.

Prominent in the student cast directed by Robert Schenkkan will be Bob Epstein as Nathan Hale, Caroline Padgett, Violet La Rue, Quentin Brown, Elliott Donnels, Bob Gutknecht and Mervyn Lentz.

DTH NOTICE

Beginning with Sunday's edition the Daily Tar Heel will publish a regular weekly society page. All sororities, fraternities, dormitories, and clubs are requested to delegate a member of their group to write up social events. The representatives of these groups are requested to meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Daily Tar Heel office.

A Racket for Professors and Publishers

At the beginning of the fall quarter a great many textbooks were declared obsolete and new ones were substituted for them. Because of these changes, many students were unable to sell their old books and book stores were stuck with a lot of useless second hand texts.

Most of these changes were brought about because the new book was more informative or more teachable than the old one. But, in some cases, these new texts were little or no better than the old edition. Why, then, were these books changed?

The answer to this question involves a racket that has gone deep into American education. For example, suppose Publisher X puts out Textbook A. He sells this edition of Textbook A until the second-hand market is flooded and then, by the simple expedient of printing Textbook B to take its place, he creates a whole new market for himself. Often Text B is no better than Text A and the reason for change is simply to bring more dollars into the already bulging pockets of the publisher. In one case, on this campus, a new book was substituted for an old edition and all students in the class were forced to buy it. The only difference between the old and the new book was that the new one had three new sources where the students could buy materials.

Professors are not blameless in this textbook racket. Some of them declare their own books obsolete and write a new edition because the second-hand market is flooded and they are receiving no more royalties from the book. Some professors have the back-scratching, "You use mine and I'll use yours" attitude. For example, Professor Z of Podunk will use a book by Professor Y of nearby Siwash for the sole reason that the Siwash prof is using a book that he wrote. Thus both professors get more royalties.

Admittedly, we do not know every aspect of this problem, but we think that those who do know will admit that there is a problem and that something should be done about it. There is something very unfair about money-minded publishers and professors forcing college students to buy new books which have no more academic value than the edition before. These publishers and professors who perpetrate this racket should keep in mind their solemn duty to American education and think twice before they carry their money-making scheme further.—C.S.

Individual Help Is Essential

Chapel Hill, or at least certain individuals of the community, would like to aid in the measure to help conserve food for the starving in Europe. Although Chapel Hill's mayor, R. W. Madry did not receive a personal appeal from President Truman, as did many mayors throughout the country, to urge their citizens to comply with the plan of observing a meatless Tuesday and poultryless Thursday, the community will nevertheless have a foor conservation committee. But this committee, headed by Dr. Paul E. Shearin, dean of the Physics department, will be of little value unless we do our part by abstaining from meat and poultry as the President has requested.

Some of the restaurants in this vicinity have had to print footnotes on their menus stating that meat will be served on any day if the customer orders it. They reason that the conservation of these articles needed by the European countries is strictly on a voluntary basis.

The need is great. What we have been asked to do is comparatively little. The great emergency has been described by Claude Shotts, University YMCA secretary, who recently returned from Europe, as so urgent that a long-range program should not be worked out as the time consumed in doing so would be detrimental to the citizens of the needy countries. The Europeans are now living a day-by-day, hand-to-mouth existence. The President's request will not work a hardship on any of us. It is the least we can do.

Death Blow for One

Howard Hughes has made good a promise to invite the Senate committe to come and watch the initial trial performance of his $18,000,000, eight-engine flying boat that they alleged would never take to the air. Hughes will probably have a much larger crowd than he anticipates to view his prodigious aircraft which he boasts has enough space to carry the contents of two boxcars.

The trial run reminds us somewhat of the out-dated duels at dawn. Hughes has staked all of his future on the success of the flying plywood monstrosity which needs 14,000 gallons of gasoline for its engines. If the machine does not take to the air and make good Hughes' boasts, he has promised the committee he will pick up and leave the country. We were wondering what would happen to the other participant in the duel if for some unknown reason Hughes succeeds in putting the ship through its paces. Usually a duel means a death blow to at least one of the participants.

Gate for Dateless Males

The University Veteran's association will, like so many other school's veteran organizations, be in its death throes soon if it springs many more rules like the one sprung on its members Friday night. That rule according to the doorman, was and is—males will not be admitted without dates, regardless of membership, on Friday and Saturday nights.

Is the UVA club houses for its members? Or do the heads of the organization think that the dozens of veterans paying their dollars into the treasury expect to make it a restricted playhouse for some small group? The idea that maybe some of the guys who take dates don't want them dancing with stags is understandable but why can't those same dates learn the Emily Post method of refusing to dance with stags if their escorts don't approve?

The prevalent idea of the function of the UVA clubhouse is to provide a place for the veterans with or without dates to drop in for a coke or a chat or just to spend some time—either it is all the time or it isn't—Board of Governors enlighten the veterans. Also what happened to the original founder's code of—no restrictions?

Again the ruling heads of the UVA need to be reminded that many, many University Veteran's Associations have gone under, most notable of which was Ohio State, just because of such things during the past year.

Now is the time to either fold up or make a bid to become stronger.—A. M.

At Prague Youth Festival

Czechs Honor Americans

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles presenting Mrs. Scales' personal observations at the Prague Youth Festival held in Czechoslovakia this past summer.)

By Vera Scales

When I heard that that the World Youth Festival, to be held in Prague, Czechoslovakia, in July and August, was for the exchange of the culture and ideas of youth of all countries, I was determined to go, even if I had to sell my girdle.

Let me tell you first of all about the hospitality of the Czech people. One evening when half of our American delegation was eating and the rest of us were leaving for supper, two Czech youths, whom we had never seen before, invited us to attend a party at their village of Kralupy. They looked so disappointed when they found that our delegates had all left for dinner that we hunted up our companions and actually pulled them away from the table, loaded ourselves on to a lorry, and rode off through the beautiful countryside.

Every few miles we passed through a village where the children and old folks lined the side of the road, yelling "Nazdar" (greetings), with a friendliness that gave us a warm feeling inside that many GIs have shared. We couldn't resist them; we found ourselves yelling back "Nazdar."

Turning suddenly into the town square we met eight thousand villagers standing, smiling, shouting "Nazdar." A brass band played as they made an aisle for us to tables which held great piles of food—platters of pastries and good Slovakian wine. We realized this was no party; this was a feast, and in our honor. Young girls from the Czech youth movement, SCM, continued to push pastries, doughnuts, and cigarettes at us, even after we had left the tables.

We could tell that they expected us to perform in some way for them; so we gave our extemporaneous program—which we had used continually since our boat trip over. They liked our dancing, especially the jitterbugging which they witnessed as if it were a serious art form.

We wondered why the villagers were so friendly and generous to us, because we had heard many speak of a seemingly unwarranted American bombing raid which destroyed the industry of Kralupy at the close of the war. We asked our interpreter, who told us that the village government officials, who were very progressive, felt sorry for us because they had heard that the American State Department had almost prevented us from attending the festival, and that we had overcome many obstacles to get there.

They lit a bonfire as high as a house and served us wonderful Pivo (beer).

It was late and time to leave, but they could not let us go like that. We had to troop through a little public kitchen where they gave each of us two big bags. We rode home, singing in the dark, so full that we did not even taste the fruit and pastry which we held in our arms.

Paris (UP)—Men, steel yourselves for a body blow.

Paris is plotting a "new look" for you, too.

The revolution is taking place very quietly, however. Plotters to change men's styles, which have remained virtually static since 1900, are working underground, unknown to the innocent man in the street, who still walks gaily, clad in his cotton or silk shirt, his vest, trousers and coat.

D-Day for the announcement of the "new look" for men is still a closely-guarded secret. Only here and there were there dangerous overtones that style priests were ruminating such a revolution.

Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, veteran revolutionary in the fashion world, said this week:

"Unfortunately, there are two things which make a change in men's clothing difficult. They are afraid of wearing colors they like, and they are afraid of looking effeminate."

But she, too, is indicating subtly the revolution to come:

"The white summer uniform of a sailor is nice, don't you think? A tunic of this kind, in gabardine, well-cut and fitted, looks splendid, and would be a perfect answer to the complaint that men are too hot in summer."

Home of the coming revolution, however, is not in the Parisian "haute couture" houses, but in the little tailor shops in the old section of the city.

Jean Van Acker, a well-known tailor, spilled the beans.

"The new look for men," he said, "is as follows: No vest, matching coat and pants, but with the pants cut like ski trousers.

"Thin-soled shoes for men in winter are silly. 'The new look' to come will include heavy-soled shoes, much like our after ski boots now, with pants cut in a 'V' shape narrowing at the ankles, with a strap under the foot.

"Jackets, I feel, will remain much the same, except in summer men will order thin, light gabardine or linen shirts, with tailored collars, to be worn with a tie, a pocket for the inevitable fountain pen and cigarettes, and cuffs. This idea is largely gaining popularity after the American soldiers' summer uniforms."

Van Acker, who owns a little tailor shop in the business district of Paris, said the wristwatch was largely responsible for the death of the vest.

"Young men aren't ordering them any more," he said. "They don't need the pocket, because they don't have any watch or chain. Waistcoats aren't warm enough, either. If a young man wants to keep warm, he wears a pullover under his coat—even in Paris."

No Sightseeing For Cooley

By Drew Pearson

G.O.P. Congressman August Andresen of Red Wing, Minn., in charge of an agriculture subcommittee touring Italy, gave strict orders to his fellow Congressmen against sightseeing. On the way to Rome, however, they were blown to Nice by a hurricane and forced to make an emergency landing in a 60-mile crosswind. Next day, they made another start. Again the weather was too turbulent over Rome, so they nosed toward Pisa and circled over the city.

Peering out the window, Congressman Harold Cooley, North Carolina Democrat, pointed excitedly.

"There's the Leaning Tower of Pisa!"

"What do you think we are doing," snapped Andresen, "sightseeing?"

When President Truman called in Capitol Hill leaders to explain his decision to summon a special session of Congress, one of his arguments was supplied by a Commerce Department chart. It showed trends of prices and exports in recent months.

Giving his "classroom" of senators and congressmen a lecture on living costs, Truman pointed to the "price line." It disappeared at the top of the chart. Meanwhile, exports showed a definite decline.

"A lot of people believe that the less we ship abroad for relief, the lower prices will be at home," the president commented as he passed the chart over to Senator Taft. "However, the opposite is now true, as you can see. Our exports have actually gone down in the last several months, yet domestic prices have increased."

"I suggest, Mr. President," interrupted Taft, "that you give us comparable figures on the increase in wages."

The president replied that wages are lagging behind, a statement that Taft promptly challenged with some figures of his own.

Truman then went on to point out that increased prices were solely responsible for the increased cost of relief to Europe. The original estimate of funds needed to carry needy Europeans through March 31, 1948, was $580,000,000, the president explained. Now it is $642,000,000 and, he added grimly, it may go higher unless Congress does something about prices.

"We've got to remember that the higher prices go, the greater our relief costs are going to be," he said.

House G.O.P. Majority Leader Charles Halleck inquired as to just what the president wanted Congress to do about prices. He said that Congress never would approve restoration of price controls and that if this issue took priority over relief appropriations at the special session, Congress might argue all winter before any funds voted for Europe's starving.

Truman replied that he had no intention of asking Congress to restore general price controls, partly because it would cost too much to set up the necessary administrative machinery; also, it would take too long to get the program under way, even if Congress gave its approval.

Allocation of key materials, greater export-import controls, and price ceilings on certain key commodities (at the producer instead of the consumer level) were some of the things he had in mind, Truman revealed. However, he did not clarify what materials should be allocated or what effect allocations would have on the over-all price picture.

All these questions would be answered at his next meeting with the congressional leaders, the president promised, at which time he would have a specific program to recommend to Congress.

Some highly interesting byplay took place behind the scenes in high Democratic circles before the Democratic National Committee met today to select the city for the National Convention.

Both President Truman and Postmaster General Hannegan strongly favored San Francisco. Hannegan went even further and suggested Oakland and San Francisco as joint sponsors for the convention.

However, the hotel men at San Francisco turned thumbs down. Overcrowded, they actually discouraged the Democratic delegates. Jimmy Roosevelt and Ed Pauley, meanwhile, urged Los Angeles. In fact, that has been about the only thing they've agreed on lately. But they wanted to hold the meeting outdoors in the Coliseum, and Democratic bigwigs in Washington were afraid both of the weather and the idea that the Coliseum might be picketed by Henry Wallaceites.

Meanwhile, Philadelphia came forward with some attractive offers. Holding the Democratic convention in the same hall right after the Republicans, they pointed out, would cut down expenses. Hannegan, however, was still skeptical. He figured that with the Democrats sure to nominate Truman, the convention would be minus fireworks, suspense, and drama. Also he was afraid that, in steaming hot weather, too many delegates would be off to Atlantic City and television would show up the empty seats in the Convention Hall.

However, inertia in the Far West, plus the fact that Senator Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, new Democratic chairman, favored Philadelphia, means that the city of brotherly love will get two political conventions next summer.

In Defense of Hardin Craig

By Joe Allen & Lee Knowles

Recent issues of The Daily Tar Heel have contained a considerable amount of comment on Dr. Hardin Craig's Founders Day Address which was delivered at the University Convocation several weeks ago.

In this speech Dr. Craig applied the underlying principles of his belief to the critical situation of the world today. He suggested that we take it upon ourselves to struggle with the spirit, law and text, the revolutionary ideas of Democracy until, thru our understanding, adherence and application, we have made them our own; in other words that we take advantage of our heritage. He added that no one else will do this if we refuse. He implied that our failure will kill the great contagious power of democratic faith as well as our faith in democracy as a way of life. Naturally we and our children will reap the totalitarian rewards of such inert stupidity.

Critically timed, thought out, and delivered his words were, naturally enough, critically received. Unfavorable comment in letter form has appeared in several issues of this paper. Some people just didn't like Dr. Craig's remarks; one student was moved to call him, I paraphrase, the unwitting tool of Wall Street interests. Others suggested, perhaps rightly, that he failed to make the important distinction between socialism and communism.

As a matter of fact, the writers of this column have our differences with Dr. Craig, quite a few of them, but, we wish to proceed, the speech sounded much more important to us than the sum of our differences. It rose above them because a challenge was voiced, an old challenge voiced many times by many men, from platforms and pulpits, in political debate and in the lecture hall. We feel that this challenge is also a plea and, perhaps, a prayer. With apologies to Dr. Craig for any consequent distortion we wish to give, no sound, competent reportorial paraphrase of the high points of the address, but a gestalt reaction to an exciting and significant experience.

Study, think, and work we still hear him say; form yourselves in such a way that you will not be abashed or frightened by the non-existence of absolute success. From the twenty-five hundred years plus of Western Culture, and particularly from the last two hundred years, see this: the time of crisis is never over because the presence of crisis is the presence of life itself. All our great discoveries in the management of human affairs and in the shaping of destiny spring from the critical needs of man. The world is always in danger of decay, disintegration and destruction and it is of ultimate importance that each generation see this and repair to the lessons learned for them by all past generations. The apparent solution of one critical time only signals the approach of another; this unending cycle, far from resembling the wheel of Ixion, supplies a ceaseless incentive to learn, select and apply. Man today can be the sum of all the crisis energy, resourcefulness and wisdom of the past and this dynamic summation can be called his intelligence: his power to apply past experiences to new situations.

New game room for Graham Memorial will be finished in a few days. . .Carpenters are now cleaning up the old Graham Memorial Grill kitchen, located in back of the Rendezvous. Though it won't be as large as the old game room, which occupied the entire Rendezvous, it will have pretty nearly the same facilities.

Dave Howard and his new eight-piece student orchestra made their Chapel Hill premiere in the Rendezvous last evening. Organized late last spring, the group toured the east coast during the summer, and played an extended engagement in Martinsville, Va.

Tar Heel Soccer Team Trounces Duke Internationalists, 7-3

Rough Row to Hoe

As most people know, Carolina begins the second half of a formidable grid schedule this coming Saturday. And if one thinks the Tar Heels had a rough row to hoe in the first five contests, just consider the last five opponents on the 1947 card:

6. Tennessee—any team coached by Bob Neyland can usually give its rivals a hard time.

7. N. C. State—an old foe returning to a team's schedule is always tough.

8. Maryland—Jim Tatum will have his boy's "up" for this one, for old time's sake.

9. Duke—Need more be said??

10. Virginia—Currently among the nation's unbeaten elevens.

Using Paul Williamson's national ratings for our standard, the average rank of the second half teams is 32.8, considerably better than the 42.2 average for the first five opponents. Thus it appears that the worst in opposition is yet to come.

WE'RE NOT ALONE in thinking along these lines. The one person who should have a definite idea on the subject, Coach Carl Snavely, is of the same opinion.

"For example," points out Coach Carl, "A lot of people think Tennessee will be a pushover because of their unimpressive record. That's not true—Tennessee has lost two games on bad breaks. It's going to be a very hard game and we have a reasonable chance to win."

As for Carolina's chances of improving as the stiffer competition moves in, the silver-topped mentor is optimistic. "Our last two games were both our best performances at the time we played them," he declared. "There's been a decided improvement in the execution of our plays, especially the blocking, and there's no reason why we shouldn't continue to improve."

Man Who Knows

Following up a tip from Coach Snavely, we went down the hall a few doors to hear all about Tennessee from a man who knows. This learned person was backfield Coach Russ Murphy, who saw the Volunteers in action against Duke, Alabama, and Tennessee Tech.

Murphy echoed Snavely all the way. Tennessee has a much better team than its 2-3 record indicates," he stated. "They've been rather unfortunate in two of the games I've seen. Against Duke, penalties interrupted five marches and against Alabama they fumbled away five scoring chances.

THE CHIEF MEN to watch, according to Murphy, are fullback George Balitsaris, a good line plunger, tailback Hal Littleford, a top-flight runner and passer, and Captain Denver Crawford, a top operative in a good line. "Yessir," Murphy continued, "If they play without fumbling and getting penalized, they'll be very good. We don't expect that they'll keep on throwing away their chances forever."

Big Four Pro Stars

Four former grid stars in the Big Four were among the standouts in the Chicago Bear-Washington Redskin struggle of the titans last Sunday. Nick Sacrinty, former Wake Forest All-Southern aerial artist, pitched one of the many touchdown passes that led to a Bear triumph. Among the big boys in his forward wall are Bill Milner, former Duke All-American guard, and Pat Preston, who starred for both Wake Forest and Duke, in turn. And on the opposite side of the scrimmage line was Carolina's own Ernie Williamson, now a first-year sensation for the fearsome Redskins.

Big, 250-pound Ernie, incidentally, is considered by Redskin owner George Marshall as "the best rookie lineman we've brought up for some time." If only Coach Snavely had been allowed to paraphrase the statement slightly into, "the best sophomore lineman Carolina has had for some time!"

Direct Hit

The past week's predictions resulted in the first direct hit of the year on the Carolina score. By way of celebrating his trip to Florida, Billy Carmichael called the 35-7 count right on the nose. He denies, however, that he signalled the players to stop scoring after the 35-7 tally was reached.

In the weekly total on our "Twenty Toughies," Carmichael didn't continue his psychic crystal-gazing, bringing up the rear with nine right. Morty Schaap was high on the list with 14, yours truly hit 12, and Jake Wade and Bill Lamkin scored 11 each. By way of comparison, the Williamson system was good on 10.

Solo dashes were successful for Schaap on TCU and Cornell, Lamkin on Alabama, and yours truly on Northwestern and Washington and Lee.

THERE WERE NO changes in the overall standings from last week, but the top four places tightened up slightly. With the season half over, the standings on 100 games are as follows:

	W	L	Pct.	GB
Bill Lamkin	62	38	.620	—
Jake Wade	61	39	.610	1
Bob Goldwater	59	41	.590	3
Morty Schaap	58	42	.580	4

Carolina Harriers Meet Blue Devils At Durham Today

Bach Scores Three To Pace Allenmen

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's scrappy booters proved to some 400 rain-soaked fans yesterday afternoon that anything can still and does happen in the Carolina-Duke Blue Devil rivalry when they ran Gerry Gerard's highly-touted eleven into the muddy turf of Fetzer Field, 7-3.

Joe Bach, Al Singer, Gus Johnston, and Dave Boak paced a first period Tar Heel attack that netted five goals and gave them a decisive 5-1 lead which broke the back of the now Black and Blue Devils attack. The diminutive Bach, who tallied two goals in the first quarter Carolina scoring spree, was a thorn in the side of the favored Duke booters throughout the damp afternoon.

One sour note was sounded in the locals' victory, however, for scrappy Basil Jackson, a sparkplug in the Carolina attack all afternoon, broke his right leg just above the ankle during a scramble for the ball in the middle of the fourth period. The loss of Jackson for the remainder of the season is a serious blow to Tar Heel prospects of finishing the season above the .500 mark in the won-lost column.

Duke's Arnie Rostad, a husky lad from Norway, opened the day's scoring less than after minute after the kickoff when he and little Chico Rigioni brought the ball all the way down the field from their own goal to the Carolina net and Rostad booted the ball by Tar Heel goalie Al Williams who slipped and just missed blocking the kick.

The Allenmen knotted the score a few minutes later when Al Singer drove a sizzling kick into the Duke net from almost twenty yards out.

Joe Bach, the tiny bespectacled scrapper, sent the locals into a 2-1 lead when he took a pass from Singer directly in front of the goal and slipped the ball into the net. The two had just before brought the ball down from midfield.

Bach racked up his second tally of the period, a few minutes later, when he took a pass from skin-headed Gus Johnston and booted the mud-caked ball past the frantic Duke goalie for another score. A corner kick from Dave Boak to Johnston, who sent the ball whistling past Bull City goalie for still another tally, running the score to 4-1.

Bach sent his final goal sailing past the dejected Duke goal tender early in the final period after brilliant foot work by Jackson and Johnston had moved the ball down from midfield.

Gridsters Work Hard For Tennessee Game

Preparations in the Carolina Tar Heel grid camp for the invasion of the Tennessee Vols on Saturday were put on a full-scale basis by Coach Carl Snavely yesterday, although a rainy afternoon left Navy field in poor condition for a football practice.

The Tar Heels did not conclude their drills until late in the evening, and Snavely had to have the lights turned on before he ended the session. Another of Chapel Hill's power failures impeded the drills to the extent that there was nothing but fumbles while the lights were off, but Snavely kept the boys at work and a quick return of the power enabled him to continue his workout.

The Carolina blocking again came in for considerable attention. Coach Snavely had his regulars running back kickoffs and working on downfield blocking for much of the afternoon. The Tar Heel coaches have been laying special stress on the team's blocking for the last couple of weeks, and their efforts paid off last week with a 35-7 win over Florida. The blocking was by far better in that game than at any time thus far this season, Carolina had three other touchdowns called back by the officials.

The Tar Heel offense from scrimmage came in for a workout, and several new plays of Snavely's were clicking. Tennessee, usually particularly strong on defense, will pose a big test to the new-found Carolina offensive punch.

Most of the players were in uniform yesterday, but several boys did not participate in the heavy work. Indications seem that the Tar Heels will be in good physical condition against the Vols.

Another rough practice session is on tap for the locals this afternoon and tomorrow, with only a light drill planned for Friday.

Another big crowd is anticipated for the game. Some 43,000 fans are expected to jam Kenan Stadium to witness the meeting of the two old rivals.

Taylor Scores Win In Ping Pong Play

Carolina tennis star Clark Taylor advanced to the final round of the once-defeated bracket in the Graham Memorial ping-pong tournament yesterday with a 21-13, 21-15 triumph over Jim Jackson.

Taylor will face another former net ace for the Blue and White, Tom Wadden, this afternoon at 1:30. The winner will oppose Bob Goldwater, runner-up on the unbeaten side, later in the afternoon or tomorrow. The ultimate victor will encounter Ray Morris, the lone undefeated player in the tourney and another Tar Heel racquet star, for the championship.

In the future, Graham Memorial plans to make its ping-pong tournaments a one-night affair, with the whole tourney to be completed at one time. Present plans call for the first such affair to get under way tomorrow night.

Cross Country Team Seeks Second Win

By Morty Schaap

The Carolina cross country team will be out after its second straight success of the season when they tangle with the Duke Blue Devils in Durham this afternoon.

The meet will be run over the four mile course, which is one of the toughest in the hill and dale business.

Coach Dale Ranson named Jack Milne, Jimmy Miller, Alvin Smith and Sam Magill as definite starters and is taking along 19 men in all. The four other men that start officially will be selected from Mark Burnham, Frank Hooper, Chuck Herty, Halstead Holden, John Bristow, Jim Hunt and Julian Mackenzie.

Duke has had three meets so far this season dropping one-sided contests to Army and Maryland and last Saturday provided murmurs in track circles by tying a strong Navy team.

Devils Led

The Devils are led by Roger Neighborgall, Ralph Spearman, O. K. Kendricks, Henry Bullock and several newcomers. Coach Red Lewis, who was one of Duke's greatest distance men in his undergraduate days, always fields strong teams and the Tar Heel two-year-win-streak will be in danger.

Ranson is taking Kirk Mueller, Dan Martin, Basil Wood, Merv Lentz, John Brockman, Bob Black, John Carr, Bill Crimmins, and John Hoots to run unofficially and to get the experience of running a strange course. Another reason for participation by so many runners is that the Southern conference meet will find Carolina fielding a team of jayvees, as the varsity will be competing in New York the same day.

Last year Carolina took the Blue Devils into camp fairly easily with J. B. Davis of Duke being the only man to break up a Carolina monopoly.

The harriers will leave by car from Woollen gym at 2 o'clock and will ride over the Devil course before the meet.

Coach Scott Splits Cage Squad In Half

Coach Tom Scott has taken another step forward in the practice preparations for the opening of the 1947-48 cage season by dividing his squad of some 40 basketballers into varsity and junior varsity groups.

The varsity squad, which will be under Scott's personal direction, now numbers 20 five of which will be dropped to the jayvees when the season commences.

The jayvee team also numbers 20 at this time, working under the watchful eye of last year's White Phantom star, Jim Hamilton. A few weeks hence this squad will also see change, splitting into a jayvee and a freshman outfit for the season's play.

Coach Scott emphasized that these current divisions are not final by any means with freshmen now playing on the jayvee squad possibly ending up on any of the three teams.

There will be separate schedules for all three squads to be announced at a later date.

With the division completed, cage practice continues at a rapid pace with all eyes turned toward the season's opener set for the first week in December. Scott has last year's regulars, Captain Bob Paxton, Sherman Nearman and Norman Kohler back along John "Hook" Dillon, 1946 All-American, whose current ability is of unknown quantity.

Pitiful Conditions of Chinese Universities Reported by World Student Service Group

Conditions of students and faculty in Chinese universities are now worse than they have ever been, according to William Kitchen, national secretary, World Student Service fund.

As proof of this, the national headquarters of the World Student Service fund has received, for the first time this year, appeals for aid from professors in China. Before this year, professors received no aid because of skyrocketing inflation, they are now desperate.

The return of 90,000 students from their temporary universities in the interior has taken longer than expected and has resulted in great dislocation of student life. In this situation, coupled as it is with inflation and near starvation, the student relief needs are beyond calculation,

National Student Relief committee, the Chinese organization for dispensing WSSF relief, encourages students to help themselves as well as serving other groups through such projects as mass education, rural work, gardening, public health work, social service, nutrition centers, bath houses, and newspaper and office work.

Nutrition centers are particularly important, for large numbers of Chinese students are existing on a starvation diet. In North China last summer students had only the crudest corn bread with the same small bowl of vegetables and a few beans three times a day, seven days a week. The National Student Relief committee attempts to supplement the students' diet through its nutrition centers.

Chinese students filling out applications for self-help given by the National Student Relief committee, the Chinese organization for dispensing funds gathered by World Student Service fund.

Twelve student centers, many of them crude wooden buildings erected by the students themselves, have served as focal points for relief work. Here student community life, not afforded by the universities themselves, has developed. Besides food and shelter, students find in these centers a place to pass leisure hours in reading, discussion groups, lectures, and recreation. They provide a sense of stability much needed by Chinese students.

In many places in China recreational and cultural facilities, bath facilities, and even drinking water are not available to students. The NSRC meets a great need in supplying some of these facilities. One special project of this kind is service to students during examination time when facilities are provided for drinking water, lodging and counselling.

Most students spend so much time working to secure funds to enable them to live while studying that their academic work inevitably suffers. For this reason NSRC has for some years made an exception to its policy of collective aid and work relief. A small group of carefully selected students are granted scholarships on the basis of need, academic ability, character, and potential usefulness to the Chinese nation. Last year nearly 100 such scholarships were given and next year it is hoped that 200 can be given.

Campus Fraternities Receive 361 Pledges

By 6 o'clock yesterday evening 361 men students, after paying $1 pledging fees to Interfraternity council representatives in Gerrard hall, were off to their choice of the 22 fraternities on campus for their initial taste of organized collegiate brother hood, spirits running high as a climax to a full week and a half of rushing.

However, the Interfraternity council announced that many men with bids to join fraternities still have not paid the $1 pledging fee required by the University. Those interested should pay this fee at their earliest convenience in Dean Fred Weaver's office on the second floor of South building.

The list of the new pledges, arranged alphabetically by fraternities, follows:

Alpha Epsilon Phi: Melvin Codell, Albert S. Katz, Emanuel Katzin, Dale Morrison, Nelson S. Posner, Howard Wainer.

Beta Theta Pi: William Goforth, Edward Holmes, Platt B. Mooring, Jr., Marshall H. Roberts, William G. Shelton, Robert Whitlock, George Cheeseborough, John Cheeseborough, George M. Fiske, John B. Miles, Oscar Yokely.

WSSF Solicitors Will Meet Tonight To Plan Campaign

Solicitors for the World Student Service fund drive will meet tonight at 7 o'clock in the Pharmacy building auditorium for a workshop on WSSF history, needs, activities, and methods of solicitation.

Sam McGill, co-chairman of the drive, will preside, and Page Harris, chairman of men solicitors, will explain the pledge card system. Bud Dutton and Meg Healey will present a clinic designed to answer all questions about WSSF.

Pat Carruthers and Page Harris are chairmen of solicitors. Faculty solicitation will be handled by Dick Burns and Lib Taylor, and organizational solicitation by John Clampitt, Herman Baker, Margaret Jean Taylor, and Sue Everett.

Student solicitation, which will begin in all living units on Monday, will be headed up by the following unit chairmen: fraternities, Ted Fussell, Jack Hamilton, Stan Cohen; men's dormitories, Chet Zum Brunnen, George Tucker, Lindsay Warren, Charles Reese, George Dunlop, Doc Scruggs; trailer court, Bill Patterson and Creel Pickel.

Henderson Given Playmaker Award

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department and official Bernard Shaw biographer, was presented with a Master Playmakers award, specially engraved for the occasion, at the opening night of the Carolina Playmakers production of Shaw's "Saint Joan" last night.

Samuel Selden, director of the Playmakers, presented the award,, saying, "For all of thirty years, Archibald Henderson has been associated with the Carolina Playmakers. He has advised us, written about us, served on our committees, and lectured to us. . .It is doubly fitting, therefore, that we should dedicate this first performance of our thirtieth season to our senior member of the Playmakers."

Dr. Henderson was guest of honor at a dinner in the Carolina Inn before the performance, and the award was presented in the theatre, just before the curtain went up.

Mag Editor Describes First Fall Edition As 'Biggest of Year, Best Campus Talent'

By Fred Jacobson

Sparked by a photographic feature on sorority rushing the October issue of the Carolina Magazine will bring forty pages of the best of campus talent to the students on Saturday.

Representing the work of the largest staff ever to participate on one Magazine the biggest issue of the year holds interest for every man and woman on campus. The photographic story "The Mad Rush" produced by Wilson Yarborough, Jr., reveals an interesting insight into sorority rush week, portraying the parties and stunts a new girl faces to help her choose her friends for the next two years.

Another equally absorbing feature is the Mag Man of The Month who, chosen by the staff, represents a University man who plays a significant, yet little recognized part in campus life. By virtue of the successful registration period completed this Fall and the help he has given to needy students, Mr. Ed Lanier was chosen by unanimous staff decision. Charlie Gibson's searching article sheds an interesting light on the career of the Lottery proprietor. Lucie Baxter contributed an excellent illustration.

Fiction, art, poetry, and humor are again presented in the same high standard appraised by National Scholastic Press Association last year. Particularly "In the Dark of the Morning Star" by Lawler and the illustration by Bill Harrison should draw much praise from pleasure minded campus readers.

First Step for Prevention of Vandalism Taken by Duke-Carolina Representatives

The first major step in prevention of Duke-Carolina pregame vandalism was taken at a dinner meeting in the Carolina Inn Tuesday evening when local student government officials discussed the problem with their Duke counterparts.

UNC Representatives

University representatives were president Tom Eller, vice-president Jack Folger, Men's council chairman Bill Tate, Daily Tar Heel editor Barron Mills, head cheerleader Myrt Sherard, Dean Fred Weaver, and assistant controller and business manager of the University Claude Teague.

Definite steps to prevent vandalism were cited during the round-table discussion which followed the dinner. These included protection such as special night watchmen for both campuses, spotlights stationed at Duke stadium, and careful patrolling by Durham and Chapel Hill police along with the promise of prosecution of any persons caught committing destructive acts. Highway patrolmen will also be alerted during the week preceding the game to watch for violators.

Former Success

This meeting was the second of its type in the past two years. Before last fall's Duke-Carolina football contest, a similar discussion of vandalism prevention took place in Durham, and the result was a clean slate between the two schools, according to officials at the meeting. The officials said that similar cooperation will be expected this time.

Dean Herring, reviewing the past athletic records of the two universities, pointed out the excellent performances of the teams as to sportsman like conduct, and made the suggestion that students behave accordingly so as to not bring dishonor upon the names of either of the schools.

AVC Post Hears Speech by Hanft

Professor Frank Hanft of the University law school presented the case for world government before the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee on Tuesday evening.

Following his remarks the chapter voted to discuss a resolution supporting his views at the next meeting.

A plea for funds for the World Students Service fund presented by John Roeder was unanimously approved. The chapter voted an immediate appropriation of ten dollars. In addition it was decided to send delegates to Washington as soon as the special session of congress convenes to push the Taft-Wagner-Ellender housing bill.

Congressman Warns Of Pending Action By Reds in Europe

"Communist Russia is waiting like a vulture for starvation and chaos in western Europe," declared Congressman Harold D. Cooley before a packed Gerrard hall audience last night. He spoke under International Relations club sponsorship.

"If we do not implement the Marshall plan immediately," Cooley went on to say, "the Soviet Union will set up western European counterparts of Yugoslavia's puppet dictator, Tito."

Making the first public report of any member of the Herter investigation committee which returned from a tour of Europe two weeks ago, Cooley announced that he will strongly advocate prompt passage of the Marshall plan for financial aid to Europe when Congress reconvenes in special session on November 17.

"There is no other alternative to the Marshall plan," the congressman told the audience of students and faculty members. "America must be as liberal with her wealth as the nation's resources will permit."

Speaking to the former servicemen in the audience, Cooley said that "all that you won in the last war is about to be lost unless the United States abandons its economic isolation from the rest of the world. Selfish and short-sighted men directing our government are trying to build up the old tariff walls cut this country off from our distressed friends in France, England, Italy and other European democracies. If they succeed, America will be committing suicide."

Housing Office Is Rehoused; Must Vacate South Building

By Charley Gibson

The University housing office, which has always considered itself the ruling authority on who should live where when, was slapped in the face today with a directive from higher headquarters—an order to evacuate its present station in room 207, South building.

The housing office, it would seem, has been dehoused; it is caught with its quarters down to furnish more elbow-room for its neighbor, Fred Weaver, dean of men. J. E. Wadsworth, housing director, and his two secretaries, Mrs. Lee Young and Mrs. Kesley Reece, will move later this week to strictly a wartime hangover—the barracks annex of Old East.

Wadsworth and his staff are all too well aware of the impossibility of working wonders by weeping and wailing during the current campus room shortage. The press was told that the housing office in a few days, without excuses, complaints, pleading, bribes, or fuss, would merely clear out of South building.

Wringing out a damp hankie or two, though, over such an indisposition, the housing office did release a list of its fellow sufferers—those students who now head the waiting files for any available dormitory space. During the next few days the following men should keep in contact with the housing office, wherever it may roam for a new home:

Brown, Bynum R.; Couch, Robert S.; Crumpler, Earl H.; Evans, Robert G.; Hall, Ellis F., Jr.; Hobson, Fred C.; Hunter, Rufus A., Jr.; McCall, Andrew F.; Mills, James D.; Nelson, Malcolm C.; O'Connell, Robert P.; Oliver, John H.; Tucker, Virgil A., Jr.; Twine, James M.; and Wagoner, Harold.

Council To Hear NSA Delegation Case; Daniels Says No 'Manipulation' Charge

A formal hearing into the National Student association delegation expense accounts controversy will be held by the Men's Honor council tonight, Bill Tate, chairman of the council, announced yesterday.

Tate said investigation of the case, which involves use of student funds for air transportation after student government officials had ordered the delegation to travel to the Madison N.S.A. conference by day coach, was under way by the council. The three delegates—Bill Miller, Herman Baker, and Johnny Clampitt—are scheduled to appear before the council tonight along with Tom Eller, Jack Folger, and Sam Daniels, the student government officers who asked the delegates to travel by rail.

Clarifies Case

Daniels, secretary-treasurer of the student body, released a statement yesterday clarifying his stand in the case. Daniels emphasized three points:

(1) Two of the N.S.A. delegates—Baker and Clampitt—travelled by train as directed. But the pair entered on their expense accounts the cost of plane fare rather than that by rail.

(2) The third delegate, Bill Miller, did travel by air, but his expenses were shared by student government and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which sent him to Michigan during the same period to a fraternity conference.

(3) The headline in yesterday's DTH which indicated the delegation was charged by Daniels with "fund manipulation" was misleading, since the secretary-treasurer intended no such accusation.

Statement by Daniels

Daniels' statement:

"The real question is 'Should anyone be allowed to profit by virtue of the fact that he was selected to travel on University business?' The plain and simple fact is that Baker and Clampitt did not go by plane and have turned in expense accounts requesting $97.20 each for plane fare. Actually they spent for travel about $50 less than they are asking for, and if they are allowed to receive plane fare, they will have been allowed to make that much money on the trip at the expense of the student body.

"Bill Miller's case is somewhat different since just prior to the N.S.A. Convention he was sent to Michigan by his Fraternity to attend another convention. He did go by plane; but since he was also traveling for another organization I feel that the Honor Council should decide the matter—I don't know what amount he is rightfully entitled to.

Only Incurred Expenses

"The Bill only stated that checks for $200 should be sent to each delegate for expenses 'necessarily incurred'; that they should keep expense accounts; and that the unused money should be returned to Student Government. I talked to Eller and Folger about the matter and we all agreed that the delegates should go by train, since it would save about $150. Each delegate was informed of this and told that if for any reason he could not go in this manner, he should immediately return the check so we could have a new delegate selected that would go in this manner.

"I am not charging any person with 'fund manipulation'—I only know that I can't turn in any of the expense accounts until the Honor Council or the Student Council decides what expenses should be allowed to these men. I am sure that they want to do the right thing, and what the right thing is, is not for me to decide. I don't think that the right thing includes money taken from the Student Body for any item that was never bought by the delegates. However, what I think doesn't matter and that is why the Judicial Branch of Student Government must decide the matter."

Chapel Hill Communist Party Openly Revealed by Circular

By Raney Stanford

The presence of a local chapter of the Communist party in Chapel Hill was officially revealed yesterday, with the issuance of an information circular from the "Communist Party of Chapel Hill, Junius Scales, chairman."

On being contacted after the release of the circular, Scales explained that the organization in Chapel Hill is a "small, active, representative group" affiliated with the North and South Carolina district and national headquarters of the party in America.

Chapter Activity

The circular in question, which cited figures to show how corporation profits are causing current high commodity prices, Scales said is but one of the many activities by which the local chapter endeavors to carry out the general aims of the American Communist party.

The Communist chapter chairman said that to protect the best interests of his associates, in view of the current "economic and social persecution" of people with his beliefs, he thought it best to withhold specific facts about the local organization; such as the names and number of members, meeting places, and such. He said that the responsibility for publicly announcing party affiliation could only rest with the individuals concerned.

Faced Investigation

Last summer, Scales, who is a resident of Chapel Hill and a graduate student in history, was named before the House of Representatives Un-American Affairs committee as being the leader of a Communist club on the University campus. On being asked at that time to confirm or deny this, he said this accusation "should not be dignified by a reply from any one who believes in the tradition of American liberty."

But in a statement to the Daily Tar Heel yesterday Scales stated: "I have been associated with the Communist party for a number of years. I am now speaking in the name of my party in the hope that I may in a small way dispel some of the dangerous illusions and falsehoods about the Communists which are being used to distract us from the real problems which we must solve: a decent standard for all the

Phi Debaters Pass Bill Which Favors Medical Socialism

By a narrow margin of three votes Phi debaters pushed through a bill favoring socialized medicine Tuesday night at the third weekly meeting of the term. Passed by a vote of 22 to 19, the bill recommends that the government provide a system of complete medical care available to all citizens at public expense.

"The health of the nation is the responsibility of the nation," stated Chester D. ZumBrunnen, speaker pro-tem, as he introduced the bill to the assembly. Zum Brunnen outlined bills considered by the U. S. Senate favoring socialized medicine, and stressed the effect such a plan would have on relieving the inadequate medical facilities in rural areas.

Speaker John Giles, leading the opposition to the measure, stated that socialized medicine is a method of appeasing the lower classes and favoring socialism. He also pointed out that placing physicians on a salary basis would seriously reduce the number of men entering the profession, and would also prove harmful to creative medical research.

Dr. Ling, currently engaged in research on vitamin B-6 at the University, told members of the Phi that the expense of present day medical care puts adequate treatment beyond the reach of lower income groups, and that the distribution of the national income is such that in poorer states where hospitals are most urgently needed there are insufficient funds. He stated his belief that a good plan of socialized medicine would eliminate these defects.

Joke Boomerangs With COD Package

Man-about-campus Emile Saleeby is one person who won't have to worry about that middle-aged spread. Neither will he be likely to pull any more practical jokes without thinking twice beforehand.

When a Durham department store recently advertised immediate Chapel Hill delivery of their latest stock of girdles, Emile and cohort South Trimble thought it would be humorous to clip the ad and send it to the Moore twins, Ruth and Mary, whom they had made a practice of kidding for some time.

The joke boomeranged very shortly. Puzzled by the amused giggles of the Moores' sorority sisters when he would pass them on the campus, Emile didn't see the light until a few days ago, when a COD package arrived at the post office from Durham addressed to Miss Emily Saleeby.

The parcel contained a size 40 girdle—complete with garters.

BROADCAST OPENING

Students interested in voluntary work with Graham Memorial, in connection with broadcasting programs in Lenoir hall are requested to meet with Phil Couch, student union music director, in Graham Memorial between 2:30 and 3:30 this afternoon.

Committee Announces Plans For Sadie Hawkins Contests

Two contests—for beards and parade floats—have been announced by the Sadie Hawkins day committee. The group managing the annual Nov. 7 fete said that the float contest would be open to all campus organizations—fraternities, sororities, clubs and dormitories while the beard growing competition will be limited to males.

Originality counts highest in the float contest and the committee has urged that all decorated jeeps, bicycles and automobiles "make up" for the competition. Organizations planning to enter floats were asked to submit their names to Butchie Daneil, 2nd floor, Alderman, by Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Activities for the day will begin at 1 o'clock with a square dance demonstration in the "Y" court by the Western North club. Sadie Hawkins skits will also be presented at this time. At 1:30 the parade will begin, and will circle around through Franklin street back to Fetzer field for the football game given by the Monogram club at 2:30. The main event of the day is to be the "Human Race" at 3:30, followed by the marriage ceremonies. At 4 o'clock various competitive races will be sponsored by the CICA, WAA, and Town Girls.

There will be a backward dance in Woollen gym to close the eventful day. All coeds are expected to call for their dates and take them to the gym at 8 o'clock.

Jes' Nine Mo' Days. . .

—Hairless Joe looks jes' happy as ever, don't he?. . . Mebbe he fergits there's only nine mo' days 'till Sadie Hawkins day. And Hairless Joe's got no mo' troubles than all y'all eligible Tar Heel bachylurs, so y'all better start practisin'.

A Watchbird Watches You--and Everybody

Is there a watchbird watching you? Well, there are several that keep a critical eye on the University student constitution in its first year of operation. It's all well and good to have these watchbirds to keep a discerning eye on the Constitution in action, but scrutinizing each and every word is a strain on the optical nerves and is a vigilance far too strict.

There are several types of watchbirds. Some display brilliant hues. They strut and preen their feathers and are members of the peacock family. Their chief function is showmanship. There are several members of the woodpecker family who see a worm in a hollow stump and tap out their message. There are the sapsuckers who pick on the more lively matter. And of course, there are the parrots who repeat each statement they hear in a shrill voice.

Originally the Constitution was written with the idea of "preserving the form of student government"—in the words of the preface of the document. Naturally, you can examine each word of the constitution and interpret it in any manner that you see fit. But this was not the purpose of the Constitution. It was written to give a composite picture of the student government of the University of North Carolina in action. The fourteenth amendment of our federal constitution has been a mass of words that have been construed to mean almost every conceivable thing, when it was orginally simple to protect the right of the Negroes of our country. We cannot let our constitution develop into a conglomeration of fourteenth amendments.

The constitution was written, not to provide a complicated document that would be an always available bone of contention between groups. Instead it was an attempt to get as accurate a statement of the functions of all organizations as possible. It was to be a model of student government to show its structure to new-comers and to a campus disrupted in war-time.

We refer specifically to the case that was brought before the Council last night contesting the judiciary powers of the Interfraternity council and its authority to try the violators of the House Privilege Board agreement with the coeds.

In this first year of the constitution in action we do not have the time to keep digging out single words and rack our brains for a different connotation. It will take all of our efforts to get the campus student government running as a well-lubricated machine.

Ado About Something or Nothing

It will be up to the Legislature to determine if there is legitimate cause for Treasurer Sam Daniels to accuse John Clampitt, Bill Miller, and Herman Baker of using student funds to travel by unauthorized means or if it is merely "much ado about nothing." We hope that this disturbance will not cast a veil of doubt to overshadow the merits of the NSA, and its well-planned program.

This is the last thing that we would want to happen. The NSA, by its constitution and its aims, has proven that it can be an organization which would be a great asset to the University. The NSA has a wide following of colleges throughout the nation and we are quite confident that the group will be able to aid the University in its problems and our delegation will be able to provide useful suggestions toward building a better student government.

Next year when the student legislature is faced with the task of selecting the delegates for NSA convention, we urge it to devote much time in preparing specific instructions to the members of the delegation. Especially should they make an effort to elaborate on what the student funds may be used for in order to eliminate misunderstandings. The legislature did a fine job this past spring of instructing the delegates in just what measures they should endorse at the convention. We hope that the ideas, and the material good that our delegation accomplished at the convention is enough to convince the legislature that the delegation was a sincere one and no malpractices were intended.

We are convinced that there was no wrong intended by the three delegates and that the confusion was merely a misunderstanding between Daniels and the delegates.

An Apology to the UVA

We have an apology to make to the University Veteran association for the article which appeared in yesterday's edition regarding their policy of allowing stags in the clubhouse during the weekend. President Hugh Wells assures that the UVA never has had such a rule on the books. We published the editorial, written by a staff member, in good faith. No malice or misrepresentation of facts was intended.

The article did a great injustice to the UVA and we sincerely want to correct this. The author of the article was refused permission evidently by a member of the dance committee who was not familiar with the rules of the organization. For some reason the reporter misunderstood the dance committeeman and jumped to the conclusion that it was a new ruling of the UVA. The reporter who wrote the article should have verified each of his facts. In printing the article we were assured that the facts contained therein were verified. The reporter in question is no longer a member of our staff.

Popular literary detectives have discovered that by reversing the phrase, "One good turn deserves another," they arrive at, "rehtona sevresed nrut doog eno."

As I See It

Scales Should Have Answered 'No Comment'

By Winston Broadfoot

Last July Ann Matthews, former member of the Communist party, testified before the House un-American Affairs Committee concerning the tobacco workers strike in Winston-Salem. She incidentally mentioned that Junius Scales, resident of Chapel Hill, was head of the student Communist group at Chapel Hill. Asked about this testimony, Scales, as reported in the July 24th Charlotte Observer, replied as follows:

It is an unexpected honor to be attacked by the same committee which has endeavored to smear many of the finest Americans of our time, including the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Henry A. Wallace, and Dr. Frank P. Graham.

I believe the slandering tactics of this committee should not be dignified by a reply from anyone who believes in the tradition of American liberty.

Of course, one can readily see that Scales deliberately missed the point. The Committee did not bother with him at all; he was simply asked by newsmen to comment on one woman's statement that she knew him to be a Communist.

Nothing more was heard from Scales on the subject of Communism until yesterday, at which time a mimeographed leaflet was issued on food price control, purported to be put out by the "Communist party of Chapel Hill, Junius Scales, Chairman." I called Junius yesterday to check the authenticity of the leaflet and he stated that he did issue it.

Are we to believe that the testimony of Ann Matthews in July was untrue, but now in October Junius Scales is, in fact, head of a student group of Communists? Hardly—he held the job all along.

All of which raises the tremendously important question of honesty. Had Junius chosen to answer "no comment" to questions of his Communism, one might have objected to his reticence but no one could complain of being misled. But the statement he did make, introducing as it did the red herring of past activities and tactics of the House un-American Committee, obscured the issue raised by the freely-given testimony of Ann Matthews: Is Junius Scales the leader of the student Communists at Chapel Hill? Unless he would say that Communism itself is something nasty, I hardly see how Junius can claim to be "attacked," "smeared," or "slandered" by a truthful statement that he is a student Communist leader.

One hears often enough that Communists believe any means justifies a desirable end, and that they are not to be trusted in day to day affairs. Without knowing what tactical justification Junius may have for his present turn-about, I submit that he is part proof that as to Communism one may not safely rely on what Communists say.

While on Communist matters, I should like to comment on the recent visit of Vera Scales to Prague, an account of which is serially appearing on this page.

Admitting the usual impropriety of one writer suggesting what another say, I do hope that Vera will see fit to comment on something more than friendly atmosphere and the fine food, both of which apparently existed in abundance at Prague. I have specific reference to an article appearing in Time (August 4, 1947, page 24-25) quoted in part as follows:

To Prague journeyed 30,000 young people of all nations for a "World Festival of Democratic Youth." They had come to "play and work and learn together." They put on dramas, danced folk dances before bonfires. But they were a singularly youthless lot, for they had a serious task in Prague—the revival (in disguise) of the Young Communist International.

Some of Prague's 30,000 were sincere youngsters who had been trapped by Communism's pseudo-progressive propaganda. Others knew precisely what they were about.

The Prague program was prepared by Otto Katz (alias Andre Simone) a well-known MVD agent.

Well, what about it, Vera?

Mudville Mutterings

Village Wives to Sew

Good news this week for the little woman of the village who wants something to sew with besides her dish pan hands! The Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross is going to donate a sewing machine to the village to be used by all the wives. The machine is now undergoing minor repairs but as soon as it is ready it will be at Mrs. J. P. Blaine's home, 125 Johnson street. A notice will be put up in the rental office as soon as it arrives. Okay, girls, here's your chance to make your own "new look."

A two-tone mutter was heard this week in connection with the "Portrait of a Backyard" editorial which appeared in last Friday's DTH. It is generally agreed that a nursery would be a wonderful addition to the Village and the spirit of the editorial in pointing out this need is much appreciated. There is, however, another feeling around there parts that things are really not quite so heartbreaking as depicted. The village is inhabited in the most part by a group of pretty adult young people and their children are behaving pretty much as children behave eveywhere. The need for a nursery is as great as it is anywhere that there is a large group of young children with mothers who work. However, Victory Village is not a slum and the case described in the Backyard editorial must be a very isolated one.

Man's best friend came in for his share of the kicking around this week. At the Monday night council meeting, Chairman Tom Crittenden read a letter which he had received during the week complaining about dogs who bark in people's windows and generally misbehave. The letter suggested that the dogs be kept in the house at night so their beloved voices might at least be muffled. Tom, using great tact, appointed a committee to investigate the matter and recommended that the committee be composed of half dog owners and half non-dog owners to insure justice.

As the first step toward getting an organized playground the council chairman also appointed Mrs. Charlotte Hayes to investigate the possibilities of getting a central and supervised playground for the kids.

Another suggestion was made at the council meeting which seems like a good idea. This idea is to start an exchange in connection with the co-op. Wives who have a special talent for making candies, cakes, etc. or knitting socks, making baby clothes, etc., would furnish these items and set the prices. Arrangements would have to be made with the Co-op officials but it sounds like a swell plan.

Ives Tinayre

Sensitive Artistic Approach

By John K. B. McDowell

Mr. Ives Tinayre, baritone, assisted by the University String Quartet, appeared in a recital this past Tuesday night which was notable for the exceptional artistry of the singer and for the freshness and quality of the works performed.

Mr. Tinayre does not possess a particularly distinguished voice, but his intelligence coupled with a sensitive and inherently artistic approach to the works he performs, makes the hearing of each song both an emotional and an intellectual experience.

The program opened with three songs of the XIII Century French School, the second of which, a pastoral, was delivered with tenderness and fine feeling. Mr. Tinayre's next song, a ballade by Guillaume de Machaut entitled "Rose, lys" was beautifully sung, and none of the varied mood of the song was lost by the singer. The final two songs in the first group were by Gilles Binchois, a fifteenth century composer, and by John Dowland, the eminent lutenist-composer of the late XVIth and early XVII centuries.

The second part of Mr. Tinayre's program consisted of a Cantata da Requiem by Alessandro Scarlatti. The University String Quartet, assisted by Mr. Wilton Mason, helped Mr. Tinayre to make the performance of this work a memorable experience. This cantata of Scarlatti is dramatic in quality, and harmonically foreshadows Beethoven. The last Aria in this work bore an unmistakable resemblance to some of the music of "Fidelio."

After the intermission Mr. Tinayre resumed his program with the "Motetto par lo Sancto Spirito" by Giovanni-Paolo Colonna. This motet, in three parts, was concluded with an Alleluia, distinguished by its graceful baroque proportion and by its expression of radiant joy. The final portion of the program was devoted to the "Angus Dei" of Francesco Durante, and the aria "Ora pro nobis Deum" from the motet "Regina Coeli" of Mozart. The Durante "Agnus Dei" is a deeply moving and profoundly spiritual work, and Mr. Tinayre's performance of it was both exquisite and humble.

The concert was brought to a close with the lovely aria composed by Mozart in his early youth.

Mr. Tinayre's distinguished performance needs no additional mention. The University String Quartet, however, deserves further comment for its fine accompaniment, and for the quality of the musicianship of its members, Willis Gates and Dorothy Alden, violinists, Emily Porter, 'cellist, and Edgar Alden, violist. Wilton Mason, pianist, gave fine support to the soloist and to the ensemble.

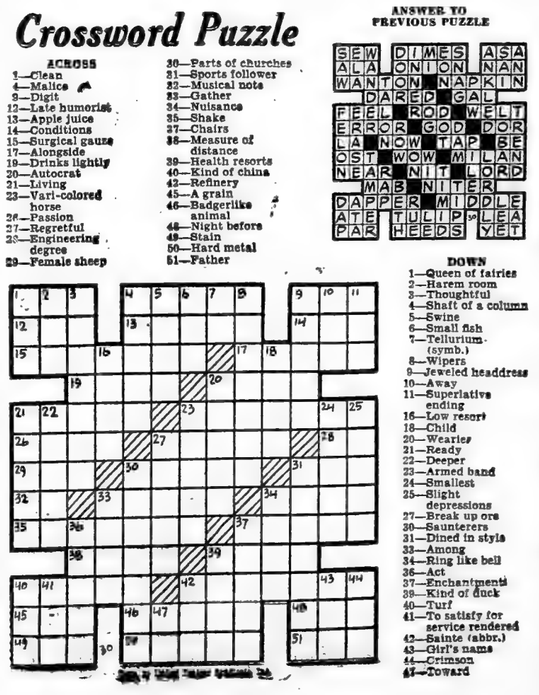
Alarm! Ring The Tocsin!

Editor:

Sound the alarm! Ring the tocsin! The time has come for every one hundred per cent American to seek out and destroy the insidious influences which are corrupting our land. The situation is critical. Things have come to such a pass that even our Congress has fallen or may fall under the sway of an alien idea. I quote from an article written in the Daily Tar Heel by the eminent journalist, philosopher, and political scientist, Bill Buchan. . ."Laws will have to be passed by Congress making membership in the Communist party unlawful and treasonable. . .it will not be surprising, however, if such a law failed to pass in Congress. With our renowned system of freedom those who oppose it could very probably hire enough "liberal" lobbyists to. . .persuade enough vote-conscious Congressmen that such a law is unnecessary and undemocratic, and out of the window it would go. Perhaps this sounds improbable, but it certainly isn't impossible. . ."



Friends and fellow countrymen, the issue is now joined. Herr—pardon me, I mean Mr. Buchan—has pointed out the true import of the situation. Even the Congress of this land is in danger of being subverted by this pernicious ideal of freedom, this ideal which is no longer supported by anyone except Communists and their tools. Let us review the development of this dangerous situation.

For some centuries, under the leadership of such radicals as Milton, Locke, Voltaire, Paine, Jefferson, Mill, and, I regret to add, the late Chief Justice Holmes (all but two, please note, were foreigners), an alien idea has been developed within the framework of the theory of democracy. This idea, the root of our difficulty, is the absurd theory that the minority has some rights which the majority is obligated to respect. This idea is, of course, contrary to common sense but it has been so ably propagated over the years that only a few people, with exceptionally keen insight into the matter, have dared to challenge its validity. My hat is off to Mr. Buchan.

In 1789, under the pressure of radical groups (some of them, alas, from North Carolina) the so-called Bill of Rights of our Constitution was drawn up. These 10 amendments presumably protect our freedom of speech and press, freedom of assembly, etc. They are, of course, of little value to the average right-thinking citizen and merely serve to protect the dissident element of the population. They should be dropped from the Constitution at once. The will of the majority as interpreted by the duly constituted governmental authorities should define the only beliefs to be permitted. No dissenting person or group should be allowed to hide behind this political relic, this "Bill of Rights," and escape the punishment due those so willfully obstinate as to set their opinions up against those of the omnipotent majority. It does not matter whether they are Communists, Fascists, Free Traders, Single Taxers, Prohibitionists, Socialists, Freemasons, or whatnot. Their views are not those of the majority and they should be compelled to shut up. Germany, Italy and Russia have shown the way. Let us, too, drop the absurd fiction of minority rights which allows dissenters to grow, like cancers, upon the body politic. Wake up, America, and proclaim to the world that we also have joined the Wave of the Future. In the 20th century minorities have no rights.

New Clerk Boosts Coffee Sales At Book-X

By R. Foo Giduz

Coffee sales are up an estimated 30 per cent in the Book-X over the last week, according to unofficial Y Court reports. Obvious reason is comely Mrs. Virginia Morris, GI wife, and new java-jerker of Ray Ritchie's Book Exchange staff. . .So they tell Carousel, she's got guys buying coffee who never-never touch the stuff. . .Go find out for yourself. Hey, little sugar, no cream for us.

And talking of java, jamoke, and a cup of joe, the new Colonial House downtown is dishing out fine chow. . .Though quite confusing sometimes: That's proprietor Whid Powell behind the counter, not law student and ex-BMOC Mike Carr. They're exact twins for our money! . . .P. S. to Saleeby-Moore twins shennanigans on page one: Huckster Saleeby currently has the last laugh. . .Moores each sported a brightly colored argyle sox box in the Y Court yesterday containing a gift from thoughtful Emily, er Emile. Contents: One pair of pink unmentionables each, size 20 (so they said); . . . So much for laughs. Hope they're getting their kicks!

From here, the current student governmental fuss over the alleged "manipulation" of funds by NSO delegates Baker, Miller and Clampitt is nothing more than phoney baloney. It was unquestionably and admittedly the Legislature's original intent that the trio travel to Madison via air. They went by train, for all practical purposes. However an unintentional omission in the expense authorization bill caused this misunderstanding. We see no reason to take the case to the Honor council. . .Come, come men, we're all fighting the same war. The whole works should be corrected tonight when Basil Sherrill introduces a measure to legalize (officially) the expenses for air travel.—

Heavy Contact Drills Highlight Grid Practice For Volunteers

Locals Work to Smooth Out Rough Spots on Offensive Plays for Battle

Some high-powered heavy-contact scrimmage constituted the majority of the Tar Heel football practice yesterday, as Coach Carl Snavely went to work smoothing out the rough spots on the locals' running and passing game.

The first and second teams were on the offensive most of the afternoon with the third and fourth strings putting up the defense opposition.

In the Backfields

Tailbacks Charlie Justice and Bill Maceyko did most of the deep running with Hosea Rodgers and Bob Kennedy providing the plunging punch. On the wing positions were Jim Camp and Fred Sherman while Don Hartig and Joe Wright alternated on the signal-calling duties.

Yesterday's session concluded the majority of the heavy work for the week, and it has been a hard week at that. With emphasis on blocking, to make plays go better, and defense, to choke off Tennessee's famed punt and kick-off runbacks, Coach Snavely has kept his athletes out daily until after dark, working under lights the final half hour.

Yet the week's workouts have not gone to suit Snavely. "The boys have been very inconsistent," he said. "This ball club puzzles me. The boys seem to try hard, but they make so many mistakes. They just don't seem to be sharp."

Wingback Situation

The inability of wingback Johnny Clements to practice this week hasn't helped the whole situation. Tough Johnny, recently promoted to the first-team wingback post, injured his neck in the Florida game. It was thought that he would be able to play Saturday, but likely he will not be in top form. While Camp and Sherman are available to carry the offensive burden, Clements is especially needed on defense.

There is pletny at stake in Saturday's game. The Tar Heels would like to avenge the 20-14 defeat which the Vols handed them last season, and the Vols need the triumph to help pull them out of the 1947 red.

Coach Boy Neyland of the Vols and Coach Snavely of the Tar Heels are considered two of the nation's finest coaches. Neyland holds two decisions over Snavely in as many starts.

More than 40,000 will view the contest, which may be a sellout by game time. Already this year Carolina has played before four sellout crowds.

Booters Off to Charlottesville Today For Contest Against Virginia Tomorrow

Fresh from its one-sided victory over the Duke Blue Devils, the red hot Carolina soccer team will entrain for Charlottesville, Va. this afternoon where they will play the University of Virginia Cavaliers tomorrow.

Commenting on his charge's 7-3 triumph over Duke Tuesday, Coach Marvin Allen emphasized that it was teamwork that made the victory possible. "All the boys played a fine game," he said. "And it is hard to single out anyone as playing a better game than the others." However, he did concede that Al Singer and Joe Bach, who scored three goals, were standouts for the Blue and White.

Out for Season

A 22-man team is going to Virginia for the game, but missing from the squad will be Basil Jackson, who broke his leg in the Duke contest. Bill Moore, who has been substituting for Jackson, will probably move up to the first team for the remainder of the season.

The Virginia squad is a fast hustling aggregation which fought Duke to a 3-3 tie earlier in the campaign. However, Carolina was apparently "up" for the Duke clash and if the inevitable letdown takes place, Virginia will make things tough for the Tar Heels. Last year, the Cavaliers and the Allenmen split a home-and-home series.

Bach High Scorer

At present Joe Bach is pacing the Tar Heel scoring with a total of three goals. Dave Boak is runner-up with two and Mill Moore, Dave Ferebee, Henry Pallulat, Al Singer, Gus Johnston, and Herb Faught have one each.

Players making the trip to Virginia are: Joe Bach, Dave Boak, Herbert Faught, Dave Ferebee, Jesse Greenbaum, Mac Hagaman, Wayne Johnson, Gus Johnston, Frank Levy, Duncan MacCalman, Baily Hobgood, Bill Moore, Frank Nelson, Henry Pallulat, Jack Pfeutz, Bob Plumb, Harold Shaw, Dave Sobel, Al Singer, W. D. Vreeland, Al Williams, and Gomer Williams.

Manager Jim Merritt will accompany the team.

Table Tennis Final To Be Played Today

Two of Carolina's tennis stars, Ray Morris and Clark Taylor, will battle in the finals of the Graham Memorial ping-pong tournament at 1:30 this afternoon.

Taylor made his way into the final round yesterday with twin victories over Tom Wadden and Bob Goldwater. Wadden managed to capture one game in his match, falling by scores of 21-14, 16-21, 21-16. But in subduing Goldwater, Taylor breezed through in three straight games, 21-11, 21-14, 21-7.

Morris is undefeated in the tourney, a double-elimination affair. Taylor has dropped one match, a four-game encounter to Morris in the semi-finals of the unbeaten bracket.

Should Morris lose today, one more match will be necessary since it will have been his first defeat. A loss for Taylor will end the tournament with Morris as the champion.

Chi Omega Wins Third Straight As Volleyball Play Continues

Chi Omega continued its unbeaten string with a forfeit victory in one of three games run off in the coed volleyball tournament Tuesday evening.

The victory was the third straight for the Chi O girls and moves them into first place ahead of the Tri Delts, who have a 2-0 slate.

In the other two fussles, Pi Phi trampled Spencer to the tune of 55-5 and Alderman registered a 35-15 triumph over the Town lassies.

The tourney continues this evening with another trio of contests on the list. Alderman and Kenan open the evening's hostilities at 7:15. Carr and CICA follow at 7:50 and Pi Phi seeks its second win of the week over ADPi in a game set for 8:25.

The tourney will be completed next week and playoffs among the top teams will follow.

SAE, Zetes Lead Way In High-Scoring Wins

Nearly half of the losing intramural tag football teams took sound lickings yesterday afternoon on the University gridirons as six teams found their tip-top offensive form and rolled up high scores over their crestfallen opponents.

The mightiest team of the day seemed to be the charges of SAE No. 1, who ran wild over Sig Epsilon, 49-0. T. Chatham snagged scoring honors for the winning SAE club by crossing the goal line for three touchdowns.

Zeta Psi No. 1 had very little trouble with the ZBT gridders and romped to a 41-0 triumph. Braxton Schell led the Zetes with four tallies and shared high scoring honors of the afternoon with Jim Kelly of Chi Psi, who led his mates to a 30-0 shutout job over Phi Delt No. 1.

In the other one sided clashes, Oakwood Drive trampled Nash, 33-0, the Grads trounced Ruffin convincingly by a 32-0 margin, and Sigma Chi roared to a 37-0 conquest of Kap Psi.

All campus organizations wishing to enter teams in intramural volleyball and table tennis play must submit their entries to the mural office by November 4.

Single-elimination competition will begin November 6. Each organization may enter three teams in the volleyball and two in the table tennis program.

Deacons Cancel Jayvee Contest

In a telegram stating that their squad was "too small" to field a junior varsity football team, Wake Forest cancelled its scheduled game with the Carolina Tar Babies.

This sudden move gives the team an open date this weekend before they journey to Charlottesville, Va., to engage the University of Virginia junior varsity November 7.

Contests with Duke's Blue Imps on November 14 and Navy's jayvee on November 21, the latter to be played at the Middie's home field at Annapolis, round out a season which has seen the Tar Babies win two straight so far.

"The boys were naturally disappointed about this sudden cancellation," stated Coach Crowell Little, "but it is too late to arrange a fill-in with a creditable opponent."

At the present time the chameleon-like Tar Babies are impersonating the Tennessee Volunteers as they help prepare the varsity squad for the game this Saturday.

Milne, Miller Take Individual Honors As Tar Heels Gain Second Straight Win

By Morty Schaap

Durham, Oct. 29—The Carolina cross country team took its second straight win of the season today by outrunning the Duke Blue Devils, 20-36, over the Durham four-mile course.

JIMMY MILLER
. . .tied for first.

Jimmy Miller and Jack Milne crossed the finish line hand-in-hand in the excellent time of 21:03 to gain the individual honors. This will stand as a record since it was the first time the course had been run in competition. Sam Magill took the the third spot about 20 yards behind the leaders.

After this, it was not so easy as Dukesters Bob Strickland and Loren Young outsprinted Alvin Smith across the finish line. Finishing behind Smith was Ollie Kendrick, who just failed to nip the tiring Tar Heel.

Halstead Holden ran his best race in competition by being eighth and not too far behind the leaders. Jim Spearman of Duke was ninth and he was followed by Chuck Herty of Carolina.

Duke's two star middle distance men, Roger Neighborgall and Henry Bullock, were 10th and 11th. John Hoots was the last Carolina finisher and behind him were Duke's John Elsworth and Jim Crook.

Frank Hooper was the first of the Tar Heel unofficial runners and he was followed by Julian Mackenzie and John Bristow.

Coach Dale Ranson was not too pleased with the team's showing and added that the squad needs a lot more running before they are ready for the IC4A event.

Miller kept his record intact of having had a share of the first-place honors in every dual meet that he has competed in during the past two years. The squad mark of being unbeaten since 1945 also remained secure.

A RECORD HIT in the making!

...It's Desi Arnaz's—
"I Love to Dance"* (RCA Victor)
*From the MGM picture: "This Time for Keeps"

THIS volatile Cuban's rhythms have been sweeping the country. Everywhere he's played, Desi Arnaz has broken attendance records! And, when Desi lights up a cigarette, it's the brand that's been a national favorite for years and is now making new records of its own! Yes, more men and women are smoking Camel cigarettes than ever before!
Why? The answer is in your "T-Zone" (T for Taste and T for Throat).
Try Camels. Discover for yourself why, with smokers who have tried and compared, Camels are the "choice of experience"!
More people are smoking CAMELS than ever before!
CAMEL is the cigarette for me!

WF Delegates Leave For National Meet

Russell G. Baldwin, Joy Blumenthal and Hale Chamberlain, University students who were elected last week as delegates to the national convention of United World Federalists, will leave this afternoon for St. Louis to attend the two-day convention opening Sunday.

The three are members of the University's student chapter of United World Federalists and will meet with delegates from every state in the Union at the convention's headquarters in Hotel Jefferson.

Baldwin, president of the student chapter anad a member of the state executive committee, was chosen last week to act as the chapter's official delegate. Chamberlain and Miss Blumenthal were elected observer-delegates to accompany Baldwin.

Vital issues facing the world government movement will be acted upon during the two-day convention. According to Baldwin, one major issue is the Congressional resolution asking President Truman to take the lead in calling a special convention of the United Nations for the purpose of strengthening the U. N. Charter.

The student chapter of UWF will not meet this afternoon, said Baldwin, because of the executive council has ordered meetings to be held once every two weeks in the future. The next meeting will be next Wednesday.

Music Fraternity To Initiate Eight

Phi Mu Alpha, national honorary music fraternity, will initiate eight new members Sunday, November 2 at 4 o'clock in Hill hall, and will honor them at a banquet in the Carolina Inn Sunday evening. Chancellor R. B. House will be guest speaker at the banquet.

Men to be initiated are: William Waters, Roanoke Rapids; Chapman Wooten, Rocky Mount; Bynum Weathers, Shelby; William Benton, Hamlet; Kermit Albertson, High Point; John Kizer, Hickory; Hans Beebe, Pitman, New Jersey; Sam Andrew, Albemarle; Lee Mack, Cordova, South Carolina.

Any active or inactive members of the fraternity who have not been notified concerning initiation should contact Winfield Rose, chapter secretary, at 411 East Rosemary, or David McAdams, 35 Old East.

No Law Against Reds, Indicates House; Graham Letter Opposes Communism

By Chuck Hauser and Bill Sexton

In a noncommital answer to the question of what would be done to admitted Chapel Hill Communist party head Junius I. Scales, University Chancellor R. B. House stated yesterday that, "There are no University, state, or federal laws regulating political affiliations of University students."

Thus committing the administration in no way on the situation, House declared that was all he could say at the present time.

Scales, an army veteran and graduate student here, admitted his affiliation with the Communist party in a signed statement to the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday afternoon, the same day mimeographed handbills entitled "The Lowdown on High Prices" were circulated with Scale's name printed at the bottom as chairman of the Chapel Hill Communist party.

In the absence of University President Frank Graham, a statement from him on the situation could not be obtained, but a recent letter written by the educator declared that he was opposed to Communism in all its forms.

An excerpt from Graham's letter reads, "I stand on the American Bill of Rights and therefore am opposed to Communism, which in Russia does not provide the guarantee of the Bill of Rights and would not provide those guarantees if it should triumph in America."

In his statement to the DTH Scales said, "I am proud to be a member of a party which is democratic both in its own structure and in its outlook."

In the previously-quoted letter by Dr. Graham, a firm contradiction of Scale's words appears, branding the party as undemocratic. "Our American democracy is prevailing and will prevail over Fascism, Communism, and other undemocratic philosophies and movements," the letter declares.

The only comment received from Scales yesterday was in answer to a question about the number of people in the Chapel Hill Communist party. Referring to a state newspaper comment which said "well-informed sources" estimated the number at between 12 and 18, Scales stated, "I'd rather not say whether it was an overestimate or an underestimate, but I think there's reason to believe that very soon it will be an underestimate of our size."

In a press conference held yesterday afternoon, Governor R. Gregg Cherry declined to comment on the Chapel Hill Communists, repeating an old Will Rogers line, "All I know about it is what I've read in the papers."

Scales' Statement Is Released In Full

Following is the complete statement given to the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday by Junius Scales, chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter of the Communist party:

"I have been associated with the Communist Party for a number of years. I am speaking in the name of my party in the hope that I may in a small way dispel some of the dangerous illusions and falsehoods about the Communists which are being used to distract us from the real problems which we must solve: a decent living standard for all the people, a peaceful world, a more democratic America without race discrimination.

"I have had an opportunity of meeting many outstanding Communists, and I can say from long experience and close association that the Communists are the most human, the most principled, the most courageous, the most selfless people I have ever known.

"I am proud to be a member of a party which is democratic both in its own structure and in its outlook. As a Southerner, I am especially glad to belong to the only organization which fights for the full and complete equality of the Negro people.

"Finally, I am glad that my party's patriotism expresses itself, not in hostility toward other countries, not in slavish veneration of the economic status quo, but in practical struggle for the present needs and future welfare of the American people.

Junius Scales"

HILLEL SERVICES

Dr. Hardin Craig of the English Department who delivered the principal address at the convocation this year, will speak at Jewish Services this evening. The services which are sponsored by the Hillel Foundation will be held at 7:30 in the Roland Parker Lounge of Graham Memorial. All are welcome.

Di Senate Submits Pair of Proposals

Meeting on Wednesday night, the Dialectic Senate discussed a system of registration for the next two quarters and recommended two suggestions for the consideration of the University registration committee.

The first proposal passed by the Senate resolved that two members of the Student body by appointed by the Student legislature to the registration committee. The second resolved that a schedule of courses with their instructors, hours, and summarized contents be made available one week before registration for each quarter.

John Zucker, chairman of the Di ways and means committee, read the bill formulated by his committee. Several false facts stated in the bill were clarified by such authorities as Dr. E. C. Markham, member of the registration committee, and Edwin S. Lanier, director of the University central records office.

Carolina Mag Makes Debut With Outstanding Features

Carolina fans anxious to see the Tar Heels triumph over Tennessee tomorrow may benefit from an article in "How To Watch Football," in the Carolina Magazine which makes its first appearance of the year on campus today.

Editor Fred Jacobson said yesterday that distribution will be begun today, will be concluded by noon Saturday.

Other features include a cartoon by Jack Niles entitled "Fresh Frosh" which satarizes the average freshman's first acquaintance with the University.

Humor is introduced into the Mag by John Davis, author of a feature. Davis reveals in his work a hidden coed headquarters for the apprehension of elusive males.

Also included in the issue is the monthly Carolina Parade authored by former DTH Managing Editor Earl Heffner with the assistance of Jud Kinberg, managing editor and PIC correspondent.

Bennett Says Improvements Soon Complete

Two long-awaited alterations to the face of the University campus will soon be completed, J. S. Bennett, University building supervisor, said early this week.

The first of these will be filling in and sodding over of the "Big Ditch" across the main part of the campus from Bingham hall to Venable hall. This deep excavation, dug for the heating pipes going to the new dormitories across from Woollen gym, has been open since early last summer.

Bennett also said that the dirt road and parking lot between the infirmary and the medical building is being paved. Bennett said the tar and rock surfacing being laid here should be especially helpful in reducing the many complaints about the bad weather condition of the area.

Eller Warns Scalpers Of Civil Prosecution

Following is a statement sent by Student Body President Tom Eller to Dean of Men Fred Weaver presenting the position of student government concerning scalping.

"While we do not believe Student Government should relinquish its responsibility in handling any such students as may carry on the practice, we recognize the obvious handicap under which the authorities are now operating—that of not being permitted to arrest students. Our disciplinary machinery is probably not broad enough to achieve the results which would be desirable. Therefore, we shall, through the DAILY TAR HEEL, inform the student that he is responsible not only to Student Government, but to Civil authorities as well. We shall attempt to make it clear that the student scalper is liable to prosecution in the Men's Council as well as in the courts, or both. He may be turned over to the authorities by the Council or his case may be taken up by them if he is arrested. The students will be warned that the aid of civil authorities has been solicited, though no specific branch will be mentioned."

Quorum Lack Necessitates Deferment Of Redistricting Project By Legislature

By Jim Spence

Charlie Long's long-awaited campus-town redistricting bill did not reach the voting stage in the Student Legislature meeting in Di hall last night due to lack of a quorum.

The redistricting bill, which provided for a new division of the campus and town into legislative districts, was introduced by the speaker pro tempore of the Legislature two weeks ago. In spite of the fact that most members were present for the hearing of some nine other bills presented to the Legislature last night, there was not a quorum at the time when Long's bill was brought up for discussion.

Financial Setup

The first forty five minutes of last night's legislative session was used by student body treasurer Sam Daniels to explain the present financial setup of the Student government. Daniels made a plea to the Legislature to defer further appropriations until more block fees were brought into the treasury. He said that this is the first time that the sudents of the University have really had control of the finances and that he is doing everything possible to make the chance good.

After discussion of the condition of student finances, Daniels brought up the subject of expense accounts turned in by Bill Miller. Herman Baker, and Johnny Clampitt. Clampitt said he went by train to the National Student association convention in Wisconsin and that he turned in an air travel account with the consent of the Legislature in order to help defray other high expenses of the trip.

From Own Pocket

Herman Baker came to the floor to state that he was willing to turn in a correct expense account by train travel if he were assured that Miller, who traveled by air, would not have to pay that added expense from his own pocket.

Miller had only a brief statement for the legislators, assuring them that whatever was decided to be a fair decision he was willing to abide by it.

After the discussion Daniels, Miller, Baker, and Clampitt left to go to the Men's Honor council from whose session no decision had come as the Daily Tar Heel went to press.

Immediately after the four men had left the legislative chambers, the assembly passed a bill unanimously authorizing the delegates use of air travel expense account funds.

NY Photographers Finish Yack Work

Quiet progress was the order of the day at the Yack office yesterday. The board of editors, weeping no tears for those who fail to heed their repeated warnings, heaved a small sigh of relief as the men from Chidnoff's betook themselves and their equipment back to New York.

In the month that they were here, the photographers had posed and 'shot' a little over 5,000 of Carolina's students. Although some of these students yesterday had not yet appeared to fill out class cards, the editors hoped that they would do so. As pointed out before, even if a student's photograph has been taken it cannot be run without the class card's information to accompany it.

A class card may be filled out, they added, whether or not the proofs have been returned to the student. In fact, the Yack office has nothing to do with the proofs. They are sent direct from Chidnoff's to the student and are to be returned by him direct to New York.

It was revealed that this year's Yackety Yack schedule is being maintained at dates far in advance of last year's. Earlier this week, the last of the contracts for organizational space was signed, and the end of the week will find 60 per cent of the organizational pictures already taken.

On Saturday, Les Bodden will make up the Yack feature on the cross country team.

ARMY PLANE CRASHES

March Field, Calif., Oct. 30—(UP)—The wreckage of an Army attack bomber which has been missing with five crewmen aboard since last night has been found on the slopes of towering Mount Baldy. All five of the occupants are dead.

Judicial Powers Held By Fraternity Council

By a vote of 7 to 1, the Student council voted Wednesday night that the Interfraternity council should have the judicial power to try violators of the House Privileges board agreement. Tom Eller, president of the student body, declared before the meeting that the case was "one of the most important things considered in the history of the Student council."

Eller questioned the practicality of declaring the IFC judicial power unconstitutional. He foresaw increased policing of fraternities if they came under the jurisdiction of the Men's Council. He doubted that any fraternity man would turn his brother in under such an arrangement.

Speaking of those seeking to take the judicial power from the IFC, Eller said, "What these gentlemen would achieve is idealistic but thoroughly lacking in practicality. They are in essence building a brick wall down the middle of the road. If the Council declares IFC judicial power unconstitutional, it will be a disastrous blow to student government."

After Eller's speech, the room was cleared for discussion and voting by the Council members.

Pep Rally

A big pre-game pep rally for tomorrow's clash with Tennessee will be held tonight beginning at 7 o'clock in the Y court, the University club announced last night.

A parade through town will get the proceedings underway with marchers returning to Memorial Hall for the final part of the rally. Coach Bob Fetzer along with an as yet unnamed football coach will be the principle speakers at the yellfest.

Valkyries to Present Miss Payoff Choices

Candidates for the title of Miss Payoff will be introduced to the student body Sunday night at the Valkyrie Carnivali, to be held in Memorial hall at 8 o'clock.

Wayne Thompson will act as master of ceremonies, presenting the campus beauties who will vie for votes during the week of the World Student Service fund drive, November 2 to 8.

Music will be provided by Roy Cole's orchestra, and the cheerleader will direct the community sing.

Miss Payoff will be crowned at the Battle of Bands dance November 8, and will come from one of the following entrants: Joan Lucas, sponsored by Chi Phi; Ferne Hughes, Spencer; Virginia Hill Morris, Stacy; Tenn Mason, Alderman; Chris White, Pi Beta Phi; Beckie Holton, Alpha Gamma Delta; Elizabeth Thomas, CICA.

"Y" Court Dance Scheduled Tonight

Hallowe'en and the night of the festive fall Germans features another significant event: The final square dance practice session tonight before Sadie Hawkins day next Friday.

Informal square and round dancing will hold forth in the Y court from 8:30-12 tonight, with Taylor Dodson of the intramurals department calling figures. The dance is under sponsorship of Graham Memorial and music will be recorded.

In case of inclement weather the hop will be held in the Rendezvous of Graham Memorial. P. A. Lee and Betty Dosson will assist in leading the square dances.

These 13 attractive young ladies are sponsors for members of the German club which is giving a set of two dances tonight and tomorrow night in Woollen Gymnasium. Randy Brooks and his orchestra is furnishing music and will give a concert from 4 to 6 o'clock this afternoon in Memorial hall.

Today's Concert Will Begin Weekend German Club Fetes

This afternoon at 4 o'clock the fall German club weekend, for many the biggest event of the quarter, will begin with a concert in Memorial hall.

The German club has brought the band of Randy Brooks and two feature singers, Gracie Barrie and Phil Brito, to entertain the members of the club, their dates and friends.

Other functions of the week are to be the dances in Woollen gymnasium tonight and tomorrow night and the Valkyrie Carnivali on Sunday night at 8 o'clock. Music for the Carnivali will be furnished by Roy Cole's orchestra, with Wayne Thompson as master of ceremonies.

Today's program is to last from 4 until 6 o'clock.

Friday night's dance is to last from 9 o'clock until 1 and Saturday night's dance from 8 until midnight.

Brooks' orchestra, recently rated as third most popular dance band in the nation by "Downbeat," is expected to furnish topnotch music for both the dances and concert.

Bill Tate, chairman of the dance committee, has announced that no drinking of intoxicating beverages during the fetes will be tolerated, nor will any person under the influence of alcohol be permitted to participate in the events.

Tate has also requested that no persons take bottles or cups containing soft drinks into Memorial hall during the concert this afternoon.

The Interdormitory Council and Dean Carmichael announced yesterday that coeds attending the dance tonight may obtain 2 o'clock permission.

Uranium for UNC Enemies

Junius Scales, by his formal announcement that he hada small band of communists here on campus, delivered to the enemies of the University of North Carolina enough uranium to blast UNC for years to come. Only two hours after we received the initial propaganda sheet issued under the name of the Communist party and had a signed statement from Scales stating that he had been a member of the party for some time, newspapermen from all over the state had already swarmed to Chapel Hill, including representatives from the wire bureaus.

A replica of his sly, and oily reply to Communist charges last summer was issued on this occasion also. Scales refused to name any of the other members of the group, their meeting place, or any specific facts about the organization. By refusing to answer this questtion he encourages the public to believe that there are authentic members of the Communist party here at the University in scores. Perhaps he refused to release a definite figure to the press because the number was terrifically small in comparison with the 7,500 enrolled at the University.

But we are thankful indeed that the group is proud enough of its organization and the work that they are attempting to print their name on all of the material they are disseminating. They had a fighting chance to convince students of their beliefs until they published their name on the propaganda distributed.

Here are a few of the little details that we have paid strict attention about the organization: 1) Their name does not denote the University of North Carolina, instead—Chapel Hill. This leads us to believe that at least one of the members of the group is not a student at the University. 2) Indications are that the group's prime motive at the present time is to throw all they have behind an endeavor to shatter the Marshal plan.

Slowly, the names of the persons connected with the Communist movement are being made public. If we hold on a little longer, it is quite possible that all of the members will be known to each of us, and we will be able to observe their actions.

Is There a Middle Way?

Rumor has it that there is a political middle way, lying obscured somewhere between communism and fascism. Some people call it democracy. Lately people trying to travel this road have gotten the tag "Liberal."

But the difficulty is that no-one knows exactly where the road is and no-one is quite sure that there are travellers on it. Admittedly, it's a difficult road. It's a mental buffer state, peppered by shots from the right and from the left. "Liberals" are accused of not knowing their own mind. The right wing calls them communist; the left wing calls them fascist.

Actually it's much easier to set off down either of the extreme paths. There, at least, you have the comfort of company, of organized support. There you can yell and call names and now and then take a swing at somebody. You are a part of something and you are that which is known as "an individual."

But the true individual is not the one whose prayer books are "The Communist Manifesto," "Das Kapital," or "Ten Days That Shook the World;" nor is he the one who blindly swears by status quo.

The true individual is the man who knows that there is no shortest distance between two unknown points, that you cannot chart a course when there is no destination, that you cannot declare that anything is wrong or right until you know what it is.

That is the true individual. God rest his non-existent soul.—B. S.

We have learned from authoritative sources that skirts are not getting longer. It is just that women have higher knees than they used to have.

Disappointment in France

A ladies Sunday school class in a nearby town recently completed plans to send parcels to destitute families in Europe. Their purpose was good, their mistake is in the contents which they are preparing for shipment.

Each member of the class is taking an old pocketbook and filling it with such accessories as lipsticks, mirrows, rouge, powder, pins, needles, thread and even a pair of fancy garters. True, luxuries such as these are on the absentee list in most European villages and they will certainly be novelties of great value, but the majority of people there are not interested in cosmetics to beautify their faces, they're interested in food to eat and warm clothes to wear. Imagine the reaction of a cold and hungry Frenchwoman when she finds a green or bright red pocketbook in the package that she thought would contain food or clothing for her family.

The ladies, and any other persons contemplating mailing parcels overseas, will be wise if they consider first the extreme needs of the people and then assemble their packages accordingly. Sweaters, socks, warm shirts, trousers and underclothing will be welcome substitutes for the space the pocketbooks will take in ship holds and mail bags. Food of staple quality is also a most acceptable item.—B. B.

In 'Saint Joan'

Acting, Direction Excellent

By Bob Sain

A brilliant, near-perfect performance by Eleanor Ringer, impeccable direction and an excellent cast lifts the Playmakers' production of "Saint Joan" to a new peak in campus dramatics. "Saint Joan" is a major accomplishment, an accomplishment the Playmakers cannot hope to equal for many seasons to come,, since it is seldom that any dramatic group is fortunate enough to achieve such overall excellence: in acting, in direction, and, not least of all, in the George Bernard Shaw play itself.

Major honors in the production are shared by Miss Ringer, whose warm interpretation of the Maid of Orleans projected the ethereal "glow" that Shaw wrote into the role, and by Hans Rothe, whose sensitive, meticulous direction was always evident and never obvious. I take nothing from the cast and others in the production by saying that these two—Rothe and Miss Ringer—made "Saint Joan" a memorable theatrical experience.

Three men deserve considerable credit for especially excellent support:

Frank Groseclose (The Dauphin) was most impressive as the weak, timid young man who became Charles VII. Groseclose sustained the difficult characterization throughout the play and carried the bulk of the comic burden on his shoulders.

Winford Logan (Earl of Warwick) made the effete, foppish nobleman a character to remember while Frederick Johnson's (Robert de Baudricourt) performance as the aggressive, domineering feudal lord who sent Joan to the Daupnin was forceful and certainly on an excellent professional level.

Almost equally fine work was done by Porter Van Zandt (Dunois, Bastard of Orleans), A. E. Westover, III, (Chaplain de Stogumber), and James Geiger (The Inquisitor). The remainder of the cast showed the agreeable affect of Rothe's careful direction.

Concerning Rothe's direction, only two points can be brought against it. I believe the play would benefit if the preface, performed in dialogue and the modern dress, were eliminated or delivered by a narrator. Rothe might also have played somewhat less for belly-laughs in the first scene. The steward's (Edwin Duke) comedy seemed too heavy.

Of the scenes, the climactic sixth—when Joan is tried before the Inquistitor—is the high spot in performance by Miss Ringer, by "Buddy" Westover and by Winford Logan. (The epilogue, a seventh scene, was also especially effective.)

It seems the fate of all other than the cast to be relegated to the bottom of a review. That is the case here, but only because typographical rules forbid one sixteen-inch long paragraph. Sets by Lynn Gault were most impressive and costumes by Mary Jo Cain were excellent. James Byrd's lighting—along with Gault's sets and Cain's costumes—made for a beautiful as well as an impressive play.

600 Selected

War Dead in Gettysburg

By Don Jennings
United Press Staff Correspondent

Gettysburg, Pa. — (UP) — Six hundred American soldiers killed in World War II have been selected for burial in one of history's most honored military burial grounds —the Gettysburg National Cemetery.

Three plots, each within 100 yards of the site where Abraham Lincoln delivered his immortal address dedicating the cemetery on Nov. 19, 1863, are being prepared for interment of American battle dead at the request of next-of-kin.

Cemetery officials estimate there is room for upwards of 2,000 more graves, but they recommended to the War Department that only 600 be added so it would not be necessary to reduce visitor's space at the famous Civil War shrine.

"The general agreement is that the cemetery should be left as it is," said J. Walter Coleman, national park superintendent. "If we accepted more than 600 bodies, the character of the whole place would be changed."

Coleman said the new burials, expected to be completed within the next year and a half, will bring the cemetery's total interments to 4,400, most of whom are those of Union veterans of the Civil War.

Of the 3,000 soldiers brought to San Francisco on the transport Honda Knot in the first shipment of the nation's war dead, 22 were among the 600 chosen for burial in Gettysburg. They were to be brought here at a rate of four daily after being prepared for burial at an army quartermaster distribution center in Philadelphia.

By figuring on four burials a day, Coleman said, relatives could be assured ample time for funeral services. The cemetery will provide a firing squad, guard of honor and religious services, if relatives so desire.

"The wishes of the family will be the determining factor," Coleman said.

Standard white-marble markers will designate each grave—a cross for Christians and the Star of David for Jews.

World Youth in Prague

Many Delegates At Festival

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of three articles written by Mrs. Junius Scales giving her personal observation of the Prague Youth Festival she attended this past summer.)

By Vera Scales

We were speeding across Germany on the Oriental Express to the World Youth Festival in Czechoslovakia last July in a small group, but by the time we reached the border we found other Americans were going to the festival on the same train: it was surely true that youth were pouring into Prague from all over Europe. Not only by trains, but in cavalcades of buses, by plane, bicycle and even by foot. Arriving at Wilsonova Station (named after Woodrow Wilson) at 11 p.m., we were met by a Czech interpreter who completed arrangements for our stay in an instant and led us out of the station where a sound truck was playing American music as we walked down an aisle opened by hundreds of Czech youth who had come to welcome us. A lorry hurried us to our rooms in Rooseveltova Kolej (named after FDR); we knew we had finally arrived at the festival.

The next day delegations from all countries were rounded up in their native costumes and driven around the city in open trucks so the people of Prague could see them.

Before I left America I had to explain to people that I was not going to a conference but to a festival and it was that: 25,000 youth delegates from 71 countries joined with 50,000 Czech youths to present 300 artistic programs, 75 sport events (the Yugoslavs defeated the Czechs in soccer and the Canadians defeated the Americans in baseball; 25-12!) 12 dances, 37 films and 32 educational programs.

The Yugoslavs performing with great spirit, broke 20 sabers in their traditional sword dance; the Indonesians gave a humorous dance representing the emperor preparing himself for the arrival of his newest wife, with sinuous Eastern gestures and a colorful costume including a headdress a foot high. At the Russian performance we found we were looking at the world's greatest ballet artists. Everyone was happily surprised to see the Arab and Jewish delegations from Palestine present a program together.

The American delegation produced a show which we called "The People, Yes," presenting a cross-section of American life, modern dance, folk dance, jitterbugging, and singing of all kinds including Western, Negro, and folk music. Two of our musical artists, students from Julliard School of Music, won prizes in the international competition in which the Russian performers were officially acknowledged the most outstanding. A young Danish teacher told me that our concert gave him a feeling of the new life in America. I could tell he liked it, but I didn't know what he meant by his words.

The slogan of the festival was "Through friendship and reconstruction youth builds the peace." In the famous destroyed village of Lidice we worked with international youth brigades leveling ground for a new building with pick-axes and shovels. Reconstruction was being done in Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, and Poland. Our delegation had hoped to work on the Youth Railway in Yugoslavia, but in each American's passport was stamped the

Meters Not Our Meat

By Pete Gerns

In addition to Legislative scrambles, IFC jurisdictional confusion, and constitutional irregularities, the student body is confronted with the possibility of parking meters. Of 86 students polled, 71 are determined that this mercenary institution shall never darken the doorways to Chapel Hill's more exclusive establishments; 83 per cent, that is!

Being fair-minded, we will quote from the brainstorms issued by both sides of the question:

Comments on the negative ranged from "No!" to "No!". The only signed answer on the affirmative was from Joe Psycho (alias, we presume): "Yes, and build barb wire fences around the girls' dorms!" (Lucky you didn't sign your name at that, eh, Joe?) Another writer says: "Parking meters should be installed in order that students and town people would at last be able to find parking space for a few minutes of shopping. It has worked elsewhere, why not here?"

Carl J. Bell gives us some constructive criticism. Opposing the installation of meters, he adds "the money could be used for a traffic light on the P.O. corner and the construction of sidewalks." T. E. Holden says: "The meters will not solve the traffic problem. Additional parking space near the center of town would be a better solution if such space is available."

Ah! picturesque Chapel Hill. Where dost thy beauty go? mourns Aileen Taylor: "Better enforcement of city ordnances would do the job and still preserve the simple beauty of C.H."

Unsatisfactory, even from a local commercial point of view, points out George Drew, meters are a money-making proposition for manufacturers only. "Manufacturers are guaranteed a heavy cut (for installation only) that continues to bleed the city treasury for the life of the meters." Bernard Kemp, too, can find no justifiable reason for assessing students to such a degree because they have cars. "It is incongruous with the plan for 'colonization' of the town, and a possible solution would be for the University to create more numerous and larger parking lots."

Other comment on the negative held that installation of the meters will not better the situation: it will annoy drivers, may cause ill feeling between students and merchants, benefit town folks only ("isn't it about time that they started to appreciate the college trade?"), and would put a pretty and leisurely town on a too commercialized basis.

For the coming Tuesday: "Would you favor a grading system based on "satisfactory" and "unsatisfactory" over the present "A to F" system? Deadline: Sunday eve. And please sign your names to your opinions. We want to keep on printing as many as possible.

This Changing World

Opportunities and Security

By Bill Robertson

Last week we gave concrete facts and figures placing the responsibility for high prices and economic insecurity in our country. Further, we indicated that the solution to this situation was to be found in the organizing of a broad political movement against the trusts and monopolies. However, there are special problems facing the youth of our country which have to be solved—although they stem from the same basic causes.

In the first place, there is the problem of jobs. How many students, boys and girls, attending the University, have a sure-fire job, with plenty of opportunity for advancement, awaiting them upon graduation? How many students are anxious to finish their courses here so that they can get on with their "life work"? With the answers to these questions self-evident there is no wonder that we are confused and demoralized.

What makes the situation all the more confusing and demoralizing is the fact that the leaders of the older generation seldom bother to give us a "pep talk" about our future. When they do, it is to urge us to hold on to the precious freedoms of "free enterprise" and to talk of a "spiritual rebirth" as though it can come separately from the solution of down-to-earth problems like job security.

What does all this mean? It means that the average young person is forced to take an interest in politics —which are a mess at present—whether he wishes to or not. On our campus the continued and growing interest in such organizations as the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, American Veterans' committee, the Wallace for President club, The Collegiate Council for United Nations, etc., reveals this fact very clearly. In these organizations and their activities we see the beginnings not of a "spiritual rebirth" —not yet, at least—but of a growing consciousness that something is worng and a growing desire to do something about it.

We are all in for some hard knocks. We are going to find that political action is a serious thing. Some of us will take the "easy way out" — teaching economics courses describing the virtues of stock markets. But the majority of us can't find an easy future waiting for us and will be forced by circumstances to participate in the growing political activities on the campus. These activities will be directed toward achieving what is so very possible in our country, greater opportunities for the youth and security for all.

Back Tracking In Sports

Morty Schaap

The cross country team added another win to its streak last Wednesday afternoon and just in that simple statement is the fact of the situation.

The Duke team was not very strong and Carolina is the supposed tower of strength in the South, a team that is picked by most track observers as a threat to the IC4A crown that now rests at NYU. The meet at Durham showed that the Tar Heels are not ready for major competition. Except for the three leading runners the squad is not up to par. Cross country is a team sport and it has no chance to win national fame unless it acts as a team. That means that at least four more boys must come from the doldrums and blossom out to their fullest ability to make a creditable team showing.

On the other side of the ledger a soccer team coached by Marvin Allen showed just what a team that feels it cannot be beaten can do. The booters with just about the same personnel as it had last year played a Blue Devil team that was manned by the same men that routed them four times last year. But before the game the other day, sports followers could see that this team would not lose if it were humanly possible to win. They spotted the Dukesters an early lead but came fighting back to make the game a one sided affair.

This all gets back to the whole spirit of competitive athletics whether it be in the biggest game in the biggest sport or the most minor of contests, a team that regards the other as too strong by its reputation is going to get beaten. But when an individual or a team says to himself, he can't beat me even if he has had all the advantages on the surface, he will not be beaten. One of the Tar Heel coaches paraphrases the situation in this manner. "If a man realizes that his competition, regardless of previous performance, has the conditioning, confidence and courage and says to himself he is no better than I am; after all he puts his pants on the same way I do," then and only then will real school and competitive spirit be in effect.

Over Hill and Dale

Saturday morning the harriers of Coach Dale Ranson will make their bid for the third straight win when they tangle with the strong and undefeated cross country team representing the University of Tennessee.

The Vols are coached by Carleton Crowell who is in his first year at the Knoxville institution. He was a great middle distance runner in his undergraduate days at Wisconsin and is passing on his savvy to a fine group of competitors.

Tennessee would have been probably the strongest team in the southland if it had not been hit with all kinds of woes. H. C. Nelson, who was the leading Orange and White harrier last year, was refused admittance this fall because of scholastic deficiencies. Earl Jackson, the number two man, fell by the wayside on the same count. Jim Bruce and Jack Bamberg, two other members of last year's team, decided not to return to school this year.

However, a replacement has been found in the person of Forest Ross, brother of Browning Ross, who captured the indoor mile here two years ago. Ross has been the leader in all three of Tennessee's meet. The captain of the Vol squad is H. B. Reed, a purple heart veteran, and one of the steadiest runners that ever represented the Tennessee institution.

Right behind him is Louis Schneider, holder of the U-T two-mile record and also a creditable performer in the Sugar Bowl mile last New Year's day. He will be remembered for his fine showing in the Carolina relays last spring. Others running here Saturday will be Don Riley, Sam Fowler and Worth Cambell. Riley, incidentally, is a track letterman in the pole vault.

Tennessee won its first three meets downing Mississippi State 21-35; Alabama 20-36 and Emory College 15-48. So, the meet here Saturday morning shapes up to be a real humdinger. Let's see a full turnout of students in the stands at Fetzer field to cheer one of the hardest working and best teams representing the University.

An old baseball adage best describes Marvin Emmett Cheek—"a ball player's ball player." Cheek is the daddy of the football squad, having first appeared on the Carolina gridiron scene as a freshman right out of Chapel Hill high school in 1940.

He impressed freshmen coach Jim Tatum as a real comer and the next season he was a rugged individual on Coach Ray Wolf's varsity. He has been known for his hard-charging and hitting type of play. Any of the linebackers or others of the opposition who have felt his aggressive play against various parts of their anatomy. The boys all maintain that the local boy is one of the hardest hitters to wear gridiron togs.

Emmett himself is a very quiet and sedate type of individual who cares little for the limelight, whose chief interest is to play ball and lots of it. The past two weeks have seen his ambition come true in the fact that he has been promoted to a starting guard assignment on the varsity.

So, hats off to a local boy who has made good.

Ray Morris Beats Clark Taylor To Gain GM Table Tennis Title

Two of Carolina's net stars, Ray Morris and Clark Taylor, battled for four games in the finals of the Graham Memorial table-tennis tournament yesterday afternoon before Morris finally emerged the victor.

By winning, Morris remained the only player of the original field of 83 to remain unbeaten in the double-elimination affair.

It took Morris one game under the five-game limit to subdue his racquet teammate. He won the first game easily by a 21-14 score, but ran into more difficulty in the second, finally posting a 21-19 victory. Taylor came back in the third game of the series to triumph, 21-15. Morris, a former national boys' champion, ended the match and the tournament in the fourth game by gaining a 21-15 win.

Earlier in the tournament, Morris defeated Taylor to drop him into the one-time losers' bracket, but Taylor came back to win the remainder of his matches and thus gain the final round.

Because of the double-elimination type of tourney, had Taylor won yesterday's battle, he would have had another opportunity to play Morris.

Soccermen to Face Virginians Today In Charlottesville

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 30—North Carolina's soccer team, sporting a two-game winning streak, arrived in Charlottesville late tonight, supped at a local hostelry, and was then hustled off to bed by Coach Marvin Allen.

The Tar Heels tangle with the University of Virginia booters tomorrow afternoon on the local soccer field at 3 o'clock. The Allenmen will be gunning for their first Charlottesville victory of the current Tar Heel-Wahoo series and if the locals repeat the sensational performance which they staged against Duke earlier this week in Chapel Hill, they will probably come through with a win.

Even though the Tar Heels did smear Duke, 7-3, the victory was a costly one, for Basil Jackson, spunky Blue and White forward, suffered a broken leg in the tilt, and consequently has been lost for the rest of the season. Wayne Johnson will replace him in the Carolina lineup tomorrow.

Battled Duke

The Cavaliers and Duke battled to a 3-3 tie in a mud bath in Durham several weeks ago and dead-eyed forward Julius' accurate kicks accounted for all three Virginia goals.

Sheffield is another '46 letterman performing for the Cavaliers this year and both he and Julius started the two 1946 tilts which resulted in a Tar Heel win in Chapel Hill and a Virginia triumph in Charlottesville.

The probable starting lineups:

RF	—VanZandt	Williams
LF	—Nelson	Boone
RH	—Singer	Lowdon
CH	—Johnston	Bruce
LH	—Levy	Chorlton

Intrasquad Contest Slated for Tankmen

Carolina's tank crew will hold an intrasquad meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock, Coach Dick Jamerson announced yesterday.

The squad will be split into blue and white teams with competition scheduled for all events. Coach Jamerson and Assistant Ralph Casey especially hope to get a line on the newcomers to the squad but also want to check on how well the veteran mermen are rounding into shape.

Events in which the Blue Dolphins will complete are 100-meter backstroke, 100-meter breaststroke, 200-meter freestyle, 50-meter freestyle, 100-metter free style, diving, 150-meter backstroke, 200-meter breaststroke, and 400-meter freestyle.

Each man will compete in two races and a point score will be kept to determine the winner of the meet. Jamerson will be in charge of the blue team and Casey heads the white squad.

Gridders Hold Final Stiff Drill; Tennesseans Arrive Here Today

Tar Heels Taper Off for Weekend Tilt; Snavely Not Taking Volunteers Lightly

Carolina's Tar Heels went through one final afternoon of contact work at Navy field yesterday prior to their battle with the Tennessee Volunteers in Kenan Stadium on Saturday.

With the arrival of the visiting Vols in Chapel Hill some time today, the stage will be complete for the contest between the two powers from the Southern and Southeastern conferences.

Both clubs will run through light workouts here this afternoon, with little more than a general checkup of the respective offenses being in order.

Air and Train

The Tennessee squad will travel by two different modes. Some of Coach Bob Neyland's Volunteers will reach Chapel Hill by air, while railroad transportation will bring the other group here.

Carolina has been installed as a one-touchdown favorite over Tennessee. The Vols have had rather rough going thus far, dropping engagements to Duke, Georgia Tech, and Alabama. But the men of Coach Neyland have been improving steadily, and with a little better luck might have come out on top in some of those games.

The Tar Heels definitely are not taking the Vols lightly. Snavely realized that annually Neyland turns up with one of the nation's best teams at the Knoxville institution, and the Tar Heel mentor is not expecting this current Vol outfit to be any easier to beat than the others.

Reason for Revenge

Carolina will have ample reason for wishing revenge Saturday. Last season Tennessee handed Carolina its only regular season loss, 20-14, in a heartbreaker in Knoxville. The previous season the Vols also took the measure of the Tar Heels in another close scrap.

Neither team will be at top physical strength for the game. Hal Littleford, ace Tennessee tailback, has an injured foot, and his speed may be impaired.

Johnny Clements, wingback, and guard Larry Klosterman are on the doubtful list in the Carolina camp, according to team trainers. Both worked out yesterday but passed up the heavy work. If these two are not able to play, the Tar Heels' chances will take a decided drop.

Large Crowd

A crowd of over 40,000 will be on hand to witness the game. If the expected number are on hand, they will swell the total attendance at the Carolina games this year to approximately 208,000 for six games.

Most of the tilts thus far have been before capacity crowds, and bigger stadiums would have meant even bigger crowds.

Both Carolina and Tennessee were victorious in their last outings. The Vols beat Tennessee Tech and will be trying to kindle a win streak. The Tar Heels have won their last two games, over William and Mary, 13-7, and Florida, 35-7.

Chandler Suspends White Sox' Rights in Answer to Defiance

Chicago, Oct. 30—(UP)—Baseball's red-hot news to end all news was in the making today. Officials of the Chicago White Sox Club in the American League have taken a stand of open defiance to the suspension and fine order of Baseball Commissioner A. B. "Happy" Chandler.

The rumpus started Wednesday when it became known that Chandler had slapped a 500-dollar fine on White Sox for their action in signing 18-year-old George Zoerterman of The Christian High School of Chicago. The Sox turned the contract into Chandler's office before the end of the past season and he returned it marked void and with a notice of the fine.

Leslie O'Connor, the Chicago general manager, refuses to pay the fine so Chandler has stated that the club is barred from "The Privileges of Baseball's Rule." This includes the right to drafting players.

High School Rule

There is a rule that a student in high school cannot be signed to any kind of contract. O'Connor claims that since the high school is not a

Phi Delt Gridders Take Frat League One Crown

Yesterday's intramural football schedule singled out Phi Delta Theta No. 2 as champions of Fraternity league number one, when they eked out a six point victory over Sigma Chi.

Scoring two touchdowns and an extra point and holding Sigma Chi to a single marker and extra point, the Phi Delts finished their regular schedule with a perfect record of seven wins.

In the first period Phi Delt scored as Ott Evans flipped a pass to Walt Haywood who carried the ball to pay dirt. The Delts' winning margin came in the second period when Dave Nichols intercepted a Sigma Chi pass and raced into the end zone. The extra point try was good.

Sigma Chi scored early in the first period when Ernie Martin passed to Coonie Beland who took the ball over. Martin's extra point drop kick split the uprights. The final score was Phi Delt 13, Sigma Chi 7.

Yesterday's murals also provided one of the biggest upsets of the fall program when Miller Hall edged out undefeated Y-Cabinet by a 14-13 score. In their previous matches Miller had lost three straight, while Y-Cabinet sported a three game winning streak.

Close scores were predominate in the whole mural schedule. Previously, many clubs had been running up scores into the fifties, but yesterday six teams were barely able to defeat their opponents.

Wrestlers View Training Films

Something new has been added to the practice sessions of the wrestling squad, according to word from Coach Hobie McKeever.

The squad took time off from its workouts this week to view some wrestling movies. The pictures are part of an instructional series issued by Coach Charlie Speidal of Penn State college.

McKeever also announced that all of Carolina's mat meets this coming season will be filmed in order to give more detailed information on each phase of work. The movies will be taken by Physical Education Director O. K. Cornwell.

The current practice drills are moving along well and the team is gradually assuming shape for the opening of the campaign in January. The Tar Heels will be defending the Southern conference championship this year.

UNC Fans May Hire Train To Attend Maryland Game

Tar Heels bound for the UNC-Maryland grid contest in Washington on November 15 will have the benefit of a special train caravan to and from the capital city, if sufficient interest is shown in the project.

A popular feature of prewar days, special trains to the Navy and Tennessee football games last year drew only negligible response from the student body. Arrangements this year are being handled by Bob Watson, Graham Memorial travel agent, and the University club. Within the next few days members of the University club will poll the campus to determine roughly the number of students who plan to make the jaunt.

In the event that more than 250 signify their intention to go, a special train will be made up. As the situation stands at present, or if less than this number decide to go, coaches will be hooked on the rear of the Southern railroad's regular northbound evening train out of Durham.

Round-trip coach fare for the trip is $13, The train will depart from Durham Friday evening, November 14, at 7:15 and arrive at Union Station, Washington, at 6:40 Saturday morning. Leaving Washington at 10:45 Saturday evening, the train will arrive in Durham at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Pullman fares may be reserved for $26 and $28. However, regular coach tickets will not need to be purchased in advance.

The University band, according to director Earl Slocum, will go to the game on this special train. The football team, however, has made other transportation arrangements. Nearly 1000 extra tickets to the game were received in the athletic ticket office Monday.

MARYLAND SPECIAL

All students who want to join the crowd on the "Maryland Special" train must sign the notices posted in all dormitories, fraternities, and sororities, and in the Y office, so that they can be contacted by their University club representatives.

Klentz and Mason Will Give Concert

"Origins of the Violoncello Sonata," second in a series of recitals by Mr. William Klenz and Mr. Wilton Mason of the Music department, will be presented tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall. Concluding recital in the series will be Friday, November 7.

Sonatas by Domenico Gabrielli, Marcello, and Vivaldi, seventeenth and eighteenth century composers, will be played by Mr. Klenz, and the basso continuo accompainments will be realized by Mr. Mason on the department's new Challis harpischord.

The two sonatas by Gabrielli on tonight's program are the earliest solo sonatas for the instrument now extant. The fourth of "Six Solos for Violoncello with a Thorough Bass for the Harpischord" is the composition by Marcello on the program. Mr. Klenz will also perform Sonatas I and V from a set of six sonatas for "violoncello solo col basso" by Vivaldi.

We were invited to work on the Bulgarian Youth railway also. I was in charge of reconstruction work and found no difficulty in getting Bulgarian visas, a collective Yugoslavian visa, and Soviet military permission to pass through Hungary, but the United States Consul in Prague would not give us written permission to go to Bulgaria through Yugoslavia, and since we did not want to incur the penalty for violating his passport regulation (up to 10 years in jail and $1,000 fine) we re-organized our reconstruction brigades to work in Czechoslovakia.

We were surprised to find that youth of European nations who had been so recently taught to kill and destroy were now rebuilding their nations, freely passing from one country to another to aid each other.

Food Conservation Committee Plans for Campus, Community

Paul W. Sherin, the University professor recently appointed head of the food conservation committee, here has outlined future plans for prevention of food waste throughout the campus and community.

Other members on the committee to work with Sherin include Tom Fields representing Victory Village; Robert A. Nelson for the Interfraternity council; Claude Shotts for the Y.M.C.A.; Charles MacRae for the student body at large; J. C. Herrin for Chapel Hill churches; C. W. Shields for the Chapel Hill and Carrboro merchants association; Margaret Jean Taylor for the sororities; Mrs. Walter Spearman for housewives; and C. W. Davis, Chapel Hill superintendent of schools.

With intentions of keeping Charles Luckman, national food director, informed of their progress, these representatives will encourage nine-man committee plan an enthusiastic drive here from now until Thanksgiving.

The committee will also ask restaurants owners not only to abide by the provisions of both these days of the week but never to serve bread unless it is requested.

member of the National Federation of High Schools the rule is not applicable in Zoerterman's case.

White Sox officials have not paid the fine and they will be present at a meeting of the officials of the junior circuit with their president, Will Harridge, in Cleveland tomorrow. O'Connor will present his side of the case and will introduce some correspondence between Chandler and himself.

This could be the beginning of the end for "Happy" who has not been overly popular in his career which began two years ago after the death of former commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis. O'Connor served as Landis's assistant for 24 years and served as commissioner pro tem after his death until the ascent of Chandler to the throne of high commissioner.

The league could, if the situation got too difficult, buy up Chandler's 50-thousand dollar a year contract which has five years to run or Chandler could resign in the face of open revolt against his supposedly final ruling on all matters. No matter what the outcome, the whole thing shapes up as a real test of power between Chandler, the immovable object, and the American League, the unstoppable force.

Person Hall To Show Photography Exhibit On New England By Life Magazine Editors

Person Hall Art Gallery will show "Emerson's New England" a photographic exhibition prepared by the editors of Life Magazine, beginning Sunday and continuing through November 21.

Based on the photographic essay, New England Indian Summer, Emerson's New England deals with places and placenames especially associated with Emerson, Hawthorne, Alcott, and Longfellow.

The exhibition, composed of 25 panels, opens with photographs of Concord and of the exteriors and interiors of houses there such as the Old Manse and Wayside. Other panels include Walden, Brook Farm, Haverhill, Cambridge, Boston, and other scenes from Concord.

The text, exclusive of identify captions, is almost entirely composed of quotations, mostly from the journals of Hawthorne, Alcott, and Emerson.

Tar Heels Battle Rugged Tennessee Eleven In Kenan Stadium Today

By Bob Goldwater

Thrice beaten but still a potent power on the gridiron, a sturdy band of Tennessee footballers will provide a major test for Carolina's resurgent Tar Heels this afternoon in Kenan stadium. The kickoff comes 30 minutes earlier than usual—at 2 o'clock.

Pre-season predictions called this game as one that might decide the grid champion of the South. Without a doubt, it won't. Neither eleven sports a record worthy of championship caliber, and Tennessee's chief hope at present is to gain a .500 average for the year. The Volunteers currently have a 2-3 record, including losses to two teams in the top 10 of the nation, Georgia Tech and Duke. The Tar Heels have chalked up a 3-2 slate and have shown signs of moving toward the heights predicted for them with victories in their last two outings.

The clash has been rated as an even-up affair, but should revenge prove to be as powerful a motive as it might be, the Tar Heels would rate the edge. The Vols handed Carolina its lone setback of the 1946 season when tailback Walt Slater returned a punt 80 yards for the margin of victory in a 20-14 battle. Naturally, the Tar Heels would like nothing better than to avenge that defeat—and by a more convincing margin.

Then too, there is the "win it for the coach" motive. Tennessee mentor Bob Neyland holds a 2-0 advantage over Carolina Coach Carl Snavely in the two times that these outstanding grid tutors have had elevens on the same field. Neyland gained a triumph on the first occasion of their rivalry in 1934 and was back directing the Vol attack last year after a tour of Army duty. The overall record between the two teams stands at 9-6, in Tennessee's favor.

To those in the expected crowd of 40,000 who witnessed the Carolina-Wake Forest tussle three weeks ago, the Tar Heel starting lineup will look slightly revamped. The biggest change is at the fullback position, where ramrod Hosea Rodgers has powered his way into the opening eleven. Rodgers led the way in last week's Carolina win over Florida by engineering four of the five touchdowns and accounting for yardage gains of 238 yards.

The other two switches are both in the forward wall. Ted Hazelwood will open at right tackle in place of ailing Len Szafaryn, although the usual starter will be available for duty. And Larry Klosterman will start at right guard, Sid Varney having missed several practices this week due to injuries. Varney will also get to see action.

Should Carolina receive the kickoff, the rest of the starting eleven will be the usual initial crew. Accompanying Rodgers in the backfield will be Charlie Justice, Jim Camp, and Joe Wright. Justice was the star of last year's Tennessee encounter with a weaving, 73-yard touchdown run that Coach Neyland described as "one of the best I have ever seen."

The front line will have Art Wiener and Bob Cox at the flanks, tackle Haywood Fowle and guard Bob Mitten balancing Hazelwood and Klosterman on the left side of the line, and George Sparger at center. Should Carolina open on the defensive, Joe Romano and Mike Rubish are possible alternates at the ends.

Tailback Hal Littleford and fullback George Balitsaris pace the Tennessee offensive. Littleford, an outstanding passer and runner, has been hampered with an injured foot during drills this week but is expected to be in tip-top shape today. An expert plunger, Balitsaris is a former V-12 star for Duke.

The other backfield starters are slated to be Jack Armstrong and Bob Lund. The Tennessee line, averaging 195 pounds and slightly smaller than that of Carolina, is led by

Theft Of Dynamite From Building Area Is Campus Mystery

By Don MacDonald

The disappearance of eight very real, very explosive sticks of dynamite was a dangerous mystery here last night as Thompson Street company workers and South building officials wondered about Halloween pranksters, pep rallies and Communists.

News of the stolen explosives came from Dean Fred H. Weaver's office late yesterday after Weaver was notified by officials of the new dormitories building project that the lock on a dynamite storage cabinet had been broken Thursday night and the eight sticks unofficially—but officially removed.

Caps Not Taken

The dynamite, stated John S. Bennett, University supervisor of operations, was to be used in blasting rocks from the tunnel being excavated to provide a heating system for the new dormitories on east campus. None of the caps, the fuse parts of the standard-size dynamite sticks, were removed from the storage cabinet. But these can be obtained from almost any hardware store by anyone who knows dynamite, and knowledge of this doesn't exactly make the sticks harmless.

Because Halloween pranksters were scheduled to begin their annual celebrations last night, by press time South building officials were experiencing fears that this morning would find (1) no South building, (2) no Tennessee football team to play in Kenan stadium, or (3) no University of North Carolina.

Bang-up Parade

Another widespread supposition was that the dynamite could have been taken for use in a really bang-up torchlight parade at the scheduled pep rally heralding today's Tennessee football game.

Still more people wondered about the recently "uncovered" Communist party of Chapel Hill. Workers at the Thompson Street company thought the stolen number, eight, might well be an indication of the still undisclosed number of Communist party members. Eight sticks might mean eight members—a stick for each Communist.

Yet the serious side of the theft still remained. Eight sticks of dynamite in the hands of any person, be he goblin, enthusiastic Tar Heel fan, or Communist, was last night still a very dangerous mystery.

UAW Officers Sign Non-Red Affidavits As Deadline Nears

By the United Press

Detroit, October 31.— The nation's biggest union, CIO United Auto Workers announced tonight that its officers will sign non-communist affidavits as required by the Taft-Hartley law.

The surprise announcement by UAW President Walter Reuther came just seven hours before a midnight deadline set by the National Labor Relations board.

Reuther said the majority of the UAW executive board had voted to comply with the labor law provision so that it could continue to make use of NLRB facilities. The dynamic, 40-year-old president, who seeks re-election early next month in Atlantic City, telegraphed the union's stand to NLRB Chairman Paul Herzog in Washington.

But he warned that the union "in no way compromises complete opposition to the provisions of the Taft-Hartley act and our determination to continue the fight for its outright appeal."

Debate Head Censures Student Assembly End

By Bill Sexton

Maurice Braswell, Debate council president said yesterday evening he was "unconvinced" concerning the dissolution Thursday of the North Carolina Student Legislative assembly, originally scheduled to have held its 11th annual meeting November 28-29 in the state capitol.

Braswell, who was elected reading clerk of the 1946 session, charged that the action, taken by the State Student Legislative council, "involved more than has been revealed."

No Invitation

The legislative council, interim administrative body of the student legislature, met in Raleigh Thursday afternoon. But Braswell declared that neither he nor Tom Eller, student body president, had received any notification of the council meeting. Only members from State college were present.

In an announcement from Ira L. Helms, State college student serving his second term as president of the now-dissolved council, the group gave two reasons for its action:

(1) Only State had filed written approval by college authorities of its council delegates.

(2) Only State had duly appointed faculty advisors for its delegations.

Involves Race Problem

But Helms added that the racial question "had a large part to play" in causing the action. He said that students at State college had launched an investigation of the resolution of the 1945 legislature which invited Negro colleges to send delegations, charging that it originated from "some organization in New York."

"I would like to see us push a revival of the legislature," Braswell said last night. However, he declared that neither he nor the Debate council, which has sponsored the U.N.C. delegations to the assembly had made any plans toward that end.

"Last year when an attempt was made at State to cancel the meeting," Braswell said, "I personally was ready for Carolina to take over sponsorship."

No Friction at All

The Debate council president declared he could see no justification for taking action because of the racial question. "There was no friction at all between the delegates," he said, "though at first all of us were wary of what might happen."

In a final resolution the delegates at last year's session said that "this session presents convincing evidence that the races can cooperate to build a better Southland." The resolution was unanimously passed.

Two former Carolina students served in top positions in the 1946 session. They are Bob Morrison, president of the Student Senate, and Don Shropshire, speaker of the House.

Tom Eller, president of the Student Body, was away from the campus and could not be reached for comment on the dissolution.

Legislature Hears Bills Which Concern Communism Query

By Chuck Hauser

The Chapel Hill Communist party issue, which has received nation-wide attention in the past few days, was not neglected by the Student Legislature in its regular session Thursday night.

Two bills concerning Communism at the University were brought to the floor, both being sent to committee after suspension of the rules was refused by the legislators in each case.

UP Proposal

Miles Smith, UP legislator and chairman of the University party, proposed that a resolution condemning Communism be passed by the Student Legislature.

Tom Lockhart, Eller-appointed CP delegate, brought a bill to the floor which would set up a committee to investigate Communism and release reports to the student body. The committee members would be appointed by student body President Tom Eller.

Other Acts

Other important acts of the Legislature Thursday evening included:

1. The House Privileges board fraternity-coed visiting agreement was passed completely after discussion.

2. A new Student Government record bill introduced by SP-UP legislator Pete Gerns was passed. The bill provided for the record to be published on the editorial page of the Daily Tar Heel every two weeks, at no cost. Editor Barron Mills has given his consent to the provision.

3. Miles Smith introduced a bill providing for elections of junior class officers on the second Tuesday in November which, with amendments, passed unanimously. Amendments provided that fresh-

All Students Must Sign for Appointments; Committee Seeks to Expedite Procedure

By Charley Gibson

The first phase of a joint registration procedure for the winter and spring terms will start next Wednesday, according to a release today by Edwin S. Lanier, chairman of the University registration committee.

Next week students will sign appointment schedules on the office doors of their faculty advisers to begin a system of registration essentially the same as that for the 1947 spring quarter and the present session, there being only two changes the registration committee inaugurated by way of improvement.

Two Changes

First, all schools of the University have agreed to adopt the appointment schedule for initial consultations which the General College now uses. This is expected to eliminate the majority of the waiting in crowded offices of other schools' deans that has been the main thorn in filling out "green forms" heretofore.

Second, this term's set-up allows a student to pre-register for both the remaining quarters of the academic year at once. However, provisions have been made for legitimate changes which may become necessary between sessions.

Appointment Dates

The appointments students make this coming week will be for the General college between November 13 and December 3; for the Commerce, Arts and Sciences, and graduate schools between November 17 and December 3; and for the pharmacy school between November 17-22. Plans and dates for registration in the Medical, Public Health, and Library Science schools will be announced later.

During these periods the student and his adviser, using the 1947-48 class schedule, will prepare the "green form" for both the winter and spring quarters. This form showing the course and alternates the student wants and which his adviser approves must be turned in to the registration hall—the barracks annext to Venable hall.

Class Tickets

There all the work is to be done this time so that students will be able to pick up class tickets for the winter quarter between December 15-17, before examinations are completed on December 18 and spring holidays begin. Class tickets not called for during those days may be secured Saturday, January 3, 1948. Winter quarter classes begin at 8 o'clock January 5.

Registration for the winter quarter for new students and for fall quarter students who did not preregister for the winter quarter will take place January 3 between 8:30 and 12:30. Students will check first with faculty advisers and deans' offices and then through registration hall.

Grade reports for the present quarter will also be distributed from the registration hall on January 5, 1948.

GM Will Sponsor Bingo Tonight

Those who can't make the Fall Germans tonight will have a chance to cash in on the "poor man's bonanza" at Graham Memorial's Saturday night Bingo, which begins at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of the student union.

As many cards as each participant desires will be sold for two cents each, and the money taken in for each calling will be pooled as a prize for that game. John vanHecke is caller and master of ceremonies.

Tomorrow evening's Sunday Sing is to be presented in conjunction with the Valkyries-WSSF Carnivale program in Memorial hall at 8 o'clock.

Failing to Mate Male Potatoes, James Street Turned Writer to Fill Bare Family Cupboard

By Sigsbee Miller

James Street began to write fiction in a desperate attempt to replenish a family larder that had been reduced to two potatoes.

Blackballed as a newspaperman by a powerful New York editor, he was jobless when his wife came to him with the tale of the potatoes.

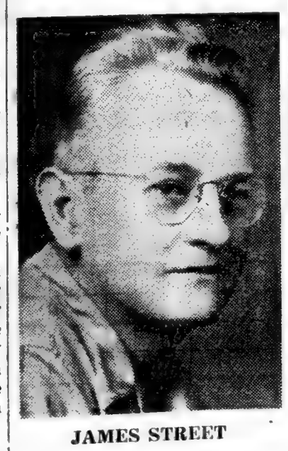
"Mate them," he suggested, "and we'll have piles of potatoes."

"They're both males," was the doleful reply.

There was just one thing to do. Up to the roof of the apartment building went the typewriter and out came the first James Street short story. It was carried in Cosmopolitan and later was made into a movie.

"That started it. I've been writing for money ever since," Street told Professor Phillips Russell's creative writing seminar Thursday night. "I'm what they call a commercial writer. I'll write anything if there's enough dough in it."

The stubby, prematurely gray little man who has become a best-selling novelist since he quit the newspapers, was in Bynum to give a score or more aspiring young writers some inside dope on the fiction field.



Magazines are eager to find new talent, Street said, and their editors see to it that all material submitted by novices is read.

"The Saturday Evening Post would love to have one of you take my place," Street said. "I cost them too much."

Street currently gets the top price for a 5,000 word story. The new writer, he said, starts at about $500.

In the top bracket, Street said, the competition is severe.

"When I was getting $650 for my stories the magazines took all I could give them," he said. "Now some of them are beginning to bounce."

How long does it take to turn out a short story?

"Actually, I spend about two days at my typewriter, but there's more to it than that. I'm 43 years old and a short story I write today will have been 43 years in the making."

Ideas for novels aren't always the sheer inspiration of their authors, Street revealed.

Several years ago, when novels dealing with the Catholic faith were scoring resounding successes, publishers realized that the time was ripe for a novel dealing with the Protestant Church. At a conference with his publishers Street was asked to recommend a writer who might turn out such a book.

He recommended himself and the same afternoon signed a contract to have the book ready within nine months.

The result was "The Gauntlet," which became a Literary Guild selection and sold a million copies.

When does a writer run dry of fresh material?

"Only," according to Street, "when his bank account gets to be a little bigger than his current expenses. And, "he added after a moment, "I'm working pretty hard right now."

SAE PRESIDENT

George Montague, Senior of Winston-Salem, was elected president of the SAE Fraternity Tuesday night. Charles M. Price, retiring president, is leaving school this week to take a job with a Florida packing plant.

Before his election to the presidency, Montague held numerous positions in the fraternity. He has been correspondent, dining room manager and representative to the Interfraternity Council.

Verdict on Case Expected Soon

The Men's Honor council adjourned their meeting on the Clampitt - Miller - Baker expense account case at approximately 6 o'clock yesterday morning after having reached an unknown verdict.

Council chairman Bill Tate said yesterday that their decision would be disclosed in a statement to be released Sunday. No reason for the delay on the decision was given.

The case was brought up by Sam Daniels, secretary-treasurer of the student body, on the question of expense accounts for Bill Miller, Herman Baker, and Johnny Clampitt when the three men represented the University at the National Students association convention in Madison, Wisconsin, early this fall.

Much Interest Shown In Maryland Caravan

From off-hand interest shown around the campus over the past two days, well over the necessary 250 students will sign up for the projected special train caravan to the UNC-Maryland caravan in Washington on Nov. 15. A caravan will be sponsored even if the necessary number does not sign up, but a special train rather than only a few cars will be chartered in the event that 250 decide to make the jaunt.

Graham Memorial travel agent Bob Watson, who is supervising arrangements for the train, in cooperation with the University club, stated that announcement as to whether the special chartered train will be run Wednesday morning, after counting the number of students who have signed up on the train petitions posted in all dormitory and fraternity houses.

"The advantages of traveling on a special are obvious," said Watson. "There is no one aboard except students and fans, and never any worry about changing or waiting for trains."

According to present plans the special would leave Durham on the Southern railroad early Friday evening, and return from Washington late Saturday night.

LENOIR CHANGE

Lenoir dining hall will be open for lunch today from 11 until 1:30 o'clock due to the football game.

Hawkins-Happy Gals, Eligible Batchelors Must Register for Sadie's Day Marathon

It isn't Leap Year, but lucky Carolina gentlemen won't know the difference next Friday when Sadie Hawkins-happy coeds draw names from a fish bowl for the honor of taking the men to the evening's grand Sadie Hawkins day barn dance.

The drawing, which will take place in the Y court at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, is one of the first events scheduled on the day's festivities. Beginning Monday and continuing through the week, a registration table, staffed by CICA members, will be set up in the Y lobby from 10 to 1 o'clock.

Couples planning to run in Friday afternoon's race are requested to sign up here in advance, as only 300 couples will be allowed to run in this climaxing event of the day. Hapless males resigned to the fate of the day should also register at the table to have their names included in Friday's fish bowl drawing. All coed organizations on the campus have pledged cooperation in furnishing escorts for those whose names are drawn.

Monogram club members have scheduled a minor civil war for the afternoon's program, with a mock football game between their members. It will be F.U. versus P.U. in complete Dogpatch costume on Fetzer field at 2:30.

Al Capp's notorious comic characters Evil-Eye Fleegle, Big Stanislouse, and the curvaceous "Stupid" will make a Chapel Hill premiere appearance during the game.

"Cheerleaders and a Dogpatch band, rounding out the picture, give promise of a gala occasion," stated program chairman Mike Loftus.

Six Mo' Days. . .

—Lonesome Polecat is rilly hepped-up over Sadie Hawkins day, though he's still got six days to go. . .He's got the right spirit(s) an' will probibly be the fust male off in the big race.

Complaint from Belles of Saint Mary's

It's a sad plight indeed when college students paint the campuses of their athletic rivals, but when they stoop so low as to paint the property of girl schools, then it becomes an offense that could be committed by a person of the lowest calibre.

An editorial, in the BELLES OF SAINT MARY'S, directed to "Carolina, Duke, State, Wake Forest Editors", gave the account of how the Saint Mary campus had been painted from pillar to post with "huge, crude letters in blue paint." The vandalism was even carried to the extent that the culprets painted lettering over the doorways.

In the words of the "Belles"—"We know that college 'boys' perpetrate these outrages on the buildings of their athletic opponents and that they expect the favor to be returned, vandalous as those acts are. But we don't understand why friends and acquaintances want to do such things to our campus and buildings. If this is what we have to expect from some of the students at neighboring men's colleges, then matters have reached a new low.

We don't like it either. The administration doesn't like it, and it is a violation that has as its sentence: expulsion from school.

There is no proof positive that anyone from our campus performed these vandalous acts. But, naturally, the blame will be placed on the big four colleges in this area. The young ladies of Saint Mary's know too well that since 1930, excepting last year, this University and Duke's favorite sport before their teams met on the playing field, was to paint the rival campus. Last year student leaders from the two campuses were brought together with the result that no painting escapades or any forms of vandalism were reported by either school. We must maintain last year's record again this year and the next year and the next. We must remove all signs of guilt from the University so that if ever again vandalistic practices occur, Carolina men will be the least suspected because everyone knows that we are more mature than that. Let us hope that we are above such things.

A New Halloween

From Student Council

Complete Report On IFC Hearing

The following is the majority opinion of the Student Council.

The Student Council met Wednesday night, October 29, to consider an alleged violation of the Student constitution by the Interfraternity council in exercising judicial power not expressly granted that body. The following data is pertinent:

Facts:

The litigants in this case cited the following articles:

1. Article I, Section 11 "There shall be an Interfraternity Council composed of representatives of the various fraternities on the campus to handle matters which concern fraternities alone."

Article II Section 1 "The judicial power shall be vested in a student council, a Men's Council, a Women's Council, the Men's Dormitory Councils, the Men's Interdormitory Council, and the Women's House Councils."

Article III Section 7 "It (the House Privileges Board) shall have power to make all rules concerning coed visiting privileges in fraternity houses subject to review by the Student Legislature."

Litigants contend that all of these sections have been violated to a greater or lesser degree. The IFC, respondent in this action contends that due to implied authority and as a matter of fact that these sections have not been violated. They further contend with regard to Article I Section 7 that use of the word "alone" in its most rigid sense would negate the entire effect of the aforementioned article and section, since fraternities collectively have no function peculiar to fraternities solely. Hence the word "alone" must be construed to mean principally. The IFC in reference to Article II Section 1 stated that although no specific mention was made of the IFC as a judicial body, custom and precedent had necessarily granted to this body quasi-judicial authority. With regard to Article III Section 7 the IFC contends that no violation of the article as stated has occurred as a matter of fact.

Questions:

The Student Council was bound to decide:

1. The intent of the word "alone" in Article I Section 11.

2. In Article II Section 1, if failure to specifically grant expressed judicial power precludes the exercise of respondent's quasi-judicial authority.

3. If as a matter of fact Article III Section 7 has been violated.

Decision and Opinion:

The Student Council decided by a vote of 7 to 1 that the judicial power of the IFC as expressed through the Interfraternity Council Court to try infractions of the H.P.B. visiting agreement was within the scope of the constitution.

In arriving at this decision the Council felt that the controversy centered around the word "alone" and its interpretation. In view of the fact that although Fraternities individually deal in matters of a nature entirely apart, fraternities collectively as represented by the IFC engage in no activity restricted wholly to fraternity men. This is evidenced by relations in pledging, rushing, Red Cross drives, and H.P.B. visiting agreements. It was therefore considered that the word "alone" should be construed to mean "Principally" which further means matters in which fraternities are collectively a part.

With regard to the second question, the council felt that although specific judicial authority had not been written into the Constitution, custom and precedent do grant to the IFC through its Interfraternity Council court judicial authority in those matters which violate the H.P.B. agreement.

In the third question the Council found no violation had occurred as a matter of fact.

Dissenting Opinion

That much confusion exists as to what constitute the functions of the Student Council became apparent during the case of Childress-Sherrill v. Interfraternity Council. An attempt was even made at first, in all good faith, to limit the jurisdiction of the Council to violations of the Constitution by the Student Legislature—this, despite the manifest absurdity of allowing all violations of the Constitution to go untrammeled save those which may be perpetrated from time to time by legislative enactment.

The functions of the Student Council in cases involving constitutionality are limited and precise. The council is not intended to hear debates concerning the merits of proposals and counter-proposals; nor is it to act as the upper branch of a bicameral legislature, voting its sentiment or its judgment on the wisdom or necessity of some law or action. The Council, indeed, is enjoined specifically to determine simply questions of constitutionality.

It is unconstitutional for the Council to consider the "merits" of matters involving alleged infractions of the Constitution.

Those who feel they cannot accept and work under the Constitution as it is, always reserving the right guaranteed them by the Constitution to seek change, ought not take office under it and certainly ought not take oaths to uphold it.

That the House Privileges Agreement violates the Constitution appears to have been denied by no one, least of all by the alleged violators. Surely it is plain that "Coed Visiting Privileges" do not "concern fraternities alone," and Article I, Section II, bestows upon the Interfraternity Council power "to handle matters which concern fraternities alone." And there can be no escaping the significance of the deliberate omission of the Interfraternity Council from the list of bodies granted judicial powers in Article II, Section I.

The defendants did not deny the existence of these violations; they argued instead: (1) The Constitution "was not intended" to deprive the Interfraternity Council of "long - recognized powers;" (2) It would be unwise as a general policy for the Council to be "strict constructionists" of the Constitution; and (3) The best interests of Student Government would be served by not "destroying an efficient system on a technicality," by not creating "a wall between fraternity and non-fraternity men;" besides which, it was said frequently during the hearings, a decision by the Council in favor of the plaintiffs might have "unfortunate repercussions."

The Minority can state categorically that the Constitution, if this indeed be a relevant issue, very specifically was intended to put an end to special systems of justice for special groups of students. The Interfraternity Council, for that matter, was not trying House Privileges Agreement violations as late as 1945, so it can hardly be maintained that "long-standing privileges" were being wantonly removed. Look to the preamble of the Constitution of the Interfraternity Council for further light: ". . .Absolute freedom for control provides no freedom but chaos;" and the National Interfraternity Conference "Fraternity Criteria" affairs plainly, ". . .The objectives and actions of the fraternity shall be in entire accord with the aims and purposes of the institution at which it has chapters."

Nor need we be—or ought we be for that matter—"strict constructionists" or worshippers of "technicalities" in this case, in order to feel obliged to dissent from the majority of the Council. For it must be apparent that the spirit as well as the letter of the Constitution is violated by granting extra-legal rights to members of special organizations. "Equal justice under law" ought to be a universally-accepted goal of all governments and court systems. Certainly this was a prime motivation in the decision to write a constitution for the student government of the University of North Carolina, and it is manifest on the briefest of perusals how carefully this goal was pursued throughout their deliberations by the committee which wrote, and the Convention which first approved, the Constitution. That Constitution created this Council, and it is that Constitution this Council is obliged to uphold.

Even though the whole question would seem to be extraneous, we cannot permit to go unchallenged the concept that a decision in favor of the plaintiffs would serve to "construct a wall" between fraternity and non-fraternity men on campus. During those periods when no Agreement exists in fraternity houses are tried by the Men's Council, should they violate the Campus Code or any campus law. Furthermore it seems conclusively evident from their petition that the plaintiffs neither intends to nor desired to question the right of the Interfraternity Council to administer the internal affairs of fraternities—a right parallel to that exercised by the Pan-Hellenic Council in sorority matters and by the various dormitory governing bodies in their own fields. And had they intended or desired to do so, the plaintiffs would not have had a Constitutional leg upon which to stand.

If it is felt that efficiency or pride or other consideration make preferable the trial of fraternity men for certain violations by the Interfraternity Council, the proper procedure would appear to be an attempt to amend the Constitution. The right to make such amendments has not, however, been vested in the House Privileges Board or in the Student Council.

The Student Council ought to be the guardian of student government as set down in the Constitution; it ought to be nonpartisan, disinterested, concerned; it ought to be biased only in favor of the Constitution; it ought to set forth in ringing tones the ascendancy of the Whole over would-be privileged Parts, of Law over Expediency, of Fairplay over threats of "unfortunate repercussions."

A chip in the structure of student government has been made, and, worse, it has been granted a temporary legal sanction. The effects of the Interfraternity Council's retention of jurisdiction over violations of the House Privileges Agreement are not necessarily grave or far-reaching; exemption from portions of the Constitution granted to special groups could however have far-reaching and unfortunate consequences, and the Majority, I feel sure, would join with the Minority in warning that these consequences are not to be tolerated by a fair-minded, alert Student Council and student body.

The Brassy Taste

Rough Rows And Rosy Dreams

By Bob Sain

There are a lot of rough rows in this big, nasty world and the communist has one of the roughest to hoe. And what does he get for it? A lousy two-bit dream.

Oh, it's a fine dream, all right. One of the nicest. Everybody is equal, everybody loves everybody, there are no wars. It's a beautiful dream that sees nobody hungry and everyon with immense quantities of dignity.

There are many political angles to communism that are difficult to understand—but, then, we really haven't tried. We think that most American communists aren't greatly concerned with the political side of communism; they're interested in civil liberties and equal rights and other such admirable abstract things.

We can't say for Junius Scales here on the campus. Junius is a mystery man. But the great body of leftists is only humanitarian. It doesn't particularly want communism in America. It simply wants to see an end to injustices. Actually it is made up of idealistic democrats. We mean democrats who believe that the only way they can work for genuine democracy is through the highly organized CP. (This columnist, at this point, shrugs his shoulders.)

Unfortunately, it is all nonsense.

Get wise, reds. Nobody wants to be saved. Nobody wants the rich people to be poor. Everybody wants to be just as rich as the most bloated capitalist. You can't save anyone. To be saved a man has to give up his hopes of owning a big Lincoln convertible and a fancy lady. Liberty isn't that important to anybody.

People don't live long anyway—seventy, maybe eighty, years. In that time they instinctively know that there isn't a great deal that can hurt them. So they keep their dreams and kid themselves about opportunity and the great certainty: that they will become very rich, because, after all, you can't keep a good man down.

It's a shame, but no government based on freedom really ever works out. People aren't built that way. Fascism, Nazism worked only because they were based on

Carolina Carousel

Scales Does Not Bite

By R. Foo Giduz

Except for the fact that the Tar Heels are A-1 primed to discharge the Volunteers this afternoon, things in general are looking rather po'ly. . . . .But keeping first things first, take it from Carousel: After seeing the inspired Tar Heels mop up Florida last week, there's no doubt about today's game. . We're just due. . And like we always say—get out there and YELL!

But gentlemen: Why all this fuss on Communism? It's just the disgusting hysteria which has swept the campus in the last three days that has proven what fools we mortals be! . . . .It's way past time we started being a bit more constructive instead of continually destructive in our thoughts and actions.

Unassorted addenda and musing thoughts on the above: Honest, fellas, Junius Scales and his dozen-odd compatriots aren't worth all this fuss. . . .Nearly all 7,528 of us are likely at complete political odds with him, but we think you might be surprised to find out what an ordinary, inoffensive guy he is personally. . This is said only to try to convince some folks that he does't bite: And, if they'd stop their hysterical hollering and do some rational thinking—and stop continually calling attention to red scares and race issues we could all get a lot more done constructively. . . .This corner is more anti-Communist than most folks, but here's a fact: Blaring headlines, feudin', fussin' and a'fightin' is helping nothing. Just take a look at the Un-American Activities committee investigations in Washington for proof . . . and we've said enough here; Amen!

But maybe not quite enough: Scallions to the State college sponsors who called off the annual State Student Legislative Assembly to be held in Raleigh next month . . . The Assembly is a biracial mock legislature session held in the Capitol chambers each December . . . Inside reasons for the canceling seem to show that State students fear kickbacks on race and red implications . . . Last year's Assembly was tremendously successful and left all delegates feeling indescribably heartened over the groups' future . . . Here's a challenge to UNC to go ahead and sponsor the Assembly anyhow this year since State thinks it's too hot to handle.

Encountering Prof. Bob Linker (French dept.) yesterday noon the genial ex-Major stated he wished it formally and unequivocally known that he is a Democrat. Reason, he said, is that it seems to be the fashion these days to declare one's political colors . . . And so it is, brothers, so it is.

CCUN Asks

Opinion Without Information?

By Lincoln S. H. Kan

Last week accusations were leveled at the inhabitants of the Carolina campus. We were called sleep-walkers. Comparison were added showing us to be potential hurricanes, etc. The article ended with a rousing sermon on what we should do to "join the campaign to wake the sleep-walkers." We were told that we should identify ourselves with a great and strong movement.

Up to this point, we have no argument. But what happens after we join this great movement to wake the sleepyheads? Do we feed them benzedrine or do we whisper to them that it isn't spring yet?

The United Federalists Movement is a laudable organization with sincere and earnest followers. They have come to realize that only through evolution of the United Nations can there be any hope of achieving their goal, which is a Supranational State. The Federalists know now that revolutionary steps will lead only to further confusion. Even the rank and file of the Federalists believe that they must work through UN.

We all know that peace does not come from increasing argumentation of the world diplomats; it comes from the hearts of men. We know that the UN is but an instrument for the welding of peace and not the solution in itself. The crux of it all is, of course, the hearts of men, which is another way of saying public opinion. But how do people get opinion without authoritative information upon which to base it?

Would not people then have only prejudices? If lack of information leads to confusion, the answer is obviously education. Men must understand world government and how it will affect him personally, and what he must sacrifice. It is not enough to say we are for it without realizing what it is.

The Carolina Chapter of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations is now about to launch a program to bring the implications of world government to us. They will cooperate with the faculty in providing class-room speakers and visual aid material.

We believe that world peace can be reached. Let us stop trying to show each other how much we believe. Let us act and use every available instrument and carry our belief to our communities, counties and state.

Co-operation comes from understanding.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

Athletics and Communism

With all the talk that is going around these days on Communism in the University, in Hollywood, and throughout the rest of the nation, one is set to wonder if this great menace has found its way into the American sporting picture. A rather rapid investigation would lead one to believe it definitely has not.

For American athletics—what they stand for and the manner in which they are conducted—are in direct discord with the whole communistic point of view. These athletics, above all, are based on the ideal of competition—free and unobstructed—a thought that would send frequent chills up and down again the spines of all communists up to Big Joe himself.

There have yet to be any attacks made against athletes in this country for alleged communistic activities, and it is doubtful that any will come. The reason is simple—the majority of the so-called communists found today are ever-frustrated by lack of accomplishment in life or craving for the dramatic publicity that seems to go with being a communist. Of course, football has its Big Red of Cornell, and basketball its Red Terrors of State College, but that is about the extent of the athletic leftist movement. Thank goodness, that in Carolina athletics, the only Scales are the Scales of Justice.

Out of the Hills

The thrice-beaten Vols of Tennessee show up in Kenan Stadium this afternoon to see if the whammy they have held on the Tar Heels for the past few football seasons can be stretched for one more year, and give the boys from over the mountains their first win of the season over a major team.

The Vols have thus far this season lost to Georgia, Duke, and Alabama in about that order, but have something of a consolation in having defeated Chattanooga which like Carolina rode to national fame on a Choo Choo—and Tennessee Tech, both of which schools seldom appear in anything but that small black type at the bottom of the page.

But the way the story goes, the Tennesseans have had a lot of tough luck, losing game after game on tough breaks. The Tar Heel scouts say the Vols will be tough, but they, being gross pessimists, are said to expect the end of the world possibly before next Thursday. The Vols must have really had the bad breaks the day they lost 27-0 to Georgia Tech.

According to the news accounts, the Vols arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday by both land and air, which may be a sign of dissention in the ranks or non-belief by some that the air age is definitely here to stay. The whole thing reminds one of the days of Paul Revere when church steeple lanterns would have depicted their coming—one if by train, two if by plane.

The Prodigal Returns

The Vols are fortified by a familiar face to Carolinians in the personage of George Balitsaris. Bali boy was at Duke in 1943 when the Tar Heel gridders went down for doubles, playing the Blue Devils twice in the same year, and ironically, paid the price of double defeat, losing the first game in Durham in October, and the second in Chapel Hill late in November. In the second affair the Dukes, with Balitsaris running around like the proverbial mad man, ran up a score that is at present, too painfully high to recall. There are flashes that come to mind to recall that Balitsaris put the game away for the Durham boys early in the second half by racing from around midfield through the entire Tar Heel team of 11 men, across the Carolina goal line and up seven or eight rows in the temporary stands before rolling to a complete stop. But that was long ago, and times have changed, or at least there are hopes that they have. Still keep a wander eye on this transplanted-Tennessean.

Leading the Vols today as he has done for as many years as most have watched football, will be the unforgettable Major Bob Neyland. Neyland is one of the nation's greatest coaches and holds the distinct honor of never having lost a game to Carl Snavely, while defeating the Silver-headed-one for the past two years. Which, like Yankee Doodle, leaves the Major with a feather in his cap.

The New Look

To mention the Tar Heels for a change, local lads had that "New Look" about them last week and may surprise the home fans who haven't had a chance to see the Carolinians play in Kenan since the Wake Forest farce. With blocking and tackling becoming regular occurrences from the Tar Heel point of view, the men of Snavely are really a pleasure to behold if they can hold the margin of improvement they showed the last two weeks and possibly add a little extra just for the girls in Section 15. The weather looks good, the team looks good, all of which points to a simply delightful afternoon of football, and, of course, a little fun and frolic.

Carolina Harriers Meet Tennessee Here This Morning

Both Teams Boast Undefeated Slates

By Morty Schaap

The Carolina cross country team will be out to take its third straight win of the season this morning when they meet a likewise undefeated Tennessee squad at 11 o'clock.

Coach Dale Ranson indicated that his starting seven men would be drawn from Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Halstead Holden, John Hoots, Frank Hooper, and Chuck Herty. The five first named of this crew are lettermen.

The harriers of Tennessee and Carolina will come back on the track at Fetzer field about 11:15. Those who would like to see a finish of such an event will find plenty of room in the stands.

Tennessee will counter with such aces as H. R. Reed, Lou Schneider, Don Riley, Forrest Ross, and several newcomers.

The meet will be run over the four-mile course that starts at Fetzer field and winds out the Mason Farm road through the woods and back to the track.

Tennessee has compiled a winning streak of three straight by downing Mississippi State, Alabama, and Emory college. Ross, a sophomore, has been the individual leader for all of the meets.

The meet this morning will probably be the toughest that the men of Coach Ranson have encountered all season and should have a real bearing on the Tar Heels' chances in the IC4A event in New York city on November 17.

The volunteers are under new management this year, with Carleton Crowell taking over the track and cross country coaching reins at the Knoxville school. He was a great middle distance runner during his undergraduate days at the University of Wisconsin. With his presence at Tennessee, that institution should build up to one of the track powers of the South.

Booters Win Again. . .

Johnson's Early Goal Bests Virginians, 1-0

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31—The North Carolina soccer team continued its winning ways over Southern competition by downing a University of Virginia eleven, 1-0, in a game played here this afternoon.

Wayne Johnson, playing in the Tar Heel lineup because of the broken leg sustained by Basil Jackson last week, booted in the lone marker of the game after 11 minutes of play in the first period.

After the tally the Tar Heel back line of fullbacks, Pete Van Zandt, Frank Nelson and Al Singer, kept the ball from being in Tar Heel territory. Co-Captain Al Williams, playing his usual brilliant game in the nets, made many magnificent saves to rack up his second shutout of the year.

Great Defensive Play

It was the fine defensive play that held dead-eye Al Julius of the Cavaliers from denting the nets. It was an all-around team triumph, and Coach Marvin Allen grinned broadly when the final whistle sounded.

This was the third straight win for the Carolinians and their season record now rests at three wins against two losses.

The team will embark by bus for Chapel Hill this evening so as to be back in time for the football game tomorrow.

Blue Team Rallies To Take Swim Meet

Coaches Dick Jamerson and Ralph Casey divided their Carolina Blue Dolphin swim squad into two groups at Bowman-Gray pool yesterday, and the team held a spirited inter-squad swim meet.

The Blue team, piloted by Casey, rallied in the final event of the afternoon to nose out Jamerson's White outfit, 333.5 to 330.5. Head coach Jamerson expressed satisfaction with the boys' showing at the conclusion of the meet. The Dolphin mentor stated "they looked very good considering that the team has only been working out for two weeks."

Pacing the victorious Blue swimmers were Bob Hutton, Ronnie Besescue, Wratton, and Thomas. For the losers Bob Ousley, Mike Morrow, Dan Breeden, and Norm Sper stood out.

Outstanding Times

Nine events were run off during the afternoon, and outstanding times were recorded by Ike Norwood, with a 3:57 in the 300-meter freestyle; Bob Ousley, with 59.5 in the 100-meter breaststroke; and Thomas, who did the 150-meter backstroke in 1:43.6.

There were 42 men entered in the event, and each participated in two events.

Another inter-squad meet is planned between the Blue and White squads next Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Morris Wins Second Ping Pong Tourney

Ray Morris won his second Graham Memorial table-tennis tournament of the day when he swept through a field of 22 in a one-night contest Thursday evening.

In the finals, Morris was extended to the full five games before he was able to down tom Wadden. Morris won the first two games, but Wadden fought back to take the next two and tie it up. The scores of the hard-fought contest were: 21-18, 22-20, 17-21, 10-21, 21-17.

In winning the book of tickets to the Carolina Theater which GM offered as a prize, Morris had to defeat such paddle wielders as Jim Jackson, Bob Rossfield, Bill Murphy, Bob Goldwater, and Wadden.

In the semi finals Wadden topped Bob Grubbs and Morris defeated Goldwater.

Duke and Georgia Tech Battle In Southern Headliner Today

1947's rapidly diminishing list of undefeated elevens will probably be smaller than ever tonight, for this afternoon's grid slate finds almost all the remaining teams with unblemished records facing strong upset-bent opponents.

Duke's surprising Blue Devils journey to Atlanta today to meet Georgia Tech's undefeated and untied Ramblin' Wrecks in a contest which might even decide the championship of the South.

Most experts are giving the nod to Tech on the strength of its five straight victories, but some prognosticators believe that the Wademen, already seasoned against some of the nation's strongest teams, will come through with an upset decision.

Coach Peahead Walker takes his deflated Demon Deacons to Williamsburg today, where in pint-sized Cary stadium the Deacs and William and Mary's Indians will maul each other for sixty minutes to decide which team will remain in the race for the Southern Conference championship.

Tonight in Raleigh, State's Wolfpack warms up against the University of Chattanooga's Moccasins for their tilt next Saturday against Carolina here.

Alabama faces Kentucky's resurgent Wildcats in a tilt which may determine Kentucky's Sugar Bowl fate.

Pennsylvania risks its perfect record against Princeton under the same conditions as last year, when the inspired Tigers knocked off the Quakers in the upset of the year. Penn State, also undefeated, faces Colgate in a breather.

Notre Dame will probably extend its winning streak in Cleveland against Navy. The game of the day finds Michigan risking its unbeaten record against vengeful Illinois. The Wolverines played uninspired ball last week while nosing out Minnesota while Illinois will be on the rebound from an upset defeat at the hands of Purdue.

Co-Captain Denver Crawford, one of the main thorns in the side of the Tar Heel backfield last year. With Crawford at right tackle, the remaining linemen include ends Chan Caldwell and Al Russas, tackle Charlie Wildman, guards Royal Price and Ray Drost, and center Ralph Huneycutt.

As in the past two home games, most of the Carolina rooters will be watching Justice's attempts to break away for one of his patented, spectacular runs. With the improvement in blocking that the Tar Heels have shown of late, today might be the day that the Carolina Choo-Choo gets up full steam and speeds away. This could also apply to the other stars in the Carolina offensive limelight. The Blue and White ground attack as a whole has been stifled most of the campaign but the Tar Heels have made up for it in part with an aerial show that at times gains brilliant heights.

There is little doubt that the Tar Heels have the edge in the punting department. Carolina ranks first in the nation with a 44.5 average, while Justice is second on the individual list with a 45.3 average on 33 kicks.

All ushers, gatekeepers, and fence watchers are asked to report to Pete Mullis at gate 7 of Kenan stadium at 11:30 this morning.

Pi Phi, Kenan Move Into Tie for First Place in Volleyball

Pi Phi moved into a first-place tie in the coed volleyball tournament by posting its second victory of the week during Thursday night's activities.

The Pi Phi lassies trounced ADPi, 54-7, for their triumph. By winning, they join Chi Omega and Kenan with unblemished records of three wins without a defeat.

Other Thursday night results included Kenan whipping Alderman, 31-22, in overtime, and Carr's forfeit victory over CICA. In the overtime struggle, the two teams were deadlocked at 22-all at the end of the regulation time.

The tournament will be concluded next Tuesday when three more contests will be reeled off. A playoff involving the top teams will follow.

ALEXANDER OFFICIALS

Using their new election system of a secret ballot with no official nominations for the first time, the tenants of Alexander Dormitory last week elected their officers for this year.

Bob Payne of Gastonia was elected president, Bill Weatherby of Elizabeth City was named vice-president, and the post of secretary-treasurer went to Fred Thompson of Rocky Mount.

New Velvet Drapes Hung in First Step Toward Full Redecoration of Phi Hall

Accomplishing the first step in a long range plan of redecorating, the Philanthropic Assembly has installed new maroon drapes of plush velvet in the Phi hall. The drapes, decorating each door and window and furnishing a canopy for the platform of the hall, were obtained through a grant from the University.

During the first World War when New East was remodeled the Phi hall was moved from the second floor to its present position on the fourth floor. The old hall was elaborately furnished with individual desks, carpet, and drapes. However, in the remodeling much of this furnishing was lost and the Phi is at present attempting to refurnish the hall.

The organization received a temporary set-back in its plans last spring when the student council declared unconstitutional a car raffle by which the Phi hoped to raise money for redecorating. Plans for future decorating call for the installation of 50 legislative desks, carpeting for the floor, and special chairs for the clerk and sergeant-at-arms.

The thirteen portraits of statesmen that decorate the walls of the Phi were hung last spring under the direction of Mrs. Albert Coates.

NROTC Candidates Must Fill Out Form

All male students between the ages of 17 and 21 who are interested in entrance into the NROTC program, must pick up their application blanks from the Naval Armory as soon as possible, Capt. D. W. Loomis, University professor of Naval Science, said yesterday. These applications are to be mailed to the naval entrance examining board in New Jersey in time to arrive there on or before November 10.

A student desiring to enter this training must agree to continue college for four years after the time of his entry, Loomis said. After receiving a degree and completing the necessary naval science work, which includes three summer cruises, the graduate will be commissioned in the regular Navy or the Marine Corps and assigned to a period of active duty of from fifteen months to two years.

Those interested can procure all information and the required forms from the Naval Armory on South Columbia street.

Romance Language Department Establishes Room for Reading

The romance languages department of the university has recently established a reading room for the use of language majors and graduate students. This library, located in the whitewashed temporary building, Caldwell Y, room No. 3, is equipped with standard editions of literary masterpieces, textbooks, and novels for the convenience of students who seek a quiet, comfortable study room. Furnished with two long tables, several dozen chairs, the room will accommodate an estimated twenty-five students.

Mr. Robert W. Linker of the languages department was instrumental in collecting the books both from his own library and the members of the faculty, and in decorating the walls with maps he confiscated from the basement of the Archbishop's palace, formerly held by the Germans. Pictures of noted authors and actresses are scheduled for removal when new donations can replace them. Furnishings and drapes given by the faculty, are incomplete and requests are being made for armchairs and floor lamps to increase the comfort of the reading room.

Faculty members express the hope of expanding the library in the case of widespread student interest. The purpose of their project is to enable language students to avoid the search through the stacks, to make possible comprehensive reading in cheerful surroundings, and to facilitate access to copies of scarce reading material.

BSU Panel Studies State Convention

Deviating from their custom of having some one outstanding campus leader address the weekly supper forum group, the Baptist Student Union will present this week a Student Panel report on the state Baptist Student Convention, now being held at High Point. A delegation of approximately twenty Baptist students from this campus is attending the convention or some part of it.

The supper forum program, starting at six o'clock Sunday evening, will include reports from students on various aspects of the three-day meeting, at which Don Shropshire, prominent student leader although not present on campus this quarter, will preside.

As a result of last week's supper forum, led by Dr. A. C. Howell of the English department, who discussed the point of view of the University student in Guatemala, the B.S.U. Social Action committee is planning for the near future a banquet, to which all foreign students on campus will be invited, Chairman Don Broad has announced.

Junius Scales To Speak At IRC Meeting Monday

With Junius Scales, chairman of the Chapel Hill Communist party, as star speaker, the International Relations club will conduct an open forum tomorrow evening at 7:30 in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge on the subject: "How can America reach a peaceful understanding with Communist Russia?"

All Political Faiths

"Student and faculty leaders of all shades of opinion have been invited to participate in the discussion," announced IRC President Bill Patterson. "We hope that everyone interested in Russo-American relations will join us Monday night."

Representatives from such campus groups as the American Veterans Committee, Students for Democratic Action, Collegiate Council for the United Nations, Carolina Political Union, Di and Phi Senates, Henry Wallace club, Conservative club and World Federalists have been asked to attend the meeting.

Situations Explained

"Everyday over the air and in the headlines excited and new words are hurled at us," Patterson said. "Such words as 'Cominform,' 'warmongers, 'veto,' 'Marshall plan,' 'Truman doctrine,' 'atom bomb' — The International Relations club discussions attempt to disentangle calmly the slogans and arrive at the truth."

Mrs. Vera Scales will also attend tomorrow night's informal debate on foreign policy. She attended the World Youth Festival in Prague, Czechoslovakia, this past summer and has been writing a series of articles on her personal observations for the Daily Tar Heel.

Yack photo of IRC members will be taken promptly at 7 o'clock tomorrow night preceding the regular meeting.

Democrats Plan Long Program

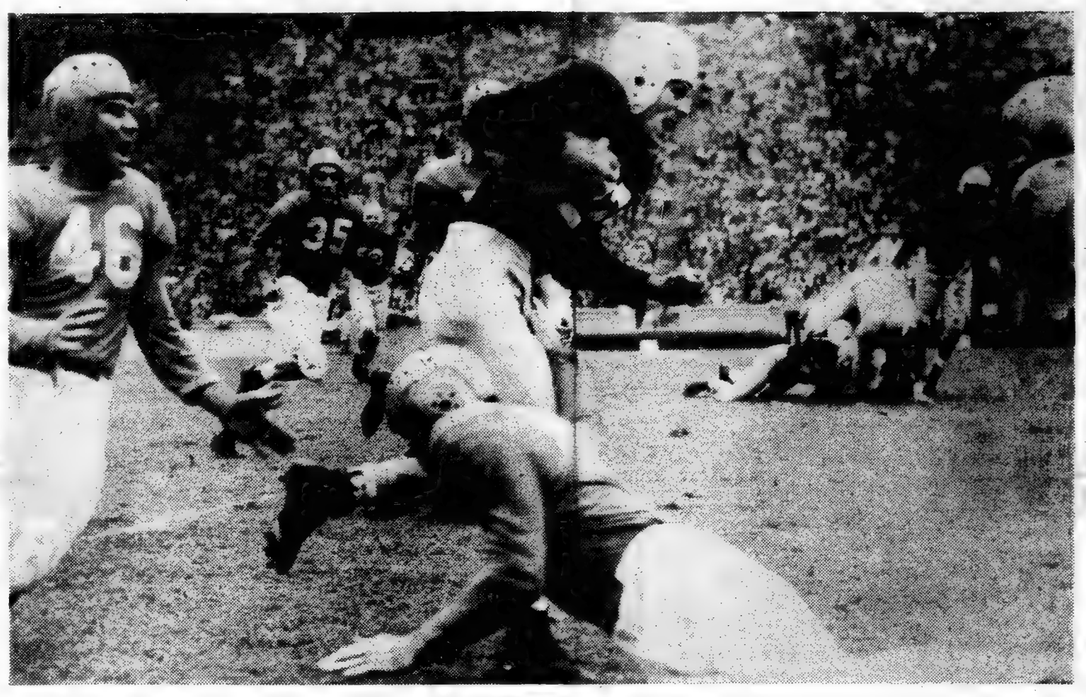
Following an executive meeting held Friday evening, Martin Knowlton, chairman of the Wallace Democrats, announced that the primary purpose of the club was not necessarily to get Henry Wallace elected president.

"We know that it is foolish to think that one man is capable of changing the national and international scene overnight. However, if enough interest is displayed in the things that Wallace stands for it is quite likely that the democratic party will be forced to modify their platform to avoid a split," said Knowlton.

Knowlton went on to explain that the group is in contact with Wallace people all over the country and that it will not limit its activities to Chapel Hill but will attempt to start similar groups all over the state.

The next meeting will be held Friday evening of this week.

Fesler to Lecture At Alabama School



Dr. James W. Fesler, professor of political science and of research in the Institute for Research in social science of the University will lecture on "Area and Administration" at the University of Alabama during the week of December 1-6.

The lectures, which will be published in book form by the University of Alabama press, will be given in connection with the Southern Regional Training program in Public Administration which provides graduate training for public administration.

INTERDORMITORY COUNCIL

Officers of the Interdormitory Council will be elected Monday night at 7 o'clock in Graham Memorial. All dormitory advisers and presidents should be present.

Two Spectators Hit By Food Poisoning At Tennessee Game

Two Danville, Va., men are reported in "serious" condition today at Watts Hospital, Durham, following attacks of acute food poisoning at the Carolina - Tennessee game yesterday afternoon.

The two, Sidney Peck and Kenneth Dodd, were stricken in Kenan stadium during the first half of the game and carried to the University Infirmary for emergency treatment.

The poisoning was attributed to ham consumed during a noon meal at Danville yesterday before the pair departed for the game here. A third spectator had eaten the infected ham but was not stricken.

No Snubbing Of UNC Says Helms In Answer

By Bill Sexton

If the University was not represented Thursday at the meeting of the North Carolina Student Legislative council which wrote an abrupt and unexpected end to ten years of annual statewide student legislatures, it was only because Carolina was not entitled to representation.

That is the reply of Ira Helms, State college student who was president of the now - dissolved legislative council, to the charge from Chapel Hill that a deliberate attempt was made to keep other schools from participating in the meeting.

No Delegate on Council

The United Press quoted Helms last night as declaring that the University of North Carolina was not represented at the meeting simply "because it does not have a delegate on the council."

Helms, who was serving his second term as president of the council when the group "permanently" dissolved itself and the State Student Legislative assembly said that only council officers have any authority. He told reporters in Raleigh that the officers have the power to cancel or assemble the legislature "as they see fit."

In his announcement of the joint dissolution of the council and legislature Thursday, the State college student gave entirely different reasons for the action:

No Approval Filed

(1) Only State college had filed written approval by college authorities of its delegation to the council, which actually was in itself the council.

(2) Only State had duly appointed faculty advisors for its delegation.

On Thursday Helms did not mention the cause he listed last night, though he admitted both times that the underlying reason was the admission of delegates from Negro schools to last year's session.

Maurice Braswell, president of the Debate council here, said Friday that no announcement of either the council meeting or the legislative assembly had been received either by himself or by Tom Eller, president of the student body.

Berry Refutes Charge

The 1947 session, Helms announced Thursday, was to have met in the state capitol at Raleigh November 28-29.

And Larry Berry, former clerk of the student legislature at Chapel Hill and a delegate to the 1945 state student legislature, labeled Helms' charge that the move to admit Negro delegates origianted from "an organization in New York" as "hard to understand."

"We discussed the question of inviting delegates from the colored colleges thoroughly among the Carolina delegation before we left for Raleigh," Berry declared. But, he added, he "was unable to imagine" any connection between the move and any organizations in New York."

Committee to Plan Parties for NROTC For Coming Year

Announcement was made yesterday that a social and welfare committee has been set up for the NROTC students enrolled here. The committee will be in charge of planning social affairs for the naval science students during the coming year.

Plans have been made to hold a dance at the Naval Armory this quarter for the officer candidates and their dates. December 5 was the date tentatively set as plans were made for the affair.

Leslie McLeod was selected as chairman of the group which will represent the 125 men of the unit. Other committee members are: seniors, Alden H. Hall; juniors, James C. Wilson and Miles Smith; sophomores, Page Harris, Theodore J. Fussel, and Charles McLeese; and freshmen, Henry Fricke, Dave Venable, Nelson Taylor, and Chuck Northend.

CPU VACANCIES

Dick Simpson, sophomore from Chevy Chase, Md., was elected treasurer of the Carolina Political Union last Sunday to fill the position recently vacated by William F. Patterson.

Ben Perlmutter, chairman of the CPU membership committee, announces that there are several vacancies in the union membership. Application blanks can be secured from the Y office.

Justice, Rodgers Spark Locals To Third In Row

By Bob Goldwater

Rolling to a 20-0 halftime lead, Carolina's comeback kids, paced by Choo-Choo Charlie Justice, continued their winning ways yesterday in Kenan stadium with a 20-6 triumph over a hapless Tennessee eleven that in no way resembled last year's powerful team.

The actual score fails to show how completely the Tar Heels dominated the play, but the 41,000 fans on hand can testify to that. The Volunteers pushed their way past the midfield stripe only two times, one coming when they tallied their lone touchdown on a 47-yard pass play midway in the fourth quarter. And in the statistics department, it wasn't even close—it was Carolina all the way. The Tar Heels ran up 19 first downs to three for the opposition, gained a net total of 395 yards to 99 for the Vols, ran 71 plays as compared to 41 for Tennessee, and in various other ways outplayed the boys from the other side of the mountains. In short, they clicked with deadly precision.

Clicked for the first half, that is. Coach Carl Snavely's charges registered all their points shortly after the halfway mark in the second stanza and then sat back to protect their lead. It wasn't hard. Tennessee was woefully weak along the ground and Carolina was much improved in pass defense. All of which meant that this particular band of Volunteers didn't march anywhere.

Justice Comes Through

Although unable to reel off any long runs, Justice nevertheless did everything the Carolina fans could desire—and then some. He scored one touchdown himself and passed for the other two. All four aerials he threw were completed for total gains of 50 yards.

But Justice wasn't the top offensive leader. Taking up where he left off last week, hustling Hosea Rodgers accounted for 155 yards in the Carolina attack with eight running plays good for 69 yards and seven aerial tosses picking up 86 yards. His fourth-quarter understudy, Bob Kennedy, reaped a share of the honors by ripping off six runs good for 38 yards.

There were lots of luminaries up front in the forward wall, where a fighting line held Tennessee to 11 yards net along the ground. On offense, three pass-catching ends, Art Weiner, Bob Cox, and John Tandy stood out with 13 catches good for 177 yards.

First Touchdown

It took the Tar Heels all of eight minutes and 10 seconds to register their initial score. Starting on their own 42, the Snavelymen, with Justice and Rodgers alternating, pushed to the enemy seven in eight plays. From there, Justice pitched his first payoff aerial into the hands of Cox, who fell over the goal line for a TD. Cox's attempted conversion was wide, but Carolina was out front, 6-0.

Following the kickoff, Tennessee was allowed to play with the pigskin for eight downs—interrupted by Carolina having possession for two plays—before the Blue-clad gridmen were again striking paydirt. After an exchange of punts on which the Tar Heels' gained greatly, Carolina took over on its own 45 and took off for the races again.

Rodgers Pitching

Justice picked up three off tackle and Rodgers flipped a pass to Weiner, on which the big flankman made a diving catch down on the Vol 36. Rodgers pitched another, this time to Cox, and Carolina had a first down on the enemy 23 as the first period ended.

Neither the change in goals or the Tennessee team could stop Carolina at this point. Jim Camp, running his best game of the year, gained four on a reverse and Rodgers bucked for five, to the Tennesee 14. Weiner's end-around maneuver was

Caravan Deadline Set for Tomorrow

Everyone planning to make the Maryland football game special train to Washington on November 14 should sign up on the petitions posted on all dormitory and fraternity house bulletin boards by tomorrow evening.

Martin Carmichael, speaking for the University club, co-sponsors of the jaunt, explained that students may make the trip whether signed up or not, but it will be necessary to have a fairly accurate estimate of the number of passengers in advance to charter the train, or proper number of coaches and Pullmans.

Present indications show that from 450-600 hope to ride in the caravan. If more than 250 students sign up for the trip, a special train, rather than separate coaches, will be chartered.

Information on the project may be had by calling or seeing Bob Watson, Graham Memorial travel agent (telephone 9881) in the student union office any afternoon this week. It is expected that the 112 members of the University band will travel on the special train also.

McArthur, Director of Madame Butterfly, First Started on Career by Richard Crooks

Edwin McArthur, who will direct the performance of "Madame Butterfly" to be given here on November 5th under the sponsorship of the Student entertainment committee, is carrying on the great European tradition of the poor blacksmith's son who carried a melody in his heart and because of it became the toast of the continental capitals.

Born in Denver, Colorado, the son of a Congregational minister, he grew up as the ordinary, if a little above average, American boy. His first public acclaim was the result of his winning an Eagle Scout badge, the highest honor of the American boy scouts, and later he distinguished himself by winning the Colorado state typing championship.

Undoubtedly, this was an above average boy, but despite the fact that he had directed the choir in his father's church, few people in Denver were prepared for the next chapter in the life of Edwin McArthur. It so happened that when he was fifteen years old the famous tenor Richard Crooks saw him and immediately took notice.

Having satisfied himself that the boy had real musical ability he allowed him to accompany him on a concert tour of the West and later helped him to win a scholarship to New York's Julliard school of music. Here, in addition to polishing his technical knowledge, McArthur met many of the great American musical figures of the day.

He never finished the course at Julliard's however, as he was in great demand to accompany such stars as Ezio Pinza, John Charles Thomas, and Gladys Swarthout on their tours. But it was with Kirsten Flagstad that McArthur first began to become known as a great musical personality himself.

His debut as a full scale operatic conductor came with Madame Flagstad herself on the stage and the Sydney Symphony in the pit. Now at the comparatively young age of 43, he has behind him experience with the New York Philharmonic, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the NBC symphony, the Metropolitan Opera company, and most of the other leading American musical organizations.

He learned something of the handling of musical ensembles during the course of a mutually profitable association with George Gershwin and Richard Rodgers, and he has directed revivals of "Showboat" and Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts." For the past three seasons, he has been the musical director of the St. Louis Municipal opera Association.

His ability and versatility make him much in demand on Broadway and are expected to add much to Wagner's "Madame Butterfly" when it plays here. However, his wonderful sense of musical balance and his personal modesty caused one New York critic to remark to Wagner that "Your conductor holds the orchestra to its place as a perfect background for the singers, not rival performers."

McArthur's appearance, plus the outstanding reputations and past performances of the stars who appear on the stage, have prompted the student entertainment committee here to regard "Madame Butterfly" as the headline feature of the outstanding series of productions that they are bringing here this winter.

CIO Textile Union Heads Meet Today To Study Date for Southwide Shutdown

By the United Press

Danville, Va., Nov. 1—Southern CIO labor leaders will meet here tomorrow to consider a starting date for a proposed strike that would freeze the entire Southern textile industry.

The executive vice president of the Textile Workers Union of America, George Baldanzi, said today a strike date will be set unless what he calls "satisfactory progress" is reported on the union's demands for a 15-cent-an-hour wage boost in all Southern mills.

Baldanzi declared that if the strike is voted, it will be "Southwide." Several mills are making last-minute negotiations, he said but none have yet met the union demands.

The union has claimed that the demand is not unreasonable, that the wage increase would help eliminate the difference in wages paid to Northern and Southern textile workers.

The proposed strike would affect some of the South's largest mills, including the Erwin and Cone mills in North carolina, the Fieldcrest mills owned by Marshall Field in North Carolina and the Lowenstein chain, which owns plants in Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina.

'Cold War' on Communists

Taking cognizance of the fact that Communists do exist in Chapel Hill, have a foothold on campus with the head of the local Red branch enrolled as a graduate student, politicoes of the Student Legislature have unwrapped their verbal arsenal and proposed two bills.

Each of these tentative measures contain merits. One, a resolution to condemn Communism, would indicate for the nonresidents of this campus town that the progressive institution and its student body adhere strongly to the principles of democracy, and not the philosophy of Lenin and Marx. The other would set up a committee to investigate Communism. Such an organization, under capable direction, could feret out the undesirable elements on campus.

Publicity itself, of a true and verified nature, can work to the detriment of the Communist party, can do much to destroy the hold of the parasites who work under the protection of the very Constitution which they would destroy—not immediately, but by tortuous degrees.

However, this latter bill—rather proposal—contains a dangerous potential. Immature, power-drunk, overly zealous students could grasp at isolated facets, could interpret falsely some liberal philosophies and attack the progressive thought on campus. Unskilled and unsympathetic with liberals, a conservative body could slash at the American heritage.

The "send the nigger to the back door and keep the damn Yankees in the North" theorists on campus have proposed the creation of the anti-Communist committee. Hence, if such an organization is to operate on principles of justice divorced from individual political philosophy, it is a prerequisite that this committee be composed of representative students, of men who would seek out the communists and not of students who would use the Red smear brush on others with a more liberal philosophy than their own.

If, and when, the names of Communists in Chapel Hill are determined, the only action against these men should be the publication of their names. They should be set up before the student body as what they are.

But so long as there is no law in this country against Communism, no other action should be taken which would enable to misguided "dozen" to wrap themselves in the guise of martyrdom. History has shown the effect of martyrs on the events which occur in the world.

In juxtaposition with this bill which should create a body to investigate campus and town Communism, should be a challenge from the student body to Junius Scales and his brethern that they reveal themselves.

Until this is done, we may justly assume that none, save Scales, have the courage of their convictions, that politically they deserve the stigma of cowardice so long as they retain the mantle of secrecy.

If these Communists will not do this, let us have the anti-Communist committee. But let us not have the parallel of kleig-lighted Hollywood. Truth, not sensationalism, is the weapon that can slay these despicable theories.—(E.H.)

A Movie Must Dance, Dance

We saw a movie the other night that was mournful and slow-moving. It was melancholy and somber. You might say it was "Russian" in mood.

The picture was "The Long Night." It starred Henry Fonda and some other people. But the thing that we most remember about it was that it was very moody.

At the Un-American Activities committee hearing last week Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of the fabulous Ginger, declared that slow-moving, melancholy pictures were un-American. This was said in order to show that communists had gotten their toes into the door of Hollywood's glamour factories, that the screen was being used to propagandize Moscow.

Just what kind of film is American? That's an easy one to answer, according to Mrs. Rogers specifications. If the picture isn't slow and moody, it must be American. You know—the gay, light pictures. . .with maybe some dancing. Sort of the things that say a girl like. . .oh, Ginger Rogers would play in.

"The Long Night" was an excellent picture, one of the best we've seen in months. The screen play was by John Wexley; it was a well-done screenplay because it made the picture both important and entertaining. Tolstoi might have written it, or Dostoievsky.

But, since it was slow-moving and sad we must withdraw our praise; it's attitude was un-American.

That lets out "Hamlet" and practically all literature save Saroyan's short stories. —(R.S.)

The Air of Enlightenment

Editor:

The author of the TAR HEEL editorial entitled "Uranium for UNC's Enemies" indicates that the announcement of my Communist Party membership was a blow at the University.

That my announcement may be used against the University is quite possible. The air of enlightment, the liberal tradition and the relative freedom of thought here are red flags to those who habitually attack the University.

But if this freedom at UNC is only something to look at and not touch, pardon me for living, Mr. Editor, because I am frankly making use of the University's tradition of freedom to think as I please and say what I think.

Apparently you allow me only two alternatives: (1) to think what I please and keep quiet about it or (2) to take my opinions away for the University—otherwise I provide "Uranium" for our enemies. Where do you stand, Mr. Editor, for real freedom of thought or for a hush-hush appeasement of a bunch of loud-mouthed reactionaries?

Now just a word about my "sly, oily statement" this summer. Last July when I was mentioned before the un-American Committee as a Communist I replied with a crack at the Committee. Mr. Broadfoot now thinks this was dishonest and that my reply should have been "no comment." I don't get it: I neither admitted nor denied the charge. Is it the attack on the Committee that distresses you, Mr. Broadfoot?

I thought then and think now that under the Bill of Rights our opinions are not subject to censorship or supervision by any committee of Congress. The Committee attacked my right to keep private my political opinions and my affiliation to a quite legal political party. (Why do you think we have a secret ballot, Mr. Broadfoot?) Furthermore, the testimony before the Committee must be considered in connection with the anti-Communist hysteria which the Committee has been foremost in creating. True or not, the testimony made in such a setting was an assault on my future prospects of getting a job and thus was an attempt to suppress freedom of thought by the very effective method of economic intimidation.

Finally, to return to the "Uranium" editorial, the editor says to wait and perhaps the identity of all the Communists will become known. I suggest a more positive approach: let's not wait but get busy against this anti-Communist hysteria which is undermining the democratic rights of all Americans, both Communist and non-Communists. This will be the quickest method of identifying the Communist. I know from personal association that every member of the Communist Party is anxious to proclaim his or her political convictions and affiliation the moment it is possible to do so without fear of reprisal.

Four Freedoms Plus One

Editor:

Before I get involved in unraveling my own particular brand of subversive, un-American propaganda, I should like to pay my respects to the staff of the Daily Tar Heel. That the entire world is desperately ill should be obvious to the most corroded brain. It would seem that Tuesday's editorial regarding a balance of world and campus news would be unnecessary. One would think that the publications of our nations' universities would naturally reflect the throbbing, pulsating, passionate hopes of this generations most scintillating intellects. That many of them do not is a symptom and not a result of our illness. My congratulations to a paper whose editorial page is stimulating to those of us who are interested in both local and world community.

To pass from the delightful to the distasteful: It so happens that I am one of those strange conglomerates who honestly believe that the best method for maintaining the freedom of the press—or any and all other freedoms—is the generous exercising of said freedoms at all times. I do not look upon this as a privilege. It is a right; an inalienable right.

Not long ago in these pages it was suggested that those persons who did not like the "American way of life" (meaning that writer's concept of said "way") should be shown the nearest exit. Tuesday, the same writer suggested as a practical step for implementing democracy, the Four Freedoms and that Fifth Freedom so dear to the hearts of all white, Christian Americans with incomes of $10,000 plus—free enterprise—, the passing of a law by Congress "making membership in the Communist party unlawful and treasonable."

It has been said that the only lesson we learn from history is that [illegible] the lessons of history. I wish someone could explain to my satisfaction the real significant difference between Communist purges, Italian fascism, the German Gestapo and the American brand of fascism which such laws as this must create.

For some time now I have been operating under the illusion that if we courageously seek to know and exercise the truth, the truth shall make us free, I have never been bothered by the threat of communism any more than I am bothered by the threat of fascism—or any other form of totalitarian government which seeks to prohibit its citizens from holding political views contrary to those of the chosen, or self-chosen, few who rules by grace of God, the ballot box and the biggest club. I have been foolish enough to believe that (in the words of Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam) "ideas are conquered by better ideas whose thruth has been revealed in practices that enrich personality."

Since this concept is so patently false, impractical and unrealistic; may I point a bloody finger in the direction of the true light. If opposition to the status quo on ANY grounds is treasonable then it is the patriotic duty of all true Americans to eliminate that opposition. The "nearest exit" is treason in itself, for it aids the enemy. By your own standards there is only one elimination. Murder! Dont's wince! Murder! Murder! It is your duty. If humanity, God, the American way of life, democracy is at stake; you have no valid alternative. The higher law says, "Murder." Not to obey the higher law is cowardly, is treasonable, is a threat to the security of your fellow Americans and to the state. Unless, of course, the state is your highest law! In which case—the state being God—it is easy to understand your hysterical fear of communism. Also your desire to throttle through force all opposition.

So hurry, my friends, get your most lethal, lethal weapons. Murder the communists! Murder democracy! Murder freedom! Murder murder!

Aim of Zionism

To Create Jewish State

By Paul L. Furgatch

(The following is the first in a series of three articles designed to explain the fundamentals of Zionism:)

Thirty years ago today, November 2, 1917, Arthur James Balfour, Secretary of State for foreign affairs, issued the following declaration in the name of the British government:

"His Majesty's government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object. . .nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

This was the Balfour declaration, a milestone in the history of Zionism. That day is now known by all Zionists as Balfour Day. Today as the nations of the world attempt to solve the Palestine question, another milestone is approaching. In order to comprehend the present situation before the UN, a clear understanding of Zionism is fundamental.

What is Zionism?

To answer this, we must go back into history some two thousand years when Judea was destroyed by the Romans; fundamentally, Zionism began at that point. For the previous twelve hundred years, the Jews had existed as a nation in Palestine. The spontaneous yearning for the return was from the very beginning invested with all the sanctity and solemnity of a religious creed; it was preserved and stimulated throughout the Middle Ages by the goad of persecution; and it was brought to a fruition in modern times by the social, political, and economic conditions which affected the major portion of the Jewish people.

It was not until after the middle of the nineteenth century that the ideal started to formulate into a reality.

In 1896 a pamphlet appeared in Vienna which was to become the cornerstone of Zionism, and its author the father of political Zionism.

The man was Theodore Herzl and the pamphlet was Judenstaat (The Jewish State). The pamphlet aroused attention throughout the world, and on August 2, 1897, Herzl succeeded in convening the first Zionist Congress at Basle, Switzerland. It was attended by 204 delegates from all parts of the world.

It was here that the Basle Programme, as it came to be known, was formulated. The Basle Programme stated:

"The aim of Zionism is to create for the Jewish people a home in Palestine secured by public law."

This is the essence of Zionism. Though within the Zionist movement there are various political parties, every Zionist subscribes to the Basle Programme. It is to Zionism what our constitution is to our democracy.

Thus we arrive at the first axiom of Zionism; namely, that it is primarily a political movement nurtured by a religious creed many centuries old.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fear that the Navy may have tipped off the Russians to secret developments in jet research has been whispered in Air Corps circles.

The suspicions have been hushed up to avoid a quarrel between the two services, but actually the Army is quite sore about it. Highly placed Air Corps officers are worried that the Navy's record-breaking speed runs at Muroc Dry Lake may have exposed America's hand.

The Navy sent the jet D-588 over the speed course twice, breaking its own record the second time at 650.6 miles per hour. It performed with all the fanfare possible. Reporters, newsreels, and anyone else—including any Russian agents who may have been in the neighborhood—could witness the whole thing.

Air Corps officers point out that the D-588 is one of five research planes, testing jet propulsion. Three are operated by the Air Corps, two by the Navy. Their performance in the air was supposed to be highly classified. The Army lived up to this secrecy, but the Navy didn't—even though both are now supposed to be under the same boss.

Secretary of State George Marshall lived up to reports that he would pull no punches when he discussed European relief with farm, labor, and business leaders at that big closed-door session arranged by Presidential assistant John R. Steelman. He laid his case right on the barrel-top.

"I hardly need to repeat what is at stake if Western Europe doesn't get the food needed to tide its peoples over this winter," Marshall declared. Tragic "economic and ideological" consequences would result, he said, adding that we face a choice of two courses:

1. We can help Europe with all the resources we can afford, even though this means belt-tightening at home.

2. We can sit back, do nothing and "take the consequences."

The "consequences" would be that Communism would overrun the nations denied our help. Marshall left the clear inference that the second course would lead eventually to another war.

"So you see, it's either one thing or the other," he concluded. "We pay either now or later."

Under Secretary of State Robert Lovett was equally emphatic about the importance of stop-gap aid to France, Italy and other tottering countries. Lovett got off a wise-crack, however, when Charles Wilson, president of General Motors, began to quiz him about the inflationary effects of the aid program.

Wilson inquired whether our relief plans might not constitute an unhappy cycle. The more aid we give Europe, the higher domestic prices would climb, which, in turn, means that our ability to finance relief measures would proportionately decrease.

How, inquired Wilson, did Lovett reconcile that with the Government's program of eating less food?

"I take it," quipped Lovett, fondling his waistline, "that you don't mean the kind of inflation that results from eating more."

Wilson was still waiting for an answer to his question when Lovett sat down, amid laughs.

Another official, Charles E. Bohlen, State Department counsellor, took a dim view of what would happen if any more "police" states were set up in Europe.

"Once that happens, a nation's freedom is completely lost," said Bohlen. "It's like walking into a room from which there are no exits."

Marshall and his aides went to great lengths to keep the meeting on an informal level, frequently injecting humor into the serious discussion. The State Secretary insisted that his long-range program of economic aid to Europe was not his brain child, "though everybody calls it the Marshall Plan."

"I've got so much publicity as a result of this that I can't walk along the street without someone offering me a plan," remarked Marshall.

However, the genial Lovett carried the informal motif a little far. Anxious to learn if the 100 guests were hearing all that was said in the big White House meeting room, he jokingly sang out:

"Can you people back there hear what we're saying? Not that you're missing anything."

One of the most important commodities in world politics today is that lowly barnyard product—fertilizer. It is the biggest question mark in the Marshall Plan, the key to revived food production.

Yet the startling truth is, the world is critically short of fertilizer. Even America cannot supply her own domestic demands. This does not stop her from sending sacrifice shipments abroad, but the amazing fact is that most of the export is going, not to needy warfime allies, but to the countries that lost the war.

Europe and Asia are crying for fertilizer to give their farms a shot in the arm, while in this country American farmers also are clamoring for more.

The Brassy Taste

By Bob Sain

A Leaf Against the Sky, by Paul Ader, Crown Publishing Co.

Paul Ader's story of a mountain boy, the son of a stern old preacher, seems another in that endless stream of novels about how the author lived and learned. "A Leaf Against the Sky" is no better than the greater part of the stream—and not even near its model, Tom Wolfe's "Look Homeward, Angel."

The book reads word for word like a first novel, any first novel. (It is not, however. It is his second.) It tells of John Perry and how John grew up in a small mountain town (apparently Franklin, North Carolina, where Ader spent his boyhood); it tells of how John went to Trumbull University (Duke, obviously); and it tells of how John lost the faith of his father and how he lost respect for the austere old man's God.

Ader tells also of the women in John's life: Zona Cahill, artistically inclined daughter of an "aristocratic" mother who entertains writers and artists in her mountain mansion. ona is sophisticated, even in her early teens, goes to Trumbull with John, has three sonnets published in "Atlantic Monthly." There is Jane Wilson, Trumbull co-ed, editor of the lit magazine, the author's inevitable "first sex." Martha, John's sister, rounds out the trio. Martha and John, as they grow older, grow further apart, as anyone who has ever read a novel will know. She also breaks with her God-fearing father when she brings a school-chum home for the weekend.

"A Leaf Against the Sky" is rife with characters. More than once I wished that the author had provided a cast of characters sheet with identifying traits. To list only a few of the dozens: Milton Silverstein, the Jew, the genius, the tormented soul who hates his background and who grows up and goes to school with John. Richard Stone, the aging publisher of the "Messenger," the newspaper on which John worked. Jess, the Negro printer who worked for Stone and wanted to "ostracize" the rich Cahills who ran the opposition paper. Solomon Silverstein, Milton's father, who operated a small department store in the mountain town and could not understand his son's resentment against him.

But it is at Trumbull University that Ader finds the majority of his characters and most of his action. The characters—students, for the most part—are essentially thin and flat and it is painful to see Ader trying to put blood and brains into them. However, this is one of the first accounts that I have read of college life in the late thirties. Generally, I have found only the school of the late twenties and early thirties represented in fiction. Ader's version of college life just before the war is a drab one, but interesting in that it concerns a nearby school and occasionally comments on Carolina.

"A Leaf Against the Sky," cluttered as it is with characters, is also carelessly knit. The story stretches over six or seven years and the reader sometimes finds difficulty in determining just what year it is.

It's easy enough to find the faults in Ader's novel; I haven't yet been able to discover that quality which made me read the book and actually enjoy it. Perhaps it's the proximity.

Radio: On the Mutual network every Wednesday (12:30-1:00) there is a man named Alan Lomax who conducts a program called "The Song Train."

Lomax, a well-known authority on American songs—from the blues of New Orleans to the fiddling of the Smoky Mountains—is a sort of folk-music disc jockey. He spins records, commercial records and specially-made ones, which illustrate our own native music as well as the music of other countries.

The program I heard (last Wednesday) was top-notch radio.

Playmakers

Show Behind A Show

When the curtains close on the Playmakers production "Saint Joan", the members of the audience have been impressed with actors and with the play, because these are things tnat can be seen and experienced. Few realize the tremendous amount of work that goes on behind the scenes as the show unfolds.

Last night a representative of the Daily Tar Heel stayed backstage to watch this "show behind a show."

At first glance the stage area, clear of actors, seemed calm and ready. Up on the light balcony, twelve feet above stage level, Arthur Early, master electrician, waited wtih his crew. On stage, W. P. Covington, crew chief, and Betty Young, stage manager, put last minute touches on scenery in the playing area. Off to one side, Gloria Gunn worked over her sound effects machinery.

The lights were dim and made the backstage area seem murky and perhaps hotter than it was.

At 8:29, someone appeared at the head of the steps and said, "One minute 'till curtain." Almost immediately a column of costumed figures took their places—these were the actors who opened the play. Art Early, at the switchboard, quickly flipped little switches and spotlights played over the setting. In a moment he had the lights adjusted, and his crew turned on the "strip" and "floods," and brought the soft blue colors alive on the "sky" drop in back of the platforms.

Everything was ready. The preface started and the play was on, but in a moment the stage crew's work would just begin. As the curtain closed on the preface, the crew at the "fly" rail pulled the backdrop used for the preface high up out of the way.

From then on, the backstage action was hard to follow. At the end of each scene, a sweating crew on the "fly" floor would pull unused pieces of scenery out of sight, and would lower some new units into position. Down on the stage another crew would be setting the scenery units into place, the lighting crew would be resetting their lights, changing color screens, and the property crew would be bringing the properties out into position. Eeverybody worked quietly and tensely. Actors left the stage and new ones came up. The high powered lights gave of a hard, hot, metallic odor and the area near the switchboard smelled of ozone. Up above in the grid, pulleys screamed as their ropes were raised or lowered. And all the while, the backstage crew worked and the audience knew only that there was a "break."

Inter-Dorm Officers Still to Be Elected

Due to the failure of all dormitories to send representatives to the last meeting of the Inter-Dorm Council, it was impossible to elect permanent officers, Bill Height acting president for the council announced yesterday.

Explaining that run-offs for election of several of the dorm presidents and representatives have not yet been completed, and that he has been unable to contact already elected officers, Height expressed hope that the elections will be held during the next meeting of the council.

Pikas Elect Officers For Coming Year

At a recent meeting the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity elected the following officers for the coming year: Graham Battle, president; Charles Adams, vice-president; Wilbur Padgett, treasurer; Ted Wall, house manager; and Charles Hondros, dining room manager.

Miscegination: More About Blacks, Whites

Wild Grape, By John Hewlett, Whittlesey House, $3.00

"In the North they love the nigger race as an abstract something' or other, a sort of collective absentee brother..down heah in the South we frankly hate the race and love the individual."

Above you see one of the better contributions from "Wild Grape," a novel that spills over with sociology, ethics, badly-played pathos, and too-quaint humor. It was written by Georgia newspaperman John Hewlett, who should have known better. The title sounds like a paraphrase of the best-seller, "Strange Fruit," and though both books are concerned with miscegenation, the comparison comes to a screeching halt there.

This novel's "wild grape" is Deel, a girl born "pure as de driven snow" to a black mother who was raped by the cussin'est, lynchin'est Ku Klux Klanner in the town of Ebeneezer. Deel's fate in a land divided into black and white, yet where she is neither, could have made a very strong novel. But this author keeps his protagonist out of contact with the white man's world until she is old enough to be packed off to New York. There the book ends.

The character of Uncle Gimme is the author's mouthpiece from the colored side of the problem. Gimme is admittedly an "old-fashioned nigger," who goes through the pages muttering "tuchukker-tuchukker" and saying things such as ". . . in de South a nigger gits a little understandin' and some love, too, no matter how grudgin' 'tis." Like all of the Negroes in "Wild Grape," Uncle Gimme speaks in apostrophe-cluttered dialect that would make Brer Rabbit sound urbane.

Wedding Bells For Tri Delts

From the many reports which have been coming in from day to day we conclude that wedding bells will be ringing fast and furiously for Tri Delts during the months of November and December. First on the agenda is Nancy Waugh who has announced November 8 as the eventful day for her, and December 13 has been set by Judy Swain who's engaged to a Harvard man. December 20 has been chosen by Cathy Carlen and Bob Cox, and Marty McClenaghan and Jim Bolch have chosen a date some time after Christmas.

Two other old Tri Delts who have returned for weekends with the shiny stones calling attention to the left hands, are Ann Cobb of Winston-Salem who is engaged to Bob Kemp, and Jean Youngblood of Concord who has chosen a Navy man.

Highlighting mid-week activities for Tri Delts was the buffet supper given by the Betas in honor of the pledges and the active officers, and speaking for Tri Delts, a good time was had by all.

IZFA Entertain District Leader Here

Local chapter of the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America was host to Miss Rosalind Tabel, a field director for the southern states, for three days of the past week.

At the meeting held Tuesday Miss Tabel spoke at the day Miss Tabel reported on activities in other chapters and gave suggestions for building up local membership. Miss Tabel spoke at the

The purpose of the IZFA is the training of men and women to fill important positions in the national office. Palestine for the Jewish homeland is the ultimate goal of all Zionist organizations. Dick Mottsman and Rita Loeb are co-chairman for the University chapter. They extend an invitation to all students who are interested in the Zionist movement to attend the next meeting of the IZFA.

Cothran-Tate Marriage Announced at Germans

An announcement Friday night at the German club dance in Woollen gymnasium revealed the marriage of Bill Tate, president of Men's Council and vice-president of the German club, to Ann Cothran, of Raleigh. The ceremony took place in Durham, September 19.

The ADPi's entertained the Phi Delts at a Hallowe'en party Thursday night. Three girls pledged ADPi in a ceremony held Wednesday: Gayle Hancock, Lexington; Nannette Robinson, Ashland, Ky., and Doris Beasley, Davidson.

The Pi Phis gave a Hallowe'en party for the Phi Kappa Sigs on Tuesday night. Everyone dressed as ghosts, wrapped up in sheets. Nobody knew who anyone else was and all had a fine time.

Thomas (Kernel) Corn, vice-president of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, was married to Ann Finch last Saturday evening at the First Baptist church in Macon, Georgia. From Sea Island, where they honeymooned, the couple sent the following telegram to the KA's: "Having wonderful time. Glad you aren't here. Signed, Mr. and Mrs. Kernel."

K. A. Karl Kurbjohn pinned Miriam Barron in a private ceremony a short time ago.

Pi Phi Sookie Buchanon and Phi Delt Jack Porter have advanced their wedding date to December 20.

Josh Turnage's German-style beer hall two miles outside of Durham on the Hillsboro road is a very fine place to eat. Open Thursday nights from 5:30, you can have all the food and drink you can consume for $1.75.

Morty Schaap, Daily Tar Heel sports writer and former chuga-lug champion, has announced his engagement to Louise Bettye Brenner of Brooklyn.

The girls at Smith dormitory were entertained at a tea held in the parlor of Smith Thursday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Homer E. Sala, housemother, presided at the tea table, which was decorated with a bouquet of mixed flowers, evergreens, and orange candles in brown wooden candlesticks. Phyllis Johnson, assistant hostess, greeted guests.

Miss Phyllis Moreton Johnson of Brookhaven, Mississippi, who has announced her engagement to Benjamin Linton Spearman of Anniston, Alabama, was entertained with a surprise party last week in Smith dormitory.

The bride-elect, who is assistant hostess at Smith, was presented with a gift by the dormitory, after which refreshments were served.

JOHNSTON CLUB OFFICERS

The Johnston County Carolina Club, meeting in Graham Memorial Tuesday, elected the following as officers for the coming year:

President, John Colones; vice president, Chester Barbour; secretary, Carolyn Driver; treasurer, Clyde Johnson; social chairman, Bill Creech. Evelyn Turnage was appointed publicity chairman of the club. Next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday, November fourth at 7 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

UNIVERSITY CLEANERS are now Licensed SANITONE CLEANERS

Ever since we've been in business, our purpose has been to give you the best cleaning we know how to do.

Whenever we could we've made improvements in our technique and service. Now we've taken a major step which we think you'll like very much.

We've adopted the nationally known SANITONE METHOD which cleans clothes cleaner than ever before.

After testing Sanitone and studying it, we've adopted it because we're convinced that it produces the finest cleaning that can be done.

It wasn't all one-sided, either. We were pretty thoroughly investigated and inspected ourselves, to satisfy the Sanitone people that our workmanship and equipment meet their standards.

Sanitone is licensed only to carefully selected cleaners. Frankly, we're proud to be one of them.

Now we'd like you to try our Sanitone Cleaning Service. It's so much better that you'll be able to see and feel the difference.

APPROVED SANITONE SERVICE — NATIONALLY ADVERTISED in the Saturday Evening Post Ladies' Home Journal and Vogue

Our prices are still the same. No increases. Call us today for Sanitone cleaning.

World Student Service Fund Opens '47 Campaign Today To Aid Students And Colleges In War-Torn Countries

A group of Polish students find many use for this mimeograph machine supplied by funds donated to the WSSF.

Aid for Students in Poland Is Desperately Needed Now

By Caroline Homan

The World Student Service fund drive, currently being conducted on campuses throughout the nation as well as at Carolina, will result in aid for students of countries in Europe and Asia, including Poland, where aid is deperately needed.

Books are practically nonexistant for most Polish students. Polish libraries have been destroyed and the books of the last eight years have never even entered Poland. All over Poland students have organized to mimeograph and pubilsh lecture notes and digests of the latest books and periodicals.

Mimeograph machines, stencils, ink, typewriter ribbons and papers are needed everywhere and cannot be supplied in Poland. Sir Kenneth Lindsay, former British minister of education, lecturing in America last month, said that schools are so desperately short of equipment that in many countries in Europe today even lecture notes are sold on the black market.

Mrs. Phyllis I. Farley, regional WSSF secretary from Atlanta, speaking in Chapel Hill soon after her return from Poland, spoke of a Polish girl, who, still lacking enough funds after working a year for money for school, worked day and night studying for a competitive scholarship examination. She developed pneumonia from overwork, and on the day that her winning of the scholarship was announced, other students were trying to borrow enough money to give the girl a decent burial.

Polish students have no G. I. Bill. They receive $10 per month from the government for all expenses; due to inflation $10 is worth about $1. The student does not receive extra money if he is maried or has a mother, father, or sister to support.

Students cannot afford the food that is available. The thousands who depend on the student canteens established in each center and run by students, need supplementary food to add to a diet which averages only about 1500 calories per day.

Existing hostels are either partially or totally destroyed and where they have been rebuilt and furnished are quite inadequate. Many students sleep in railway stations and in classrooms. There is a lack of accomodation, too, for professors, many of whom are now accommodated in pre-war tutorial rooms, and often they still have to hold their classes in these rooms.

Political insecurity preys on the minds of the students, as does the demoralization of their country's young people. The Germans carried on a definite demoralizing program, teaching children to lie steal, drink and become dope addicts. These children are now the adolescents and adults of Europe.

As Sir Kenneth Lindsay said, "These young people are the makers of the new Europe. Unless there ex-servicemen and ex-concentration camp residents are aided no United Nations or a United Europe can be successful."

An Editorial

WSSF, four letters strung together, letters of which you've seen a good bit around campus recently, and of which you'll see a lot more this week. What do they mean?

In words these letters mean World Student Service Fund— a unique relief organization of American students and professors for the assistance of students and professors in war-devastated countries.

To many thousands of European and Asiatic students, striving in the face of almost insurmountable odds to gain the education they must have if they are to lead their nations and the world to peace, these four letters mean life and hope, the opportunity to gain the knowledge for which they've been thirsting during the long years of war, the chance to live long enough to use that knowledge.

To 278 students hospitalized at the international student sanatorium at Leysin, Switzerland, WSSF means, quitte literally, life. Without the medical aid made available to them through relief funds, these young people would have died. Now, 209 of them have returned to their classrooms, cured.

To other thousands of students who have received WSSF food, clothing, books, and rest cures, these four letters mean the rebirth of hope, of the belief in themselves and in the world. They can at last know that somewhere there are people who care, people who have the same ideals and aspirations for a new world that they have. This moral relief is the thing most mentioned in letters of thanks from students and professors all over the world. WSSF means strength to go on trying.

And to us here at Carolina—What do these four letters mean to us? Is this merely another "worthy cause" to which we'll contribute if we get around to it? Or is this appeal from our fellow students and professors something about which each of us should be deeply concerned, something we should support with our whole beings rather than with a half-hearted contribution? Should we be vitally interested in world-wide education? Should we feel that what happens in Poland, in Italy, in every nation of the earth, affects us, and our future at Carolina and in America?—(S. W.)

What Is Your WSSF?

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

1. When and how was WSSF organized?

WSSF was organized in 1947 when the needs of students in China's war-evacuated colleges first became critical. Its activities were extended to Europe when war broke out there in 1939. With the end of the war the opportunities—and the needs—for rebuilding have expanded vastly. WSSF is the American organization dedicated exclusively to rebuilding the lives and restoring the opportunities of students everywhere.

2. What is World Student Relief?

World Student Relief is the international student agency for which WSSF is the American fund-raising organization. It is the overall agency coordinating the plans and policies of the various national committees, and administering all funds raised for student relief. Headquarters are in Geneva, Switzerland.

3. How many other countries contribute to World Student Relief?

Students and teachers in 19 nations are raising money for their colleagues in war-stricken areas. Naturally the greatest part has come from countries least hurt by the war — Australia, Canada, Great Britain, Portugal, South Africa, Sweden, the United States.

But there are student relief fund-raising committees in countries hard hit by war and enemy occupation—China, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland and Czechoslovakia are all contributing what they can to the common goal.

4. What is the relation of WSSF to UNESCO?

This year the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural organization is promoting a campaign for $100,000,000 for educational relief and reconstruction in war-devastated areas. UNESCO will make no separate appeal, but will encourage the enlargement of giving through existing voluntary agencies such as WSSF.

5. How is our WSSF money allocated?

The European Student Relief fund and the National Student Relief committee of China will each receive 33.3 per cent of the money. New theaters of operation (Burma, Philippines, India, East Indies, Malaya) will receive 12. per cent Three per cent will be held for emergency projects; 1.7 per cent will be given to special projects; and 16.7 per cent will cover all operating and educational costs.

A student in the International Tuberculosis sanatorium at Leysin, Switzerland, takes his own temperature. Sponsored by funds from WSSF drives, the sanatorium is open to students from all of western Europe. WSSF is anxious to increase its aid to the sanatorium this year.

Valkyrie Carnivale Presents Miss Payoffs Here Tonight

Tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall, the Valkyrie Carnivale will introduce the candidates sponsored by campus organizations for the title of Miss Payoff of 1947.

Balloting on the beauties will begin immediately following the Carnivale, and will continue through the week of the World Student Service fund drive. Votes will be sold at 10 cents each in the lobby of the YMCA building and at other central points on campus, and all proceeds will go to the WSSF drive.

At the Battle of Bands dance in Woollen gym Saturday night, November 8, Miss Payoff will be crowned. Tickets for the dance will be $1.00 and will go on sale next week. Wayne Brennengen, Dance Organization committee chairman, who is in charge of the Battle of Bands, has announced that, because of advance request, the number of tickets to be sold has been increased from 1,500 to 2,000.

Wayne Thompson will act as master of ceremonies for tonight's Valkyrie Carnivale, and Roy Cole's orchestra will play. The cheerleaders will also be on hand to lead community singing. Jo Fischel, Valkyrie president, is in charge of the affair.

YACK SCHEDULE

Yackety Yack picture coordinator Bill Duncan has announced that the following pictures will be taken tomorrow:

Administration, Campus Heads Endorse Program for Relief

I think every University student knows of the desperate need of fellow students in distressed areas of the world and would like to help. The World Student Service fund offers an expert and immediate way for each student to help, according to his ability. I hope and believe that a good contribution will be made in Chapel Hill.

R. B. House, Chancellor

The desperate plight of students and teachers abroad is well known. The World Student Service fund affords a direct and reliable channel for relief of these suffering people. And so Carolina students have properly recognized this drive as one for which they may go "all out."

The importance of sharing what we have at this time with the less fortunate abroad is evident from the standpoint of governmental policy. But it is as an act of humane consideration that we are most strongly called upon to give, to give generously and to sacrifice and do without here so that suffering may be alleviated abroad.

Fred Weaver, Dean of Men

To share with their unfortunate student brothers and sisters across the sea some of the advantages that make the lives of American students interesting, stimulating, entertaining, and comfortable should be an opportunity.

Katherine Kennedy Carmichael, Dean of Women

We students at Carolina have, in the World Student Service fund, an opportunity to make our contribution to the shaping of future world leaders and through them world peace. There is no question of the needs of students in devastated countries abroad nor of the supreme necessity that they secure aid. Let us not neglect our chance to help in building One World by contributing to the WSSF drive.

MAG DELIVERY

Ben Perlmutter, Carolina Magazine Business Manager, announced yesterday that all circulation complaints for the mag—both town delivery and mail subscriptions—should be directed to Owen Lewis, mag circulation manager.

Lewis can be reached at the Daily Tar Heel business office, second floor Graham Memorial, between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily. The phone number is F-3371, and the mailing address, Drawer 1080, Chapel Hill. Perlmutter emphasized the fact that all matters concerning circulation would be handled exclusively by Lewis, and that on no account should these matters be addressed to the mag office.

WSSF Announces Events for Week

Tonight: Valkyrie Carnivale introduces Miss Payoff candidates.

Monday: Personal solicitation begins in all living units.

Wednesday: Carolina students "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner,"

Saturday: Miss Payoff is crowned at Battle of Bands dance in Woollen gym.

All Week: Movies will be shown in down town theaters, and local merchants will display WSSF windows, arranged by the Art department.

'War Mobilization' Edited by Fesler

"Industrial Mobilization for War," a thousand-page history of the War Production Board and its predecessor agencies during the six-year period 1940-1945, has just been published by the U. S. Government Printing Office. The volume was prepared under the supervision of Dr. James W. Fesler, War Production Board historian from 1945-1946, and now Professor of Political Science and Research Professor in the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. J. Carlyle Sitterson, Professor of History at the University of North Carolina, was a member of the professional staff preparing the study, and was primarily responsible for the research and writing for the section entitled "1945: Victory."

Tonight the opening of a week-long World Student Service Fund drive here on campus will climax a full month's work by approximately 80 members of the University student body.

There will be rampant campaigning to arouse solicitations among faculty and students for this fund to aid students abroad, campaigning the likes of which campus politicians "ain't even used yet." The Valkyrie carnivale at 8 o'clock this evening in Memorial hall will start fireworks that are to last through Saturday, culminating to a Battle of the Bands dance in Woollen gymnasium where two orchestras will play and "Miss Payoff," the queen picked by the majority of dime WSSF donations, is to be revealed.

There will be a meal set aside at Wednesday noon for which students will be asked to pay double fee for their lunches in Lenoir hall, N. C. cafeteria, and Carolina Inn, the idea being to take a needy foreign student to dinner by proxy. WSSF will also canvass dormitories, fraternities, sororities, Victory Village, and the trailer camps during the week. Donation boxes will be placed in the "Y" court and at various other sites over the campus, the most novel ones to appear at the game with State on Saturday. At that time there will be wishing wells at Kenan stadium into which all loyal Carolina fans can toss a coin and make a wish for a Tar Heel victory.

Chapel Hill merchants are cooperating fully with the drive to the extent of window displays throughout town and movie shorts in the downtown theaters. Preliminary solicitations in private homes of Chapel Hill this past week, as an example, have already netted $261.

Although a dime donation may buy only one vote for "Miss Payoff," this chart indicates what dollars can do:

$5—food for a hungry fellow-student for 15 days.
$10—six to ten textbooks to a student who has none.
$15—maintenance of a tubercular student for a week in one of the student sanatoria.

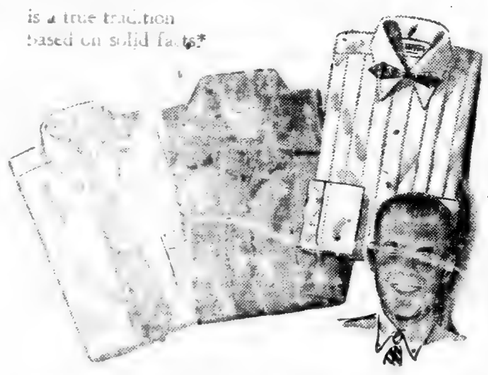
WSSF's Cause

The funds raised by the University this week will be added to a fiscal pool fed by other colleges and universities all over the United States with the intent of safeguarding the world future by providing education facilities for students of all races and creeds everywhere.

To that end, WSSF then turns over its proceeds to World Student Relief, international student agency with fund-raising organizations in many other countries more fortunate than the nations devastated by war. Competent social workers will take their orders from a Geneva headquarters to ration out whatever supply of food, books, study grants, medical care, and housing the funds collected here can furnish.



Since WSSF was organized in 1937 in the midst of dispicable conditions first beginning to infest a world brewing wars, progress has been made. American students have distributed $1,822,960 to their contempory students in war-wrecked areas.

Tar Heel Cross Country Team Whips Tennessee, 18-41

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Cafmichael, III

BACK FROM THE GRAVE

North Carolina's back from the grave Tar Heels gave the home folks a gander at Coach Carl Snavely's "New Look" football team yesterday afternoon, and those who saw, went away with the impression that football might still be here to stay at Carolina, if they keep playing it the way they did yesterday. It's so easy to be a winner.

The Tar Heels went to the front early in the game, scoring three touchdowns in the first half and making Tennessee look like some high school team that got in by mistake. The ushers were almost prompted to ask the Vols if they had tickets.

Big Hosea Rodgers and little Charlie Justice gave the 40,000 fans all kinds of thrills for their three dollars-tax included, and proved to all that the stories coming out of Florida last weekend were true to the letter. Justice passed for two scores and tumbled over for the third, all of which did as much to warm the hearts of most fans as did the several hundred bottles of 90 per cent proof Carolina "spirits" in the stands. The Choo Choo got much support from his teammates, which shows what a team can do when all eleven men work along the same line.

Rodgers, who had received enough publicity during the last week to prevent his donning a helmet, didn't disappoint a soul, with the exception of a few dieheart Tennesseans. The big Alabama lad ran through the visitors with the terror of a revenue agent, and passing, he hit an assortment of ends from the distances of ten paces and up. Only an injury kept him from running entirely hog wild.

PRAISE, PRAISE, PRAISE

The rest of the Tar Heels are not to be denied one single line of praise. Up where the boys are biggest, Bill Smith was the blinding light, treating the poor Vols miserly all afternoon with no apparent feeling for their time and toil. The Tar Heel ends were just a wee bit short of supreme all days, with Art Weiner catching everything from Tennessee halfbacks to sizzling forward passes all with the same non-chalantness. He helped set up one touchdown with a swan dive catch of a tipped aerial that was nothing short of acrobatic. Bob Cox, besides adding two extra points, also made several nice catches to prove what variety can do for a man.

Coach Snavely, who of course, deserves his share of the credit for the win, used his offensive and defensive teams as usual, but left many wondering if this was a move to put the best eleven men on the field at any one time, or to keep the poor boys from freezing to death in the Kelvinatorlike weather. Snavely keeps the boys on the run even if the Vols can't.

Speaking of Tennessee, the visitors who came to town billed as the hard luck kids were still clean out of it yesterday afternoon, though it seemed to some observers that nothing short of the use of more than 11 players at a time would have helped their situation. The Tennesseans did live up to their nickname though, in as much as they did play like a bunch of "Volunteers" all the afternoon. They just couldn't fight their way out of the paper bag defense the Tar Heels threw up.

CLOSE—BUT NO CIGAR

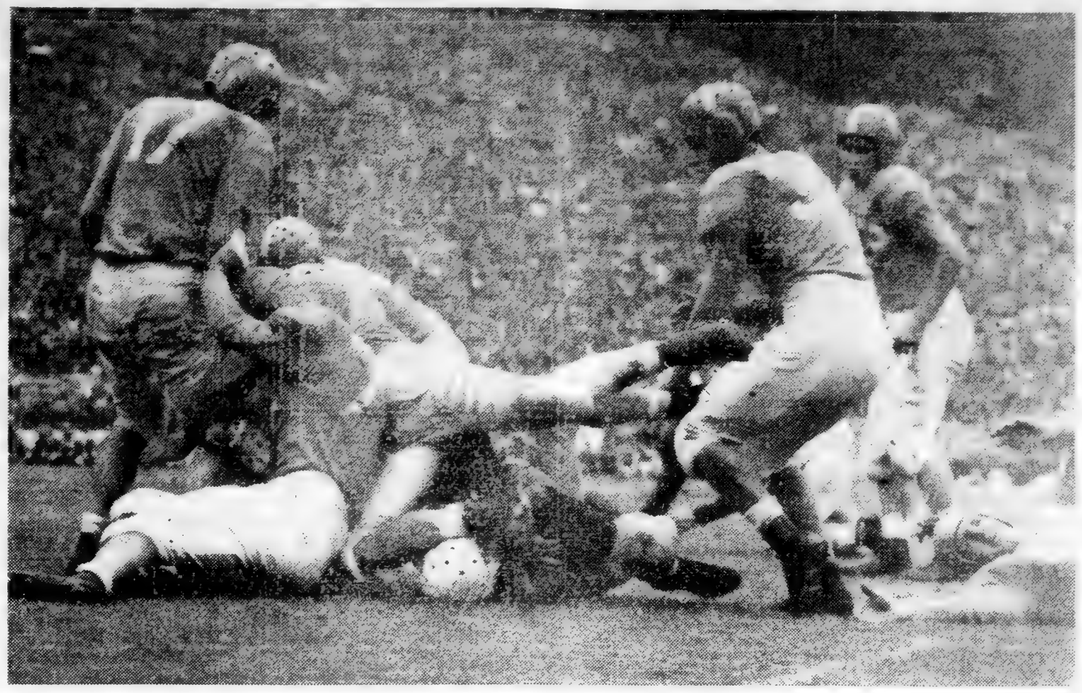
The Tar Heels just missed a couple of extra touchdowns all afternoon long. They drove deep into Tennessee territory early in the third quarter and on a fourth down play, Weiner missed making a stabbing one hand catch in the end zone while a half a dozen photographers swore loudly over the bitter waste of film.

Bill Flamish had a shot at fame and glory later in the second half when he almost intercepted a desperate Vol aerial just about two good plunges from the goal line. Flamish bobbled the ball for one step, then made a thrilling Nijinsky leap in a sideline spectator as the ball trickling harmless to the earth. Fred Sherman too, saw glory for a split second when he just failed to gather in a Fitch toss, and got stood on his head in the effort. These are the times that try men's souls.

All in all, all was and went well in Kenan yesterday which may be a sign that the football future of the Tar Heels is again a bright one and a warning that the four opponents of the Carolina lads still to come, had better prepare to bar the doors or take some other necessary precautions.

I may not be home for New Year's after all, maw.

Volleyball and Table Tennis Entries Due



The Intramural office announced yesterday that all entries for the volleyball and table tennis tournaments should be handed into the mural office not later than five o'clock Tuesday.

Volleyball teams will be composed of six men. Organizations may enter up to three teams in this tournament and competition will be based on the single-elimination method. Play is slated to get under way Thursday.

Table tennis teams shall consist of four men. There must be a doubles pair and two singles men with only two teams per organization accepted. Like the volleyball tournament, table tennis will be conducted on the single-elimination basis.

In a bulletin put out by the Mural Director Walt Rabb stated, "It is very important that the fraternity intramural managers submit to the mural office a list of pledges who have participated in the intramural program with another organization if the pledges plan to participate with the fraternity."

The mural office also announced that a total of 1,036 men are participating in the tag football program.

LET'S GET TO THE BOTTOM OF THIS: That's Charlielie Justice's white helmet protruding from the tangled mass of Tennessee arms and legs, all of which were unable to prevent Carolina's second touchdown early in the second quarter. At left Volunteer tailback Hal Littleford (17) moves in belatedly while at extreme right Royal Price, guard, has already given up. All Tennessee's Jim Vugrin (on his feet, right) could do is gasp in amazement as the Choo-Choo scores. (Staff photo by Yarborough)

Weary Carolinians Say Little of Win

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's second half let down on the field yesterday afternoon continued in the dressing rooms after the contest, for the weary Tar Heel gridders staged no wild celebration as they filed into their quarters.

Bill Wardle, the Tar Heel guard who made almost half of the tackles for the Blue and Whites, took time off from demolishing the orange clasped in his grimy paw to shower this writer with orange juice and seeds and echo the Snavelymen's general feelings about their victory. "We wanted to beat them more than anybody," he said. "tI was a good game."

Off in Second Half

Big Art Weiner, whose circus catches and end-around dashes knocked off large chunks of yardage for the Tar Heels, rasped the other side of the Carolina win. Said he, "It's the same old story, we do it in the first half but can't do it in the second."

The Grey Fox was in talkative mood after the tilt and allowed three sentences to slip out instead of the usual three words. He was apparently pretty well satisfied with his first victory over a Tennessee eleven and let these comments escape: "We were pleased over the way they played during the first half but the credit goes to the Tennessee defense in the last half. We're happy to win from a Tennessee team any time."

Choo-Choo Praises Line

Charlie Justice, apparently none the worse for wear despite another one of the going-overs which have become a weekly occurrence for him, right after Snavely's statement asked the mentor for permission to see a high school game in Greensboro last night.

Cox; Tandy Register Touchdowns On Passes

good for 10 yards and a first down on the four, and Justice took it over with an off-tackle slash. Cox converted for a 13-0 lead, with only 1:05 gone in the second stanza.

After the ensuing kickoff, the Volunteers actually worked their way for their initial first down on J. B. Proctor's 13-yard aerial to Jim Powell. But this and the six yards that followed got them only as far as their own 40, and when center George Sparger threw Proctor for a two-yard loss, Tennessee had to punt out. That's the last Tennessee saw of the ball until after another—the last—Carolina touchdown.

Proctor's punt had been returned by Justice to his own 32 and the Asheville speedster ambled another 12 around left end. After Charlie picked up two, Rodgers hit Tandy with a perfect strike for 16 yards up to the Tennessee 43. Justice then took his turn on the pitching mound and his aerial to Tandy was ruled complete on the Vol 20 due to interference by Ronnie Bergmeier.

After Rodgers lost a yard and two pass plays went for naught, Justice faded deep to his right and uncorked a long lob into the left corner of the end zone where Tandy was waiting with arms wide open. He didn't miss it, and neither did Cox miss the extra-point try. That made it 20-0, Carolina.

Before the first half ended, Carolina was again knocking at the scoring gates, but couldn't quite force an entry. Starting on their own 23, the Tar Heels marched all the way to the Vol four, where Weiner was knocked out of bounds after catching one of Walt Pupa's tosses. Tennessee took over and the first half ended three plays later.

Third Quarter

The third quarter saw no scoring and only one mild threat—when Camp intercepted a pass by Hal Littleford and ran it 28 yards to the Tennessee 18. But four plays netted Carolina only eight yards and the Vols took over.

Tennessee finally broke into the scoring column in the fourth period. With the ball on the Tar Heel 47, Hubie Becker rifled a toss to Bergmeier that Bill Flamisch almost intercepted. But he didn't—in fact he didn't touch it—and Bergmeier proceeded to gallop the necessary 35 yards to paydirt. Littleford's attempted conversion never left the ground and that was the scoring for another Saturday.

Fourth Victory

The victory gives the Tar Heels a season's record of four wins against two defeats and was their third in a row since the pair of setbacks. It was also the first scored by a Snavely-coached team over one directed by General Bob Neyland of Teennssee.

Although the game was rather rough in spots, there was only one serious injury. George Balitsaris, former V-12 star with Duke, suffered a broken rib early in the first quarter of the only time he carried the ball.

Competition Keen In Mural Football

As the final rounds of the intramural football program draw closer, several teams have been singled out as probable winners in each league.

The league championship has already been decided in the first fraternity division. Phi Delta Theta No. 2 annexed the crown by defeating Sigma Chi to maintain a perfect record of seven wins.

Other fraternity league championships will be decided tomorrow when the several contending teams will face their opponents to determine the league leaders.

Milne, Miller Take Individual Honors; Volunteers Suffer First Loss of Year

By Morty Schaap

The Tar Heel harriers, led by their aces, Jack Milne and Jimmy Miller, made it three victories in a row by downing a previously unbeaten Tennessee cross country team, 18-41, at Fetzer field yesterday morning.

Milne reached the track with a slight advantage but he and Miller joined hands and crossed the finish line in 20.09.7, which is less than 10 seconds from the course record.

Sam Magill was third about 30 yards behind the leaders. The first Tennessee runner to finish was Tommy Scott, running unofficially. He is ineligible to compete as he transferred from Maryville college and lacks a quarter of residence. Alvin Smith was fourth and showed that he is rounding into shape.

The first Tennessee runner to cross officially was Forrest Ross, who captured the fifth spot. He was followed by teammates Louis Schneider, Horace Reed and unofficial Volunteers John Trent and Ed Downey.

Hoots Strong

The Tar Heels had a group of three runners next with John Hoots putting on a late sprint and just failing to nip Downey. Frank Hooper and Halstead Holden rounded out the Tar Heel official group.

Julian Mackenzie and Jim Hunt, running unofficially for the Ramsomen, all finished before the last two Orange and White harriers. Dan Martin showed much improvement when he crossed the finish line in just over 25 minutes.

The meet was by far the fastest that the Carolinians have participated in and shows a big improvement from last Wednesday's Duke affair.

IC4A Coming

The Tar Heels will have to continue to improve however, as it will take five men running 28:30, for the five-mile course at Van Courtland park in New York, to make a good showing in the IC4A event.

Carolina will get in a full week of distance work in preparation for the meet with the Wolfpack of State college here next Saturday morning.

Devils, Deacons Suffer Setbacks

The second half of the collegiate grid season got under way yesterday afternoon, and sellout crowds witnessed several more of the nation's previously unbeaten football powers go down to defeat.

Highlighting the action in the South yesterday was the battle in Atlanta between Georgia Tech and Duke, both of which possessed undefeated records before the game. The Yellow Jackets scored the first time they got the ball, driving 54 yards for a touchdown just six minutes after the contest had started. Thereafter the game evolved into a scoreless duel, giving Georgia Tech a 7-0 triumph.

A pass, Jim Still to end George Broadnax, was good for 16 yards and the lone score of the game. The victory was the sixth straight for Tech and puts the Jackets in line for a Sugar Bowl bid.

In a vitally important Southern conference game, a surprising William and Mary team came through with a 21-0 win over bigger Wake Forest before an astonished Williamsburg, Va., audience. The Indians now stand an excellent chance for the Southern conference title.

Music included a Mezzrow-Bechet blues number, a fiddle breakdown, an Irish folk song by Negro balladeer Josh White, and two records which sounded amazingly similar: one, Ukranian wheat harvesters, and the other, Negroes in a small southern church.

Lomax adds numerous unobtrusive comments above the records in a quiet, unprofessional voice. The man knows his business.

NBC has Dave Garroway, ex-disc jock, on a Sunday night show (11:30-12:00) that features Garroway's amiable talk (not chatter) on everything from trees in autumn to how to judge the quality of women. However, the Garroway show is essentially directed toward music. Garroway finds the top performers in the field of modern music as well as those youngsters he considers up and coming. Not content simply to give them air time, he prepares a commentary on their particular style of music and supplements their performance with his own evaluation of their work. It's one of the most pleasant musical shows on the air.

Question of the Week: Has anyone else noticed the great similarity between the opening bars of the new Berlin tune, "Katie," and those of "Cabin in the Sky," a show tune of the thirties? Irving Berlin said a week or two ago that song writers were getting too sophisticated to write simple tunes. He means familiar stuff, I imagine. But, after all, one can get too familiar. Can't one?

Sandhill Students Asked to Join Club

The Moore County Club has been in existance on the campus for one year. During that time its activities have been limited to social functions within the club. Realizing that a club restricted to one county can do little towards the improvement of campus life, the Moore County club moved at its last meeting to extend a cordial invitation to all students from the Sandhills area to its next meeting for the purpose of forming a larger organization. The Club sincerely hopes that a large number will attend the meeting Monday night at 7 in Horace Williams Lounge.

SPLASH CLUB MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Splash club, coed swimming organization, tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Women's gym, it was announced yesterday.

All coeds wishing to join the group are invited to attend the meeting.

Tax Supervisors Will Attend UNC Two-Day Refresher Course

The annual two-day refresher course for county tax supervisors in North Carolina, sponsored by the Institute of Government, will open in the Institute building in Chapel Hill Wednesday, Director Henry W. Lewis announced today.

Tax supervisors and their assistants from the 100 counties of the state, county commissioners, and all attorneys interested in evaluation of property for taxation purposes have been invited to attend the school.

Registration, said Lewis, will begin at noon on Wednesday. At 2 o'clock the first business session will convene with a discussion of "How to Conduct a Quadrennial Reassessment." Three supervisors who have had previous experience in the scientific method and the "common sense and good judgment" method of conducting quadrennial reassessments will lead the discussion.

Dr. D. D. Carroll, dean of the University commerce school, will be present to offer some economic and sound bases for setting values on taxable property.

A banquet in the Carolina Inn has been scheduled for Wednesday evening. Addresses by a member of the State Department of Revenue and a member of the State Board of Assessments have been scheduled for the banquet meeting.

Thursday's session of the school will feature a panel discussion among three of the new county supervisors who have occupied office within the past year. Peyton Abbott, of the attorney general's office, will present a general summary of the changes in "ad valorem" tax laws passed by the 1947 General Assembly.

"Interest in the school," said Lewis, "is particularly pertinent at this time. Many people are concerned at present about the values on property for tax purposes. Under state law all real property must be reassessed and re-evaluated every four years. Under the present law, 1949 is the last year to which this reassessment can be postponed.

"Emphasis in the two-day school will be placed upon the methods by which these quadrennial reassessments can be made."

Campus Bears Scars Of Vandals' Brushes

Despite all precautions, pre-football game vandalism reared its ugly head this weekend as "NCS," apparently denoting North Carolina State college, appeared in big red letters on the porticos and doors of the Monogram club, on the Police school barracks, and in the quonset hut area.

Eller Comments

Commenting on the painting, student body President Tom Eller stated, "Of course we have no way of knowing whether the acts of vandalism committed on our campus were done by State students, but that is incidental for it is our duty to show students of all colleges and universities that we do not conduct our athletics on that level.

"It is my sincere hope that the students will continue to do credit to our behavior by refraining from any such actions and implications."

To Meet at State

This evening Eller, Jack Folger, Barron Mills, Myrt Sherrard, Bill Tate, Dean Weaver, and others of the University will meet at State with student and administration heads to discuss further preventative measures against such occurrances as took place here last weekend.

Painting of the police school barracks was timed after the graduation of the recent class, leaving the buildings empty, Sidelights on the vandalistic acts was the work several members of the quonset hut set put in to wash the red letters from the walls of their living quarters. Johnny Lambros, Al Pruitt, John Coffey, Glenn Mitchell, and Johnny Ogburn of hut 8 were the paint-scrapers.

Dry Fans Mark Tennessee Tilt

Saturday's Carolina - Tennessee football game here was "as dry as I've ever seen one," Police Chief W. T. Sloan said here Sunday.

Sloan was not referring to the game itself but to the condition of fans in the stadium. "I didn't see a single drunk at the game," the chief reported, "although there must have been one somewhere."

Only one arrest was made Saturday afternoon, and that one not at the game. It was a case of public drunkenness on a down-town street.

Direct Contrast

This was in direct contrast to the total of 14 arrests—eight of which involved students—which were made Friday night and early Saturday morning, on charges of public drunkenness, drunken driving, reckless driving, and speeding. Chief Sloan described Friday night as a "merry-go-round" at some periods, with a continuous parade of incoming arrest.

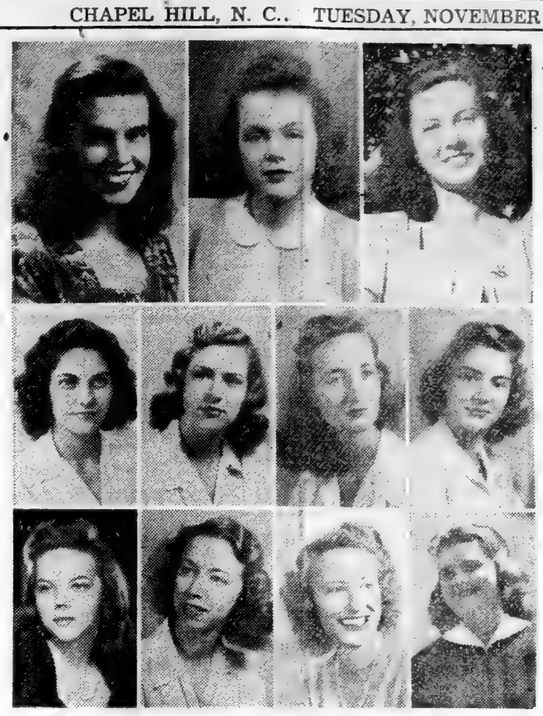
Halloween vandalism Friday night was reported as slight by City Patrolman Ed King. Chapel Hill pranksters for the most part confined themselves to soaping of windows and parading in costume with little or no damages being reported.

Eller Asks Inquiry Into Cancellation Of State Assembly

Branding the State college cancellation of the State Student Legislature as "regrettable," student body President Tom Eller stated yesterday that, "It is my hope that the Debate council will investigate the situation thoroughly and will consider the practicality of sponsoring such a meeting itself under the same terms as last year."

"Student government will be happy to aid the Debate council in any possible way to accomplish this objective," continued Eller. "While there is no question but that State college is acting within its responsibility, a great deal of misunderstanding could have been avoided by their contacting other colleges and universities in the state to get a representative viewpoint on the situation."

Shropshire Comments



In Chapel Hill on business Sunday evening, Don Shropshire, speaker of the house of last year's legislature, stated that "We can't let Helms kick us around." He was speaking of Ira Helms of State, president of the legislature and head of the Leg-1islative council which cancelled this year's assembly. Shropshire, not in school this quarter, will return to his academic work in January.

"I accuse someone of negligence," Shropshire declared, "in not disseminating information on rules of the legislature and the council and on plans being made by the council. If only State was represented, how were delegates at Carolina or any other schools supposed to know what was going on."

Negro Question

Latest information received here from Raleigh was to the effect that the University was not entitled to representation on the Legislative council, and that State, as sponsor of the legislature, controlled the council by itself. After the fight by State delegates in 1945 to prohibit the entrance of Negro schools into the organization, all persons commenting on the dissolution of the legislature have stated that the race question was obviously at the bottom of the decision.

Helms himself, commenting on the reasons for dissolution, said, "The race question does have something to do with it." Eller, Shropshire, and Maurice Braswell, however, have said that the races worked together in perfect harmony and that there was no cause for alarm on that score. Braswell, a former delegate to the legislature, is president of the Debate council here.

Dormitory Counselors Aid In Coed Guidance

The first University of Carolina coeds of 50 years ago got a lot of attention from the men, but it is doubtful if they got as much friendly guidance and counsel from their older sisters as the undergraduate coeds of 1947, which finds approximately 1,000 women students, 110 of them veterans, enrolled at Chapel Hill.

The fathers and mothers of the Carolina coeds of today shouldn't worry too much about whether their daughter is getting enough supervision at the University. The positive answer is that she is.

Dr. Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women, receives enough letters, however, to indicate that many families do not know that each of the regular undergraduate women's dormitories has a hostess and a graduate counselor and that each incoming coed is assigned a carefully selected undergraduate student counselor, who is responsible for the orientation, adjustment and guidance of the new woman student.

In addition to the dormitory hostesses there are four assistant hostesses and 50 student advisers who are chosen from the seniors and graduate students. The job of the advisors is to provide a guidance program for the new girls, and they ought to be able to do a good job, for no adviser is assigned more than eight girls and some have only three.

General Assembly Agrees in Voting On War Publicity

Lake Success, Nov. 3—(UP)—The United Nations General assembly tossed aside its differences today in a rare demonstration of agreement to vote unanimously for the resolution that condemns all war propaganda and calls on all members to promote publicity for peace.

In another part of the world organization, however, disagreement still reigns between the United States and Russia which threatens to endanger U.N. plans for Palestine. The American-Soviet disagreement hinges on the questions of just how and when the Holy Land should be partitioned.

Russia has proposed that the U.N. council take over Palestine January 1, divide it into Jewish and Arab states, and grant full independence by the end of 1948.

The United States had suggested that the British pull out of the Holy Land July 1 and that the Arab and Jewish states receive independence at the same time. The American proposal also called for a three-man commission of the General assembly to act solely as advisors to the two states.

The Russian plan submitted today to a U.N. subcommittee on Palestine met with immediate United States criticism. An American delegate warned that the idea of the Security council controlling Palestine is so unsatisfactory to the United States that it might lead to the failure of all partition proposals.

The spokesman said that the small nations would object to giving new duties to the Security council where the veto can be used.

Phi Assembly Airs Parking Situation In Meeting Tonight

Mr. Ed Lanier, Director of Central Records office, will address the Phi assembly tonight at 9 o'clock in the Phi hall, fourth floor New East, when the Chapel Hill traffic problem comes before the debaters.

Opposing the establishment of parking meters and the elimination of overnight parking as proposed by the Board of Alderman, the bill to be introduced favors other solutions to the problem. Among these are a 30 minute parking limit in the business district, an additional traffic officer, rigid enforcement of present traffic laws, and elimination of the U turn in front of the Post Office.

Preceding the debate, the Phi will hold a candlelight ceremony for the initiation of new members into the assembly. New initiates are James Marlin Stanley, Pilot Mountain; Ernest House, Marion; Charles Dixon, Belmont; David Sharpe, Chapel Hill; William Duncan, Narbeth, Pa.; Frank Giraffe, Southington, Conn.; Ruth Nelson Bradley, Forest City; James Browne, Wilmington; Mintie Cantrell, Etowah, Tenn., Emily Baker, Asheville; Herman Sieber, Hendersonville, and Douglas Carter, Winston-Salem.

Atom Scientists Set Program Thursday

A group of nationally prominent atomic scientists from the Oak Ridge and Manhattan projects will conduct a program on this vital subject Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall. The meeting is being sponsored by the Association of Carolina Scientists and the Carolina Chapter of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

Main speaker of the evening will be Prof. Oscar K. Rice, physical chemist and member of the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers. Dr. Rice is an advisory board member of the Federation of American Scientists.

The speech will be followed by an open forum at which scientists and physicists will present their individual views on the social significance of atomic energy control. Discussion of atomic security measures promises to be a major highlight of the program. Among those who will attack all phases of the current atomic energy problem will be Dr. Joseph W. Straley, secretary of the Association of North Carolina Scientists; Dr. Nathan Rosen, associate professor of Physics at UNC, who served during the war with the Navy's Atomic Energy project; Dr. Paul E. Shearin, chairman of the physics dept.; Dr. W. A. Bowers, who worked with the Manhattan project at Los Alamos during 1944-46; and Dr. Fred T. Rogers, former head of Physics research at the U. S. Naval Ordnance Plant at Indianapolis.

The Association of Carolina Scientists is strongly cooperating with CCUN's educational program of presenting topics of current interest to the general public, and the program promises to be of unusual interest.

WSSF Begins Campus Drive

Following Sunday night's Valkyrie Carnivale, the World Student Service fund activity next on the calendar is the Carolina student's date to take a foreign student to dinner, tomorrow at noon.

Baptist Student Union's social action committee, headed by Don Broad, will station its members in Lenioir hall, the NC cafeteria, and the Carolina Inn cafeteria, and as each student passes through the line he will be asked to pay double the price of his own meal, the extra charge going to WSSF.

Candidates Introduced

Nineteen candidates for the title of Miss Payoff were introduced Sunday night at the Valkyrie Carnivale in Memorial hall. Wayne Thompson acted as master of ceremonies, and Roy Cole's orchestra furnished music.

Progress of the candidates will be displayd, throughout the week on a billboard in the Y court, and votes will be sold in the Y lobby and at the Battle of Bands dance Saturday night in Woollen gym.

In the Race

Candidates introduced were Tenn Mason, sponsored by Alderman; Sara Farlow, Alpha Delta Pi; Beckie Holton, Alpha Gamma Delta; Jean Marie Lester, Alpha Tau Omega; Sally Ann Cordon, Archer house; Elizabeth Thomas, CICA; Joan Lucas, Chi Phi; Babs deWitt, Delta Delta Delta.

PHILOSOPHY CLUB

Philosophy students and all persons interested in the subject are invited to attend an organizational meeting of a philosophy club Thursday night, Warren Ashby, instructor in philosophy, announced yesterday. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Election Petitions Close Noon Today

Nomination petitions for freshman and junior class officers must be filed by noon today to qualify candidates for the election, according to latest information received from the Board of Elections.

Petitions must be signed by 25 members of the class from which the nominee comes, and in addition must be signed by the person being nominated.

The election will be held next Tuesday, in compliance with the act passed by last Thursday's Student Legislature meeting.

Arnold Nash Talk Scheduled Tonight

Dr. Arnold Nash, the prominent theologian who recently joined the faculty as head of the Department of Religion, will speak to the married students and graduates of the Methodist Church tonight at 7 o'clock. His topic will be, "The Absurdity of Christianity."

This group of older students meets every other Tuesday for a supper and discussion program, and is sponsored by the Wesley Foundation. Married couples and graduates of all denominations are welcome at all times. Parents may obtain free baby-sitting service through the cooperation of the Y. W. C. A. by telephoning Mr. Nelson's office, 6287.

'Hey How U' Days Will Begin Today

"Hey, how U?" the traditional campus greeting, has been turned into a better relations campaign sponsored today and tomorrow by the University club to promote renewal of friendly greetings among students.

Tags bearing "Hey, how U" and a space for the wearer's name will be distributed today by University club representatives in all dormitories, fraternities, and sororities, and also will be handed out in the Y court during today and tomorrow morning.

The University club, made up of representatives of all organizations on the campus, regularly sponsors pep rallies, football caravans, and extra school spirit campaigns such as the "Hey, how U" program beginning today.

Government Checks Prove Choice Morsel For Hungry Veterans in Quonset Area

By John Stump

That starving Europeans have little on checkless UNC veterans was the news over the week-end from all corners of the Carolina campus. Cigarette haze was much less dense over the Quonset hut areas as the end of an expensive week-end and that last smoke before the checks come in arrived together.

Three typical cases were Richard Veasey, Bill Walker, and Bob Walsh who found themselves up against it after a foodless Sunday that would have done the Luckman committee's hearts good. However, about 6:30, they finally succeeded in borrowing $5 from "generous Jim" Kelly, hut area manager and, joined by this hungry reporter, hit for Lenoir hall on the double.

"It's been a rough day" was Walsh's opinion about 10 minutes later as he wolfed down the last bite of his first meal in 24 hours. Evidence was not lacking from various sources that many others had had it just as hard as Walsh and his buddies.

Campus veterans asked to make meagre funds last over five weeks before receiving their first VA assistance of the current school year have been feeling the pinch for several days past. However, relief had arrived last night according to J. R. Webb local superintendent of mails who announced that almost all of the checks had been delivered yesterday.

He explained that a combination of the fact that the local postoffice makes no afternoon deliveries on Saturdays and the failure of the checks to arrive in Chapel Hill until 10:30 Saturday morning was responsible for the delay in local distribution. "Ordinarily we deliver them on the first of the month, but we were just not able to do so this time," he said.

Some few allegedly born under a lucky star had received theirs on Saturday, but generally speaking the week-end was spent on borrowed money if not on borrowed time.

MUSIC RECITALS

Studio recitals will replace the weekly student recital Wednesday afternoon in Hill hall, it was announced yesterday. All students taking applied music should consult their teachers as to time and place of their recitals.

Kickapoo Joy Juice and All the Trimmings To Engulf Campus on Friday's Dogpatch Day

By Roland Giduz

If Carolina gentlemen, gone Dogpatch for the day, don't like Ole Man Mose's Sadie Hawkins day predictions Friday, they can go drown their sorrows in some of Lonesome Polecat's Kickapoo Joy Juice. For starting off SH day festivities at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, these two carefree characters right out 'of Li'l Abner, will be in the Y court peddling their respective wares.

In addition to bringing to life these two figments of comic artist Al Capp's imagination, the Sadie Hawkins day committee has promised an old-time exhibition of true Dogpatch square dancing, to be presented in complete costume by the boys who should know all about it, the Western North Carolina club.

Tentative Program

Mike Loftus, chairman of the day's festivities, yesterday announced a tentative final program. Meeting of all members of Loftus' committee will be held in Parker lounge No. 1 of Graham Memorial this afternoon to complete the day's plans.

The Dogpatch Fortescue-Phogbound band, composed of "two dozen-odd characters," will lead off the Grand Parade from the Y court at 1:30. Entries for floats in the parade should be registered with Butchie Daniels, Spencer dormitory, as soon as possible. Going around the block through the business district, floats in the parade will be judged by a secret committee, and a valuable prize awarded to the best.

Everyone planning to participate in the Human Race Friday afternoon is requested to sign up today or tomorrow at the CICA registration table in the Y lobby. Also, men who wish to be picked up for the Grand Ball that evening, and women escorts, are requested to register immediately.

"Feetsball" Game

Following around Columbia street, the Grand Parade will proceed directly to Fetzer field for gala "feetsball game" between members of the Monogram club. Captain for Fortescue U. will be Tommy Hearn, star Tar Heel matman, while basketball's "Mr. Rebound" Bob Paxton is scheduled to lead the loyal grid charges of Phogbound U.

Right after the ball game slaughter comes the race for life, the Human Race, on the intramural field above Fetzer stadium. Execution ceremonies of marriage and a number of games for "happy" newlyweds will be run off at this time.

Though the entire student body is requested to dress Dogpatch style for the entire program, beginning at 1 o'clock, this mountaineer costume will be mandatory for admission to the grand ball in the evening.

The Alumni Association requests that exhibits for Saturday's Homecoming football game be erected on a Sadie Hawkins motif.

'Common Glory' Is Subject Of Green Address Tomorrow

Paul Green, resident playwright and Pulitzer Prize winner, will discuss "The Common Glory," his most recent of American symphonic dramas, at a Bull's Head bookshop tea tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. N. B. Adams, hostess at the teas, made the announcement yesterday.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the University mathematics department and a close friend of the playwright since Green began work with the Carolina Playmakers in 1919, will introduce the dramatist.

"The Common Glory" is the third in a series of symphonic dramas depicting historical events in America's progress. The drama opened at Williamsburg, Va., for its first summer run last July and will open each year hereafter. The production follows "The Highland Call" and "The Lost Colony" in the line of historical folk dramas which Green has written and hopes to write about the nation's development.

PAUL GREEN

Mrs. Adams expressed a wish that students arrive early in order to assure themselves of seats. Green's presence at a Bull's Head tea, said Mrs. Adams, always means a capacity crowd. The tea will be held in the staff room next door to the bookshop, on the ground floor of the University library.

UVA To Entertain Alderman at Dance

Continuing their policy of holding open house for the various women's dormitories, the University Veteran's Association will entertain Alderman Dorm tonight at 8:30.

Members of the escort committee, and those desiring to serve on the committee have been asked to meet at the club at 8:15 before leaving for Alderman. The association announced that all veterans, whether members or not are invited to attend.

Leave It to Justice

The Raleigh local of the painters' union soon may be picketing students of N. C. State college, some of whom now are the targets of the finger of guilt.

For red indeed is the color seen by Carolina students yesterday morning as the Crimson letters of N. C. S. were blotched conspiciously at seven Chapel Hills posts.

To the Monogram club went most of the vandals' attention as they plied their "artistic" efforts on four large pillars and the door of the clubhouse. Also besmeared was a sign before the Institute of Government's Highway Patrol training area and Quonset hut No. eight. Residents of the quonset hut quickly erased the painted prank.

It is impossible for Carolina students to control the antics of thoughtless vandals bent on the destruction of property. But it is possible for them to avoid participation in pranks of this nature.

Action has been taken by President Tom Eller and representatives of Duke to avoid action of this order during the Duke-UNC week of rivalry. Commendable as this is, University student officials may be charged with being unable to see the forest for the trees. There would seem to be no reason for not taking similar action with the State-UNC contest looming Saturday.

Perhaps it is not yet too late should campus leaders bestir themselves to contact State by telephone today.

But until this is done, the Daily Tar Heel is flinging to the student body an admonition to refrain from retaliation. Already retribution has been considered by some students. Although it is trite to point it out, this is a childish whim.

Mature, world-wise students can look askance upon vandalism, can save their energies and enthusiasm for the game Saturday when Justice may take his course.

A Hollywood Colonel Talks Politics

A Hollywood scout may have picked him for a southern colonel. He was fat, paunchy —a loudmouth, but what he said was of little importance. His collar turned up on the ends. His bow tie wilted badly and a "twofur" cigar unrolled in a corner of his mouth. He was seated on the 40-yard line at the Wake Forest vs Carolina game.

It was evident that he was dissatisfied. He swore at the players and bit off the end of his stogie. He shouted, "The Silver Fox is nothing but a stinking rat." Justice, according to his way of thinking, wasn't even good enough to play with his son on a sandlot. The game ran its course, and the colonel gave both his bottle and the team hell. He ran the gamut—the team was rotten, the water boy could move faster if he had crutches, even Rameses wasn't good enough to be present. As the game advanced, his profane remarks grew in number and his anger became more intense. He became furious, his cheeks were puffy, a slight pout was on his lips. He stomped his feet and his wife's efforts to try to calm him were not successful. The team annoyed him and he took it out on the other spectators seated in the vicinity.

The Wake Forest machine continued to grind out more scores. We thought that the man had exhausted his vocabulary. Then something happened which increased the flow—Wake Forest pulled a play which resulted in a touchdown. The play was called back by the officials because of a penalty against the Wake Forest eleven. The Hollywood-type colonel shouted, "You damned *!?& put out a foul team and now you have to pay the referees to try and win a ball game." He got up, waved his arms in the air and make a remark that was intended as a death blow. "You (blankety-blank) nigger lovers."

We happened to see the same old colonel after the Tennessee game Saturday. He was beaming. We diagnosed his condition as that of pleasure and a bulging pocket. He had his hat off and we could see that his silver hair had recently been plastered down with water.

The colonel was involved in a conversation with a stocky, jovial young man with a neatly-trimmed moustache. Their voices were such that they were inaudiable until the conversation changed. Then—"Well, I hate the very ground they walk on. In the army for nearly four years I learned all of their scheming practices. You know I was in army intelligence and . . . ." The young, jovial man listed all of the places he was assigned as an agent to keep an observing eye on communist activities and to track down information.

The conversation naturally developed into a discussion of the communist here in Chapel Hill. Both the colonel and the young ex-intelligence officer despised communism and regretted that it had to happen in Chapel Hill. But the jovial, young man, who had observed communism in many countries, expressed the opinion that in this country there are no statutes to prevent Communism and therefore communists are entitled to their personal beliefs.

The young man then broke into a soliloquy which lasted for several minutes. He told the old-timer that as much as he hated the communist for their seemingly totalitarian government which was, to his way of thinking, detrimental to the American way of life, he did not deny them the privilege of their personal beliefs just because their ideology did not concur with his. It was very impressive; his speech was enough to convince anyone to his way of thinking.

You could tell by the amazed look on the old man's face that the speel had an effect on him.

He turned to the ex-intelligence officer and bellowed, "You communist."

There was much more activity there, but we moved on. Each was set in his convictions.

The people of Europe are not taking their own situation seriously enough and are not working hard enough—or at least as hard as the people of the United States.—Rep. John Taber (R-NY).

'Time' Was Wrong

WFDY Not Communist Front

(Editor's note: This concludes a series of three articles by Mrs. Scales which presents her views on the world youth festival which she attended this summer in Prague.)

By Vera Scales

Our American delegation to the World Youth festival consisted of 200 young people from 53 colleges and 20 organizations. We felt, as we had never felt before, the importance of our being at the festival with the young people of the rest of the world—the youth who had just survived the most terrible war of all history and who now had come together by thousands in search of international friendship and understanding, in order that there may be a lasting peace.

The Time magazine article of Aug. 11 came as a particular shock to us because we were so deeply convinced of the necessity of the cooperation of world youth. The brief and strongly slanted account in Time appeared while the festival was still in progress and stated that we "had a serious task in Prague—the revival (in disguise) of the Young Communist International" and that our program was "prepared by Otto Katz (alias Andre Simone), a well-known MVD agent."

We were so astonished that the leaders of our delegation went down to see the Time reporter in Prague to ask the source of this story. The reporter was as amazed as we were over the story. Yes, she said she had sent in a story of the festival, but it was nothing like the one which appeared. She was very apologetic and unable to give us any idea of where the story originated. Afterwards we tried to find out from the other delegations who was this Katz, alias Simone, and his role in the festival, but no one had ever heard of him. It was suggested that he might be Simone Simone's big brother, but you can't prove it by me.

As to the charges of the revival of the Young Communist International, I do not believe it to be so. The organization sponsoring the festival was the World Federation of Democratic Youth, an organization with a membership of 48,000,000 young people representing 35 nations. It has recently been granted consultative status by the United Nation's Economic and Social Council. There is no secret about the WFDY. . .youth from all countries, Communist and otherwise, participate freely in this organization. In a world where communist and non-communist countries must learn to live together in peace, the WFDY believes that international friendship and respect require just such cooperation.

There were 230 young British conservatives in the British delegation, and after the festival was over these conservatives voted to affiliate their organization to the WFDY. Can you believe that the young British Tories have been duped into joining even a disguised Communist international?

The only words mentioned in the Time story about the American exhibition at the festival was "It prominently displayed a picture of a lynched Southern Negro." When I returned home my friends asked me why our only exhibit was a large picture of a lynching. Time did it again. Truth to tell is that 30 cultural, religious, educational and political youth organizations contributed to the exhibition. There were about 10 walls in our exhibition: one with photographs of modern dance, another giving the religious programs of church youth groups, a wall of modern art, the actual musical scores written by young American composers were presented, photographs of the modern theater and others. One of the 30 organizations chose to present as part of its exhibit a graphic essay on the fight of American youth against racial discrimination and injustice. The lynching picture was one of many used to illustrate this theme.

While returning home on the SS Radnik the American delegation had several weeks to reflect and discuss our experiences of the trip. We were agreed that in order to bring about the understanding and friendship that I mentioned above, American youth should affiliate and work with the WFDY and other international youth groups in order that we may do our share to keep a lasting peace.

The Earl of Carolina

Game Antics Must Be Stemmed

By Earl Heffner

Beer old Eddison B. Allen, more widely known as Eddie, the enterprising peer of North Carolina sports scribes whose penchant for word creation is equalled only by his capacity for suds, shared with me last Saturday evening, the plaudits of N. C. State Wolfpack fans.

It was a chilly evening, but we were filled with the warmth of golden malt, were intoxicated with the joy of watching Rodgers earn Hosanahs and Choo Choo Justice hitting the rails again in the Tennessee tasty triumph. Accepting the invite of Ed Story, sports publicist of State College, we rolled off for Riddick stadium to view the Wolfpack machinations as they avoided the Notre Dame shifty fangs of Chattanooga's Mocassins.

Emerging later from the Storied field house office of the publicist, we crossed through a State end zone, eel-hipped our way forward to the goal line where Allen, tucking his portable galloping notebook under his arm emulated Jim Thorpe in a mad dash to the 20-yard stripe under the escort of pseudo blockers Story and Heffner. There a jarring body block by Bud Weiser tossed us out of bounds.

Filled with the thrill of football and High Life, we crept up the steps to the concrete stadium, there stood on the pinnacle of success as Cow college fans rose to their feet and rent the air with cheers. Drunk with success, we stood and drank in the glory that was ours—and the N. C. State football teams which, incidently was just racing onto the gridiron.

Basking in our glory!

Then we went on up to the press box, were content to leave to the Wolfpack, the plaudits of the fans. Ours was the pleasant fate to watch another football game, in company with other men of the writing fraternity. And a goodly game it was of clean, precision football.

But it was marred—as was the Clemson-State contest—by the damning, unsportsman-like Southern imitation of bronx cheers which unthinking State students shed on the ears of game officials.

Next Saturday, State and Carolina shall meet in Kenan stadium.

So far, Eller-led student government officials have concentrated on eliminating before they occur the vandalism which frequently mars the Carolina-Duke meetings. As yet, I have heard of no efforts to stem pregame antics for the State contest.

Like the warriors of Athens and Sparta of old Greece, the brothers State and Carolina fight bitterly between themselves.

Yet, the game itself is ever marked by clean, hard play. The sometime viciousness is practiced by the fans—the students—not the players.

It behooves the Carolina student body to take cognizance of the potential danger which accompanies this grid festivity, to gird itself against any regretable eventuality.

A UNC once again caught in the welter of Communistic charges resulting from the unearthing of our Communist cell can ill-afford to leave itself open for attacks concerning detrimental conduct by its student body at a football game.

Carolina Carousel

Community Chest Bill Passes

By R. Foo Giduz

Long about the second quarter Saturday a guy behind us expressed it just about right: "Why, we've got more first downs than Tennessee's gained yardage." ...And so right he was! Maybe you didn't notice it but Carolina made 19 first downs, and Tennessee totaled only 11 yards net rushing.

It's never been chronicled in DTH news columns somehow, but the campus community chest bill, four-times discussed on the Legislature floor, finally passed unanimously in its tamest possible form last Thursday night. ....Bill sets up a Legislature committee to regulate all campus drives this year, and investigate and gather information on a campus community chest for next year. After they report their findings next spring, concrete and final decision on Campus-Chest-or-not should (we hope) be made. (P. S.: Campus Chest campaign is in full swing at the University of Texas now going strong in it's first week, with nine organizations participating, and a goal of $25,000.)

Razzberry (That's a mild term for it!) of the week to: (1) State college students who initiated acts of vandalism here Saturday night. (2) Student government leaders for their failure to include NC State student leaders in the recent anti-vandalism conferences held here recently with Dook. .... They're as much to blame for their absolutely neglecting to try to prevent this obviously explosive hotbed of bad sportsmanship as are the thoughtless NCStaters. ..Any more acts like this can kill the Tar Heel-N.C. State football series for keeps.

Sign of the times: Though strictly a panel discussion group ordinarily, the CPU polled itself informerly after a long discussion on capital punishment Sunday evening, and discovered they were a resounding 17-4 against this measure.....

And on a pertinent question of the moment, Tom Bost, writing in Sunday's state papers, struck home with us on his sentiments concerning the present Commie commotion: "To be sure it is a little disconcerting to think of Governor Alfred Moore Scales' (N.C. Governor, 1884) grandson fellowshipping with the Communists....But right here in North Carolina we had Chief Justice Walter Clark and his son David Clark; and vinegar and soda dwelling placidly in the same bottle would have nothing on that.. Mr. Junius Scales is a Communist, but that isn't very important and it certainly isn't so terribly interesting."

Learns About Democracy

To The Editor:

During recent weeks I have learned the meaning of the word "democracy" — at least The Daily Tar Heel definition. A gentleman named Thomas Jefferson, however, defined democracy in a different manner, he said:

"It is to be lamented that any of our citizens, not thinking with the mass of the nation as to the principles of our government, or its administration, and seeing all its proceedings with a prejudiced eye, should so misconceive and misrepresent our situation as to encourage aggressions from foreign nations . . . . we must meet it as an evil necessarily flowing from that liberty of speaking and writing which guards our other liberties."

In the same breath The Daily Tar Heel would have us ban the Communist Party, establish complete civil liberties in the South for all people, and arm for war — obviously against Russia — which presupposes the impossibility of a lasting peace. It rails against the Communists for being an underground organization, and then against Mr. Scales for declaring himself a Communist.

Even the yellowist journalists would not say, "A replica of his sly, and oily reply," as you did in today's editorial. As for a blow to the University, you, rather than Scales, have struck it.

Deviating from the theme of this letter for a minute, I should like to point out that a study of history will show you two things: 1. Communism thrives more when it is underground than when it is open, and, 2. As yet the Communist party is still a legal organization in this country and our constitution has always given us the right to free speech and thought.

Although I too abhor the idea of communism, Mr. Scales has come out of the current action a far bigger figure than has your staff. In his declaration he showed courage, though he may have had a motive other than courage or honesty. Your name calling and mud slinging is childish, and merely serves to enhance your intended victim.

Would Admit DP's

Dear Sir:

That the Zionists' despairing yearning to return to Palestine from all over the world is a measure of man's inhumanity to man by no means obscures the facts that: (1) they or their ancestors forfeited their individual rights of residence there by leaving of their own free will; (2) the Balfour declaration was only one of many promises and counterpromises some recklessly wild and wooly —made openly and secretly by the Allies and Central powers under the stress of desparate conditions during the First World War; (3) it is m e a l y-mouthed, let-John-do-it political talk to make statements in favor of Palestine immigration and simultaneously take no steps temporarily to increase immigration quotas of this country. Personally I would be glad to sign a petition that Congress immediately admit several hundred thousand Zionists and other D. P. 's to this country before their condition becomes even more pitiful.

Sadie Was Lost

Sir:

I want to tell you how I lost my Sadie. Just a little sunlight came over the trees as we sat outside a hole in the rocks — obviously the entrance to an animal's den.

"I'm a foxhunter," said Sadie, "and if there's anything I can't stand it's a sly, dissembling fox which always stays underground or hides in a cave."

Just then a handsome little fox walked out of the hole and looked us squarely in the eye and said in a dignified manner, "I'm a fox."

It was so dark I could no longer see Sadie, who had been hiding behind a tree all the time; but I said to her, "Well, you can't be mad at him any more. He came out, didn't he?"

I was surprised to her Sadie's voice from above. She had climbed the tree in fright, and she screamed down, "Oh it's a real fox! I'm frightened. Isn't he oily looking? The fact that he was hiding up until now proves to me that he can't be trusted."

I retorted, "You wanted him to come out, didn't you?"

No answer. She had climbed so high I couldn't see her. I have since heard from a bluejay friend of mine that she is living in the trees now all the time. That was the way I lost my Sadie. Her name was Winfoot — Sadie Winfoot. What a woman!

VIRILE VIRGINIANS

It may be a little early in the month to start thinking about a football game four weeks off, especially with such grid playmates as N. C. State, Maryland, and Duke coming up before then. Nevertheless, we'd like to arouse a little interest in the final scrap on Carolina's 1947 card—against a band of Cavalier gentlemen from Virginia.

It seems that these virile Virginians have steamrolled six straight opponents and are seriously entertaining Orange Bowl hopes. That these six opponents could not collectively field one team as good, for example, as Tennessee appears of little consequence. The Cavaliers have rolled up a total of 222 points in these weekly breathers against a sum of 38 for the opposition. Maybe Virginia does have a powerhouse anyway, but playing George Washington, VPI, VMI, Richmond, et al doesn't exactly prove it.

At any rate, the Cavaliers are looking forward to a certain date at the end of November, the 29th to be exact. For on that day, so they say, Virginia is planning a hot time for Carolina. As proof of this, we've received from several students on the campus a poem written by a Virginia alumnus, William D. Hart, Jr., now a member of the editorial staff of the New York Sun. The literary effort of Mr. Hart ran in the Richmond Times-Dispatch two weeks ago and we think it's worth a little space in this column:

"ODE TO THE TARHEELS"

"T was early in September, in the land of Caroline,
And the Tarheels were a-braggin' 'bout their football team so fine.
Yes they talked of taking Georgia, sweeping o'er the Lone Star State,
And brushing past Wake Forest—keeping clean their victory slate.

But now 'tis mid-October, things are not so bright and gay.
For the Longhorns bowled you over, and the Deacons made you pray.
And your visions of the Sugar Bowl are but a distant dream.
For Camp and Pupa falter, and old Choo Choo's lost his steam.

And the harder knocks are coming when the leaves are turning brown,
For the Cavaliers are humming and they'll soon be dropping down.
Oh, we've paid our little visits, and you've come to see us too,
And Virginia has been kicked around, until she's black and blue.

But now another season—we are oiling up the 'T'
And there's quite a cause for believin' that our team is on a spree.
For we've Papit, Brown and Bailey, and our fullback, Grover Jones,
And Weir and Kirkland in the line—uncompromising stones.

We faced a mighty Harvard crew, they called it Harlow's best,
And when at last the game was through, we sent him home distressed.
Our linemen opened yawning gaps, our backs just galloped through,
The Yankees fought, but took their raps. 'Bull Run' their 'Waterloo.'

We've other games we have to play, but comes our greatest thrill
When we can turn our heads your way, and face you, Chapel Hill.
And so some bleak November morn, you'll hang your haughty head,
To know at last a 'Tarheel born' becomes a 'Tarheel BLED.'

And on our wide majestic lawn a victory toast we'll sip,
While 'Good Old Song of Wah-hoo-wah' springs forth from every lip.
And down in Carolina, you will hold us in esteem,
For the Cavaliers are finer and old Choo-Choo's lost his steam."

CALLING ALL POETS

Naturally there's no arguments as to the literary merits of Mr. Hart's poem. We won't even bother to point out exceptions to some of his facts, save to mention that the "mighty Harvard crew" was "edged" this past week, 31-7, by Rutgers. But what point we do wish to make is that there must be some budding poets here at Carolina who are capable of turning out a similar masterpiece.

Which brings us to our contest proposition. The Daily Tar Heel will offer two Virginia tickets near the 50-yard line to the author of the best poem answering Mr. Hart. Judges will be Editor-in-Chief Barron Mills and the two sports editors, with Athletic Director Bob Fetzer serving in an honorary capacity.

With the big game coming up on November 29, it will be necessary for all entries to reach the sports office by November 20.

CRYSTAL-GAZING STAR

A new star rose over the predictions horizon the past weekend to compete with Williamson, Snider, and all the other prognosticators. The new luminary was Morty Schaap, who connected on 17 games out of 20, missing only one upset and two ties. This sensational crystal-gazing moved the "Shadow" up in the standings from fourth place to second, only one game behind leader Bill Lamkin, who scored 14.

Billy Carmichael's ouija board showed signs of snapping out of its slump by coming through on 13. Jake Wade and yours truly brought up the rear with 12. The Williamson system was good on 11.

The standings after six weeks and 120 games of picking:

	W	L	Pct.	GB
Bill Lamkin	76	44	.633	—
Morty Schaap	75	45	.625	1
Jake Wade	73	47	.608	3
Bob Goldwater	71	49	.592	5
Billy Carmichael	64	56	.533	12

Local Booters May Play Roanoke Team Thursday Afternoon

Roanoke college's soccer team will honor local fans with an appearance on Fetzer field Thursday afternoon if Coach Marvin Allen's current negotiations with the mountaineer athletic office are successfully concluded.

As of last night, nothing definite had been heard from the Maroon bigwigs but Coach Allen disclosed that he expected definite word from them sometime today.

This is the first year that the Virginians have fielded a soccer team so the proposed contest should not prove too difficult a barrier for the Allenmen to surmount.

There was no scheduled practice for the Tar Heel booters yesterday afternoon for Coach Allen was in Durham checking up on the condition of the injured Basil Jackson. Jackson is recuperating in Watts Hospital from last week's Duke tilt. the broken leg he suffered in Coach Allen disclosed that the cast had to be partially removed from Jackson's leg to reduce a swelling condition which had set in, so it appears now that Jackson will be confined to his bed for some time.

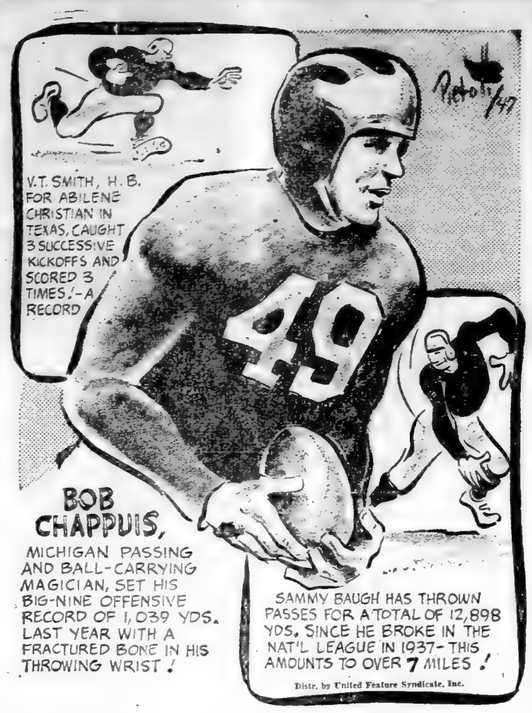
About a dozen Blue and White faithfuls were in uniform yesterday afternoon seeking to improve their passing in front of the goal. The Carolina offense was rather ragged against Virginia last Friday and apparently the Tar Heel players were out to improve it at their own initiative.

This week the Tar Heels will be working out with one eye peeled for the return tilt with Duke in Durham on Wednesday, November 12. Allen disclosed that he intended to stress the offense in this week's drills.

Coed Stickmen Face Meredith



The coed hockey team opens its season this afternoon at 4:30 when the local lassies entertain Meredith college on Emerson field.

Instructed by Miss Frances Burns, the Carolina girls have been holding practices for several weeks and appear in good shape for the tilt. Captain Scotty Dellinger will lead the team into action.

The starting lineup will have Dellinger, Carmen Satterfield, Marshall Spears. Becky Holton. and Gray Simpson at the forward positions. Halfbacks will be Betty Ann Cooper, Bill Lloyd and Lib Browning, while Janet Crinkley and Butch Goodwin will be at the fullback berths. The goalie will be Nancy Tucker.

Cage Drills Enter Fourth Hard Week

Coach Tom Scott began another week of basketball practice yesterday afternoon, as the 37 survivors of some 100-odd candidates got down to the hard work of preparing

DKE, Chi Psi, Grads, Beta Remain Unbeaten

Slipping and sliding along on the wet University playing fields yesterday afternoon, four unbeaten teams added more laurels to their cause in the intramural tag football program.

Undefeated, untied, and unscored on DKE No. 1 led the victory parade and swept to the fraternity league No. 3 championship by downing Zeta Psi No. 2, 13-0, as the final week of mural play got underway. In league four, the Chi Psi gridders continued along their unbeaten path with a 13-0 triumph over Kap Sig No. 2 while Beta shutout ATO, 13-0, in the same league.

The champion of league four will be determined today when Chi Psi tangles with Beta in the fight for the crown.

Today is the last day campus organizations may enter teams in the intramural volleyball and table tennis programs. Play is scheduled to begin on Thursday, Nov. 6.

In the dormitory circuit, the Grads remained unbeaten at they trounced the Wesley Rockets by a 25-0 score. Frank Murray and Don Calloway accounted for scores in the contest.

The victorious DKE team was led by Tom Crudup and John Meade, who tallied the Dekes' two touchdowns. Passes by Tom Clayton to Joe Procter and Vic Seixas gave Chi Psi their two scores while Bill Herr and W. G. Shelton crossed the goal line for Beta. for the December 3rd opener.

Coach Scott lent his personal attention to his 20-man varsity squad, while Jim "Pappy" Hamilton handled the jayvee team which has been cut to 17.

The majority of the afternoon was devoted to teaching new hands the Scott system or style of play, with the returning squadsmen serving as instructors and freshen their own memories as to the intricacies of the attack. The rest of the workout covered three-on-two drills and other basic combinations.

The cage drills will continue every afternoon at four o'clock on the Woollen floor.

Carolina Gridsters Prepare For Loop Tilt With Wolfpack

Tar Heels To Rule As Favorites In First Duel of Teams Since '43

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's gridders turn their attentions to Southern conference competition this week following a successful two-week stand against teams from the Southeastern conference, and the Tar Heels' battle with N. C. State in Kenan Satdium on Saturday is shaping up as one of the tightest and most spirited games of the season.

The annual meeting between the two branches of the greater University of North Carolina in Raleigh and Chapel Hill is being resumed this year for the first time since 1943, when a Navy V-12 powered Carolina eleven marked up a 28-13 triumph over the Wolfpack.

The series was discontinuedfollowing that game, partly because the war had depleted State of its football talent while Carolina could draw from the ranks of the Navy unit training in Chapel Hill and partly because the rivalry between the two student bodies had grown to such proportions that university officials no longer considered it advisable for the two brother institutions to meet on the football field.

Fans Like Game

At any rate popular demand for the game has returned it, and some 43,000 fans are expected to witness the resumption of hostilities on Saturday.

Both clubs had little trouble in disposing of their opponents this past Saturday, with teams from the state of Tennessee being the victims. The Tar Heels played a terrific first half to beat the Tennessee Vols, 20-6, while State ran over Chattanooga, 21-0.

Carolina's victory was its third of the season without loss to a Southeastern conference team, and Coach Carl Snavely's boys might more aptly lay claim to that loop's championship rather than to the Southern conference title.

Pre-Game Enthusiasm

In the State-Chattanooga game, there was little excitement for the 15,000 chilled spectators that evening, and the State students entertained themselves with such cheers as "Beat Carolina" and "Poor Choo Choo." The fact that on several occasions the State band played the Chattanooga alma mater, which is identical to Carolina's, added atmosphere to the impending Carolina-State fray.

The Wolfpack definitely will be fired up for this game, and Coach Snavely and his aids fully realize this. Carolina has been on the comeback trail for the last three weeks and nothing would suit the Blue and White gridders better than a win over State. In addition the game will be homecoming for all the Carolina grads.

Snavely sent the Tar Heel footballers through a light workout at Navy field yesterday afternoon, but the Carolina mentor is expected to step up the training pace today. Most of the regulars were in light togs as they listened to Snavely's plans for the Wolfpack.

Few Injuries

The team trainers reported that there were no serious injuries sustained by Carolina players against Tennessee other than a few bruises. All hands are expected to be ready for action against State.

Carolina probably will rate as a very slight favorite when game time rolls around. The men of Coach Snavely have scored 89 points thus far to 59 for the Wolfpack, but State more than offsets this by having held its opposition to a mere 14 points, while the foes of Carolina have been able to score 80 points. However, Carolina supporters point out that the Tar Heels have met a much more rugged schedule than has State.

State's record shows wins over Davidson, Clemson, and Chattanooga with losses to Duke and Florida. Carolina holds wins over Georgia, William and Mary, Florida, and Tennessee and losses to Texas and Wake Forest.

One of the extra coupons in the back of athletic passbooks will be used for admittance to the N. C. State game this Saturday, the athletic office announced yesterday.

The reason that the passbook contains no pass for the State game is that the contest, originally slated for Raleigh, was moved to Chapel Hill after the books were printed.

Coed Volleyball Tournament Ends Tonight

Three games tonight conclude the coed volleyball tournament for the fall quarter and the teams tied for the lead will battle for the championship in playoff contests starting Thursday.

The feature tussle of the evening comes off at 8:25, when the unbeaten Tri Delts take on McIver. A win for the sorority girls will enable them to gain the playoffs along with Chi Omega, Kenan, and Pi Phi.

The early games pit Archer against Spencer at 7:15 in a battle for the cellar and Alpha Gam against Town at 7:50. The winner of the latter tilt will tie for fifth place.

The playoffs will get under way with the semi finals Thursday. The tourney champion will be determined next Tuesday.

Frosh Runners Needed

Freshmen candidates are urgently needed for the cross country team as a meet is scheduled with State college for Saturday morning.

The meet will be run as a preliminary to the varsity meet with the Farmers as part of the homecoming festivities.

Dave Howard's Band Makes Debut Tonight In Rendezvous Room

Up and coming bandleader Dave Howard presents his rising eight-piece orchestra here tonight in his first campus appearance at the Rendezvous room, Manager Don English announced today.

Howard organized his band of swingsters at the beginning of the summer and opened in Macon, Ga. His first performance was of such quality that he was held over for a longer period. Howard's next engagement carried him through the rest of the summer at the Club Martinique in Martinsville, Va., where he was relieved at the opening of the University by the well known Billy Butterfield. While at the Club Martinique Howard's orchestra broadcast nightly over the Virginia air waves.

Of the eight musicians Howard will present tonight six will be natives of the old North State. Three are local lads, Dave Howard, Jim Crawford, both saxes, and Smitty Lineburger, bass, all of Chapel Hill. Eddie Seagle, drums, hails from Lincolnton; Jack Burney, piano, is from Charlotte; and Paul Johnson, sax, from Smithfield.

Out-of-staters will be Jim Earls, sax, and Cliff Doll, trumpet.

Phyllis Knight, Charlotte, co-ed thrush, will provide the female warbling for the Howard hotshots. Phyllis is well known on the campus having been one of the regular performers before the mike during the past year at many functions.

Stuhlman Speaks To Physics Club

Dr. Otto Stuhlman spoke last night to the undergraduate Physics club on the "Human Hearing Mechanism." Last night's session was one of the first of such events scheduled by the physics major's organization.

The club, which meets on the first and third Tuesdays of each month, organized for the new year at its meeting last week, and the following officers were elected: Robert Varwig, president; Edgar McLean, vice-president; James Bradford, secretary; and Malcolm Demurjian, treasurer.

MR. ABC

During the past two weeks over 100 students have been stopped and interviewed in the "Mr. ABC" program of the Liggett and Myers Tobacco company. Eaton Holden, Daily Tar Heel advertising assistant, and first student to act as "Mr. ABC" on October 22 reported nearly 25 per cent of the students he stopped were carrying Chesterfields, and thus were awarded one or two free packs.

Last week's "Miss ABC," Ferne Hughes, popular coed from Rainelle, West Va., said that nearly one-third of the fifty-odd students she approached were smoking or carrying Chesterfields.

"Mr. ABC" will be on the campus one unannounced day each week in this program.

GM CONCERT

Romantic composers' highlight tonight's Tuesday evening Graham Memorial chamber music concert, to be broadcast in the Horace Williams lounge from 8-10 o'clock.

The program consists of the following: Mozart, Sextette in F (Ein Musicalischer Spass); Beethoven, Quartet No. 8 (intermission); Schubert Quartet No. 6 in D minor ("Death and the Maiden).

HOUSING OFFICE SHIFT

The University Housing office is moving officially today to room 22 in the New East annex. J. E. Student Party To Meet Today

The Student party will hold an important meeting in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Chairman Bill Wood urges all party members to be present, since very important business will be discussed.

Wood also emphasized that it is the policy of the Student Party to have all meetings open and that anyone on campus who is interested in student government affairs is welcome to attend the session this afternoon.

Le Cercle Francais To Meet This Evening

La Cercle Francaise will convene this evening at 7:30 for its first fall meeting in the Caldwell "Y" annex of Caldwell hall. Plans for the coming school year will be taken up at this time.

All French students interested in eating together and talking French will meet at 5:45 Tuesday afternoon in the lobby of the Carolina Inn, and go into the cafeteria. Everyone interested in speaking and improving their French is invited to attend all functions of La Cercle Francaise.

PRE-REGISTRATION

Appointments for pre-registration meetings with general college advisors may be made beginning tomorrow in the lobby of Memorial hall. Lists will be available through Saturday noon of this week.

Appointments will begin, according to general college Dean Spruill, on Thursday of next week and will run through December 3.

'Madame Butterfly' Arrives Here Wednesday

Spurred on by rave notices from Birmingham, Knoxville, and Atlanta, the company of Charles L. Wagner's well-received production of "Madame Butterfly" is expected to arrive here on Wednesday afternoon for their engagement Wednesday night.

Bill Carmichael, member of the student entertainment committee which is sponsoring the event, said last night that tickets are moving rapidly, but that there are still a few left. The tickets are priced for $6.50 for the entire series which includes five other events. They are available at Ledbetter-Pickard's and the Playmaker offices in Swain Hall.

A few are also being sold at $2.50 for "Madame Butterfly" only, but this is considerably more than the series price. All persons interested in obtaining tickets in time for the first of the series were advised by Carmichael to "waste no time" in getting them.

The cast for Wagner's production, which has been called the best of his outstanding career, was also revealed yesterday by Carmichael. As previously announced, the title role of Madame Butterfly will be handled by Laura Castellano, talented young soprano.

Others featured in the All-star assemblage include Valfrido Patacchi, Robert Feyti, and Edward Nyborg. This list carries names which have been featured in more than 30 of the country's leading cities during the season's tour.

The opera is scheduled to be presented at 8:30 on Wednesday night in Memorial hall. Its cast will be supported by a complete orchestra and chorus with Edwin McArthur, the eminent conductor, on the podium. Colorful new settings and costumes have been designed for the production which is heralded by Jack McBride chairman of the sponsoring committee as the finest musical event which has ever appeared in Chapel Hill.

Tune in "Tar Heel Sports each afternoon at 1:20 o'clock over WDUK each Monday through Friday.

New Bill Initiated With Tax Slashes For Senate Vote

Washington, Nov. 4. (UP)—Another Republican attack on federal tax laws was launched today as a plan recommending cuts on both income and corporation taxes was presented to the House ways and Means committee.

The new plan maps out a long range tax program based on the idea of tax cuts in all income brackets. As presented to the Ways and Means committee, the plan would also reduce corporation taxes.

The plan was drawn up by nine members of a special tax advisory group headed by Roswell Magill, a former treasury official. Harold Knutson, chairman of the Ways and Means committee said the plan would be voted on by congress by next March 19.

The advisory group gave top priority to personal income tax cuts, with special consideration for the cost of living of those in low income groups.

Only one member of the advisory group disagreed with the majority proposal. Matthew Woll, a member of the A. F. of L. executive committee, filed a separate report, charging that the tax proposal is designed to lower tax burdens in the wealthy brackets at the expense of those in the lower income group.

In the meantime, Knutson, a Minnesota Republican ,will try to push through what he calls a "quickie" tax-cutting bill when the special session convenes on November 17.

Students Saved From One Hazard

University students, notoriously hard-pressed by high prices, long lines, and other such unappetizing features of life in the glorious post-war world, are currently having one hazard removed. For the University campus and grounds workmen are now engaged in seeing to it that the odds on an unsuspecting student being dropped dead by falling branches are lowered.

Yesterday, daring workmen swung Tarzan-like through the ancient oaks around the Old Well, amputating dead limbs, hoping to beat the high winter winds to the punch. A safety area was roped off around the working locality, but the ominous crack and crash of falling branches caused many a between-class scurrier to jump involuntarily just the same.

13 Cats Don't Count

NEW YORK (UP) — Miss Tillie T. Trager complained in court that her neighbor, Miss Marjorie Trevethan, had too many cats. Magistrate Frederick L. Strong postponed sentence after Miss Trevethan pleaded guilty to a violation of the sanitary code, but explained that she never had more than 13 cats in her apartment at one time.

Lillian DeArmon, Monogram club candidate for "Miss Payoff" in the current WSSF campaign, is shown being introduced to the student body by Len Szafaryn, president of the club, at the recent showing of the Florida-Carolina football game pictures in Memorial hall. Tickets for the "Miss Payoff" dance will go on sale in the Y today.

Charlie Long Reassumes Chairmanship Of Student Party Following Shakeup

A complete executive shakeup featured yesterday's meeting of the Student Party, its first since the recent special election. Charles O. Long, speaker pro-tem of the student legislature, was elected party chairman.

Long served as SP head during the summer but was succeeded in October by Bill Wood. Serving with Long in the new slate of officers are Charles Howe, vice-chairman; Margaret Goodman, secretary; and Gran Childress, business manager.

Members of the executive committee are Bill Mackie, chairman of the legislature finance committee; Jo Ann McNutt; Martha Aiken, Bill Jernigan, and Basil Sherrill, SP legislator.

Long's first action as chairman was to call a party meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Graham memorial's Roland Parker lounge. He set nominations for men's and women's legislature positions as a major item on the agenda, along with preliminary discussions on the party's platform in the December general campus election.

In a statement last night Long said: "We of SP intend to continue serving the student body as I believe the party has since coming to power last May. We point with pride to the revival of interest and initiative in student government under the present administration."

"Many long-standing problems, such as seating in Kenan stadium, have been met," Long declared; "but such items as fair student representation in the legislature and more recreational facilities for all dorm students remain as objectives for solution by the SP."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UP) — What's in a number? Plenty, one Birmingham firm contends. A cleaning and pressing establishment sued the telephone company for $3,000. The pressers claim that represented the amount lost when the company's telephone number was changed.

Cast of Wilde's Play Listed by Westover

The cast list and technical crews for Oscar Wilde's play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," which is being presented by the Laboratory Theatre of the Carolina Playmakers on November 23 and 24, in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial, was announced last night by A. E. "Buddy" Westover, director of the play.

Samples To Play Wathing

The role of John Wathing, J. P., is to be portrayed by M. David Samples of Joliet, Ill., and Frederick Johnson, Chico, California, is to play the part of Algernon Moncrieff. Catherine Covington, Portsmouth, Va., who appeared last summer in the Playmakers production of "The Late Christopher Bean," is to act the role of the dowager, Lady Bradwell.

The Rev. Dr. Chausble, a typical English rector, will be acted by W. P. Coyington, III, Winston-Salem, and the part of the fashionable city girl, Gwendoline Fairfax, will be played by Patricia Palmer, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Betty Jane Blalock, Winston-Salem, will appear in the role of Cecily Cardew, the country girl, and Eileen Smith, Asheville, will be seen as Miss Prism, a spinster school teacher. Murray McCain, Newport, in the role of Lane, and James Riley, West Palm Beach, Fla., as Merrimon, complete the cast.

For Trivial People

Oscar Wilde once called his "The Importance of Being Earnest" a "serious comedy for trivial people," but director Westover adds, "It is very, very much a comedy."

Betty Young, New York City, is stage managing the production, and James Riley is designing the settings. Lighting is being handled by Erle Hall, Nashville, Tenn., and James Byrd, Charlotte. Marty Jacobs, Greensboro, is designing the costumes, while properties will be assembled by Sydney Shertzer, Newark, N. J., and Alan L. Smith, Caldwell, N. J., Suzanne M. Davis, Chapel Hill, is supervising make-up.

The Laboratory Theatre is sponsored jointly by Graham Memorial and the Carolina Playmakers. No charge is made for admission to performances

Kenneth Ness Will Discuss UNC Art Exhibition Thursday

At 5 o'clock Thursday in Person Hall Art Gallery Kenneth Ness, artist, and Chapel Hill resident, will make a talk concerning "Artist UNC," an exhibition now hanging in the large gallery. "Artist UNC" features works of present and former artists of the university. These include Neal Thomas, Margaret Munch, Marianne Manasse, Dallas Caldwell, Garland Peterson, Edward Shumake, Mabel Smith Lovin, and Ben Williams.

Using as his title "From Student Artist to Artist Student," Mr. Ness will elaborate on progress made by students during and after university training—students who did not take Art as a hobby, for each has continued concentrative study and work.

Mr. Ness is enthusiastic over the exhibition in that it affords the first opportunity for professors to view students' works as a whole, and not piece by piece. Mr. Ness ascertains that the quality is more professional than amateur.

In his talk Mr. Ness will review individual pictures as to color quality, design, and individual method of expression.

Works in the exhibition include the subdued tones and color of Ben Williams through the angular design of Garland Peterson as compared with the more loosely expressionistic design of Neal Thomas.

Backing Of Fascism Must Cease In U.S., Says Junius Scales

"The United States must stop backing fascism in Italy, Greece, and France if we are to get along with Russia," declared Junius Scales, leader of Chapel Hill Communists, during the International Relations Club discussion Monday night. Before a crowded Graham Memorial lounge audience made tense by his presence, Scales emphasized that this country cooperated with Russia during the war and that he believes we can do the same in peace.

The topic for discussion was "How can we reach a peaceful understanding with Russia?" Scales was invited to the meeting by IRC members in an effort to have all sides of the question presented.

Bill Patterson, president of the IRC ,refuted Scales' views saying, "We have found it necessary to work with Fascists in certain countries to achieve our aims at rehabilitation and administration there." He continued that the rulers of Russia wanted to be the rulers of the world.

Scales, who did not speak until directly questioned by sophomore Joe McDaniels, stated that he believed that the United States "should work through the United Nations and not around it with Marshall plans and Truman doctrines." In further discussion he denounced the policy of our administration in aiding "a minority in China against the Communist who have the majority."

Discussion leader Bob Rolnick called attention to the need of a change in Russian foreign policy as well as that of the U. S. Scales retorted that Russian foreign policy would change if given half a chance drew loud laughs of sentiment from the audience.

Tax School to Hear House, Gill at Banquet Tonight

State Commissioner of Revenus Edwin Gill and University Chancellor R. B. House will be the principal speakers at the Carolina Inn banquet meeting tonight of county tax supervisors as the Institute of Government-sponsored tax school opens in Chapel Hill today. The announcement came yesterday from Henry W. Lewis, director of the two-day school.

Tax supervisors, their assistants, and some county commissioners from at least half of North Carolina's counties have indicated they will be present for non registration today in the Institute building and for the 7 o'clock banquet tonight.

Other Speakers

Besides Speakers Gill and House, the banquet meeting will feature addresses by J. C. Bethune and W. O. Suiter, both of the State Department of Revenue.

First business session of the two-day school designed to instruct and familiarize tax supervisors with their duties will convene at 2 o'clock in the Inn ballroom. The meeting will include a discussion conducted by three supervisors who are experienced in making quadrennial re-assessments of taxable property.

Dean Carroll Present

Dr. D. D. Carroll, dean of the University commerce school, will attend all meetings and is expected to offer some economic and sound bases for setting valus on property for taxation purposes.

Tomorrow's closing session of the school will be highlighted by a panel discussion among three new county supervisors who have occupied their offices during recent months. A general summary of the changes in "ad valorem" tax laws passed by the 1947 General Assembly will be presented by Peyton Abbott, of the attorney general's office.

About 90 persons from counties all over the state, said Director Lewis, are expected to arrive in Chapel Hill today.

MAN CHASER

CLEVELAND (U.P.)—Policewoman Betty Anthony got her man, both as an officer of the law and a wife.

With perhaps something more than the usual satisfaction of doing her job, she arrested her alimony-indebted ex-husband for failure to support their four minor children.

The 28-year-old policewoman has been on the husband-hunt for more than a year, when the alimony checks stopped coming.

University Party Chooses Szafaryn To Run For Post

Len Szafaryn will head the University party ticket in the election of class officers to be held next Tuesday, according to an announcement made last night by Miles Smith, party chairman.

The nominations for the election, the date of which was set at the student legislature meeting last week, were made at a meeting of the steering committee held Monday night.

Officers for both the freshman and junior class will be selected. Szafaryn will run as the UP candidate for president of the junior class. Others on the ticket with him are: vice president, Stan Fox; secretary - treasurer, coed Danny Payne; social chairman, Bill Thorpe.

Candidates selected by the party to run for freshman class offices include: president, Herb Mitchell; vice president, Bill Benbow; secretary-treasurer, Marvin Nathan; social chairman, George Dunlop.

Students Must Sign Pre-Registration Appointments Today

Students must make appointments for conferences with advisors and deans concerning pre-registration for both the winter and spring quarters beginning today.

Contrary to an earlier announcement, General College students will not sign appointment sheets on their advisors' doors but will set a date and time for their consultations in appointment books in the lobby of Memorial hall. This is being done, according to Dean C. P. Spruill, to avoid unnecessary confusion.

To Begin Thursday

General College registration appointments will begin on Thursday of next week and run through December 3. The appointment books will be available in Memorial hall until Saturday at noon.

Students in the schools of Arts and Sciences, Commerce, and Pharmacy should sign appointment sheets on their deans' door in accordance with the new procedure this term to prevent long and unorganized waiting lines in the various deans' offices once registration begins.

Actual Conferences

The actual conferences will be held in the Arts and Sciences and Commerce schools between November 17 and December 3 and in the Pharmacy school for only one week between November 17 and November 22.

The schools of Library Science, Medicine, and Public Health will announce their registration to their students at a later date.

Playmaker Tryouts To Be Held Friday

Tryouts for "An Enemy of the People" by Henrik Ibsen, next major production of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season, will be held at 4:00 o'clock Friday afternoon in the Playmaker theatre, according to Kai Jurgensen, director of the play.

Mr. Jurgenson explained that the tryouts would be held only on Friday afternoon because of experimental plays that night.

"We have two parts for young boys," Mr. Jurgensen said, "and I cordially invite any boys from the high school or from town, who are interested in taking part in the play."

This is to be the first production of Ibsen's famous play in its new American translation by Mr. Jurgensen and Robert Schenkkan. It will be presented on December 3, 4, 5 and 6.

Director Jurgensen added, "We have placed copies of the play in the reserve room of the library for all who wish to study the script before tryouts."

Di Senate To Discuss UN, World Federalists

The Dialectic Senate will meet at 9 o'clock tonight on the third floor of New East to discuss a bill favoring dissolving the present United Nations General Assembly in preference to a new type of World Federal Government. This will be one of the most concrete plans submitted by any campus group thus far pertaining to world-wide agreement and peace, Charlie Long, Di president, said yesterday.

The discussion is to be open to the public, and all interested University students and Chapel Hill townspeople are invited to attend. Russell Baldwin will be present representing the World Federalists on campus with both Lincoln Kahn and Randy McLeod offering the opinions of the Collegiate Council of the United Nations.

World Government

Suggestions made by the proposed bill for the Di's consideration tonight call for a World Federalist government with a bi-cameral legislative body in which the upper house representation would be based on national governments and the lower house representation would depend on a combination of population, industrial capacity, and economic resources. Such a legislative body would chose its own executives, and the World Government would be given the authority to regulate commerce, collect taxes, and control military affairs.

According to this plan, the World Government constitution would be declared the supreme law of each nation with all other governments subordinate. Any nation who at the time of formation refused to come under the World Government and ratify its constitution would be considered an outlaw nation until such a time as it was accepted as a component state in good standing.

Long, Senate president, urges all Senators to be present tonight for the consideration of more new members and the initiation of several members already approved.

Pi Phis Rank First In School Averages

Pi Beta Phi soroity ranked first in relative scholastic averages of men's and women's social fraternities for the year, 1946-47, according to a release from Fred Weaver, dean of men.

Basing the averages according to the number of members in the fraternity and computing "A" as 1, "B" as 2, "C" as 3, "D" as 4, "E" as 5, and "F" as 6, Pi Beta Phi had an annual average of 2.43. Runner-ups were Tau Epsilon Phi with 2.55; Chi Omega, 2.56; Pi Lambda Phi, 2.592; and Alpha Gamma Delta, 2.594.

Other social groups rated down to an average of 3.28. Their standing is as follows: Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Psi, Zeta Beta Tau, Zeta Psi, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Chi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Beta Theta Pi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Chi Psi, Chi Phi, and Kappa Sigma.

House Addresses Music Fraternity

Chancellor R. B. House was guest speaker at a banquet honoring nine new initiates of Phi Mu Alpha, honorary music fraternity, Sunday evening in the Carolina Inn.

Deriding those who would call music a "namby-pamby" profession, Dr. House pointed out that in today's universities musicians stand high in academic and athletic, as well as artistic, fields.

Coeds Draw Lots Tonight for Partners For Human Race on Sadie Hawkins Day

By Sam Whitehall

Lucky coeds who somehow may have missed out on the local 6-1 ratio will have the first jump on hapless males tonight as they draw lots from a fish bowl to choose their "onhappy" Sadie Hawkins day partners. Several hundred "Lil's Abners" have signed the CICA register in the Y lobby, thus submitting themselves to the questionable honor of having an unknown "Daisy Mae" capture them for the Grand Ball Friday evening.

The rolls will remain open throughout today for any other SH-happy men already resigned to Friday's fate to sign up also. Couples planning to run in the Human (husbi'-ketchin') Race, on Fetzer field at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon should also register at the Y lobby desk.

Plans for the entire days events have grown to such an extent that co-chairmen Mike Loftus and Chuck Hilty have called a final scheming session for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Graham Memorial Rendezvous. Assistance from any students interested in working on any one of the many committees for the day will be welcomed at this meeting. Each fraternity and sorority has already been requested to send two pledges to the planning session.

Final rehearsal for the Grand Ball floor show is scheduled at 7 o'clock this evening in the student union. Under the direction of Andy Griffith the hour-long show will be one of the highlights of the dance. Mountaineer costume is the ticket of admission to the hop.

Speaking for the Sadie Hawkins day committee Mike Loftus urged the complete cooperation of everyone on the campus in heightening the success of the day. "No one is too old or too young to let his hair down and truly enjoy this affair," said Loftus. "I believe if everyone will really throw themselves into the spirit of the day, they'll find out they haven't had so much fun since grandma.

Two Mo' Days . . . ,

—Wolf-Gal has a'got that sartin look about her which ca'nt mean nothin' 'cept only two mo' days till Sadie Hawkins day. . . . And they's a'gonna be about 1,000 Carolina Wolf gals out fer thar Li'l Abners comes Friday, so y'all mixzuble males had better be reddy fer the great Human Race. That's 3 o'clock, Fetzer field—An' watch out, er Wolf Gal will getcha!

A Part of the Campus Is Gone

"Uncle George" is dead, and with his burial today ends a fond Carolina tradition —as sacred a landmark to many grads as Davie Poplar, Rameses, and the Aboretum.

"Uncle George" is Elliott Washington, 69-year-old dean of janitors who ended 35 years of service as Zoology building custodian this summer after being stricken with cancer.

Over a generation of alumni knew Washingto as the friendly Negro who handed out green goldfish and stuffed octopusses to frightened fraternity pledges during Hell Week. They knew him as the enthusiastic Tar Heel fan who was on hand at most pep rallies to add a cheer for Carolina teams. And to zoology majors he was the sympathetic, persevering, genial master of his building—one of the best-kept on campus.

"Uncel George" personified one of the proudest possessions any campus can boast —the lowly working man who finds a place in the student body's heart as well as on the payroll. Presidents and professors come and go, but fixtures like Washington remain as a reminder to alumni of the good old days of beer parties, Hell week, zo labs, and (only in days gone by, thank God) raids on Duke.

"Uncle George" wasn't even important enough to rate a pension from the University. After he fell sick this summer only help from his friends around Chapel Hill kept him and his wife alive.

But we'll remember him and his pep rally appearances for a long time. And we look forward to the day when another of the "little people" may rise to fill Uncle George's place as the popular link between old and new, between the timeless campus and the ever-changing flow of student bodies.

Paths of Traditional Mud and Greetings

Those of us who enjoyed the pre-war days here recall very vividly the walks that were filled with traditional mud and friendly greetings. Some of the walks have been bricked over, and somehow the friendly greetings have been lost. The bricks we like, the silence is not golden. We like the habit of each student speaking to everyone he meets on the paths, even though he did not know the passerby or had never seen him before.

The University Club, whose primary function is building campus spirit during the football season, is staging a "Hey, How U" spell which they inaugurated for yesterday and today, with the hopes that the practice of speeking to everyone you see becomes an automatic, friendly process.

Being able to sing out a person by his first name is no pre-requisite for a greeting. It would be very advantageous to know everyone by name, advantageous but impossible with 7,500 students. There are some of us who rarely see the fellow who lives down the street in our hometown over two or three thime a quarter. But it is a way to create a friendly campus. Just greet everyone.

The campus was tagged yesterday and today with a reminder to speak to your fellow students. Tomorrow the tags will be gone. Don't cast off your greetings along with the tag.

Kind Words for Freshmen

Carolina freshmen got a friendly pat on the back last week in a letter to the DTH from CCUN's energetic director, Lincoln Kan. Said Mr Kan, "I want to state that the class of 1951 has produced leaders who have unstintedly given assistance in CCUN work. If they continue the way that they have, Carolina will enjoy a renaissance that has not been equaled in years. Give them credit, for they will make our University claim the glory that she deserves."

A great many of the new students this year are returning veterans who delayed their college careers for the military, and are returning to the campus, already in their twenties, armed with experience that qualifies them as capable workers in such working organizations as the CCUN and clubs as IRC, AVC and others.

If there are times when freshmen errand-boys and jacks-of-all-trades are inclined to become discouraged at the unimportance of their individual jobs, a "word in time" from their superiors will be a boosting factor in producing more, sincere work.

It will be readily admitted here that praise for the most part is readily forthcoming for those who deserve it on the campus. Campus leaders, burdened with worrisome jobs, are only too willing to acknowledge assistance from their side kicks.

Comments have been heard, however, from various freshmen "eager-beavers" along the line of "What's the use, we're nobody." For those, Kan's remarks were especially well-timed.—B.B.

What! No Booze?

Saturday's football contest here was noteworthy not only for the game itself but also for the exemplary conduct of the fans in the stadium with regard to drinking. Police Chief W. T. Sloan commented Sunday that the game was as dry as he'd ever seen one. "I didn't see a single drunk at the game," the chief said, "though there must have been one somewhere." Only one arrest for drunkeness was made in the city Saturday afternoon, and that one was not at the game and did not involve a student.

Naturally there was some drinking going on. When a crowd of 41,000 people congregates at any one place and time, it is almost inevitable that there should be. But it speaks well for North Carolina football fans—either for their temperance or correct judgement of capacities—that in that crowd of 41,000 Saturday afternoon not one person had to be removed from the stadium for being drunk or making a nuisance of himself. Both the students of the University and the out-of-town-spectators are to be commended for their conduct.

The chief of police expressed amazement at the small amount of drunkeness We hope that conduct at future games will warrant amazement only at the presence of drunkeness not at its absence. Football games are for watching.—E.J.

Grading System Okay

By Pete Gerns

The present system of grading is satisfactory to only a bare majority of students polled, specifically, 63 per cent. Apparently both systems, "satisfactory-unsatisfactory" and "A-F", have a number of advantages.

Speaking for the majority is R. V .Nation. Says he: "Although no grading system is perfect, the present "A-F" system serves at least to distinguish an exceptional student from a mediocre one. The exceptional student deserves this recognition." Dick Owen follows the same line of thought, "....let's continue to give credit where credit is due ...." Another opinion, unfortunately unsigned, approaches the subject from a negative point of view: "....without it (A-F system) most of us would just try and get by, daily work wouldn't be as carefully kept up, especially in expectation of a pop quiz".

Bill Patterson works hard for what recognition he gets scholastically, as does H. D. Irvin, who tells us that the present system gives a much better picture of comparative proficiency in a subject than a grade of "satisfactory". One writer feels that some of the deficiencies of the system could be ironed out by rearrangement of grades: A (90-100), B (80-90), C (70-80), D (60-70), and F, below 60. Under this system a student should be required to maintain a "C" average to graduate.

Favorable opinions of the "satisfactory - unsatisfactory" system are many. Emphasis in discussion of this system is placed on three main items: 1) It would eliminate the emphasis on grades, 2) delegate this emphasis on the content of the course, and 3) make grading easies.

Rufus Butner declares that this system would "tend to eliminate the strive most students make toward obtaining higher grades rather than acquiring knowledge". "Students being human," according to Robert C. Smith, "cannot be put into any one of several brackets. Either they have 'it' or they don't have 'it' ". H. Siever adds to this opinion that "satisfactory" grades are proof of having learned something to increase one's general knowledge instead of having gained particular knowledge to be applied to a test. Other writers hold forth that the "satisfactory-unsatisfactory" system will give students a better chance of passing a course and promote studying instead of cramming.

AVC Endorses WSSF Drive

By John Roeder
And Ken Rothwell

Some of you guys and gals evidently think that we like to hear ourselves talk .. and we do .. so here goes with a weekly column all about AVC, veterans and whatnot.

Last Tuesday night (we meet every other Tuesday) the AVCers wound up their meeting with a rousing cheer for the WSSF .. they suggested that we cry out to the whole campus and to anyone within hearing distance that beer is good but two bits to the cause is better .... our special correspondent suggests that the World Students Service fund and beer both have heads on them but the head on the WSSF is more lasting .. at the same meeting Professor Frank W. Hanft of the law school gave a fascinating talk on World Federalism .. but, first, in the anteroom he delivered a learned dissertation on the value of celluloid collars....

Understand the vet's co-op at Victory Village is going great guns .. lots of good AVC men on the board of directors .... considering the opposition those guys had at first from certain sources they deserve a case of Scotch....

Got any good cause you think we can fight for .... Right, left, on the fence . . . what's the difference? .... sick of your profs .. not enough good food.. not enough money .... about this last it is rumored that there might be another subsistence bill presented to congress to raise our pay . . . That democratic Republican senator Wayne Morse of Oregon is really on the stick .... good man.

Talking about prices .. Sunday morning breakfast at the Carolina Inn is the new way to the poor house .. guess we stay in bed from now on .. that is until quarter to eleven ....

STINKEROO OF THE WEEK: AVC's movie critic hereby awards a Lead Oscar to "The Spirit of West Point" .. suggest the Thomas-Rankin committee investigate to see whether this epic isn't the direct result of a communist plot.

Open Reply To Scales

I think that all freedom loving Americans, who love the American way of life and have so recently fought to preserve that which they dearly cherish are easily able to read between the lines of the "reply article" which appeared in Sunday's Daily Tar Heel and preceive how Junius Scales and the like of him operate. When they possess the so-called "courage" to openly express their convictions—take notice—they are only able to muster this courage by hiding behind the protection of those hallowed instruments of freedom of thought and speech, namely our Constitution and Bill of Rights. Yes, they'll use these instruments as bulwarks of protection until they have gained sufficient strength in numbers and political power; then they will undermine and totally destroy these very documents which they so cleverly use in their scheming plans to the end of ultimate destruction for all democracy and all systems of free competition.

I say to you, Scales, and all your kind, you don't possess courage. You are merely representatives of a group of individuals who have lost the way, who are grooing in the dark, and the only light you are able to see shining is that all-American Bill of Rights. In fact, it shines so brightly that you are presently blinded by it and have forgotten its real meaning. So, Scales, you and your friends come out of the dark and accustom your vision to this freedom light so that it may not blind you but rather guide you as it has guided American through many a dark crisis to her position as the arsenal of democracy and the symbol for all freedom-loving people the world over.

No, Scales, you need not voice your political opinion to any Congressional Committee. To express your affiliation with the "quite legal Communist Party," as you refer to it, is quite enough for the average American.

So, beware freedom loving Americans! Any party movement which hides behind and uses the very document which it seeks to annihilate, should itself, along with all its contaminating, deceitful methods be sought out and destroyed. Even freedom of speech has its limitations. These limits are drawn when free speech is used to undermine and destroy the very instruments which make it possible. If free speech continues to be used in this hypocritical way, then you Scales, can rest assured that all alert American citizens aren't ready to forfeit their free way of life, and we'll not stand idly by and do nothing. Being among the few peoples of the world who may freely voice their opinions in their government, we will exercise this liberty by insisting on Congressional legislation to outlaw your misguided conceptions. Then you'll not be able to hide behind the legality of your deciving connivances.

Criticizes Sports

Dear Sir:

I am a person not often given with venting his feelings in news publications but I hope you will forgive me just this once. It just so happens that I like this old Carolina spirit that prevails on the campus, which I incidentally think, is mighty fine. Therefore, naturally I would be against anything that takes away from this wonderful spirit; and strange as it may seem I think the DTH does just that in publishing the column that Billy Carmichael, III writes under the heading of "The Sporting Picture." In my opinion, and I have heard many voice the same sentiment Mr. Carmichael writes about the sorriest so called sports column I have ever read. His biting, sarcastic, unwaranted statements on rival teams, coaches and players alike is about the most unsportsmanlike thing I have run across in my short years on the campus.

I reached the breaking point in picking up the Sunday DTH and reading his statements on the Tennessee team. To quote him "... making Tenn. look like some high school team that got in by mistake. The ushers were almost prompted to ask the Vols if they had tickets." That from the pen of an alleged sports writer. Further on in his column Mr. Carmichael says, "The Tennesseans did live up to their nickname though, in as much as they did play like a bunch of "Volunteers" all afternoon. They just couldn't fight their way out of the paper bag defense the Tar Heels threw up. This about a great school, a great coach, and in other years a great team. I'm sure this will be appreciated by those Tennessee fans who are unfortunate enough to read his column as well as the Carolina team whom I'm sure considered their defense a "paper bag" one.

Not once in his column did he mention the fact that maybe Tennessee was just having a bad year like Duke did last year and Carolina started this one. Don't get me wrong Sir. I'm not defending the Vols or trying to take anything away from the Tar Heels. I'm merely letting fly a little pent up opinion on a very unsportsmanlike column in the DTH written by one Billy Carmichael, III.

I'm certain Mr. Carmichael would have appreciated a column in the Daily Texan after that infamous debacle out there making a statement to the effect that the Tar Heels looked like a "high school team that got in by mistake." No Sir, if our football team and student body can take defeats sportsmanlike as it does then lets not have it ruined by a so-called sports columnist through the college daily.

Bar Restores Glamor

New York in Paris

By JAMES McGLINCY
United Press Correspondent

Paris (U.P.)—There was only one place in Paris that broadcast the World Series. There is only one place that sells hot dogs and beer.

It's the only place with Yale and Princeton pennants on the walls, with a bar that came from a saloon on the corner of 7th Avenue and 47th Street, and with American newspapers piled on the windowsill for the homesick to read.

That, of course, would be the world-famous "Harry's New York Bar," otherwise known as Sank Roo Doe Noo (5 Rue Daunou) or Trap No. 1 of the International Bar Flies. Subsidiary organizations of the latter are Rho Dammit Rho, the Loyal Society of Dartsmen, and the Order of Former Pipe Players —all with suitable membership certificates hanging on Harry's walls.

The Little Blue Bottle Fly himself, Harry McElhone, of Dundee, Scotland, New York, London, Paris and Jersey City, N. J. (the stockyard district) is still carrying on, except maybe he's slowing up a little.

Beer Contests Off

For example, he doesn't run his international beer drinking contest any more.

"Nobody would drink the French beer," Harry says, "and the Pilsener is too scarce and valuable to waste on a beer-drinking contest."

So there is no threat for the moment to the record of two liters, which is close to two quarts, drunk without pause in four seconds flat by J. Henry Cochran of Williamsport, Pa.

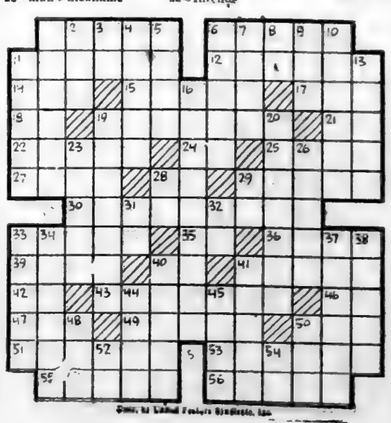
The printing situation also is bad, with paper at a virtually prohibitive price, so Harry no longer passes out the baggage tags saying, "Return me to Harry's Bar, 5 Rue Daunou."

Nor does he issue kibitzer cards which give the holder the right to butt into any game with the advice, "Present this card when your authority is questioned."

Nor are there many copies extant presently of the best book Harry ever wrote, a tome called "What I Know About Women," 100 beautiful blank pages.

Old Displays There

But Harry's Bar still proudly displays its old Man of War horseshoe, a pair of Primo Carnera's outsized boxing gloves, a baseball autographed by the White Sox and the Giants during their 1924 European junket. It still is world headquarters for the I.B.F. It still is crowded with Americans day and night.



Harry himself returned to Paris in April, 1945, after spending the war in London, where he was barman at the Casino de Paris the famous night it received a direct hit.

His son, Andy, is back behind the bar after serving with the British army and being wounded during the Rhine fighting. Andre, the French barman, also is back.

White Phantoms Play 25 Games During 1947-48 Season

Tar Heel Harrier Squad To Seek Two Separate Crowns On Same Day

By MORTY SCHAAP

Carolina's cross country squad will attempt a feat never before attempted by any Southern Conference team when they split their men into two units to compete in the IC4A run in New York and the Southern conference championship at Raleigh on November 17.

Jimmy Miller, last year's conference champ will defend his laurels at the Capital city and Jack Milne, Sam Magill, and Alvin Smith will lead a group of runners to the metropolis.

Conference Team

Along with Miller, the tentative conference team will have Frank Hooper, Julian Mackenzie, John Bristow, John Hoots, Basil Wood and Dick Carr, plus any men that show up well in the coming time trials.

The New York contingent will have Milne, Magill, Smith, Mark Burnham, Halstead Holden and Chuck Herty. Both of these teams are tentative and changes may be made after time trials and the State meet are run.

Fourth Last Year

The Tar Heels will be out to better their fourth-place finish of last year in the Intercollegiate championship and the brunt of their show must be carried by the entire team. Smith finished sixth in the 1946 event and the slender Virginian is now rounding into shape and may well turn in his best performance of the year at Van Cortland park.

Another boy that must produce for the team to make a good showing is Burnham. Last year he was 30th in the classic but so far this season he has been slow in coming around. However, the coaching staff has much confidence in the Massachusetts boy and his trials of the past few days have showed steady improvement.

The last two making the New York jaunt, Holden and Herty, are the only members of the team that have not run the IC4A five-mile course. They are both capable lads and should hold their own in any competition.

Milne is in fine shape, as is Magill, and both boys should finish near the top of the list. Milne was 42nd last year and Magill was 43rd. These boys have been the kingpins of the Tar Heel squad along with Miller this season.

Miller In Sugar Bowl

Miller, incidentally, has been invited to participate in the Sugar Bowl 3000-meter run. He was second to Earl Mitchell last year and his experience this season will make him a threat for the title.

The event in New York will probably find over 250 runners taking the mark and the pre-meet favorites will be Syracuse, Penn State, Michigan State and NYU, last year's champions. Bobby Black of Rhode Island State, Gerry Karver of Penn State, Jack Dianetti of Michigan State, and Dick Church of Syracuse will be the probable favorites for the individual crown.

Black Runs

Coach Dale Ranson has entered Bob Black in the freshmen race on the same day in New York. The yearling event is run over the three-mile course.

In the Raleigh affair, Maryland will be the team to beat, holding a perfect score win over Duke and having intact the same club that just lost to Carolina in the event last year. The Blue Devils will be the second choice, since they are coming along

Chi Psi Garners Divisional Honors; Title Play Underway This Afternoon

Trouncing Beta Number One, 20 to 6, undefeated Chi Psi became champions of Mural football Fraternity League 4.

Unscored upon in six matches until yesterday, Chi Psi let Beta sub Cliff Frazier slip over the goal line to score the loser's only marker of the day.

Leading the victor's attack was Jim Kelly, who scored two of the three touchdowns. Other Chi Psi points were collected by Johnnie Wilson and Buck Hardee. Wilson crossed the goal for six points, while Hardee scored two points after touchdown.

By winning their seventh game of the season Chi Psi joined Phi Delta Theta and DKE as champions in the various fraternity leagues.

Championship of Fraternity league 2 will be decided tomorrow when SAE meets Sigma Nu to determine the final standings of the round robin playoff.

Today's Schedule

Booters Meet Roanoke Outfit In Added Tilt

Roanoke College of Salem, Va., will provide the opposition for the high-flying Carolina soccer team on Fetzer field tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

This game was not on the original schedule and final verification was received by Coach Marvin Allen late yesterday afternoon.

Little is known of the Maroon strength as this is the first year that the Virginia school has participated in the sport.

Allen is counting on a good game as a warm-up for next Wednesday afternoon's tussle with the Duke Blue Devils in Durham.

Yesterday afternoon saw the booters go through a heavy workout with much stress given to the offensive play in front of the goal. The team was not very potent in the scoring column at Charlottesville last Friday when they barely eked out a 1-0 win over the Cavaliers.

A win tomorrow would put the Allenmen on the crest of a four-game streak when they go forth to do battle with the Dukesters next week. As things stand now, the Tar Heel eleven has won three and lost two. The losses were sustained in the opning two contests against Loyola and Navy.

TAR BABIES PLAY

Due to the Wake Forest cancellation, Carolina's Tar Babies had an open date last week, but they will get back into harness against Virginia's jayvees Friday and then will play two more games in as many weeks.

Gue Purcell, junior varsity tailback, is working with the varsity this week in place of the injured Bill Maceyko. The jayvees will be taking the place of the State Wolfpack today and tomorrow as the Tar Heels prepare for the impending clash.

Jamerson Has Dolphins Working Hard

Carolina's Blue Dolphins continued their daily paddle practice sessions after a fairly impressive intrasquad meet held last Friday.

Coach Dick Jamerson expressed enthusiasm over the outcome o fthe first pre-season test. The division of the squad was based on equal distribution of the men of former years and the separation of the newcomers to the squad.

Though it couldn't be known for sure prior to the meet, the teams shaped up remarkably even and the winners splashed off with the honors by a meager three points.

Steve Osborne, a senior in his first year on the squad paced the sprint events. He was pushed hard for laurels by both Mericka and Drews. In the distance Ronnie Basescu led the way. Charlie Bartlett set the pace for the breast-stroke, while Joe Wratten and Jimmy Thomas were top backstroke men.

All the events were run off in fine style and the only comment made by Coach Jamerson was that the boys seemed to run out of gas after only a few laps.

All men who are still interested in trying out are urged to come down and work out with the team as it is far from too late to make the grade.

State, Carolina Football Teams Parctice Hard

By Dick Jenrette

Preparations for the Carolina-State battle this coming Saturday in Kenan stadium got into full swing at Navy field yesterday, as the Tar Heels went through a session of intensive offensive drills.

Coach Carl Snavely, realizing that the Wolfpack has been scored on but twice this season, devoted almost the whole afternoon to improving the Carolina attack, both on the ground and in the passing department.

The regulars were on the offensive for most of the time, running plays against the Jayvees. Charlie Justice and Walt Pupa were doing the passing and all the Carolina ends came up with some nifty catches during the drill. Hosea Rodgers, the spirited Alabama fullback, who usually does much of the Tar Heel passing, missed the heavy work yesterday but was present in light togs.

The team's running game also looked good, with Jim Camp, Justice, and Pupa each ripping off nice gains. Before the scrimmage got under way, Snavely emphasized blocking.

Over in Raleigh, Coach Beattie Feathers has begun a week of heavy drills in an attempt to get his boys ready for the game. Getting the State squad mentally ready for Carolina will be no problem for Feathers. The Wolfpack and the whole State student body are on edge for the game, and the Tar Heels can expect a hard fight on their hands Saturday.

Both Carolina and State have dropped two games apiece this season, while the Tar Heels have won four to State's three wins. The only mutual foe the two have met is Florida. The Gators beat the Wolfpack, 7-6, but lost to Carolina 35-7. However, there are few who would say that there is that much difference between the two outfits. Carolina is the favorite, but State will be primed for an upset.

Carolina holds a sizeable margin over State in the matter of games won and lost in the past series between the two brother institutions, but the Wolfpack was showing signs of ending the Tar Heel supremacy when the series was halted in 1943.

Tennessee, Temple, Penn New Additions To Cage Schedule; 12 Contests at Home

A schedule of 25 games, including seven against teams not played last winter, are listed on the Carolina basketball card for 1947-48.

Tennessee, Temple, and Pennsylvania are among the new additions. The White Phantoms are hosts to the Volunteers January 5 and meet Temple and Penn in Philadelphia on successive Saturdays later in January. On one of the northward trips, the Tar Heels also venture into Madison Square Garden in New York for a clash with New York university. Twelve tussles will be played at home.

The opening tilt is less than a month off, coming December 3 against Catawba. Carolina plays six contests during December, before opening its Southern conference slate against Maryland January 3. In all, 15 circuit games are listed.

The Phantoms were runners-up to N. C. State for the conference championship last year.

The complete schedule:

Gridiron Mammoths Meet Here Friday

Dogpatch, Ky., Nov. 3 — — The battle of two of the ruggedest football teams in the country will take place Friday afternoon on Emerson Stadium's famed turf. This contest between Phogbound university and Fortescu university will bring together two teams that are undefeated and the outcome will decide the national championship.

Out at Phogbound Coach Slippery Eel has his club primed for the game after their 76-0 victory over Hollow Rock Teachers college. On the other hand Fortescu had a rough game with Misanavia Normal, just edging out a 62-0 win.

Coach Rodger Everessscent of the Fortescu club is looking forward to a better game this week with the return of his two backfield stars, George Sumneroverski and Monty Alphonsostein. The latter has a punting average of 76.4 yards and is ranked by many observers as the greatest back in the country.

Phogbounds triple wing offense will be sparked by Lil Abner and the hard running fullback, Awkward Mike. Their rugged line averages 346 pounds from end to end and has such mastadons as Smiling Hoolan, Little Will and Toothless Ike.

The game is being brought to the campus as part of the Sadie Hawkins' day program by the University Monogram club. Officials are being mustered from all parts of the country.

Meredith Bows to Carolina In Coed Hockey Opener, 1-0

Carolina's coed field hockey team opened its 1947 season successfully on Emerson field yesterday afternoon, outplaying and outscoring a rather impotent Meredith College eleven, 3-1, before a smattering of spectators.

The local lassies dominated the majority of play after the visitors had gone ahead 1-0 after two minutes on a goal by Marty Davis. Hustling K. D. Durham tied the score up several minutes later, beating the Meredith goalie at the 5:50 mark.

After this the Carolina girls were in complete control, going into the lead when Gray Simpson dented the twines at 10:25 on passes from Miss Durham and Scotty Dellinger.

Carolina's final goal came a little more than a moment later as Jean Wall finally batted the ball in from almost directly in front of the Meredith goal, after a mass of players from each team had all but annihilated themselves in their respective efforts to score and prevent a score.

The second half saw the victors still maintain the upper hand, the ball remaining in Meredith territory most of the remainder of the afternoon. The Tar Heel entry had several good chances to score, but good defensive play and the slippery turf prevented any further goals.

Besides the Carolina front line which play well all day, defense players Bill Lloyd and Butch Goodwin also turned in creditable performances. Little Nancy Tucker guarding the nets for the locals, didn't have much to do but handled what came her way with effective ease. Miss Tucker was forced to make but two saves, while a pair of Meredith goldies came up with a total of nine.

Although no future games have been arranged as yet for the team, Hockey director Frances Burns said she thought there would be a return engagement with the Meredith club, with the possibility of clashes with Duke and other neighboring schools also entering the picture.

Representatives from Kenan, Pi Phi, Chi Omega and Tri Delt are requested to meet at the Women's gym at 4 o'clock this afternoon to draw for positions in the Volleyball play.

Two Are Tops In GM Contest

In a field of 2800 entries, most of which hit a general average of only 40 per cent correct, Don Currie, 19 Cobb Terrace, and Calvin Koonce, 217 Alexander tied as winners of last week's Graham Memorial football contest, missing only four games each. As both contestants' Carolina-Tennessee predictions were fairly far off, Currie was declared winner of the contest, through having handed in his entry blank one day earlier than Koonce.

Two tie games, Texas A. and M.-Arkansas, and Davidson-VMI, and three major upsets sent the general run of entries to the lowest correct number of predictions in the six contests run this year. Four drugstore quarterbacks, headed by former DTH sports writer Mac Katzin, scooped the field to guess the 20-6 Tar Heel-Vols score. Others were James F. Barr, Stuart Campbell, and Harold W. Rollins. Seventeen made near misses with a 20-7 prognostication.

Tickets Still Available To 'Madame Butterfly'

Tickets are still available in quantity for the student entertainment committee sponsored opera "Madame Butterfly," which is scheduled to go behind the footlights in Memorial hall tonight at 8:30, according to Bill Carmichael local publicity man for the event.

The price of admission to the opera, a Charles L. Wagner production, has been set at $2.46 per person. Tickets are available at Ledbetter-Pickard's and at the Playmaker office in Swain Hall. However, the committee is also selling block tickets to this and other entertainment events of the winter at $6.50.

These other productions for here include Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado," the Philharmonic piano quartette, and appearances of Iva Kitchell, the dance satirist, and Franz Polgar, noted hypnotist and mind reader.

In a statement made yesterday, John W. Parker of the dramatic arts department of the University said that although he had not seen "Madame Butterfly" as yet, he could recommend it because of the uniform high quality of all Wagner productions. He was supported in this statement by Carmichael who pointed to numerous telegrams from cities all over the country indicating the overwhelming approval with which the production has been greeted everywhere.

It was also announced yesterday that Desire Defrere, renowned New York stage director, will be here to add his personal direction to the opera.

This is the first time that a first rate musical production has ever been presented in Chapel Hill, and according to Carmichael, the all star cast and all around excellence of the production indicate that the first is long overdue.

Commerce Fraternity Plans Buffet Supper

The University's Alpha Lambda chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, national professional commerce fraternity, will hold a buffet supper for alumni, members, and new pledges this Saturday afternoon following the Carolina-State football game.

The supper will mark the anniversary of the organization's founding 40 years ago at the New York university School of Finance and Accounts on November 7, 1907. Since that date the fraternity has grown to include over 65 chapters located in almost all colleges and universities with high standing schools of commerce and business administration.

This year the University chapter has pledged the following men: Hubert Aenchbacher, Savannah, Ga.; Robert P. Callahan, Asheville; Carl H. Coghill, Henderson; Harry O. Coulter, Newton; James B. Crowley, Wilmington; Herman O. Coleman, Morganton; Ray Edwards, Princeton; Tom Eller, Salisbury; Morris Eller, Lansing; Melvin L. Parents' Program Offered Tonight

A series of lectures entitled "Education for Parenthood" will be offered by the school of Public Health the first and third Wednesday of every month at the Y.M.C.A. Mrs. Ida Friday and alternate speakers will conduct the series which will open tonight at 8 o'clock.

The program was designed to give parents a better understanding of the emotional and physical problems of their children. The group was formed by interested parents from the Dames club. At the end of the series a child-parent clinic will be held to acquaint parents with actual problems.

Miss Nann Bunn will stop at the co-op store in Victory Village at 7:50 o'clock to pick up interested residents and take them to the meeting.

Phi Assembly Vote Shows Opposition To Parking Meters

By Gordon Huffines

Reviewing the "pros and cons" of the Chapel Hill traffic problem Ed Lanier, director of central records office, addressed the weekly session of the Phi assembly Tuesday night as the society went on record as opposing the installation of parking meters.

Lanier, also a member of the board of alderman, stated that the board has not made any final decision on the six proposals made October 8, which include installation of a stop light at the Post Office corner, elimination of overnight parking, and the installation of parking meters. He added that a committee of merchants presented a petition to the board Monday night opposing the meters and proposing that the question be deferred.

97 Meters

Present plans call for the installation of 97 meters between the Town Hall and the Baptist church on Columbia street, and for 128 from Graham Memorial westward through the business district on Franklin street.

On the subject of student owned cars, Lanier said that "cooperation and consideration was all that was needed" to handle the situation.

30-Minute Limit

The Phi bill, passed by a vote of 17-3 favors a 30-minute parking limit in the business district, an additional traffic officer, rigid enforcement of present laws, and elimination of the U turn in front of the Post Office as alternate solutions to the problem.

Nickel Bandits

Ernest House, introducing Lanier, opposed meters on the grounds that the "mechanical nickel bandits" are ugly and permanent. He stated that the congestion would be relieved if the 550 student car owners, living within walking distance of the campus would cooperate.

Preceding the discussion, new members of the Phi were initiated into the assembly in a candle light ceremony.

Rice's Speech Tonight Precedes Open Forum

By George Drew

Attacking the urgent problem of atomic energy control, Prof. Oscar K. Rice, member of the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers, stated yesterday that, "The President's Civil Rights committee has recently condemned the anti-Communist hysteria which has been sweeping the country. This statement is particularly timely, for it is clear that the difficult problems which we face cannot find solution in an atmophere of hysteria."

"This applies particularly to atomic energy," Prof. Rice continued. "An impartial approach to the question of atomic control will be more fruitful, in my opinion, than acrimonious discussion of questions like the veto. International control of atomic armament, and, of course, of other armaments as well, is actually our only defense."

"It will be small comfort for us to be victorious in a war in which our civilization is destroyed," he concluded.

Prof. Rice's speech tonight at eight o'clock in Gerrard Hall is expected to follow a similar emphatic line. His discussion, titled "Report from Oak Ridge—Atomic Energy Control" will be of an unusually informative nature to the general public.

Following his speech, an open forum will feature five prominent scientists who have been closely associated with the vital subject of atomic energy control and security measures: Dr. Joseph W. Straley, Dr. Nathan Rosen, Dr. Paul E Shearin, Dr. W. A. Bowers, and Dr. Fred T. Rogers.

The program is jointly staged by the Association of Carolina Scientists and the Carolina Chapter of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. Co-ordinating and moderating the program will be George Drew, freshman.

Delegates to Report Today On World Federalist Meeting

By Donald MacDonald

An official report on the United World Federalists national convention held over the weekend in St. Louis will be given at today's regular World Federalists meeting by Delegates Joy Blumenthal, Hale Chamberlain and Russell Baldwin who returned from the convention Monday night.

The student chapter meets at 5 o'clock today in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

According to Baldwin, president of the local capter, 26 states and the District of Columbia were represented at the two-day convention which ended at the Hotel Jefferson on Sunday. Besides the three student delegates, North Carolina was represented by Robert Lee Humber, of Greenville, author of the Humber Resolution; and by R. Mayne Albright, 1948 candidate for governor.

The ultimate purpose of United World Federalists was outlined to be: "While endorsing the efforts of the United Nations to bring about a world community favorable to peace, we will work primarily to strengthen the U. N. into a world government of limited powers adequate to prevent war and having direct jurisdiction over the individual, in those matters within its competence."

At a banquet attended by over 500 persons Saturday night the pledges of a national campaign to raise funds were increased to more than $31,000. Plans were laid to make an all-out effort to reach the goal of world government in 1948.

"I believe the handling of this case was foolish and below the standards of which we are accustomed here at Carolina. A little discretion would have averted the whole incident.

It is not without hopes of political implication I ask that you consider these facts:

1. "We do not believe the Executive branch of student government has a right to infringe upon the functions of the Legislative in that the Constitution gives the Legislature the power of appropriation and it was their desire that we travel by air. We believe that the executive branch has no more right to ignore the Constitution than any student. It is for this reason that we are carrying this case to the student council for a decision."

2. "There is not a single other group on this campus which does not give first class accommodations for travel. If student government is in such a financial condition that it cannot afford these first class accommodations as is the custom for all other first class schools in the country including N. C. State and has been the custom for our school until now, then let's keep our delegates at home.

3. I do not recall any scruples on the part of Tom Eller in flying to the last NSA Convention in Chicago last Christmas."

4. "Herman Baker and John Clampitt gave up the only vacation of any proportions this year to serve the school in a capacity which is not pleaseant. They spent many hours in preparing themselves for this trip that they might do justice to their assignment. They are entitled to first class accommodations and do not deserve the degrading implications of this affair."

"A rail and air transportation expense account was submitted. The Legislature chose to accept the air transportation upon our return to school.

As I do not believe that I can conscientiously work with this group, I am resigning from the Cabinet."

Coed Senate Votes $300 for WSSF Fund

Following an appeal made by Johnny Clampitt for the WSSF drive the Coed Senate passed a bill approving a gift of $300 for WSSF Tuesday night.

Representatives from the various women's organizations presented their requests for appropriations to cover expenditures for the year. These reports were turned over to the finance committee so that appropriations may be considered and the Senate's Budget drawn up. A bill was also passed privileging the women's dormitories to petition for amounts needed for practical purposes or dorm improvements not exceeding $100.

Before the close of the meeting, the Senate announced its decision to give a quiz covering social rules to all new coeds who will report to their house presidents next Monday night at 11 o'clock for this purpose. The purpose of this quiz is to help the new women become better oriented and to stress the importance of their learning to apply the rules of the coed handbook.

BAKER

"Too much has been said already concerning the recent controversy involving the W. S. A. delegates and their expense accounts, but since I am one of the three delegates and since the case involves hard-earned money of the students, I feel that a direct statement from me to the students is in order.

"I would like to make it clear to the students that it has not been my intention to make profit from student funds allowed me when I went to Madison, Wisconsin as a delegate from this campus to the National Student Association. I emphasize, however, that it has been my sincere desire that all three delegates get a just decision in the matter.

"I went by train to Madison, and by turning in an expense account with train fare allowance I could have avoided all the unpleasant publicity recently showered upon the three delegates. But since, the Legislature intended that the delegates be allowed plane fare and since one delegate did go by plane, I felt that a just decision could be arrived at only if the controversy was decided on the basis of three delegates instead of one. A battle of personalities was raging, and it was my sincere belief that had the one delegate who went by plane been left to fight his battle alone, an unjust decision might have been the result.

Check Ready

"As I told the Legislature, I felt that the delegate who went by plane should be allowed plane fare and that when he was assured a just decision I had a check for the difference between my train fare and plane fare allowence ready to turn over to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Student Body.

"Although I think the controversy should have been settled without being taken to the Men's Council, I would like to commend that body for the very efficient manner in which it handled the case. I think that it is one of the most conscientious groups in Student Government here at Carolina.

"Even though I have all praises for that judicial body, I think the controversy should have been a Student Council case. There was a question of who had the authority, the Legislative branch or the executive branch of Student Government. Shouldn't the Student Council decide such cases?

Herman Baker

CLAMPITT

"I'd like to commend the Men's Council for the manner in which they handled the case of Daniels versus the N. S. A. delegates. The ten men in whose hands the judicial power lies are the ten best reasons I know why student government can be a success at Carolina.

"The case which they had to handle was a hopelessly jumbled set-up of confused exectives, angry legislators, poor and profuse publicity, and three men who believed that what they had done was right. After a long and grueling session the council reached a decision which they will make public soon. My hat is off to them.

"My hat is also off to Basil Sherrill and the legislators who passed the bill of clarifications on our expense accounts. I'd like to thank all the people who put in a plug here and there about their faith in the delegates—But with your permission I'll keep my Stetson fast in place when I hear the words executive or cub reporter.

Experimental Theater to Show Three Student-Written Plays

Three student-written plays—"Hunted Men" by Mark R. Sumner, "Saint Judas" by Eugene Zeizler, and the "Big Pat-Pat" by Quentin Brown—will be featured on the 119th bill of experimental plays to be presented by the Carolina Playmakers at 7:30 this evening and again tomorrow.

Donald E. Draper, who directed last spring's Sound and Fury show in Memorial hall, is directing "Hunted Men." The cast includes: Marty Jacobs, Jehan Van De Velde, Norman Sper, and James Geiger. John Wills is stage manager and the setting is by Ellen Smith, and Barbara Edwards.

"Saint Judas" is under the direction of Charlotte Kirsch. The cast includes: Elliot Donnels, Edsel Hughes, Erle Hall, George Pritchett, Eleanor Woodson, and Claude Rayburn. The setting is by Robert Gutknecht and Bill Sessions of Conway, S. C. is stage manager.

IN MEMORIAM

The bell in South Building tower, rung in memoriam for deceased faculty members, tolled yesterday at 2 o'clock for Elliot "Uncle George" Washington, for 35 years the janitor in the Zoology building, whose funeral services were being conducted in the Second Baptist church at the same time.

By according "Uncle George" the same honor as given to regular members of the University faculty, South building officials hoped to show in a small way the University's sorrow at the passing of one of its oldest and most loyal employees.

A bold but none-too-successful purse-snatcher made his third night-time attack in recent weeks Tusday evening, this time with a purseless coed as his would-be victim.

The plucky, thief, whose more usual haunt has been brightly-lit Franklin street near Spencer dorm, chose the Arboretum for his latest strike. But his intended victim, Lucy Denny of Kenan dorm, was carrying only books.

Chapel Hill police said yesterday they believed the thief was the same one who grabbed a purse and $1 Monday night from another coed, Lucy Barrett, near the Episcopal church. And they believe the sketchy description given in the two latest attacks corresponds with that furnished by Lula White, a waitress, following an attack October 22, by the ATO house, when the mysterious thief netted a purse with $6.

Police Chief W. T. Sloan said yesterday that the descriptions indicated the snatcher might be a Negro youth, but that there was insufficient information to point to any particular suspect.

According to the city police report, Miss Denny was walking through the center of the dark Arboretum when the thief grabbed from behind at books she was carrying, apparently mistaking them for a purse. The coed screamed, and the unsuccessful snatcher fled.

Students in the vicinity came to Miss Denny's aid, and one, who has not identified himself, is believed to have pursued the snatcher toward the vicinity of South building. Police are now searching for the pursuer in the hope that he may give a more complete description of the thief.

Men's Council Reprimands Legislature, Student Body Officers, Daily Tar Heel

A statement clearing Johnny Clampitt, Herman Baker, and Bill Miller of all charges connected with the National Students association convention-expense account case was released yesterday by Bill Tate, chairman of the Men's Honor council.

Besides clearing the three delegates, the statement contained reprimands for the Student Legislature, for the student body president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and for the Daily Tar Heel.

STATEMENT FROM THE MEN'S HONOR COUNCIL

In keeping with the general policy of presenting briefs of cases appearing before it, the Men's Honor council takes this opportunity to review the recent case concerning the NSA convention in Madison, Wisconsin. The nature of the case, in that it involved student - appropriated funds, plus the sensational publicity given out, makes it essential to deviate from the council's usual policy of including no names and allowing enough time to elapse that no names may be connected with a particular case.

The council, in fairness to everyone concerned, asks that you read this report in its entirety. Naturally every minute detail cannot be included here (the hearing itself lasted well after 5 o'clock in the morning), but sufficient facts are presented to allow a clear picture.

Bill Excerpts

Last May 22 the Student Legislature voted to send Bill Miller, Johnny Clampitt, and Herman Baker to Madison, Wisconsin, to attend the National Students organization convention for 14 days in the latter part of the summer. At the meeting of July 3, a bill was passed concerning the previous decision, from which pertinent excerpts are as follows:

Article I, section 1: A sum of six hundred dollars ($600) shall be appropriated from the general fund to be used for expenditures "necessarily incurred" by the three delegats during the trip and the conference.

Section 2: These funds shall be apportioned at two hundred dollars ($200) per delegate.

Return Funds

Section 3: All delegates shall turn in an expense account on their return and shall return such of the appropriation funds "as are not expended."

There was no mention in the bill of how the delegates were to travel and there are no minutes of that meeting to be found. Sam Daniels, secretary-treasurer of the student body, therefore felt, in the absence of specific legislation, that it was his duty to detremine how the members should travel. Knowing that the student funds were low at the time and that expenditures of $600 of the $1,000 allotted for such conventions would leave but $400 for the remainder of the year, he deemed it advisable to have the men go by day coach. This would have resulted in a saving of approximately $150. Tom Eller, president of the student body, and Jack Folger, vice-president of the student body and speaker of the Legislature, concurred with him by affixing their names to a letter to the delegates directing them to travel by day coach. Checks to each for $200 were enclosed. As is usual in the case of student funds, receipts for all expenditures, except meals, were also required, and the men were instructed to return the money if the arrangements were not satisfactory so that arrangements could be made for replacements who would go as directed. A subsequent letter from Daniels informed the men that it would be a serious honor council offense to deviate from the instructions.

Miller Letter

Tom Eller received a letter from Bill Miller, the essence of which was that the three executives had no right to demand him to go by coach when the Finance committee had made the $200 recommendation on the basis of air travel, and that it was too much to ask of such a representative anyway. He stated that he was going to fly to Madison and let the Legislature settle it when he got back. Johnny Clampitt and Herman Baker traveled as directed.

Upon returning, the three delegates handed in expense accounts to Daniels, each listing travel by air and taxi fare from airports to towns as expenses. No receipts were handed in, though the delegates had a few sueh as for room rent. Daniels questioned the validity of this expense on the grounds of the executive letters, especially since he had to personally authorize all expenditures for which there were no receipts. Specific knowledge that Miller had attended a fraternity convention in that area at the time and had filed another expense account which seemed to overlap that for the N. S. A. convention, and knowledge that the other two delegates had actually gone by coach further prompted the secretary-treasurer to ask for an investigation and decision by the Men's council. He made no accusations to the council at the time of the public declaration or later. He merely requested a hearing to go into all the facts.

Facts Brought Out

At the hearing itself and from previous investigation by members of the council the following facts were brought out:

(1) The Finance committee, in its report to the Legislature, stated that it arrived at the $200 recommendation for expenses on the basis of air travel. Some of the members present that night rmembered it; others did not.

(2) Upon returning to Chapel Hill, the three delegates filled out two expense accounts each—one listing air travel, one listing coach. During the evening in discussion that took place in the Legislature when the delegates presented their reports on the convention, the executive order directing the three to go by coach was mentioned. In a very confused, noisy atmosphere when they asked which account

No Excuse for Carolina Malpractices

"We trust in God, but we must keep our powder dry," was the way Mr. Claude Teague, business manager of the University, expressed the stand that must be taken in regard to vandalism which has regrettably occurred in the past between Carolina and our athletic rivals. Using the old military terminology, Teague explained that, although the University does not believe that our campus or the campuses of Duke or State college will be plagued with students who wish to carry their school spirit to a property-destroying stage, the colleges must nevertheless, post additional watchmen to intercept any vandalistic delegations.

At the meeting Tuesday night between State and Carolina the delegation regretted that it is now dangerously close to Saturday's game and it will be very difficult to inform the N. C. State student body of the meeting between the two schools and warn them against any malpractices of school spirit.

The "Technician," State college publication is published only on Fridays and even then many students do not receive the publication until Saturday morning. Thus, State student leaders are deprived of an important medium for informing the student body and urging them to leave the battle-royal up to the teams. The only other methods that can be employed will be the use of the campus radio station, and dormitory and fraternity meetings. This can be used effectively to a certain extent, but there remains a portion of the men who will not be informed.

At this late date it will be virtually impossible to carry on a program so extensive as to reach each member of the student body. The confab between State and Carolina should have been conducted several weeks ago. Perhaps it would have been a more concrete plan to have a triangular supper meeting at the same time that Duke and Carolina got together. But this year all that can be done is to trust that the means of informing the State students will be sufficient to alleviate the vandalism on campus.

As to Carolina students it is a different picture. This is the second year that we have carried on an extensive program against vandalistic practices. Last year was a perfect record. If a Carolina student indulges in such practices, he will have done only after having been informed not to do so and of the consequences which are in store for him if he is caught—expulsion from the University.

The UN and You

United Nations Backs WSSF

By Lincoln S. H. Kan

Within two days the World Student Service Fund drive draws to a close and we will begin the accounting. We will find out the answers which have bothered many of us. Are we apathetic to the present world conditions? Are we really interested in our fellow students who hail from strange lands and who someday, like us, will take their place in the world? The results of our Carolina WSSF drive will show us. The planning, organization, and spirit behind this present campaign shows forethought and initiative. I cut my pigtail off for the leaders of the WSSF.

The United Nations is behind the WSSF through the offices of the UNESCO (U. N. Social and Economic Council). Another of their aid programs is soon to be launched, "Children of the World Emergency fund" campaign. Canada has raised $5,000,000. The United States as yet has not contributed although private sources already sent the figures up beyond $10,000,000.

Last week's news in the United Nations is indicative to the good use of the U. N. now being made. After all, the U. N. is an instrument toward peace, it is not peace in itself. The Palestine question has moved from the "ad hoc" Committee on Palestine to the next stage of procedure to consider proposals of other countries amending the present partition plan. Although the majority of the U. N. members agree on the partition, some details still need to be adjusted. The United Kingdom has decided to announce its early withdrawel from the mandate in order to remove all doubts of its intentions; to make both parties (Arabs and Zionists) realize the consequence of failure to agree; to emphasize the urgency of the situation and to leave the United Nations unhampered in its recommendations. A peaceful settlement of the Palestine issue will clear some of the war-shadows which we face and contribute to our future.

Speaking of our future, we know that the grammar school-age children are our future. Recently the American Association for the United Nations, and cooperating groups such as the Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., and the National Jewish Welfare Board, put on a project that we all can help in carrying out. It is a means by which we can actively engage in helping the United Nations. The project is designed for young children and includes teaching them songs, games, quiz games, and plays of other nations. Provisions are also made for special film forums directed at children. We as college students could investigate this Childrens' U. N. program and take it back to our home towns and put it into action. That's one way of helping the United Nations as well as ourselves.

NOW IT'S HAIRPINS

MT. VERNON, Ill. (U.P.)—Mt. Vernon schoolboys will have to stop shooting hairpins at people in the downtown district and on the schoolgrounds, by order of Police Chief Vernon Pigg.

"A man and woman have been injured by the flying hairpins," the chief said. "This dangerous practice must stop immediately before someoneloses an eye."

Meaning, the hairpin business is booming. One store reported the youngsters bought 75 packages of hairpins in one day, and several stores have been sold out.

Jews Demand

Free Unlimited Emigration

By Paul L. Furgatch

On April 25, 1920, the Balfour Declaration was approved by the Allied conference at San Remo where the mandate for Palestine was assigned to Great Britain. Fifty-five nations agreed to the terms of the Balfour Declaration and the Palestine Mandate.

Then, despite a series of activities by the mandatory government which sharply limited and contravened its pledges, the Zionists began to achieve their goal. Insurmountable obstacles were overcome; disease was conquered. Land that had been sterile for thousands of years, barren deserts, blossomed through their efforts. Colonies of settlers sprung up overnight.

In 1939 Hitler came to power and there developed the campaign of anti-semitism climaxed during the war period by the extermination of six million Jews. The pressure of the Jews to escape from the Nazi advance and certain destruction became frantic. This was the moment when the British government chose to issue its infamous White Paper.

Whatever Great Britain had done previously, whatever mark she may make in history in the future, this terrible blot on her record must forever remain on her conscience.

The White Paper of 1939 restricted Jewish immigration to fifteen thousand a year for the next five years, and then it was to halt entirely! One year after this, Jews were forbidden to purchase land in all but 5 per cent of Palestine!

The permanent Mandate Commission of the League of Nations unanimously ruled against the White Paper at its thirty-sixth session in June 1939. Malcomb McDonald, appearing before the commission for the British government, said, and these are his exact words, "Of course, you have the last word." But Britain disregarded the decision and enforced the White Paper.

What were the consequences of Britain's action?

Before the outbreak of the war the Jewish Agency asked for immediate admission of 20,000 children from Poland. The request was rejected.

In May 1940 the Agency again appealed for the exemption of children. The decision took two years. The concession regarding children came too late.

In December 1941 a small vessel named the Struma brought 764 passengers to Istanbul. The Turkish government would not let them land unless assured that another country would admit them. The Agency attempted to secure visas for them under the legal quota, but their efforts were in vain. The Struma was compelled to put to sea again. On February 24, 1942 it sank in the Black Sea. Of 764 passengers, only one survived.

There can be little doubt that tens of thousands might be alive today if the gates of Palestine had been kept open. Those who are left in Europe are waiting.....waiting to enter their homeland. Through those terrible, terror stricken years, this one thought sustained them. Recently the Jewish inmates of a D. P. camp were asked where they desired to go. Their answer was Palestine.

In a report to the UN Assembly, the Nation's Association showed conclusively that there is not one country in the world that will admit more than a token number of DP's

Today, Zionists of every party demand free and unlimited Jewish immigration into Palestine.

Write Away

On Shoulder Shrugging

Dear Mr. Sain:

Unfortunately, I find that I must answer your splendid (???) article of Saturday. It really left a "Brassy Taste!" It's been a long time since I've read anything so cynical and disillusioned in the Daily Tar Heel — yes fatalistic —a "New Low!" OUCH mildly expresses my immediate reaction of real civic shame for your expressed attitudes. You see, some of us are not experts, just citizens upon whose independent toes you have severely trampled.

You could have written instead a constructive criticism of communistic philosophy. Let's hope that you could have done so more convincingly, though, than in this sad defense of capitalism. Yes, you could have displayed the courage of your convictions in some affirmation of positive beliefs and ideals. With increasing "unAmerican" logic, you decry dreams, ideals, equality of opportunity, and freedom. On just what ideals was our great country founded? How do you interpret the Bill of Rights and our Declaration of Independence?

Your shoulders are definitely and "stylishly" shrugged instead of being put to the wheel of progress. Of course, I believe that Democracy is equally as much perspiration and participation as inspiration. You represent far too many fine (?) American citizens who, today, "let John do it," who have forgotten how to "dream (constructive) dreams," and who seem to be afraid of everything except 'fear- itelf!" Do we honestly care whether any injustices are corrected, whether we can prove the worth of democracy, whether we are worthy of real Democracy?

Speak for yourself, please, about the "admirable, abstract things" which you carefully avoid. This might be your privilege, but whom have you to blame when there arise inequalities and failures in our government, be it student, state, national or international?

Also, I question strongly "Liberty's" not being "that important" to anyone. Evidently, you don't want to accept the challenge of communism to re-examine your personal and political philosophy, or to prove the value of applied democracy. Were you 'dreaming" about unlimited opportunities, fancy ladies, and a Lincoln (not to be confused with Abraham)? It is difficult to believe that many students are thrilled to starve (unnecessarily, albeit gracefully) with you via your Ibsen-like illusions. So pardon my final interference as I suggest that you hurry to Hollywood, as soon as it it is "safe" there, and make your million at writing "ever-so-easy" and "lived-stories.

Troubles in Trailer Village

Complaints Call For Action

By Bill Buchan

The boys and their wives in the married couples trailer court are unhappy. And a close look at the facts and figures will quickly explain why.

The old, old complaint from our fellow students, who are unfortunate enough to live in trailers, concerns their rent. At the present time, that amounts to seven dollars per month which pays for the space their trailers occupy (North Carolina property) and the services of a janitor and maid who spend from two to three hours per day cleaning the central toilet and washing facilities that all of the one hundred couples use.

According to the original announcement by the University, the rent charged the trailers was to pay for the expense of building the two central washhouses — over a period of four years. At the present rate, the one hundred couples are paying seven hundred dollars per month, or eighty four hundred dollars per year. (They must pay rent all twelve months.)

The University spent sixteen thousand dollars building the two houses. Under present rent prices, the bill will be paid by next September (one hundred couples were occupying the court in September, 1946) with eight hundred dollars profit to spare.

Bitterness and impatience was expressed by the husbands and wives with whom we talked "on the hill" Tuesday afternoon. Many, including graduate, medical and law school students expressed concern over what they termed "a lack of co-operation" on the part of University officials.

"We are seriously considering carrying our complaints outside Chapel Hill" one law student stated. "If necessary, we will write every major newspaper in the state for help. We feel we have legal complaints that require immediate action."

The wife of this same student commented that several inches of mud is a regular visitor on the floor of the women's toilet every time it rains. Seems that the entrance of the building is below the level of a nearby hill of red clay.

"It took us exactly one year to get a street light installed midway between the Phi Delt house and the light on the corner of University Drive", her husband added, "until then, that was the darkest and one of the most dangerous walks in Chapel Hill."

Last year, the couples paid eight dollars per month for the space they occupy, but this was reduced to seven dollars recently when individual meters were installed for each trailer.

The families were quick to point out that well-placed signs last winter stated that five of the eight dollars was for electricity. Why then, they ask, when electricity was removed from the rent bill, was it only reduced to seven dollars instead of three or four?

"Many of us", one pretty redheaded wife pointed out, "are still paying from thirty to fourty dollars per month for the trailers, in addition to our part on the washing machine which we, as individual groups, bought. It seems strange that we pay rent for the trailer itself and then pay for the privilege of living in it."

It does seem strange especially since they are North Carolina citizens living on State of North Carolina property.

If the University wants or needs, to make money from the rent on the trailers then the excessive prices that student must pay is understandable. If their goal is not pure profit then the present system is difficult to understand and from all signs thus far, unnecessary.

'Creep of the Week' Contest Begins For Sad Campus Dates

By R. FOO GIDUZ

Fall Germans foul-ups made the Monday morning session at the ATO house a little bluer than usual this week. The lads got to swapping troubles (on their weekend w i m m e n, of course), and it seems each had an unbelievably tougher tale to report.

So they decided to do something about it, and the "Creep of the Week" contest came into being. (It's long overdue, brothers!) Contest c o n d u c t o r Al Moore printed up entry blanks, got together a few judges, and by last night they'd picked this week's winner. . . . It was a "dark hoss," ATO's own Ralph Lee. His weekend date, Sue Baughen ,an import from D. C., thought enough of Ralph to turn him in for her "Creep of the Week."

Rules of the contest are what make it so distinctive: (1) List weekend you got sadly saddled and "buddy" that got your date; (2) check beside each qualification if date had buck teeth, was bow-legged, too tall, too short, got too drunk; didn't drink, howled at moon, talked like Mumbles, etc.; (3) date must have had B. O. and halitosis, and any loving automatically disqualifies entry.

Winning "creep" each week will be awarded five points. Winner for the fall quarter will be declared "Creep of the Crop" and receive a large box of Drop Dead pills. . . . This is all on the level, fellas. . . . We're going right over to ATO headquarters and nominate ourselves!

"Nasty Nellie" Battle Lewis Sunday chronicler for the News and Observer and notorious baiter of both Dr. Frank Graham and the Communism alleged to be devouring UNC, got off on the wrong track Monday. . . . Hearing that Junius Scales was to speak at IRC's Monday evening forum on "Peace with Russia" she wired a club member requesting a full report on the session which she understood "Chapel Hill Communists" would hold! . . . So sorry Nellie there's no scandal to report. . . . It was strictly a quiet, informative session.

But we reached the following conclusions on the Monday IRC discussion (which packed GM lounge to a capacity-plus audience of 350): (1) The meeting was well conducted and stuck strictly to the topic; (2) curiosity seekers were most disappointed to see that mild-mannered local Red chief Junius Scales was a very normal looking and inoffensive talking gent; (3) no one's minds were changed, but an interesting discussion was held; (4) many know-it-alls in the audience spoke, against minority ideas simply because Scales spoke for them.

SP and CP were caught with the political pants down this week when they didn't get their Frosh and Junior class officer nominations turned in by Tuesday noon's deadline. . . . The UP-sponsored class elections bill was passed only last Thursday and the UP somehow was the only group to get in their nominations. . . . Legislative fireworks are promised for tonight as Student and Campus party solons (they have a majority) push for a revision of the bill. . . . And here's a plea for that august body to resoundingly defeat a measure introduced last week to set up a committee to "orient" the students on Communism.—A thoroughly stupid and even dangerous bill for our money. . . . It isn't intended as such, but this tinges of the infamous Congressional Rankin committee. . . . We prefer to think for ourselves!

A Poetess in Mudville

BY DAN SAPP

The big news this week concerns a new arrival, and according to Bob Durand it's about the biggest news to hit these parts in many moons. The object of this big build-up is Maria Del Buono and she deserves every word of it. We got Bob down out of the clouds long enough to get a few details. Maria is from Bologna, Italy and she arrived last week. She and Bob met in Italy during the war while he was stationed there. After much correspondence and an act or two of Congress, Maria has finally arrived and they plan to be married very soon. Bob tells us that Maria is a graduate of the University of Bologna and is an accomplished poetess and composer.

We turn from the happy newly-weds-to-be to more prosaic matters. Bill Goulding held a Meeting of the dog committee Monday night. According to very reliable sources the village canine residents may return to their bones in peace as no drastic actions were considered. The committee plans to make a survey of the entire village to get the general feeling among dog-owners and non dog-owners. After the survey is made their findings will be published (in this column I hope, I've got to write about something).

Haywood Wyatt has been chosen to represent the village in the Chapel Hill food conservation committee.

Ken Blodgett who heads the lighting committee is consulting with city planning authorities of the University to find out what lighting would be ideal for the village.

Ladies, of you have old dressers, chests etc., that might need a face lift, Pennsylvania Dutch designs might help. You can order patterns very inexpensively. That is of course if you like Pennsylvania Dutch. If not, make your own designs, I was only trying to be helpful.

Booters Battle Roanoke Eleven On Fetzer Field Today

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

COEDS AND STICKS

THERE appeared on Emerson Field last Tuesday afternoon a game masquerading under the name of field hockey, playing by twenty-two and later more, energetic coeds representing Carolina and neighboring Meredith College of Raleigh. As if they weren't dangerous enough without putting sticks in their hands!

The Carolina coeds won, mostly because of their superior ability and knowledge of the game, and also because they outhustled their opponents.

The game which looks relatively simple, takes on massive proportions as play gets underway. The two centers start the play in the middle of the field, the ball being placed between their sticks by the official, who in turn hurries from the scene, while the two bang the ground, their sticks, the ground, their sticks, the ground the sticks, and then are allowed to take as healthy a cut at the ball as space will permit. How mayhem is avoided is a miracle!

Once the ball is in play, each team of course, attempts to move it into the opponents' end of the field to an area in front of the goal called the striking circle, from where a legal goal can be scored. The ball can be hit with only one side of the stick, with a girl approaching a ball from the wrong side being forced to run completely around, making a right hand turn on it, or to execute a daring maneuver known as "reverse sticks," which is the kind of plays that make All-Americans, All-Americans.

FOUL PLAY

ON THE matter of fouls, there are numerous ones which the officials were scrupulous in calling, but all of which no matter how malicious, contract a penalty of nothing more serious than a free hit which doesn't seem to do you much good when you are a hundred feet from the goal. Of course, nothing of a violent nature in the way of infractions ever occurs with the teams treating each other in a ratherly sisterly fashion.

One of the finer points of the game, occurs when the ball is knocked out of play at the end of the field. Everyone yells—bully, bully—which confuses newer spectators to think everything is jolly and fine. Actually it turns out the bully is merely one these—ground, sticks, ground affairs—which began the game.

The girls have a wonderful sense of spirit. They give each other a cheer before the game and another one afterward, which if the vocal chords can stand it, is a fine idea.

The Carolina team had a smooth bunch of operators on the field in the persons of Butch Goodwin, K. D. Durham, Bill Lloyd, and Scotty Dellinger, to mention a few, who played the game with the apparent knowledge of what the score was. For the rcord it was 3-1, Carolina.

150-POUND FOOTBALL

CAROLINA, a school known for its wide range of athletic appeals to all students, is attempting another step in this direction. The step is the organization of a 150-pound football team at the University next fall.

The move seems to be a popular one, being an opportunity for the boys who don't carry too much weight on the campus a chance at big time football competition. From the reports around, the Athletic Association seems to feel kindly toward the action in line with its constant attitude of "give the students the athletics they want." The big holdup now is the lack of available teams to play.

This poses a serious problem since there is no school this side of the Naval Academy that has such an animal and the remainder of Navy's Eastern league competitors are still further to the north. The logical solution is the organization of the sport in the larger colleges around the state, i.e. Duke, State, and Wake Forest, to form a nucleus, with a game with seemingly-interested Virginia, and Navy thrown in for a rousing six-game schedule. It is a good idea, worthy of thought, consideration, and the necessary push to reality.

BATTLE OF THE BULGES

FAMED Fortescue University will come to Chapel Hill, whammies and all, Friday afternoon to do dubious battle with Phogbound university, and as yet untried eleven which like Notre Dame, has supposedly played under the wraps all season. Perhaps they can't afford uniforms.

Fortescue will be paced by its triple threat back-rumbling, stumbling, fumbling Monty Alphonsostein. Definitely a mudder, Alphonsostein will be hoping for wet weather which brings his game to its greatest heights.

Leading the Phogbound outfit will be reknowned Lil' Abner Yokum, who is considered the greatest back to hit the nation or in fact, a line, since the days of Steamroller Jackson. Big Stanislouse of Old and New Reliable, is quoting the odds at 9-5, whatever that means.

OLD MAN MOSE

FROM the looks of yesterday's letters-to-the-editors' column, Old Man Mose' ain't dead after all. He's still alive and kicking.

Coed Volleyball Playoffs Start Tonight

Chi Omega goes against Kenana and Pi Phi battles Tri Delt in the semi finals of the coed volleyball tournament this evening in the women's gym.

The Chi O and Kenan lassies take the floor at 8 o'clock for their clash and the Pi Phi and Tri Delt teams follow at 8:30. The two winners will battle it out for the championship Tuesday evening.

All four teams were undefeated during the regular tourney, copping three victories each. The Tri Delts made their way into the playoffs Tuesday evening by downing McIver, 37-10. In the other Tuesday tilts, Town downed Alpha Gam, 25-22, to end in a three-way tie with Alderman and Carr for fifth place, and Spencer won over Archer by forfeit.

Spectators are welcome to attend tonight's tourney session.

Tar Heel-Indian Films Will Be Shown Tonight

Movies of the Carolina-William and Mary game will be shown by the Monogram club at 7:45 o'clock this evening in Memorial hall, club President Len Szafaryn announced yesterday.

Those Lights Again

Tar Heels Work Late Preparing For State

Once again Coach Carl Snavely had to have the Navy Field lights turned on as twilight fell yesterday, as he sent his gridders through another intensive State-pointed practice.

Fearing more injuries, Snavely dispensed with his usual Wednesday scrimmage and instead sent his charges through a long workout which stressed both defensive and offensive fundamentals, with much passing by Walt Pupa and Charlie Justice, and a polishing of the Tar Heel running offense.

Carolina's offensive stock for the tilt with the defense-minded Wolfpack took a big tumble when Coach Snavely disclosed that Hosea Rodgers, whose offensive exploits are too well known to be mentioned here, will either see no action at all on Saturday or else as little as possible. Rodgers did not even attend yesterday's workout.

Others Injured

Bill Maceyko and Ted Hazlewood are other injured Tar Heel gridders whose Saturday status is doubtful. Both were in sweat clothes yesterday watching practice. Little Johnny Clements was in uniform also and will probably be ready to go against State after his one-game lay-off.

Saturday's tilt is now shaping up as a struggle between Carolina's offense and State's rugged defense. According to this week's statistics, the Wolfpack is first in forward pass defense in the country and second in total defense.

The contest will also feature a punting duel between Charlie Justice, now the nation's leading punter, and State's Leslie "Footsie" Palmer, who is college football's number three Booter.

So the 35,000 odd fans who will file into Kenan stadium Saturday will probably be treated to a hard-fought low-scoring family scrap. Little Chattanooga held the Farmers to three touchdowns so the Cow College gridders will have to rely on their rock-ribbed defense to stop the Tar Heels high-scoring passing and running game.

State, led by such stalwarts as John Bozeman, Al Phillips, Bernie Watts—the Agriculturists' Sid Varney—George Blomquist, Ralph Barksdale, Charlie Richkus, Gwyn Fletcher, and John Guzvar, will be out to gain revenge for the 27-13 defeat they suffered at the hands of the V-12-powered Tar Heels in their last meeting in 1943.

BILL SMITH
. . . big man in Carolina line.

Next Jayvee Clash Is November 14

The Carolina Tar Babies have exactly one more week of practice before they leave for Charlottesville, Va., for their scheduled game with the Cavalier junior varsity on November 14.

The jayvees are still running State plays and using the Wolfpack defense while the varsity gets set for the homecoming clash this Saturday. Maryland formations will be on the agenda for the early part of next week.

"We look bad on pass defense against the varsity," declared Coach Crowell Little, "And we need to do a great deal of work on our offense."

Tailback Darrell Byerly is the only Tar Baby on the seriously injured list and will be out for the rest of the season with a pulled muscle.

After the Virginia tussle, the jayvees finish their season by playing Duke on November 21 and Navy on November 28.

Zeta Psi Divides Two Playoff Tilts

SAE triumphed over Zeta Psi by a 21-0 score in one of the top games of intramural tag football play yesterday afternoon but Zeta came back to take a 13-6 decision over Sigma Nu in the battle for the League two crown.

The Grads also neared a loop crown in the dormitory division by defeating the Alexander No. 1 outfit by a 27-12 margin in one of the offensive battles of the day.

Sigma Nu meets SAE in the final game of the League two playoff battle this afternoon on Field No. 7. Chi Psi, Phi Delta Theta, and DKE have won championships in the various leagues so far.

The Grads have a record of six straight wins in Dorm league one and will get their final test this afternoon when they tangle with the Mud Dobbers on Field No. 5. A win today will clinch honors for the Grads.

In high scoring tilts of the afternoon, Med School trounced Alexander No. 2, 35-0, Aycock toppled Graham, 33-12, and Stacy romped over Quonset Hut, 27-0.

In mural tennis play, semi-finals will be played this afternoon in the novice singles when Jones meets Griffin and Bowman meets Billerbeck.

Harriers Complete Time Trial Tests Before State Meet

Twenty-three harriers completed the most satisfactory time-trial run so far this year yesterday afternoon.

Twelve of the men completed the five-mile course with the rest of the men going over the four mile route, in preparation for the freshmen and varsity meets with State college Saturday morning.

Jack Milne and Sam Magill paced the five-mile crew home in the fine time of 27:22. This is a full minute better than Magill has ever turned in for that distance. Alvin Smith was clocked in 27:45, while Mark Burnham turned in his best performance as a harrier when he crossed the finish line in 28:32, which betters by three seconds his IC4A time last year.

Big improvements were also shown by Allan Mackenzie and Halstead Holden who hit the tape in less than 29:30. John Bristow, Chuck Herty, Jim Hunt, Basil Wood, Dan Martin and Frank Hooper all finished in fairly good times.

On the four-mile course Freshmen Dick Carr and Bob Black paced the field with times of 21:04. They were followed by Hiatt, Lewis, Wallenborn, Brockman, Crimmins, Mann, Partridge, Linebach and Barringer.

Saturday's freshman affair will be the first of the yearling varietv since before the war and will give many boys a chance to compete.

Play Opens Today For Minor Sports

With the final week of intramural tag football drawing to a close, volleyball and table tennis are slated to enter the mural picture this afternoon when five contests in the table tennis set and eight in the volleyball program get under way.

The main floor of Woollen gym will be the site of action where four volleyball courts have been set up. Games will be played at 4 and 5 o'clock as in tag football.

Four different men, one doubles unit and two singles players, constitute a team in table tennis. All matches, both doubles and singles, shall consist of the best two-out-of-three games.

It is imperative that the captain of the team report to the scorer's table and receive the score sheet before the match starts. The intramural representatives, who will be located at the scorer's table, will be Bob Ball and Billy Creel.

Allenmen Seeking Fourth Win in Row

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's booters will be seeking their fourth straight victory this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Fetzer field when they tangle with Roanoke college's touring eleven.

The Tar Heels will enter today's contest classed as slight favorites since the visitors are currently fielding the first soccer team in the history of the school.

Tar Heel Mentor Marvin Allen emphasized the fact yesterday that since the Maroons have been playing intramural soccer for many years, they will probably field a strong eleven. Roanoke college also does not have a football team so this leaves soccer as the big fall sport of the Virginia school.

Same Lineup

Except for Wayne Johnson's entry into the starting lineup in the place of the shin-busted Basil Jackson, the same men who opened last week's home game against Duke will start today's contest.

Dave Ferebee, scrappy forward, has been shining in practice sessions earlier this week and if he continues his top-notch performances, a place will probably have to be found for him in the Tar Heel starting lineup.

Johnson is another Blue and White Booter who has been coming along fast recently and winning the praises of Coach Allen. Sidelined earlier in the season by a knee injury, Johnson started the Virginia game in place of Basil Jackson and turned in a first-rate performance. Coach Allen now expects great things of him in the near future.

to submit, they were directed by the Legislature to file the expense accounts listing travel by air. Some of the legislators present that night remembered it; others did not. In fact, at still a later meeting, when this hearing was taking place, a motion was made and passed specifically authorizing travel by air in order to clear up the intention of the Legislature once and for all.

No Overlapping

(3) There was no actual overlapping of Miller's fraternity and NSA accounts. All money he claimed was actually spent, his fraternity knowingly allowing him to claim certain expenses for which they would reimburse him.

(4) The delegates all were ready to submit the difference between the accounts turned in and the $200 as the bill directed.

(5) Clampitt and Baker subsequently added a note on their accounts to the effect that they traveled by coach.

The decision of the Men's Honor council is as follows:

(1) All three delegates are completely cleared from any inferences of deceit, fraud, dishonorable acts, etc.

Return Difference

(2) Each of the three shall return to the general fund the difference between the $200 authorized and those expenses necessarily and actually incurred. This is to be within a reasonable length of time and include the difference between $200 and coach fare plus other expenses for Baker and Clampitt, and $200 and plane fare plus other expenses for Miller. The Council feels that the three men in no way sincerely intended to get something that wasn't du them. Had the Legislature not told them to submit the accounts in question they would not have done so.

GALLEY THREE — NSA

(3) The question of legality of executive orders of the nature in this case shall be left up to the Student council to determine since it requires interpretation of the constitution.

Specific Rules

(4) The council shall recommend to the Student Audit board that it draw up a list of specific requirements covering such matters as travel, receipts for expenditures, etc., and that it recommend that the Legislature enact definite and permanent legislation concerning allotment of funds to be spent by students traveling in-state an. out-of-state.

The following reprimands are a little out of the Council's jurisdiction, it admits, but in the absence of an attorney-general or some active group to watch student government and push those of us who are negligent (this council included), it feels that some such action is justified. The reprimands:

Legislature Reprimanded

(1) The Student Legislature shall be reprimanded for approving expense accounts which it knew were falsely stated, regardless of the reason; for negligence in the writing of bills and keeping of minutes; for general confusion and laxness in its meetings.

(2) The president and secretary-treasurer and especially the vice-president shall be reprimanded for failing to keep abreast of the acts of the Legislature in their entirety and for issuing executive orders contrary thereto.

(3) The staff of the Daily Tar Heel shall be reprimanded for failing to investigate clearly all matters from all sides before coming out with the many sensational stories, particularly the headlines pertaining thereto, that have appeared recently, many of which are completely misleading and almost false.

Gals Git Thar Chance In Human Race Today

The women get their chance today as member of the "weaker" sex in some 44,000 different celebrations all over the world to run wild in their annual Sadie Hawkins day. The local campus is no exception, and preliminary reports from SH day chairmen Mike Loftus and Chuck Hilty indicate the wimmenfolks will outdo themselves in correcting the long-complained-of 7-1 ratio. To wit: "Menfolks, beware!"

Features of the day include opening festivities in the Y court, at 1 o'clock, the P.U.-F.U. feetsball game at 3, and the Sadie Hawkins day grand barn dance to top off the affair this evening. A half-dozen campus organizations, under the supervision of Graham Memorial, are cooperating in presenting the day-long celebration honoring the homely ex-spinster of Al Capp's nationally famous comic strip, Li'l Abner.

Fate Decided

The fate of several hundred hapless males has already been decided. A fish-bowl drawing was held yesterday by campus coeds to divide up the "cron" of men who signed the CICA roster in the Y lobby this week. These fish bowl drawees will be called for around 8 o'clock this evening by the coeds fortunate enough to draw their names, and they will be escorted to the Woollen gymnasium barn dance.

Lonesome Polecate and Ole Man Mose start the ball rolling in the Y court at 1 o'clock this afternoon as this dapper duet peddles its respective wares of Joy Juice and advice to all comers. At the same time well-practiced hillbillies of the Western North Carolina club will present their version of how square dancing should really be done. Formation of the grand parade through town begins at 1:30 in front of the YMCA. Composed of "floats" (anything from tricycles through jeeps and automobiles and led by the Dogpatch-Fortescue-Phogbound band, the parade will proceed around to Franklin street through the business section, and down to Fetzer field.

Judges Named

Judges for the best parade float are Dean E. L. Mackie, Mayor Bob Madry, Prof. J. Penrose Harland, Prof. E. J. Woodhouse, and Mrs. Victor

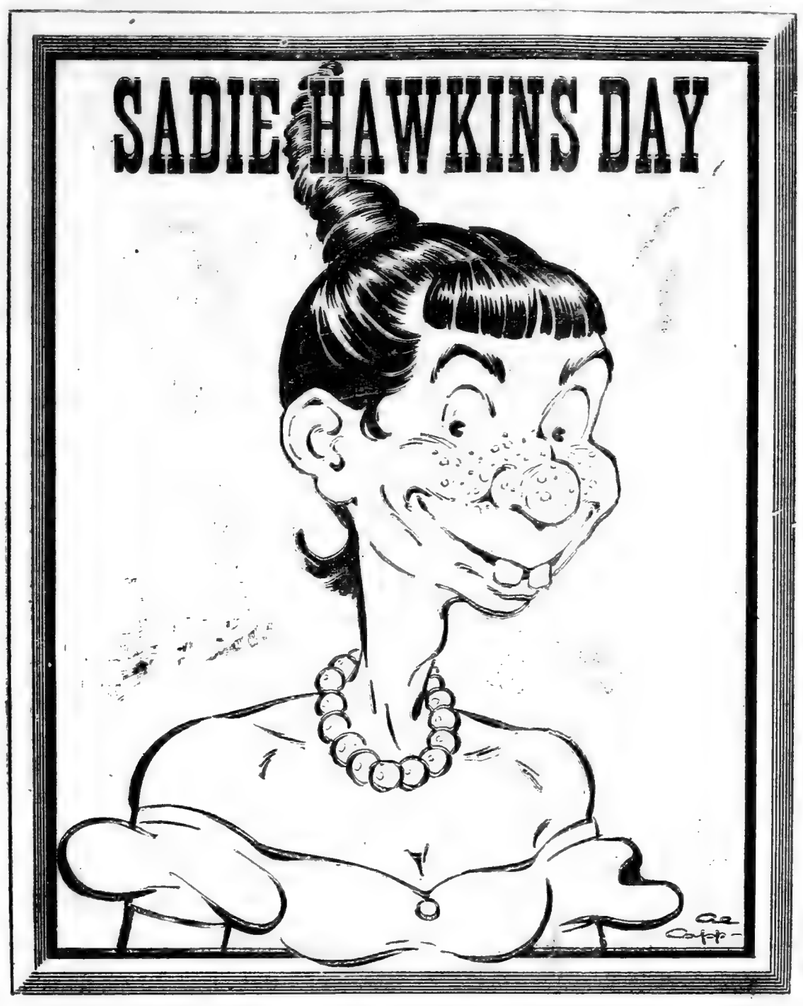
Short Skirts Asked For SH Barn Dance



Yaller shoes, SHORT skirts, and polka dot ties and blouses will be the "rough" order of the night for the final event of the world's most unique celebration of a reversal of the sexes, Sadie Hawkin's day.

The wearing of any sort of Dogpatch - mountaineer costume will be required for admission to the evening's grand bran dance, which begins at 8:30 in Woollen gymnasium, and the Western North Carolina club, dance sponsors, urged students to "let their imaginations run wild" in dreaming up costumes for the affair.

An hour-long show of a dozen-odd surprise acts, directed by Andy Griffith, promises to be one of the top attractions of the night. Numerous campus personalities, "known better for their accomplishments in fields other than entertainment" according to close-mouthed program directors, was to participate in the comic mountaineer extravaganza. Participants permitting, the show will begin at 9:30.

To the wearers of the most authentic costumes and the longest beards will go distinctive prizes. The authentic costume-judging list includes Li'l Abner, Mammy and Pappy Yokum, Hairless Joe, Lonesome Polecat, Daisy Mae, Marryin' Sam, and Ole' Man Mose. However, equal awards will also be made to those sporting the best and most unique outfifits of any characters out of the Li'l Abner comic strip.

Though the main part of the evening will be devoted to square dancing, to be led by the Western N. C. club, sweet and swing music for round dancing will be played also.

Art Majors Decorate Four Store Windows

Eight art majors, working under the direction of student chairman Joseph Fidler and faculty advisor John Rembert, have decorated four windows in downtown stores depicting student conditions abroad, in connection with the World Student Service fund drive.

James Moon, a special student at the university who has spent several years at Cooper Art Institute, set up a display in the window of Marion's Five and Ten Cent store using principles of modern art to depict foreign students' lack of food.

Mary Neely, Marilyn Blackwell, Mary Moulton and Betty Pierson have depicted in the University Service plant window the bridge of supplies

University Asks Conference For Guinea Pig Privileges

By Herb Nachman

The University has been offered for experimental purposes to the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities and will be one of the first institutions inspected if the proposal for accrediting southern graduate schools is passed by the association next month.

Dean of the Graduate School, William Pierson, has made the announcement following his return from the annual Conference of Deans of southern graduate schools held in New Orleans for two days last week.

Dean Pierson explained that a proposal for accrediting southern graduate schools was passed by the Conference of Deans and the conference is now awaiting decision of the Southern Association before beginning inspections.

Accrediting will be of a different sort under the proposal than that used presently in the various undergraduate divisions. Schools under application for accreditation will undergo an inspection to determine their relative standards on such matters as faculty, library facilities, laboratory, examinations, student achievements and admission policies.

The schools will be graded, Pierson said, according to departments. "Measurement of institutions will be qualitative rather than quantitative," he said. "Accrediting will be determined by the department system."

Dean Pierson went on to say that if the proposal goes into effect it will have a far reaching effect toward improvement in general graduate work of this region.

Standards of the proposal have been under preparation by the deans for nearly 15 years. Pierson said, and approval of the Commission of Higher Education has already been obtained.

"It only remains now for the Southern Association to approve the standards at their annual meeting next month," he added. The Conference of Deans is not the accrediting body," he further explained, "they may determine the minimum standards but the final decision must come through the Association."

Di Senate Approves Federal World Group

The Dialectic Senate in its meeting Wednesday night passed a hotly contested bill to resolve the present United Nations General Assembly into a committee to initiate a more powerful World Federal Government.

By an 18 to 6 vote of the Senate members and a 22 to 14 vote of all present including visitors, the measure endorsing a more forceful expedient of world-wide agreement was passed only after actively voiced dissention. After its first reading by Randy McLeod, the bill brought forth considerable debate from the floor. Edith Knight and Lincoln Kahn, Senators and campus members of the Collegiate Council for United Nations, spoke negatively against such a proposal while Al Lowenstein, Russell Baldwin, and Bill Harding led debate affirmatively.

Most of the speakers thought that the present United Nations was inadequate, but the issue made on the floor was whether the UN should be nursed along from its infancy with any possible improvements or whether another stronger board of World Federation should be established with a more inclusive basic constitution to ward off the impending danger of an atomic bomb war. The final vote came to settle the argument came only at 11:15 o'clock.

Gran Childress, chairman of the Di membership committee, expressed regret that the length of the discussion on the bill necessitated the postponement of ten applications for membership. However, Childress asked that all prospective Senate members be on hand at 9 o'clock next Wednesday evening in the Di hall on the second floor of New East when their applications for admittance will definitely be considered.

Freshmen Hall, Lineberger, Stamey, Yates Awarded Braswell Scholarships Worth $200

The four Braswell scholarships for freshmen have been awarded this year to Charles Winston Hall of Sanford; Adrian Smith Lineberger, Jr., Chapel Hill; Claude Richard Stamey, Canton; and Herbert Seawell Yates, Rockingham.

Valued at $200 each, these scholarships are given annually to four entering freshmen on the basis of scholastic ability, financial need, well-rounded personality, and promise of future distinction. The scholarships are provided by a fund of $21,000 set up in 1938 by an anonymous donor as an endowment in memory of Dr. Frank R. Braswell of Rocky Mount, class of 1888.

The winners this year were all prominent graduates of State high schools last June.

Graduating from the Deep River high school of Sanford, Charles Winston Hall ranked first in his class of 12, edited the school paper, served as secretary of the senior class, and was a member of the Beta club. Hall made all A's on his high school work as did Claude Richard Stamey in the Bethel high school in Waynesville. Stamey, who now lives in Canton was also active on the basketball and boxing teams, in debating and publications, and as president of the Beta club, graduating first in a class of 46.

Local Boy

Valedictorian in a class of 49 here in the Chapel Hill high school, Adrian Smith Lineberger, Jr., lists among his honors duty on the football, basketball, and baseball teams; in school plays and the University band; as sports editor of Hillife and president of both the Hi-Y and the student council; and at Boys State. Yates in the Rockingham high school participated in debating, music, student government, the Beta club, and business management of the school paper.

Alternates for these scholarships were Carl Rudolph Spell, Roseboro: Billy Raymond Hale, Thomasville: Larry Dew Hooks, Fremont; and Jere Leonard Morton, Raleigh. Last year's winners were Wilson M. Lee, Benson; Charles Alva Pryce, Rockingham; Hubert Donald Robertson, Asheville; and Richard Isley Walker, Winston-Salem.

Ned Reap, Gardiner Orchestras Slated For Battle of Bands

Ned Reap and his Dream Serenaders and Scott Gardiner and his orchestra will provide music for the World Student Service fund's Battle of Bands dance tomorrow night from 8 to 12 in Woollen gym.

Miss Payoff of 1947, selected by student votes from among 20 entrants sponsored by campus organizations, will be crowned during intermission by Wayne Brennengan, chairman of the dance organization committee who is acting as co-chairman for Saturday's dance.

Cup For Decorations

Chuck Voigt, president of the University club, will make the awards for the best Homecoming decorations—a cup for the best sorority or fraternity and one for the best dormitory decorations during intermission. The decorations will be judged at 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Invitations to State college students who will be here for the game to remain for the dance have been extended through the State college Technician.

Ten Cents A Vote

Votes for Miss Payoff may still be registered in the Y lobby today and tomorrow, at ten cents per vote, and at the dance itself until 10 o'clock. All proceeds from the dance and the contest will go to the WSSF drive for relief of foreign students.

To Show Conditions Abroad

Decorations for the dance will consist of lighted posters showing students' conditions abroad. Made by a committee headed by Emily Ogburn they show, the student service center at Kunming, China; ruins on the University of Warsaw campus; coeds pinch-hitting as farmers; and students doing their own laundering and hair cutting.

Emily's committee included Gwen Finley, Mary McGougen, Barbara Dalton, Betty Long, and Ruth McCann.

Prices Is Subject Of Russell's Talk To Welfare Panel

Phillips Russell, University professor of journalism, said Wednesday evening that "we cannot hope to understand high prices in Chapel Hill unless we also understand the present international situation."

Speaking as a member of a panel on high prices sponsored by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Russell laid special emphasis on the British embargo on tobacco imports as a factor which will have a significant effect on the economy of North Carolina.

Concrete Means

Other panel members, Tom McDade, former chairman of the Vets co-op store, and the Reverend Charles Jones of the Presbyterian church, laid emphasis on concrete things which can be done in Chapel Hill to combat high prices such as establishing eating co-ops and doing without luxuries.

Radio Station Plans Set for Chapel Hill

Application for the building of a radio station in Chapel Hill was filed last week with the Federal Communications commission, Collier Cobb, Jr. one of the three applicants, said yesterday.

Cobb said that he, Grady Pritchard, and J. B. Johns, all businessmen of the community, placed an application to construct a standard broadcasting station, to operate on a frequency of 1340 kilocycles, a power of 250 watts, with unlimited broadcasting time. As yet there are no definite construction plans or agreed network affiliations. The station may be an independent, Cobb added.

"The permission request must be granted by the Washington commission before any definite plans can be laid," he said. "Federal action on the request should be completed in a few months, if no complications arise over the desired frequency."

University Services Recognized by Navy

A bronze plaque, honoring the University's war-time services, will be presented to the school by the Navy Department in Kenan stadium tomorrow, Chancellor Robert B. House said today.

The formal presentation will be made before the kick-off of the State-Caholina game by Capt. D. W. Loomis, professor of Naval Science at the NROTC here, and will be accepted for the Uinversity by Chancellor House

Departmental Award

The bronze tablet is a departmental award made with Congressional authorization, and is signed by former Secretary of Navy James Forrestal. The raised inscription reads that "this mark of commendation is awarded to the University of North Carolina for its effective cooperation in training naval personnel during World War II."

Then follows the list of naval training units attached to the University during the war, for which this award is being made: The Naval Reserve Officer's Training Corps, the Naval V-12 Unit, the V-12 Medical Unit, the U.S.N. Pre-flight school, and the Preflight school for the Free French Forces.

A proposed exchange of university cheer leaders with those of State college for the pep rallies to be held at the two schools tonight failed to materialize late yesterday as head cheerleader Myrt Sherard conferred with State cheerleaders in Raleigh.

The intended swap, which was proposed at a conference of Univrsity and State college leaders Tuesday night, was the latest effort to foster good will between the two institutions.

Both State and University representatives pledged full support at the Tuesday night meeting to a program designed to prevent vandalism on the campuses of the two colleges.

State Difficulty

Members of the state delegation pointed out that it will be quite difficult for them to inform the complete student body and warn all students against property destruction and practices which create ill feeling between the two schools at such a late date. They stated that they would be greatly handicapped because their campus publication does not come out until Friday night, virtually too late to combat any possible vandalism.

Punitive Measures

Jennings Teal, president of the State student government, promised that he would endeavor to get the student government court to expel any student from State who was guilty of an act of vandalism. He said that although their constitution does not specifically deal with vandalistic practices, they are able to prosecute a student in any manner the court sees fit for "ungentlemanly" behavior.

University delegates to this good-will gathering included Tom Eller, student body president, Bob Broughton, chairman of the Student Council, and Barron Mills, Daily Tar Heel editor. Faculty representatives were Dean of Men Fred Weaver and Claude Teague, business manager of the University.

Phillips Russell To Speak Tonight

"What Henry Wallace has to offer to North Carolina" will be the topic for discussion when the Wallace Democrats club meets tonight at 7 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

Presenting his viewpoint on the subject Phillips Russell, University professor of journalism, will lead off the discussion before the floor is opened to the audience for a general discussion.

"We are now completely organized and ready to go to work on the important job of bringing Wallace's views before the people of the state. We will welcome the presence of everyone who is interested tonight," said chairman Martin Knowlton.

Who Cares? Several Thousand, Mr. Park

College youth are peculiar beings. We are "impatient". We are "adolescents" who try to learn our government my "holding mock legislative assemblies." This is how we are described by John Park in an editorial appearing in the October 31 issue of the Raleigh Times,

The editorial does much more than call us impatient adolescents. It states that the North Carolina Student Legislative assembly has been cancelled and "who cares?" Mr. Park, we will tell you who cares. There are thousands of college students throughout the state who care, and they are not going to remain idle and take a mere "it has been cancelled" for an answer without putting up a good fight for an assembly which they deem worthwhile.

And it is worthwhile even if it does no more than create a feeling of good will and understanding between the colleges of the State. It is worthwhile if only in that it helps a student become acquainted with parliamentary procedure according to Robert's Rules of Order. Some of the major advantages of a Student Legislative assembly are to teach a student how to entertain a thought, to give him practice in getting on his feet and expressing his thoughts, to familarize him with the jargon used in legislative bills.

The college student is not trying to muscle-in on the "legislative and other irrelevant matters which should be left "to their elders," as was inferred in the Times' editorial.

We college students may be immature and adolesent. If we are we must have become so within the last eighteen months. We were mature individuals when the War Department called on us to give our service and our lives in the war.

If there is an attitude such as expressed in the Time's asinine editorial prevelant it should be an incentive to the Debate council, the Phi, Di, IRC, etc., and the campus in general to instigate an assembly this year. It had to be done last year.

Practically everyone, excluding Thad Eure and a few other individuals, thought the initial plan of having an annual legislature assembly was a erstwhile idea, until 1945 when Buddy Glenn, of the Carolina delegation, introduced a bill which gave the Negro youth of the colleges in the state the opportunity to attend the annual assemblies. Since then there has been one excuse after another for calling off the assembly. Last year Carolina had to threaten and formulate plans to sponsor the affair before State college condesended to continue as sponsor.

It is true that State was the original big gun behind the first assembly. But now that they want to pull out of the group (since Negro students have been invited to attend the one-day meet) they are not strong enough in themselves to squelch the assembly.

Last year's meeting which Negroes attended was, according to delegates present, quite harmonous. If the assembly were of a social nature, and sponsored dances, parties, banquets, or even required that the delegates spend the night in Raleigh, then there may be a major problem to face. But none of these are required.

Now, more than ever before, we should initiate a plan for the continuation of the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly.

The following is the Raleigh Times' Editorial in its entirety:

"The North Carolina Students Legislative Council has dissolved and the Student Legislative Assembly slated for November 28-29 has been cancelled.

"And who care?

"There have been hints that the organization blew up because of a "racial issue" brought to the fore and there are further hints that New Yorkers were attempting to pull strings in the Student Assembly. But the cause of the Council's dissolution is immaterial. The fact that the Council has blown up is pleasing. It should have been disolved several years ago. In fact, there never was any good reason for its creation.

"It is well enough that college students learn about government, but these mock legislative assemblies of adolescents are premature.

"Out of the total number of students entering colleges, only 44 per cent manage to graduate. This percentage ought to increase. It can increase if college students spend more time on their regular studies and leave legislative and other irrevelant matters to their elders.

"After all, our college youth should not be impatient. They'll grow into maturity someday—and all too soon. Then they can devote themselves to politics in a big way—if they still have the desire.

"The wise college student will devote the lion's share of his or her time toward prescribed studies in order to be fitted for a constructive role in government and business when college life becomes just a pleasant memory."

Poll Suggests DTH Improvements

By Pete Gerns

"Get a few good writers," "Improve your editorials," "More local sports pictures" are characteristic of suggestions for improvements of DTH content.

Many of the criticisms were not of a constructive nature and because they were not signed by the writer they were thrown away. Few members of the student body were fair to sign their monikers to their ideas on improvements and, in fairness, each will be quoted in full.

"Eliminate that often inane, usually illogical and sometimes vicious syndicated cartoon." J. P. van de Velde.

"Less Communism." Jack Fakoury.

"Use clearer print and more ink." Edward Holmes.

"Don't publish Billy Carmichael III's column." R. P. Moses.

"Refrain from unjust criticism of visiting athletic teams (sports page)."

"Less publicity given to Junius Scales and his misguided bunch of dissatisfied perverts. Why a boy from a good family would affiliate himself to and organization which is so opposed to the American way of life is beyond me and it must be from a warped viewpoint. I think such publicity is just what a guy like that thrives on." Donald L. McKinney.

The question for Tuesday's column centers on "Constructive criticism of the latest issue of the Carolina Mag." It is hoped that the critics will not refrain from signing their names this time. Deadline has been set for Sunday eve.

Other anonymous criticism runs something like this: "Don't be so liberal," "You're too damn afraid," "Try to have headlines that don't give too false an impression of the material in the article."

Tar Heels, Not Yankees, Invited Negroes; More Than Meets The Eye Behind Abolition

Shropshire Doubts Motives

(Editor's Note: The following article was written by Don Shropshire, who served as speaker of the House of Representatives in last year's session of the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly.)

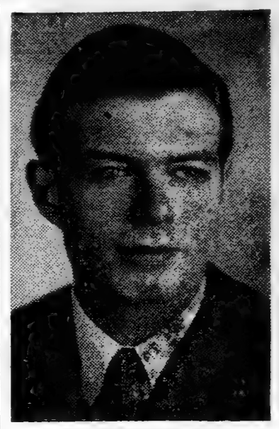
The announcement by Ira Helms of State college that they would no longer sponsor the State Legislative Assembly is ont only unfortunate, but also very hard to understand. One cannot help conclude that there is more to this announcement than meets the eye because the reasons given for the action do not make sense.

Many of us throughout the state have been aware for some time of possible presure on the Student Legislature hosts since the Assembly voted two years ago by a overwhelming majority to invite delegates from the Negro colleges and universities. In fact, a prominent faculty member there immediately withdrew his support and cooperation when this action was taken over his protests. The planning was immediately thrown in the laps of the students and they handled their jobs voluntarily well.

After a successful meeting of seemingly perfect harmony, the students unanimously adopted a final resolution which said that "this session presents convincing evidence that the races can cooperate to build a better Southland." The delegates from State College, one of which served as Speaker Pro Tem of the House, seemed to be as pleased with the results as did anyone else.

Now we receive word that the racial question "had a large part to play" in the cancelling of the meeting this year. This is mighty strange, for it is in effect a reversal of their original stand. They had even gone so far as to reserve the Capitol for the meeting and to invite the Governor and Chancellor of State College to speak to the delegates at the first session.

It has also been announced that an investigation by State College students revealed that the resolution of the 1945 Legislature to invite Negro delegates originated from "some organization in New York." This without any doubt is nothing short of ridiculous. I was present when the matter first came up and was there last year as it was carried out, and I can assure anyone without reservation that the "New York" charge is completely false and misleading.



Helms additionally stated that the University was not represented on the "council" because it had not complied with the rules for membership. If such is the case, I accuse someone for not supplying us and the other schools in the state with adequate information concerning this whole matter. Last year, upon election, four Carolina men donated their abilities to serve as officers in the Assembly and even those four were not notified of any rules or regulations or of any meeting of the "council".

In this strange chain of events, the true purpose of the assembly seems to be lost. It is not to bring the Whites and Blacks together. The objective is to train students in parliamentary discussions, and to help broaden the outlooks of the young citizens of the state in matters which directly concern them. Never before do we need more the realization of this objective.

Therefore, I am calling upon Carolina to take the lead in the revival of this very important part of our state life. Students from Meredith and Women's College have already expressed to me this desire and have stated their willingness to cooperate with the ones who take the lead. I am convinced that others will do like wise in this project.

Why Carolina? Because we are students on a campus free from "behind-the-scenes" pressure, and we have a distaste for a minority which trys to overrule a majority by distribution of "observations" which are extremely misleading and which cloud a noble objective.

DOUG HUNT

BUDDY GLENN

NCS Council Jurisdiction Challenged by Glenn, Hunt

Ralph "Buddy" Glenn of Shelby and Douglas Hunt of Rocky Mount, former student leaders at the University both now in Washington, D. C. released the following statement in answer to the announcement that the North Carolina Student Legislative assembly has been cancelled. Glenn introduced the resolution to invite the Negro colleges at the 1945 session of the Student Legislature. Hunt was speaker of the House of Representatives in the 1944 assembly and spoke for the resolution in the 1945 session. He was vice-president of the student body here, a position which carries with it the speakership of the campus student legislature.

"The article in question related two important points: first, that the Council of the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly (composed entirely of students of State college) had decided to cancel the 1947 session largely because of the race issue; second, that the council thought it had traced to an organization located in New York the resolution to invite Negro colleges to the 1946 session of the Student Legislature.

"In regard to the first point, it is exceedingly doubtful that a committee of three from one college has the authority to abolish an organization composed of all the North Carolina colleges. The council's reason, moreover, was that it disagreed with the action of the Student Legislature in its endeavor to broaden the base representation in the assembly. If the council had the power to abolish the Assembly, it certainly had the power to remove the part which seemed to it undesirable. It seems that the council, which is properly the servant of the Legislature, rather than its master has committed an illegitimate act for an undemocratic reason; that is, to force its opinion on the students of North Carolina. The question is appropriately one for the contemporary students of North Carolina. If the students do not defend their rights, this clique will destroy their assembly because the students refuse to take ideological dictation.

"The second assertion — that the resolution originated in New York — is clearly erroneous. Every Southerner realizes the value of smearing anything you dislike as a Yankee product. However, the fact is that the idea to present the resolution occurred to its Tar Heel author only some twenty or thirty minutes before its introduction on the floor. The assertion represents not the results of an investigation by a collegiate Sherlock Holmes, but rather low-grade slander used as a smoke screen to cover this usurpation — the Reichstag fire technique is apparently considered to have universal application.

"The reason for the Student Assembly's admission of delegates from Negro colleges can be found in the hearts of all true Americans: it is the belief that the good society needs for its achievement the talents of all its members. It is to be hoped that this conviction is not dead in the home of liberty and justice.

Cat Market Opened With Newspaper Ad

Rogers, Arkansas, November 6. (UP)—The "Cat Man" finally has identified himself. He is W. W. "Doc" Simpson of Saint Joseph, Missouri.

Simpson caused a mild furor in Rogers on Halloween day, when he placed an advertisement in the Rogers Daily News —offering to pay 50 cents apiece for a thousand full grown cats. The cat man offered his readers a rendezvous at the "Old Sales Barn" in Rogers.

Today Simpson explained that he and his son-in-law, E. J. Cook, sell cats to a Saint Louis biological supply company for use in medical experiments. Individuals who protest are countered by Simpson with the proposition that the cats are giving their lives for society for medical experiments to aid humanity.

The Solution: Pass A Law!

Dear Sir:

Hurrah for the solution! Let us pass a law. We have already curbed our trusts, once completely cut out liquor drinking (for a spell, at least) and now we can rid ourselves of communists — merely by passing a law.

But wait a minute, Mr. Stevens. Who did you say was going to adminster this law? What angel this side of the late Mr. Goebbels. How much money will have to be appropriated to carry out the intent of the law? Will possession of such economic treatises as Marx's "Capital" be sufficient to convict the suspect?

Such realistic, if you will, considerations force us to re-examine the need for such a law. Why is it that you fear Communism in America, Mr. Stevens? Speak up, please. I am concerned along with you.

Do you think that Communism poses more of a threat in the present, than do such long time professional hate-vendors as Mr. Rankin of Mississippi, George Sokolsky, Gerald L. K. Smith, and Upton Close? Or do you feel that Communism poses the only solution that can be accepted by those of our people who are ill-housed, poorly educated and, at present, lacking civil rights as reported by the President's Committee on Civil Rights?

Don't you think that in a free market of ideas, TRUTH will stand its own ground? Or do we have to control the market, thereby hoping to maintain the statut-quo in perpetuity?

Mr. Stevens, I believe that you have just done what the communists have hoped would be done. You suggest that there are but two alternatives — control by so-called "leftist forces" or by fascistic forces. May I suggest another alternative — the road between. If enough of us band together and be stout-hearted enough — neither fascism nor communism will be able to make significant inroads on our society of individuals.

Let's discuss this over a beer, Mr. Stevens.

Truly Subversive

Dear Editor:

The founding fathers wrote that all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain INALIENABLE rights: life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. To secure these rights governments are instituted among men. To secure these rights the founding fathers instituted the government of the United States, whose very constitution, in the Bill of Rights, guarantees these inailenable rights. Your suggestion that the United States deny these inalienable rights to Communists is a suggestion that we depart from the very principles upon which our government is founded. Your idea, Mr. Stevens, is the truly subversive one. It is the fascist one.

Dick Koral

Rhode Island Red

Dear Editor:

Mr. Macrorie's story in today's Tar Heel brought to my mind the sad plight of my uncle who, deviating from the family tradition of squirrel hunting, encountered a lot of trouble fox hunting.

My uncle had a flock of Plymouth White Rocks in charge of a capable rooster named Liberty. In the woods nearby, there was a fox who was jealous of the freedom the flock of chickens enjoyed, so he resolved to ensnare them. Dressed as a Rhode Island Red, he strutted into the barnyard and called to the White Rock flock.

However, my uncle wasn't fooled by the disguise. He loaded his shotgun and aimed at the fox.

"Hold!" cried the fox, "I'm just a peaceful chicken. If you shoot me you must shoot that big bag wind called Liberty."

Taking no heed, my uncle shot the fox. Immediately the SPCA charged him with violating the rights of free chickens and as punishment made him contribute $100. to the Fund For Feeding Famished Forrest Friends.

Cops Get Skull Practice

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP) — A human skull, found in a city dump here recently, caused a stir among police. It finally turned out to be one belonging to a physician. The doctor's wife raised so much objection to having it around the house that it was tossed out with the rubbish.

New York pioneered in closed hunting seasons. It ordered an end to deer hunting as early as 1706 and closed the season on wild turkeys in 1708.

UNC Delegation Did Not Discuss Inviting Negroes

By Larry Berry

This week we really seem have State college on our campus, the Capital building, the football field, and sundry other places.

Since we were present at the 1945 State Student Legislature we would like to bring forth a few facts and opinions. Contrary to my statement in the Sunday's Tar Heel, the B... to admit Negro schools to the Legislature was not discussed by the Carolina delegation as a delegation before being introduced.

Some of you will remember that in '45 the delegation was split into two factions. One was by some definitions radical while the other was a very mild group going over to represent the conservatives. The bill in question was substituted by a delegate in place of his assigned bill. Of course if the Conservative element had know of this before we held the Assembly the bill would not have been introduced. Some warning to the leaders against the bill would have assured their banding together sufficient opposition to prevent its passage. Thus in Sunday's Tar Heel I made a mistake and will probably make many more of them. However I have been able to find no basis for the belief that the bill was New York engineered.

Dropping out of the column I would just like to talk with you about the State Student Legislature. I believe everyone who has attended a meeting of the mock Legislature has received very good experience in the realm of politics. The chance to argue for and against a bill on the floor of the legislature does not come out of political science books. Most of us will never again speak in the State Legislature, so this is our initial and final appearance. For a few this is the first of many appearances in the legislative branch of our democratic government. I guess I have gone far enough in my argument for the Legislature.

Last Monday at the I. R. C. meeting we were to discuss means of keeping peace between our nation and Russia. We have to say this, but we believe too many people came to see a "real live Communist" and not to discuss the question on the agenda. To our mind the most definite thing accomplished during the meeting was a frightened yelp from the back of the room. We believe this to have been done by someone accidentally stepping on a dog; maybe we will also reach a plan for world peace by accident, though.

Since this is a new column we would sincerely appreciate all comments so that we may improve our quality and may be cut some of the quantity.

One last thing, a citation of "well done" to the late "Uncle Gorge" Washington. He first personified the Carolina Spirit to many people, including the writer.

Morty Schaap

IT SEEMS as if the football players are not alone the only legally padded enterprises on the campus . . . but pads or no pads we now travel first class and first class is what the week end promises in football, cross country and homecoming.

This coming week end will find the town of Chapel Hill bedecked in its finest array to greet the thousands of returning alumni.

The game itself promises to be one of the best ever put on at Kenan Stadium with a rough and ready Wolfpack aggregation out to clip the wings of the potent Tar Heels. State has dropped two games and those were the only two scores against Beatty Feathers club all season. Duke beat them 7-0 and Florida nipped the Raleigh lads at the finish, 7-6. So, all in all, it shapes up to be one of the best family squabbles since Mary Astor graced the witness chair in California.

O'ER HILL AND DALE

DALE Ranson's Harriers will be out to make it 15 straight when htey meet the Red Terror harriers Saturday morning, and the team is up to the task and ready to show just what can be expected of them in the big meet in New York on November 17. Jimmy Miller, diminutive distance star, will be out to keep his individual record of not having tasted defeat in dual competition since his return to cross country running in 1946. Jack Milne, who looks to be even in better shape than he was in 1940, as a freshmen, will be Millers' big competition and this smiling lad from Toms River, N. J., may well be crowned IC4A champion, come a week from Monday. Milne incidentally was the recipient of the Adam Hat trophy, awarded for the outstanding athlete in th university last spring.

A JOB WELL DONE

HATSoff to Len Szafaryn, genial president of the Monogram club, for the fine job he has done in making possible the show-loudly for the ball carrier. Very few of these people realize that the run was made possible by diligent practice and fine blocking by the ten other members of the team. An old high school coach always told his squad before the first game, "four of the men will get the glory and the other seven will work." This is not quite true in reality, but it comes mighty close. Of this year's fine Carolina football team many boys have not been given the credit their work deserved.

In true sports style we will start in the backfield and reel off the names of such backs and Joe Wright, Don Hartig, Eddie Knox and Bob Reynolds, these are our field generals, we have all second guessed them during the season but they have played hard and given their all.

Next we hit the flank position, here we find such men as Art Weiner, Mike Rubish, Ken Powell, Max Cooke, John Tandy, Bill Pritchard, Bob Cox, Dan Logue and Joe Romano, these lads catch the limelight every once in awhile by fine catches of passes, but very few of us can realize the amount of work they put into blocking, tackling and the first line defense of covering punts and kickoffs.

The tackles are usually the mammoths of the squad and they are the boys that make or break the offensive drive of the opposition and make the holes for their own backs to scoot through. Our boys who perform this duty are Len Szafaryn, Haywood Fowle, Bill Smith, Stan Marczyk, Joe Cospito, Jim Hendrick and Ted Hazelwood. Mighty fine lads all of them, each giving his best to the team.

The guard spot is one of the roughest of all, as it is from this position that much of the ball carriers interference comes from. These lads must pull out of the line on the offense and stop the opposition through the middle on defense. Yes, a rugged assignment, but the Tar Heels are ably manned at these positions with such stalwarts as Bob Mitten, Sid Varney, Harry Klosterman, George Roberts, Dick Featheroff and Max Spurlin.

The center position is most important to a ball club and not only must the ball be snapped back on offense in precision-like movement but the man at the pivot spot must then swing around and block a man. On the defense he is the rugged linebacker that must be always alert for passes and equally adept at piling up a play that comes through his side of the line. George Sparger, Dan Steigman, Joe Swiregood, Irv Holdash and Al Bernot have not let the ball club down. They have been like the Coast Guard, ever alert.

Last but not least hats off to the Jayvee's who have been working all year to tune the varsity for their big games. They have imitated all of the opposition and done a wonderful job of it. Besides they have played two games of their own and won them both.

IN SALUTORE

WHEN A back zig-zags through the opposition for some 85 yards and a touchdown, the crowd stands on its feet and cheers ing of the movies of the previous Saturday's football games in Memorial Hall. A fine service from a fine organization.

Johnson Gets Three To Spark Allenmen

Smashing through a futile Roanoke college defense for at least one goal in every period, Carolina's red hot booters racked up their fourth straight triumph and fifth win of the season yesterday afternoon, as they kicked the outclassed visitors all over Fetzer Field for a 7-0 rout.

The Maroons threatened to score only once or twice and their shots were so hurried and wild that neither Tar Heel goalie, each of whom played about half of the game, had to block a shot all afternoon. In fact, neither Carolina goal tender touched the ball, except to make two goal kicks apiece.

Wayne Johnson booted home two goals as the Tar Heels jumped a 3-0 lead in the first quarter and then coasted till half-time with the second team seeing most of the action.

Johnson Draws

Johnson drew first blood for the Blue and White shinbusters early in the first period when he took a pass from Al Singer and booted the ball past the Roanoke goalie for a score. Little Joe Bach notched his only score of the game a few minutes later when he emergd from a melee in front of the goal and angled the ball into net. Johnson added another goal shortly before the close of the period when he headed in a free kick.

Coach Allen inserted his second eleven at the start of the

Kenan, Pi Phi Gain Volleyball Finals

Kenan and Pi Phi advanced to the finals of the coed volleyball tournament last night as the result of impressive, but hard-fought wins.

The dormitory girls made good use of their height advantage to run up a 13-4 half-time lead over Chi Omega, and then were pushed to the limit to gain a 19-17 victory.

The Pi Phis trailing badly near the end of the first period, rallied to a 14-12 halftime lead over the Tri Delts, and then went on to win 27-19. Finals are set for next Tuesday night.

Oakwood Drive, Lewis, Grads Cop Grid Titles

Three more teams were added to the list of league champions in the Intramural tag football program yesterday as Oakwood Drive, Grads, and Lewis dorm showed winning margins in their last games of the regular schedule.

In the deciding games Oakwood Drive trounced Steele, 20 to 6, Grads downed Mud Dobbers, 19 to 0, and Lewis thumped Alexander No. 2, 38 to 0. All three winners have perfect records. The Grads have won eight games, while Lewis and Oakwood Drive have won seven.

Sigma Nu, playing in the second round of the league championship playoffs, defeated SAE, 19 to 0. Final round in the playoffs is scheduled for Monday when SAE will again meet Sigma Nu to determine the final champions of Fraternity league number two.

Play in both mural ping pong and volleyball competition opened yesterday.

Swimmers Hold Practice Meet

Coach Dick Jamerson sent his Carolina tank team through final conditioning drills and speed trials yesterday afternoon to bring them into shape for their second intrasquad meet of the preseason drills.

The meet, which is open to all who would like to attend, will start at 4:30 o'clock in Bowman Gray pool.

Today's test will be the initial one of the practice sessions for the 440-yard distance men. Some of the events to be run off will include 100-yard free style, 150-yard backstroke, 150-yard breastroke and the 440-yard free style.

Dogpatch Giants Battle for Honors On Gridiron Today

Fortescue university and Phogbound college rolled their football powerhouses into town early yesterday morning and went through light practice sessions on Fetzer field as a final wind up to their big tilt this afternoon at 2:30.

Coach Slippery Eel took his Phogbounders out to Max's Deluxe flop house in Carrboro where their headquarters have been setup. Many alumni and students are expected in by mule team early this morning along with the band.

Coach Rodger Evervescent has his team quartered at Billy's Roadside Ruse and many of his supporters are already hanging from the rafters.

The game is expected to be a sellout with a crowd of some 65,000 on hand. It will be a colorful affair and both coaches have said that their teams are in fine shape and every man will be available to play.

The battle looms as a titanic struggle between two 300-pound lines and quintuplet threat backs

All those participating in the big PU-FU clash today are asked to meet at Fetzer field at 1:30 for pre-game instructions.

Tar Heels, Wolfpack Taper For Big Clash

Carolina's Tar Heels and N. C. State's Wolfpack went through their final heavy practices of the week on their respective gridirons yesterday as rival coaches Carl Snavely and Beattie Feathers applied a few polishing touches to their football machines before the two teams meet in Kenan Stadium on Saturday.

Light practices are in order in both training camps today, with neither coach being willing to risk injuries to key performers at such a late hour. So the sessions today will serve as little more than limbering up drills and a time for last minute pointers from the coaches.

In Raleigh Coach Feathers is singing a mournful tune because of injuries to five of his top players. George Allen, only recently promoted to the number one fullback post is out with an injured shoulder, and his understudy, freshman John Huzvar, is also on the disabled list. Two scrappy guards, Charlie Musser and Ralph Barksdale, and George Blomquist, the pass snagging end, are other injured State boys.

Shortage

The shortage of fullbacks in the State roster likely will prompt Feathers to shift Footsie Palmer, only this past week shifted to tailback, back to his old bucking back spot. Palmer was particularly impressive in the win over Chattanooga with his running and passing from the tailback post. If he goes back to fullback, Feathers has Charlie Richkus and Gwyn Fletcher to fill in at left halfback.

Carolina also has its injuries, with galloping Hosea Rodgers being the injured Tar Heel who is causing the fans the most worry. The big Alabama fullback has a leg injury. Bill Maceyko, the speedy little tailback, also has been on the sidelines this week and his play against State will be limited.

Coed Association Hears Cook Speak

The Carolina Independent Coed Association heard Miss Katherine Cook, Associate Director of the Bureau of Vocational Guidance, speak on vocational trends and opportunities for women graduates of the University at the regular meeting Wednesday evening. The talk was informal with group participation and questions asked from the floor.

Following the regular meeting Jane Mears was elected publicity chairman and plans were outlined for a semi-formal dance to be held December 6 at Carolina Inn. Final arrangements were made for Sadie Hawkins day which the club is sponsoring togther with the Town Girls' Association.

ART TALENT NEEDED

All students who can handle commercial art work are requested to be in the Tarnation office, Graham Memorial, this afternoon at 3 p.m.

Students Should See Wadsworth

J. E. Wadsworth, University housing director, has released a list of 15 men for whom he may have dormitory space available at present. These students should immediately contact Wadsworth's office in room 22 of the barracks annex to New West, his new location.

The following names now head the waiting lists for dormitory rooms and should see Wadsworth: Holcombe C. Adams; Bynum R. Brown; Earl E. Crumpler; Robert G. Evans; Edward E. Grace; Alice F. Hall, Jr.; William G. Hooks; Rufus A. Hunter, Jr.; Andrew F. McCall; James D. Mills; Allen D. Morgan, Jr.; Robert P. O.Connell; John H. Oliver; Harry C. Snow; and Marion H. Ward.

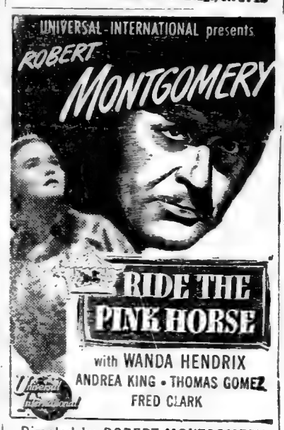
last period and the play was fairly even until Allen reinserted the first team. A few seconds before the half's end Dave Boak headed in a corner kick from the toe of Jesse Greenbaum.

Johnson tallied his final goal from in front of the net early in the third quarter after taking a pass from Dave Boak. Boak's sensational ball handling sparked the Tar Heels throughout the contest.



Boak and Johnson teamed to notch the next Carolina tally late in the final period when Boak took Johnson's pass on the run and booted the ball home. Dave Ferebee scored the final Blue and White goal just before the game's end on an assist from Bill Moore.

Chapel Hill Bird Club Shows Wildlife Movies Here Tonight

A full-length color movie of American wildlife will be given at 8 o'clock this evening at the Pick theatre by Bert Harwell of Berkeley, California, prominent wildlife photographer. It will be the first in a series of five "nature screen tours" to be given here this season by the Chapel Hill Bird Club and the National Audubon Society.

The charge for admission is 50 cents; or by season ticket, which can be obtained at Ledbetter - Pickard's at $2 each.

A bulletin from the Audubon Society says, "Bert Harwell can translate for his audience a dry and sweltering desert into an area of beauty and drama. The remote and lofty Sierras become as familiar as one's own garden. He not only speaks with authority and charm, but skillfully illustrates his talks, vocally by bird-song imitations and visually by magnificent all-color motion pictures."

An alumnus of Columbia Leland Stanford, and California, with an M.A. degree from the latter, Harwell was park naturalist at Yosemite from 1929 to 1940. In 1940 he joined the staff of the Audubon Society.

Humphries. Sound and Fury will award a prize during the afternoon to the group entering the best float, in the judges opinion.

It's Phogbound versus Fortescue on Fetzer field at 3 o'clock, when the Monogram club divides up in a civil war, jokingly tagged a feetsball game. Evil-Eye Fleegle, Big Stanislouse, and the curvaceous Stupid will make their local premiere appearance during the feetsball battle. Captaining the Fortescue charges will be wrestling star T. A. Hearn, while basketball's Bob Paxton will lead the Phogbound (P.U.) team.

Climax of the afternoon comes with the Human (some call it inhoomin') Race at 3:30. Several hundred couples have already signed up for the wide-open husband-catching handicap which will be run off on the field above the Fetzer stadium stands. Ken Willis, overseer of the race announced that anyone, attached or otherwise, may enter the race this afternoon, whether previously signed up or not. Dogpatch costume is the only prerequisite.

Following the consumnation of mass marriage ceremonies on the spot, the happy honeymooners will engage in a series of comic games and races, arranged by the Women's Athletic association.

KLENZ RECITAL

Three suites by Bach will be presented by Mr. William Klenz, violoncellist, tonight, at 8:30 in Hill hall, in the last of a series of recitals of violoncello music.

Vets Minus Checks Should Notify VA

Any veteran who registered during the regular registration period and has not yet received his subsistence check is requested to report to 111 Peabody Building or 316 South Building with his letter of award. The letter of award is Form 7-506 which authorized payment of subsistence from the date of entrance to June 22, 1948.

Names of all veterans who report they have not received their checks will be telephoned to the Winston-Salem office daily up to November 14 and an investigation will be made of each case immediately as to the cause of delay.

Homecoming Sees UNC-State Renewal

Monroe Band Signed By Grail To Feature Duke Week Program

By Raney Stanford

Vaughan Monroe and his orchestra will furnish the music for the Grail dances during the Duke-Carolina weekend, officers of Order announced yesterday. Tickets for the two night dances and the afternoon concert will go on sale Tuesday morning.

Monroe's weekly radio show, the Camel Caravan, will be presented from the floor of Woollen Gym during the Saturday night affair, Grail heads said. The entire cast of the show, including the daffy Colonel Stoopnagle, will be on hand to put on a broadcast that will be carried on nation-wide hook-up.

New Sales System

Grail members will sell the bids for these affairs by a newly-developed system, which is hoped will insure ample opportunity for the general student body to obtain ducats.

Each member of the society will receive 15 sets of tickets to be individually disposed, and the remainder will be dispensed to the student body during three selling periods in the Y building: Tuesday from 8 to 10 in the morning, 1 to 3 in the afternoon, and on Wednsday from 10 to 1 o'clock.

The total tickets to be disposed at these sales will be divided evenly into three lots. There will be a maximum house of 2,000 couples for each dance, and 1800 tickets will be printed for the afternoon concert.

Individual Bids

The types of bids are obtainable for the evening dances, singles, or a bid to cover both affairs.

The admission charge will be $3 per couple for a single, and $6 for both nights.

Ducats for the concert, which will be held Friday afternoon, from 4:30 to 6 in Memorial hall, will sell for

Special Train Set for Trip To D.C. Game

Southern Railway officials yesterday notified Graham Memorial travel agent Bob Watson that an entire special train has been chartered to take the University band, students, and fans to the Maryland football game to be played next Saturday in Washington, D. C.

Previously it was planned merely to send up extra coaches on regularly scheduled trains, but demand for a special caravan has been such that an entire train has been chartered. Except in the case of those desiring to travel first class or Pullman, no advance signing up for the trip is necessary. Complete information on the caravan may be had from Watson in the student union travel office (telephone 9881) every afternoon and evening.

Plans call for the special to leave Union station in Durham at 9:30 next Friday night, and arrive in Washington around 6:45 the next morning. Leaving the Capitol city at 1:55 Saturday night the train will arrive in Greensboro at 6:45 a.m., and Durham at 8:30 Sunday morning.

Cost of a round trip ticket is $13, while Pullman fare is from $26 up, all inclusive. In Washington, team headquarters will be at the Wardman-Park hotel. A pre-game pep rally will probably be held there, according to head cheerleader Myrt Sherard.

Battle of Bands To Star Award Of Payoff Title

Awards to Miss Payoff of 1947 and to the fraternity and dormitory exhibiting the best Homecoming decorations will be made during intermission at tonight's Battle of Bands dance, sponsored by the campus World Student Service fund drive.

Ned Reap and Scott Gardiner will provide music for the informal dance from 8 to 12 in Woollen gym, and proceeds will go to the WSSF drive for relief of foreign students, which closes with tonight's dance.

Wayne Brennengan, chairman of the Dance Organization committee and co-chairman of tonight's dance, will crown Miss Payoff, selected by student vote from among 20 entrants sponsored by campus organizations. Camilla Ray is co-chairman of the dance with Breanengan.

Balloting for Miss Payoff will continue today in the Y lobby until after the football game, and at the dance until 10 o'clock. Each vote costs ten cents, with all proceeds going to the YSSF drive.

Awards for the best Homecoming displays will be made by Chuck Voigt, president of the University club, on the basis of the judging to be done at 10 o'clock this morning. The club is presenting a new cup this year for dormitory displays. The cup was purchased with the dollar entrance fee required of all participating organizations.

Tickets for the dance may be secured at the door. Price is one dollars, which will buy ten votes for any of the Miss Payoff candidates.

REGISTRATION

The appointment books for pre-registration have been moved from Memorial hall to the information desk in South building and will be open there through Saturday noon.

UNC-Backed State Student Legislature Seen

By BILL SEXTON

A state student legislature under Carolina sponsorship moved nearer reality yesterday with the announcement that Secretary of State Thad Eure was "sympathetic" to its revival.

Al Lowenstein, chairman of the UNC delegation at last year's legislature, said yesterday that he had conferred with the Secretary of State and found him in favor of a revival "under responsible sponsorship."

Asks Faculty Part

Lowenstein said Eure, a prominent figure at the previous sessions of the student legislature, had recommended that "adequate faculty representation" be included in any plans for reorganization. He said the Secretary of State indicated that under "responsible sponsorship" he could see no reason why there should not be a student legislature this year.

It was learned last night that the capitol building in Raleigh apparently has not been reserved for any of several weekends over which the legislature might meet before Christmas.

The chairman of the 1946 UNC delegation said he had been notified of support at Women's college in case Chapel Hill undertakes to revive the legislature, which was dissolved only last week by State college's legislative council. He indicated that "it seems possible the move may find support during the week even at State college itself."

Debate Council Meets

Meanwhile, the Debate council was scheduled to meet last night to discuss the possibility of assuming responsibility for the revived legislature. Maurice Braswell, council president, has already indicated his desire to push reorganization of the legislature, which has met annually since 1936 under sponsorship of State college.

As a result "mostly" of the admission of Negro delegates to last year's session, the State Student Legislative council, sponsoring group at State, dissolved itself and cancelled the 1947 session, scheduled to meet in Raleigh, November 28-29.

The charge that an "organization in New York" had inspired the resolution inviting representatives from the colored colleges was reported as one of the reasons behind the dissolution. Lowenstein said yesterday he knew of "no one in Raleigh who seriously thought that any 'New York organization' had anything to do with the resolution, unless it be an imaginative or news-hungry reporter."

THE PLANE THAT HUGHES BUILT continued to dominate the Capitol scene yesterday as the Washington hearing reopened with testimony by Major General Bennett Myers. The Army Air Force material chief reported that the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his top adviser, Harry Hopkins, helped Hughes get a photo plane contract which had been turned down by many Army air officers. Hughes is picture above with a group of newsmen after the big ship first took to the air this week.—(International Soundphoto)

Small Rally Shows Best Spirit As Yet

In a short-manned but very spirited pep rally last night in Memorial hall, students heard last year's grid co-captain Ralph Strayhorn urge no retaliation on State college for the sign-painting spree several members of that student body apparently went on early this week when the red letters "NCS" appeared on several buildings on this campus.

The pep rally followed a torchlight parade through the downtown district and ended up in Memorial hall.

Head cheerleader Myrt Sherard said after last night's rally, "There weren't many people there, I must admit, but the ones that were present had the best spirit that I've heard at Carolina in a long time."

Steering Committee Appointed To Help Unify Class of 1948

By JANE MEARS

As a step toward unifying the Senior class, a steering committee representing dormitories, fraternities, and sororities has been organized under direction of the class officers, Senior President Benson McCutcheon announced yesterday.

McCutcheon, Vice-President Bill Tate, Secretary Annie Ben Beale, and Treasurer Bill Blythe met with the committee Thursday for discussion of Senior Week and general class objectives. Another meeting has been called for November 13 to study the financial status of the class of '48.

Promotion of inter-class spirit and activities planning will be main purposes of the 40-member group, McCutcheon declared. He said he hopes veterans who have already completed undergraduate work would give their wholehearted allegiance to the present senior group.

At a time in the near future, members of the committee plan to contact each individual senior to discuss ideas for senior social functions.

Delta Sigma Pi, Henry Reynolds; Kappa Alpha, Tom Belk; Ruffin, John Suratt; Kappa Sigma, Bill Height; Steele, Jim McCormick; Phi Delta Theta, Megs Golden; Phi Gamma Delta, Devan Barbour; Alderman, Martha Whitner; Phi Kappa Sigma, Marriotte Stewart; Pi Beta Phi, Julia Ross; PIKA, Ken Merrett; Archer House, Barbara Ann Ray.

SAE, Ernest House; Sigma Chi, Sam Daniels; Sigma Nu Elton Forehand; McIver, Ann Hamilton; TEP, Art Shain; Zeta Psi, Gideon Gillam; Smith, Miriam Evans; Pi Lamda Phi, Norman Ripps; Lamda Chi, Dickie Anderson; Spencer, Marguerite Johnson.

Representatives will be selected from all organizations and dormitories not listed.

Leaders Spike Lenoir Sunday Closing Plans

University dining hall authorities announced yesterday there will be no Sunday closing of Lenoir dining hall, and the Carolina Inn cafeteria, which shut last Monday, will not continue the closure.

Plans had been under consideration to close the University eating establishments for one day a week following the football season, dining hall heads admitted. But all suggested schemes containing any complete shut-down were spiked by the University administration.

"So we will be open at all times," L. B. Rogerson University supervisor of the dining halls, said. "The amount of service provided may be cut down to fit the lesser number of students who eat on campus over the week-end, but the food lines will be serving seven days a week."

Rogerson explained the closing question had arisen over ways and means to cut down on the operating costs of the eating places. He pointed out the average number of meals served in th Lenoir cafeterias which ranges from 6,500 to 7,000 during the week, drops to 2,000 over Saturday and Sunday. And, as the volume of food sold determines the retail prices, operating expenses rise sharply over intake on the comparatively barren week-ends. So with the cost of food rising almost daily, the dining hall authorities said they were continually seeking methods to cut down on student meal expenses.

World Bank Names Chief Of Research

H. W. Straley, III, of Chapel Hill, a University graduate and former faculty member, has been named to head research in geology, geophysics, and mining for the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development (World Bank).

Since the termination of hostilities, Straley has been in the District of Columbia, practicing his profession as consultant in exploration and valuation of fuels and minerals, specializing in Appalachian, coastal plain, and Caribbean areas.

Tar Heels Favored Over Raleigh Club In Conference Tilt

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels and N. C. State's Wolfpack resume their old football rivalry in Kenan stadium at 2 o'clock this afternoon in a Big Four and Southern conference headliner that is expected to attract a Homecoming day crowd of nearly 40,000.

The meeting between the two brother institutions in Raleigh and Chapel Hill will be the first since the series was discontinued in 1943 by officials of the greater University of North Carolina. The Tar Heels won that game by a 27-13 score over a civilian-manned State club that had to compete against the Navy V-12 powered Tar Heel outfit.

The fact that the war had stripped the Raleigh school of its football talent in addition to a very heated rivalry between the two student bodies brought about the discontinuation of the series.

When the Tar Heels marched through a successful season to the Sugar Bowl last year and State earned a bid to the Gator Bowl, North Carolina's sports fans figured they deserved to see the two teams battle in the home state, and the University officials complied with the popular demand.

Tar Heels Favored

For the 1947 game, Carolina has been installed as the favorite by a margin of two touchdowns, but long time Tar Heel supporters recall that in the past, State has always been able to turn in a creditable and determined game against Carolina no matter what the records of the two teams were prior to the game.

State and Carolina have met but one mutual opponent. Both played Florida, with Carolina winning by 35-7 and State losing a 7-6 upset to the Gators. This game is the main basis on which the Tar Heels rate as th favored team today.

Coach Beattie Feathers' Wolfpack has a 3-2 won-lost mark to date, with a rugged defense being chiefly responsible for wins over Davidson Clemson, and Chattanooga. All the Raleigh boys' victories came on shutouts. Besides the loss to Florida, the

Lawn Displays Will Be Judged By Faculty Board

Bob Plumb, head of the University club homecoming display program, announced yesterday that all dormitory, fraternity, and sorority lawn displays celebrating homecoming weekend will be judged between approximately 10 and 11 o'clock this morning.

The judges of the displays will be Dr. J. Carlyle Sitterson, former heard of the Economics department of the University; Col. F. Carlyle Shepard, of the Veterans administration; and Dean M. A. Hill, in the General college. Chuck Voigt, president of the University club, will award two cups tonight at the WSSF ball when the winners of the display contest are announcel.

One cup will be given to the best dormitory display shown on campus and the other cup will go to the fraternity or sorority which creates the homecoming attraction judged best.

WSSF to Make Final Effort to Achieve $2,500 Collection for Student Relief

By SALLY WOODHULL

With more than $2,500 already collected in cash and pledges, World Student Service fund today begins its final effort to collect money for relief of students abroad.

Goal of American colleges and universities for WSSF this year is $1,000,000, as endorsed by the National Student Association convention in Madison, Wisconsin this summer.

Because American students are almost the least hit by war devastation, they are being called upon to make the largest contribution to this world-wide project for relief. Students and professors of 18 other countries also contribute to World Student Relief, of which WSSF is the American division.

Paige Harris and Pat Carruthers, co-chairman of solicitors for the campus drive, have urged that all dormitory and fraternity or sorority solicitors turn in complete reports by this morning at 11 o'clock. The WSSF office in the Y building will be open from 10 to 11 to receive reports.

Students may either contribute the whole amount of their donation now, or they may spread their pledge out over a four month period until February according to Mrs. Betty Rose Dowden, YWCA secretary. This arrangement was made in an effort to bring home to students that this is a long range plan for relief, and that needs of foreign students will increase during the winter Mrs. Dowden said.

Pledge Collecting

The statistical committee of which Tag Montague and Emily Von Borries are co-chairmen, will be in charge of collecting pledges on December 7, January 7, and February 7. They have also been in charge of all money collected this week, both through personal solicitation and through the Miss Payoff votes.

Members of the committee are Nancy Walker, Scotty Venable, Gray Simpson, Marshall Spears, Rachel Woodley, and Doris Beasley.

Margaret Jean Taylor, Sue Everett, Herman Baker and Johnny Clampitt are in charge of soliciting organizations. Pledges have so far been made by Coed Senate for $300; Wesley foundation, $250, and the Episcopal students, $200.

Wednesday's "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner," sponsored by the Baptist Student union's social actions committee, netted more than $300 for the fund. Don Broad was in charge.

Sam Magill and Mimi Massey, co-chairmen of the drive, have urged students to "bring Carolina through with flying colors in this test of our awareness of our responsibilities as alert, intelligent students."

Unpaid Tickets May Be Costly

Students failing to pay parking ticket fees may find themselves in court at considerable expense in time and money, Chief of Police W. T. Sloan warned yesterday.

Sloan said that city police are now checking unpaid tickets against state and university auto registration lists, and that warrants would be issued shortly for delinquent parkers.

Court costs for parking cases tried before Recorder H. A. Whitfield total $8.30, and an additional fine may be imposed. Only $1 is charged for first offenders who appear promptly at the city traffic bureau in Town Hall.

In cases where warrants are issued for parking violations, $25 bond will be required pending trial in the Tuesday sessions of Chapel Hill Recorder's court, Sloan warned.

Grid Game Takes Sadie Hawkins Limelight As Phogbound Wins by Score of 14-13

By Chuck Hauser

The annual student Sadie Hawkins day was done up brown yesterday as the football classic between Phogbound and Fortescue universities all but stole the limelight from the race of the bachelor girls and men.

The penalty for students hooked by the high-stepping females was their "marriage" by John "Marryin' Sam" Clampitt and having to attend last night's Sadie Hawkins square dance as dates of the girls.

Following a noisy parade from Y court through the center of town, the crowd finally congregated at Fetzer field for the grid contest between Phogbound and Fortescue. Notable among the players were the better part of the University's basketball and track teams.

One of the most exciting plays of the afternoon was a 70-yard dash by basketball star Bob Paxton through the opposing team's line and down the sidelines to a goal—on a bicycle.

Track man Don Nelson caught a beautiful pass from Paxton which resulted in another goal—for whom no one knew because everyone swore that Don was running in the wrong direction.

Basketballer Jim Hamilton masquerading as "Lonesome Polecat" was another outstanding player for Phogbound. His hidden ball-in-the-blanket play resulted in a loss of a least 20 yards for his team. In spite of this, the final tally still gave the game to Phogbound with a score of 14 to 13.

Tar Heel grid favorite Charlie Justice, a spectator at the game, commented that a few of the plays might prove useful to the Carolina team when they meet State college in Kenan stadium this afternoon. Charlie particularly liked the "excellent goal line stand," as he described it, when Phogbound threw up a wooden blockade in front of the goal line to prevent a Fortescue score.

The race of the eligible bachelors topped off the afternoon's entertainment, with several hundred students participating at the risk of loss of their single freedom for the evening. The race carried the runners up into the hills and woods around Fetzer field, climaxing in the victorious marriage ceremony for those girls who were lucky and strong enough to drag their men-folks over the finish line.

Those students still able to walk after the hot chase joined in a round of square-dancing, three-legged races, and all the affairs congruent to a debacle of the Sadie Hawkins type.

A Helping Hand for Visiting Student Body

Today is homecoming and not only will the campus play host to grads and friends of the University, but State college students will begin arriving at 9:30 this morning. Due to the considerable difficulty the State Student Government leaders had in obtaining transportation for the game, it will be necessary for many students from State to arrive on the campus early and to leave quite late. Efforts to secure a special train to run from Raleigh to Carrboro were unsuccessful. They finally made arrangements with a bus company to run several caravans back and forth. The first section, consisting of ten busses, leaves Raleigh at 8 o'clock this morning. Additional sections of five busses each will leave Raleigh at 10, 11, and 12 o'clock this morning.

The interin between their arrival upon campus and the game will not be too long for the State students, but getting back to Raleigh after the game is a complex problem. According to Dean Wood of State college, the bus company has been able to provide only five busses for transporting students back to Raleigh following the game. This means that it will be quite late tonight before the campus is completely vacated by State men.

The campus should stage an all-out effort to make the bus-waiting period as pleasant as possible. Several fraternities have issued invitations to State chapters to drop in and share their houses today. It would be well if other fraternities did likewise.

Several campus tours could be conducted, pointing out places of interest and the displays which have been designed for the homecoming. Any courteous gestures will surely be appreciated by the visiting student body. Even such small things as directing persons to your favorite eating place, or telling them where they can eat their picnic lunches are gestures that the visitors will welcome.

People Like to Sing

One of the most worthy, and the most enjoyable, things that Graham Memorial has sponsored in a long time is the Sunday Sing, a program of audience participation singing at Memorial Hall every Sunday night. Director Mark Barker has cordially invited everyone to attend the music sessions.

These Sunday Sings can be a lot of fun for a lot of people. The audience sings popular and folk tunes with the aid of a piano accompanist and lyrics are flashed on a screen with slides.

Different campus personalities are chosen to serve as MC of the show and lead the singing. So far, Coline Smith and Bob Andrews have served in this capacity. The program of songs and specialty numbers by guest artists lasts for approximately 45 minutes and is over in plenty of time to make the 9 o'clock movie.

These programs, besides creating a better spirit among students, should attract capacity crowds for the simple reason that people like to sing together. So, all those people who want to make themselves heard on campus, make a date to attend the Sunday Sing at Memorial Hall, 8 o'clock Sunday night.

Communism for Neglected?

For some time I have been puzzled by the existence of a group of communists in Chapel Hill, in the midst of a supposedly enlightened segment of society. Even after arguing with some of them for several hours after the IRC meeting Monday night, I was still not satisfied as to their motives for denouncing Christianity and for backing Russia in her policy of world expansion.

Today I consulted a psychologist on the matter and he gave me the best explanation I have heard yet. He contends that here they are composed primarily of a group of people who feel neglected. To get attention (and they have certainly been getting it) they have resorted to communism.

It is my opinion that the situation could best be remedied if the Daily Tar Heel would ignore communism for a while, and in its stead publicize things like pastry shops, the SCHW, and the Playmakers. This group would thus be subtly directed toward harmless outlets for their eccentricities.

The Chapel Hill communists have a lot in common with a little girl near here who started eating catterpillars. At first the case was diagnosed as due to a vitamin deficiency. (Of course, someone could have been naieve enough to have attributed it to her reaction to the high cost of meat.) It was finally discovered, however, that neglect on the part of the parents had been the cause, and fortunately, the situation was remedied before catterpillar eating became a fad in Chapel Hill.

'Masterpiece'

Dear Editor:

I should like to protest the use of one of the most subversive pieces of literature in one of the courses offered in the Graduate School. Not only is this work closely analyzed, but it is openly hailed as one of the "masterpieces of world literature." The ideas imbodied in this work, if allowed to spread, will subvert in time the Bill of Rights and the American Way of Life.

Among the pages of this "masterpiece" we find the following dastardly statement: "And verily one man to live in pleasure and wealth while all others weep and smart for it, that is the part not of a king, but a jailer." Clearly this constitutes a deadly attack upon the principles of rugged individualism and Private Enterprise. A little later on the author continues: ". . . where possessions be private, where money breathe all the stroke, it is hard and almost impossible that there the public weal may justly be governed, and prosperously flourish." Here it is—right in the open! An atomic blow directly against the bulwark of our freedom, against our American Way. How can we, I repeat, allow this work to be studied in our school? How can we tax-payers continue supporting books that seek to destroy private property?

This isn't all. In later passages of the book the author advocates that all things be held in common; that food be given away free; that gold be used for commodes, and jewels for toys. As everyone can see for himself the author is calling for Communism. And, I reiterate, this work is not only studied in our school, but praised.

This book (even the title is called "Utopia" and is ostensibly written by Sir Thomas More, published in 1516. But it smells like the party line to me. How about it, fellow democrats?

Freshmen Protest

New Men Object to 'Fast One'

In a meeting of the student legislature Thurs. Oct. 30, the election of Freshman Class officers was scheduled for Nov. 12th. Nominations for these officers were closed last Tuesday, Nov. 4th. Hardly any of the freshmen ever knew about their election before nominations were closed. Of course it was publicized in a small article in Saturday's DTH which could be seen at best with a magnifying glass. There was actually no official publicizing made of the election and there has not been yet.

Quoting one of the prominent upperclassmen: "A fast one has been pulled." The Freshmen who bear the brunt of this political move are in no mood to stand by and see it carried through. One slate of officers was advanced, that of the University Party. Twenty-four hours after this slate was put forth the nominations were closed. Neither the Student Party nor the Campus Party offered a slate, while the Freshman Class as a whole was not even aware of what was going on. Many freshmen are unaware as yet that their officers have been virtually appointed by upperclassmen. They may also be unaware that these men, who have not gained particular recognition among the freshman class may continue to hold a representative position with no competitors to make it an election in the true sense of the word.

The harmless intention which resulted in this situation was probably an attempt by the legislature to rush class elections through so that class-officer pictures could be gotten into the Yack. We freshmen, however, would much rather have a choice as to who comes out in front as our leaders than see pictures of those appointed to lead us appearing in the Yearbook.

If the freshmen should let this situation go by, they leave themselves open to future situations in which outside influences may continue to use indirect power over the freshman class and thus enable upperclassmen to dominate freshman interests. If we take cognizance, however, and combine to see that this election is called off (which is the will of two of the political parties, or if we nominate a "write-in" slate of candidates, we will have a chance to run a more representative election.

At a meeting of the Freshman Friendship Council next Monday night at 8:00 in Gerrard Hall, this situation will be thoroughly thrashed out and a slate of officers nominated by those present for the support of all members of the Freshman Class who are interested in choosing their officers. All freshmen interested in the functioning of their class are urged to be there and to choose a slate of officers that they will support.

In a meeting of the Student Party, immediately following the meeting of the FFC, at 9:00 P.M. in Graham Memorial, it is hoped that those freshmen who are interested will come to represent the interests of our class.

It is wrong, we feel, that so little notice should have been brought to a matter so important to those whom it concerns. It is in an effort to see that freshmen become interested in their own class, and that at least some honest competition may take place in the election, that we write to you.

Carolina Carousel

Main Score on Ball Field

By R. FOO GIDUZ

Our "brothers" at State college have been getting in Carolina's hair pretty much recently. . . . Started in '43 when Wolfpack scatback Art Rooney pulled the old hidden ball play on the Tar Heels in Riddick stadium, and led the Raleigh lads on to defeat Carolina in a ball game they're just now getting a chance to avenge. . . . Same year they got our ram; (but they didn't get our goat!) . . . And this week they nervously fumbled the ball in cancelling the State Student Legislature; a situation UNC stalwarts seem set to remedy immediately.

But the main score to settle today is on the ball field. . . . Harry the Hoss, our loyal tipster, was mouthing around some mighty tempting State-and-14 last night. . . . So now's the time to show the Aggielads who are both the best sports and sportsmen. . . . YELL!

S H festivities had a timely visitor yesterday as long-lean-and-lanky "Caldonia" Pat Hackett, No. 1 Daisy Mae prize-winner in last year's Dogpatch dilemna, dropped back to her hallowed haunts for the weekend. . . . Hot tip to one-arm drivers: UVA-hustler John Temple is turning his promotional talents to professional use now in opening up a new drive-in just out of town on the airport road. . . . Says it should be open by December 1.

Hand of the week is due Bill Rhodes Weaver and the Greensboro Daily News for the ultra-sensible and clear story they wrote on Communism at UNC on the front page of yesterday's GDN. . . . Very definitely worth reading. . . . From the many good horse-sense sentiments therein included we quote: ". . . 95 per cent of the UNC students have heard of the Communist party . . . 50 per cent are curious . . . 10 per cent interested . . . one per cent will be affected. . . . One per cent is a generous estimate."

Trouble on the Hill

Trailer Rates Lower At State

By Bill Buchan

Veterans living in the trailer court at State college pay only their electricity and water bills to the school and are not forced to pay any "rent" money for living on North Carolina property. According to a spokesman in the Veteran Affairs Office (under whose supervision the court operates), the charges amount to an average of four or five dollars per month.

It is difficult to understand, then, why one branch of the University should charge a rent fee in addition to an electrical bill.

Electricity is a sore subject in Trailer Village. Recent installation of individual meters has caused veterans living in the court to air their grievances, which they justly believe are unnecessary and remediable. It is difficult to believe, but housewives "on the hill" swear that they have spent as long as twenty to fourty minutes heating one pot of coffee. Others vow that their hot plates take from fifteen to twenty minutes to warm up to a cooking stage. These stories, coupled with those of lamps barely burn, call for a quick revision or correction of the trouble.

The trouble is low voltage, caused by small, inefficient wiring. The official story of the trailer court is that a shortage of heavy wiring forces the University to use the small wires which do not carry enough power to give ample electricity for cooking and lighting.

Under these circumstances students (in the upper court) cannot play their radios or burn their heaters during the "rush hours" from 5:30 until late at night. An unwritten law seems to exist in the court, whereby everyone uses as little electrical power as possible.

Also involved is the additional money that the electric meters will take from the veterans' pockets. One man who uses electricity in his trailer all day, reports that his first bill—for two weeks—totaled over four dollars. It is generally expected, from an average of bills already received, that the bills will range between four and five dollars per month for families where both husband and wife are away during the day.

At one time, residents said they were told that over 50 per cent of their rent money went towards payment for electricity. However, when the rent and light bills were divided, only one dollar was subtracted from the rent charges instead of three or four.

What the trailer residents and their wives would like to accomplish is simply this. First, they want the rates for Carolina students and State students on an equal basis. After all, there can certainly be no reason for a rent charge here and not in Raleigh, when both campuses offer the same conveniences. Second, they (those living in the upper court) want the inefficent wiring now in use replaced by wiring that will give proper lighting and cooking facilities.

Such a program shouldn't be difficult to achieve.

Victim of Circumstance

When a nation fights twice for her democratic ideals within the space of two years and loses, yet continues the struggle to preserve these ideals, one naturally sits up and takes notice. Today, Finland is that nation!

Upon cessation of hostilities between Finland and the USSR in 1940 the Fins turned to the task of repairing the war damage. A task that included the providing of homes for her displaced nationals, and returning Industrial and Agricultural production to normalcy.

But, just as the project was begun, she found herself in the throes of another battle with the same foe. This situation developed through a two-faced foreign policy on the part of Government Officials. John Citizen had been led to believe that full cooperation with the Soviet was being maintained, when actually the nation was being plunged into a vicious pact with the Axis powers. Risto Ryti, the man who had led the Finns against the Russian Army, in the name of Democracy, envisioned an Axis victory at the outset of the Second World War. He therefore, advocated and supported the union of Finnish Forces with the Axis Powers. Then, with German supplies and men within her borders, plus the aid of unscrupulous German-run propaganda, the Russian Bear had no alternative but to strike.

It is history that the Finnish Forces again went down in defeat, and the territory which she had relinquished to the Russians under the 1940 peace pact, but had regained with the aid of Hitler's forces, was again under the Russian Boot. This meant that her people had to either become Russian Citizens or flee the occupied area. It is observed that out of 450,000 Finnish nationals in this zone all but 30 left.

Russia not only demanded land, but required reparations totaling 300 million dollars which represents one-eighth of the national income and one fourth of the total yearly industrial production, to be paid by 1952. This is the highest per capita reprations charged to any defeated state of World War II. Yet Finland is paying it!

In order to retain the freedom which they prize so highly, the Finns have pitched into the job of reconstruction. Citizens are dividing their farms and sharing all available spaces with their compatriots, so that all may have a place in which to live. Industrial output has been increased to 86 per cent of prewar strength. Agricultural production is back to 60 per cent of normal. Her taxes have been increased seven fold. The cost of living has risen four and one-half times over the 1935 level with the Finnmark depreciating to one-fifth of its prewar value (2c).

A particular hardship is rebuilding homes for the emigrees and for those who lived in the 35,000 square miles of land laid waste by their supposed allies. The retreating Germans left in their wake only charred chimnies, ironically called "Hitler Monuments," grim reminders of the dark past. The Tuberculosis rate has greatly increased due to the sub-par living conditions.

The people of Finland are working twice as hard as ever before. From outward appearances they are adequately dressed, and well fed. Continuing to boast a fine record in that they are the only nation who has always met its obligations. The price of honesty is a high one, but it is their belief that it is the only salvation.

Although the country is meeting its obligations it needs help. The Marshall plan would have aided immeasurably but they realize that the Kremlin would not approve. Instead of this aid, Finland is seeking help from the United States in the form of long term trade agreements.

It is difficult to condemn these people, who so desperately believe and fight to retain Democratic principles. Finland is not a Satelite! Her people were born free and intend to remain free. They know that when the last dollar is paid to Russia in 1952, the Finnish people will have a higher standard of living than the average Russian peasant.

GRADS COME MARCHING HOME

HOMECOMING DAY IS always one of the gayest Saturdays during Carolina's pigskin season but the renewal of an old family squabble between North Carolina's brother institutions ought to make this week end even more interesting than most homecoming reunions.

It's been four years since the last Carolina-State scrap and the Tar Heels walked off with an easy 27-13 triumph that time. But a growing intensity in bad relations between the two schools—such as the Rameses incident in 1942—plus the fact that the all-civilian State team couldn't compete with the Navy-powered Carolina eleven put a halt to the series until the schedule-makers arranged for a renewal this year.

They couldn't have done a better thing. There's no reason why two of the state's leading colleges—brother schools at that—shouldn't get together on the gridiron as they do on the cage and net courts, along the basepaths, and even used to do at state student legislature meetings.

ONE THING FOR sure appears certain—though Carolina is rated the favorite, State can definitely be counted on to give the Tar Heels a rough time. The Blue and White gridders held the favorite's role in each of the last four games in the series—from 1940 through 1943—but they were able to win only half of these. The two teams traded 13-7 victories in '40 and '41 and the Wolfpack came back in '42 to upset the Tar Heels by a 21-14 count. Then came '43, a Carolina victory, and the temporary end of the series.

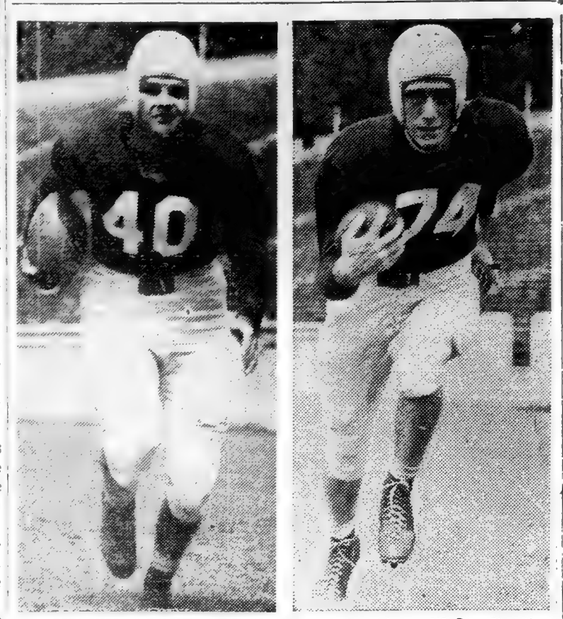
And now that they're finally getting around to holding the little family reunion again, it's sure to be a great day for the Greater University of North Carolina. Not only will the players and rooters of both the Chapel Hill and Raleigh institutions be on hand but the stands will also hold many of the University sisters from over Greensboro way. No matter which team is favored with their cheers, it should be a good ball game and a gala occasion all around.

HAPPY HOMECOMINGS

GETTING BACK TO Homecoming, as thousands of University graduates are doing, the Carolina spectators today would certainly have no kick coming if the Tar Heels perform as Blue and White teams did in the last two Homecoming celebrations. Last year's alumni reunion saw Carolina roll up its second highest score of the year in a 40-19 triumph over Florida. Moreover, Charlie Justice choo-chooed his way to two long touchdown gallops, on runs of 90 and 70 yards. A few of those today would go over big with the crowd.

Carolina had no Homecoming days for the three years prior to 1946. Which puts the last such celebration way back in 1942, when the Sunday morning headlines in the Daily Tar Heel read "Tar Heels Scrap Iron Dukes." It was wingback Joe Austin who sparked the Carolina club that afternoon, registering two touchdowns, including a 71-yard dash, to provide the 13-6 edge over Duquesne.

SUCH EXAMPLES OF Happy Homecomings can go on and on. Ten years ago, for example, it was another tailback of the Justice variety, George Watson, who came through with two touchdowns against Tulane as the "North Carolina Levee Stopped the Green Wave, 13-0." And while Coach Carl Snavely was head mentor in 1934-35, Carolina came through to a pair of shutout victories just to get in the Homecoming spirit. The first one was a 6-0 win over Kentucky, with a back named Dick Dashiell tossing to an end by the name of Dick Buck for the lone score of the battle. In 1935, the shutout was a 19-0 triumph over the Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech, with Jayvee Coach Crowell Little, then a sophomore quarterback, All-American end Andy Bershak, and fullback Bill Moore marking up touchdowns.



The Tar Heels even played one Homecoming scrap against State, only this one, way back in 1931, was an alumni gathering for State graduates over in Raleigh. But a change in setting didn't hurt the Carolina players—they proceeded to trip the Wolfpack, 18-15, with Rip Slusser scoring all three touchdowns.

THE SPOILERS

IT WOULD BE nice to report that Carolina won all its Homecoming tilts. That, unfortunately, is rather hard to do and is not the case. In fact, that same year, 1931, a team from the deep, deep South—Georgia by name—trampled the Tar Heels by 32-7. It was probably a case of the Bulldogs not being able to shake off the habit, since they had gained a 19-12 win in 1929 despite the outstanding play of Tar Heels Jim Magner and Yank Spaulding. And the Cracker state's other big team—this one of the engineering school—applied the screws to the 1933 Tar Heel aggregation, winning by 10-6.

THE SUM TOTAL of all this points to one fact—Homecoming is usually a day of celebration for Tar Heel fans and a victory today would give Carolina rooters a real reason to go out and celebrate—if they need one.

Tar Heel Harriers Meet State On Fetzer Field Today

SHOWN ABOVE ARE the two lads who will handle the fullback duties today in place of injured Hosea Rodgers. Walt Pupa, left, will be in the starting backfield and Bob Kennedy, right, will be his number one replacement. Both are in their third year of action with the Tar Heels.

Tar Heel Aerial Game Gets Big Test Today

Great Defensive Play

State ranks first in the nation in pass defense and only one touchdown has been scored on a running play through the Tech line. Footsie Palmer, the State fullback, ranks third in the nation in punting, all of which seems to indicate that the Tar Heels have an afternoon of hard work ahead of them if they are to take their fourth straight victory.

With Hosea Rodgers, the big fullback who has been instrumental in Carolina's revamped offensive, sidelined wtih a knee injury sustained against Tennessee last week, the Tar Heels will have to rely on their passing game more than usual today, that is provided they can solve State's tenacious pass defense.

Rodgers will be missed for his passing prowess as well as his running ability, but there are a number of other capable aerial specialists in the Carolina backfield that should make up the slack. Walt Pupa, who will open at fullback, already has thrown several touchdown passes this year. Charlie Justice also has rounded into one of the team's most capable passers. Two of his tosses went for touchdowns in the win over Tennessee last week.

Good Receivers

Art Weiner, Bob Cox, Ken Powell, and John Tandy make up a quartet of capable pass receivers for the tosses. Weiner has gathered in 15 passes already to rank among the top receivers in the country.

Starting in the Tar Heel line today will be Weiner and Cox, ends; Ted Hazelwood and Haywood Fowle, tackles; Bob Mitten and Sid Varney, guards; and Dan Steigman at center. This unit will perform on the offensive, with Coach Carl Snavely planning to use a different eleven on defense. The Tar Heel mentor followed this same plan last week, and it paid off with a 20-6 win over the Tennesse Vols.

Injuries have been plaguing Coach Feathers all week in his attempt to get the Wolfpack ready. Fullback George Allen and John Huzvar are definitely sidelined for the game along with George Blomquist, the top pass receiver on State's 1946 team.

Palmer Back at Fullback

Feathers has shifted Palmer to the fullback post, thus solving that problem but his reserve strength will be weakened by the injuries. With such ends as Al Phillips, Bill Stanton, and June Cheek around, State should feel no weakness at the flanks despite the loss of Blomquist.

Spearheading the State ground attack will be Charlie Richkus, the scrappy New Jersey boy who has been around the State campus a number of years as understudy to now graduated Howard Turner. Richkus can run and pass with the best and is backed up at tailback by Gwyn Fletcher and Ogden cmith, both of whom played prominent rolls in leading State to the Gator bowl last year.

Oscar Bozeman, injured for much of this season, and Gordon Goodman, will man the other halfback post for State. Bob Bowlby will vie with Carolina's Joe Wright for honors as the best blocking back on the field.

Different Formations

State operates from several different formations. For many of their plays, Feathers' squad will run from the Tennessee style of offense, the system on which Feathers was schooled when he was starring as a collegiate gridder for Tennessee. State also uses the T-formation and on certain occasions shifts into the single wing lineup.

Local Unit Favored To Cop Fourth Win

By Morty Schaap

Carolina's potent cross country team will open the homecoming festivities with State college today when they meet the Red Terrors over the four-mile course starting at 10:55 at Fetzer field.

It will be the Tar Heels' bid for their fourth straight dual win of the season and their 16th since they last tasted defeat on October 6, 1945 at Annapolis.

Coach Dale Ranson did not know late yesterday afternoon who would make up the starting team and all men are requested to be on hand as those not competing will run a time trial. A freshmen meet will be run as a preliminary to the varsity affair with the Wolfcubs of State providing the opposition.

Dubow Leads State

State has had one previous meet in which they downed the highflying 82nd Airborne division team, 16-48. Dave Dubow, who was ninth in the conference run last year, was first in that meet and is always a threat. Other Red Terror runners that are rated highly are Jimmy Adams, Jimmy Bales, Jim Crowell, John Hunter and C. L. Rasbury. Coach Tom Hines, the head coach at the Raleigh school, is in the building stage and within a year or so should have a club that will rank with the best in the loop.

Tar Heels that are certain to go to the mark are Jimmy Miller, Sam Magill, Jack Milne, and Alvin Smith. The other four men will be selected from the squad.

Freshman Meet

The freshmen meet marks the first cross country venture for the yearlings since before the war. They will travel the three-mile course instead of the varsity four-mile, Bobby Black, Dick Carr and Frank Hooper are expected to be the leaders in the freshmen race.

This will be the last appearance of the squad before they split in two and take separate trails next week with one squad going to New York to compete in the IC4A and the other going to Raleigh to take part in the Southern conference championship.

Cage Squad Stages Long Scrimmage

A long scrimmage showing a powerful offense, but a weakness on defense, closed the third week of practice for Carolina's White Phantoms yesterday.

Guard Norm Kohler and forward Coy Carson were outstanding in the five 17-minute scrimmages during the drill session. Other members of the team showed improvement in hot offensive tactics.

First game on the Phantom schedule will be December 3 against Catawba on the home court.

The average output per manhous in the United States has increased an average of 18.5 per cent a decade in the last 30 years.

Blue Devils Oppose Missouri in Durham

Missouri's high scoring Tigers invade Duke stadium this afternoon where they will battle Duke's Blue Devils in the South's top intersectional tilt.

The contest is rated a toss-up and apparently the team with the least number of injured key players will emerge victorious. Duke hopes were considerably brightened yesterday with the news that their ace tailback, Fred Folger, has sufficiently recovered from his Georgia Tech injuries to be ready for action.

The Tigers will be paced by an array of hard running backs including Howard Bonnett, Nick Carras, Dick Braznell, and Lloyd Brinkman.

Cadets, Irish Head Gridiron Action Today

All football fans' eyes and ears will be turned toward South Bend, Indiana, this afternoon for there in the University of Notre Dame Stadium, the unbeaten Fighting Irish and the Black Knights of the Hudson from the U. S. Military academy wind up their 34-year rivalry. They will stage what was termed "the game of the year" in preseason predictions.

Notre Dame mentor Frank Leahy is supposed to take the wraps off his green-clad eleven for the first time this year for the Irish will be out to avenge the two smashing wartime defeats handed them by the Cadets in 1944 and 1945. Last year the two teams fought to a scoreless tie.

Two more underefated elevens clash in Philadelphia where the Wahoos of Virginia and Penn's mighty Qaukers tangle to decide which squad will emerge as the eastern seaboard's only major team with a perfect record.

Wake Forest's Demon Deacons will be in Boston trying to snap out of their two-game losing streak at the expense of Boston College. Today's Bean City tilt is rated as a tossup by the experts but the Walkermen have been crippled by the loss of several key men via the injury route.

Georgia Tech's perfect record will be at stake in Baltimore where the Rambling Wreck crashes into Navy's futile Middies. Another undefeated team, Southern Methodist, continue its march toward a New Year's date as the host team in the Cotton Bowl when the Mustangs tangle with the Texas Aggies today.

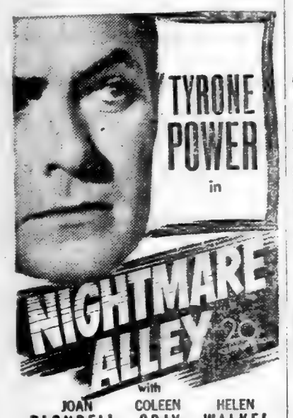
Paintings by Former Students On Exhibit in Person Gallery

The University art department is showing works of eight former students in Person hall, November 2-23. The exhibit is the first of its kind and will, if enthusiastically received, be repeated annually.



At the close of the exhibit, many of the drawings and paintings will be put on sale, the proceeds to help finance future shows.

The artists whose work will comprise the exhibit are Margaret Munch and Dallas Caldwell of Chapel Hill, Marianne Manasse of Breslau, Germany, Garland Peterson of Norfolk, Virginia, Mabel Smith Lovin of Red Springs, Ben Williams of Lumberton, Near Thomas and Edward Slumake.

Person hall art gallery is open to the general public. Visiting hours are from 9 to 5 o'clock on week-days and from 4 to 6 o'clock on Sundays.

Students Must Sign For AROTC Course

Freshmen and sophomores interested in joining the Air Reserve officers training quarter must register with course during the winter the Department of Military Science before December 1, Commanding Officer Byron R. Switzer warned yesterday.

Only 60 first year elementary students will be enrolled under the Air Force Department allotment here, Byron said. The course begins with the winter quarter.

Enrollment in the first year advanced section of the Air Reserve officer training program, inaugurated this fall, exceeds the quota of 35, Switzer said. The advanced group is composed of veterans in their third college year.

Housing List

There are another 15 men students eligible for dormitory rooms who may receive assignments at the Housing office, room 22 New East Annex, as soon as vacancies occur, according to an announcement today by J. E. Wadsworth, University housing director.

The following students should contact the housing office as soon as possible: Holcombe C. Adams; James W. Anderson, Jr.; Bynum R. Brown; Earl H. Crumpler; Wyndham S. Dukes; William W. Forty-Mile Limit Will Be Enforced

Another warning that 40 m.p.h. is the maximum speed permitted on highway 15-501 between Chapel Hill and Durham was registered yesterday by State Highway Patrolman J. R. Kennedy.

Kennedy, one of two state officers stationed at Chapel Hill, said that rigid enforcement of the speed limit would be pressed, and that ignorance of the regulation could not be considered when arrests are made.

"Several stretches of the Durham road are marked with a 30 m.p.h. limit, Kennedy said, "but the rest of the road is limited to 40, not 55."

Varsity Inaugurates a "Christmas Wishing Well"

The VARSITY has announced the inauguration of a new feature to begin immediately. The feature is a Christmas wishing well, set up for everyone to throw their wishes in. This includes young and old townspeople and students, even Dan the Dog—in fact everybody except the employees of VARSITY and their families. All you have to do is to obtain a blank from the VARSITY, insert pertinent information such as name, local address and the thing you desire most in VARSITY merchandise. Everyone may make a wish each day with no purchase strings attached. Comes the end of the week, two or more wishes are drawn from the well and the article wished for is given to the person making the wish—no strings attached. If the article is ten dollars or less, it is given free; if more, ten dollars is applied to the purchase price. That's the way it works. The well is set up, and the line forms to the right—right to VARSITY, of course. —Advertisement

Powerful Tar Heels Slaughter Wolfpack, 41-6

Title Of Miss Payoff Taken By DeArmon

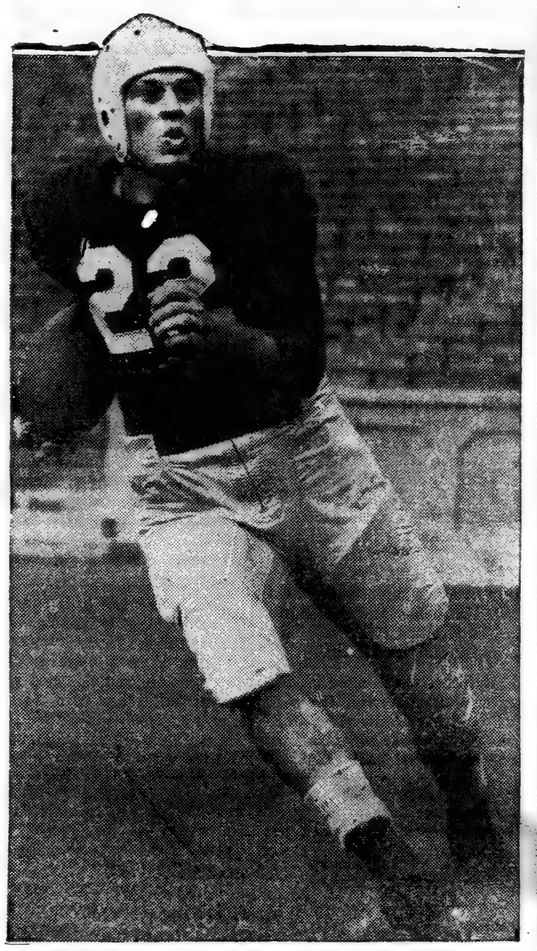
Blond, curvaceous Lillian DeArmon, of Charlotte, sponsored by the Monogram club, was awarded the title of "Miss Payoff" at last night's "Battle of the Bands" in Woollen gymnasium topping off the week-long World Student Service fund campaign on the campus.

LILLIAN DeARMON

Following the announcement of the identity of Miss Payoff, Chuck Voigt, president of the University club, awarded cups to representatives from Old East dormitory and Kappa Sigma fraternity, winners in yesterday's homecoming lawn display contest.

Miss DeArmon polled 5,492 votes to edge out the 4,317 of Kappa Sigma's Claudia Lee and number three in the race Jean Marie Lester, sponsored by Alpha Tau Omega.

The winner and her attendants were presented to the dancers during intermission by Wayne Brennegan, co-chairman of last night's WSSF dance.



ATO placed again in the lawn display contest, taking second position honors, while Sigma Nu and PiKa tied for show spot.

Judges Dr. J. Carlyle Sittersen, Col. F. Carlyle Shepard, and Dean M. A. Hill, judges of the homecoming program, gave honorable mentions to Chi Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Phi Delta Theta.

Music for the crowded dance was furnished by the two bands of Scott Gardiner and Ned Reap, who donated their services to the WSSF campaign.

WOMEN VOTERS MEETING

Dr. Paul Woodford Wager, professor of political science and research at the University will address the newly formed Chapel Hill league of Women Voters Monday, November 10 at 8 o'clock at the Baptist church. Wager, author of "One Foot on the Soil," will discus achievement of good housing for low income groups.

CHARLIE "CHOO CHOO" JUSTICE was going at full steam yesterday afternoon when he paced a 46-man assault on the Wolfpack from State College, with the Tar Heels copping a 41-6 Homecoming day victory. Justice had his best day of the season in the passing and running departments.

Justice & Company Treat Grads To Six TD Parade

By Billy Carmichael

Culture beat Agriculture yesterday. And rather soundly too, as some 40,000 autumn-chilled fans were treated to a six-touchdown exhibition of "how to play football" with North Carolina's trampling Tar Heels showing just that to the Wolfpack of visiting N. C. State in a successful homecoming engagement. The score, incidently, was 41-6.

Coach Carl Snavely used 46 players in the effort, digging deep into his bountiful bag of reserves to come up with some new faces that performed much to the delight of the coach and the fans alike. It was definitely a team victory.

Five Tar Heels broke into the scoring column with big Walt Pupa tallying twice, while Jim Camp, Charlie Justice, Bill Flamisch and Billy Hayes followed his fine example for one touchdown each.

Statistically Good

The Tar Heels did as well on paper as they did on the scoreboard. They gained 319 yards running and added another 128 yards passing for a 447 yard total, which is a full afternoon's work. Charlie Justice was the individual running leader for the local entry, getting 123 yards in 14 plays for almost nine yards a clip while Pupa and Camp were not far behind with similarly impressive totals. The Choo-Choo added 52 more yards passing for a 175-yard overall.

The Tar Heels were not long going to the front, scoring on the second play of the game. State won the toss, and because of the high wind, elected to defend the west goal, Carolina choosing to receive. Thompson kicked to Camp who returned the ball from the Carolina 15 to the 35 before being stopped.

On the next play Pupa took a direct pass from center, faked to Justice, went through a proverbial truck-sized hole, dallied momentarily in the secondary to shake off the only tackler who could get to him, then hit down the north sidelines. He had clear sailing until he got in the neighborhood of the State 25, where Footsie Palmer almost caught up with him, only to have Justice, coming up from behind, slip in front of Palmer and escort him to a seat, while Pupa raced onward to a score. The play covered 65 yards. Cox added the point and the Tar Heels led, 7-0.

State Storms

State stormed right back after Palmer returned the kickoff to the State 27. The latter passed to Phillips on the State 44 on one first down, galloped five yards on his own, then tossed to Cheek for another first down on the Carolina 37. Mike Rubish broke up the drive two plays later, however, intercepting a Palmer pass and the Tar Heels began to march again.

Pupa gained six at center on the first play, and being hurt was replaced by Kennedy. Kennedy and Justice combined to bring the ball to midfield with an unnecessary roughness penalty at that point against State moving the ball to the State 35. Justice then knifed off guard for another first down on the State 22, but here the Wolfpack put a crimp in the Tar Heels' scoring plans when Palmer intercepted Justice's fourth down pass on the State 1.

Palmer promptly booted out, Justice returning the ball nine yards to the State 44. Here, two running plays netted but one yard, but then Justice tossed long to Weiner on the State 10, the big end being dropped in his tracks.

Two plays later Justice passed again, this time to Jim Camp, standing like a hermit in the corner of the end zone, who gathered the ball in for a score. Cox again did the honors and the Tar Heels led, 14-0.

Early in the second quarter, the Tar Heels marched to their

Debate Council Plans Legislature

Sponsorship of a statewide student legislature "sometime after Christmas" was voted by the UNC Debate council late Friday evening, and a three-man committee has been appointed to study campus support and possible arrangements.

The Debate council's action is the first official indication of support for Carolina sponsorship of the legislature, though Al Lowenstein, chairman of last year's UNC delegation to the assembly, has carried on preliminary discussions with Secretary of State Thad Eure

Maurice Braswell, president of the council, said yesterday he would favor participation in such an assembly before Christmas if some other student organization were to undertake it. But in a 4-1 vote, with Braswell and the council's two faculty members abstaining, the group recommended that the session follow the holidays.

Blanton Miller, Pete Gerns, and Charlie Hodgson were named by Braswell to the investigating committee, with Miller serving as chairman.

Braswell said the three-man group would survey organizations here and at other schools to determine sentiment toward reviving the legislature, which went through ten sessions under sponsorship of State college.

Passing Attack

A spurious passing offensive in the State college cheering section yesterday had at least one fan in stitches, but doctors said there was nothing humorous about it.

Mrs. David M. Williams was struck on the head by a mysterious flying pop bottle in Kenan stadium during the game yesterday. Her condition is described as good, and she has been released from the infirmary, where she was taken for emergency treatment.

Mrs. Williams' husband, a State rooter himself, retrieved the unbroken bottle after it had plummeted from the stands and struck his wife's head, causing a scalp injury which required stitches. He said he believed the bottle's strange flight was "accidental."

Men Pledging Fraternities Must Pay Dollar Pledge Fee

Any man pledging a fraternity prior to the next formal rushing season must sign a formal bid and pay one dollar to the Interfraternity council in Dean of Men Fred Weaver's office was the latest directive issued by the Interfraternity council a few days ago.

The rush chairman of the fraternity concerned must appear in Dean Weaver's office with the prospective pledge to fill out the printed bid form, it was stated.

Also discussed at the council meeting was a scholarship fund for whch plans are not yet complete. The fund will be made up by fraternities on campus and will be administered by the University scholarship committee.

With the State college-Carolina game not having been played at that time, and with the Duke football contest coming up in the near future, Leon Todd, council president, stated that, The IFC requests every student to avoid all acts of vandalism on the campuses of our neighboring competitors and elsewhere.

Conservative Club Elects Officers At Recent Meeting

The Carolina Conservative club laid the foundations and formed committees for its activities during the 1947-48 school year Wednesday. The new officers of the Conservatives are as follows: John C. York, president; Paul Mullinax, first vice - president; Charlie Hodson, second vice-president; Charlie Kauffman, secretary; and James Craddock, treasurer.

Speakers are to be brought to the campus and an intensive campaign will be made with the cooperation of state newspapers to bring before the public news of Conservative events.

Gubernatorial Candidate Albright May Deliver Address Here for Federalists

By Donald MacDonald

Plans to bring R. Mayne Albright, Democratic candidate for the 1948 North Carolina gubernatorial race to the University campus to speak on world government will be discussed at a special meeting of student World Federalists Tuesday, according to an announcement by Russell Baldwin, president of the local chapter.

The meeting is called for the third floor of the YMCA building, 5 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon.

Albright, a University alumnus, was a North Carolina representative to the na-World Federalists which met tional convention of United in St. Louis last weekend. He is one of the state's leading proponents for the establishment of world government.

The date for Albright's address on this campus has not yet been set.

Another item of major importance to be discussed at the meeting Tuesday is the establishment of a radio program to be initiated by the University and Duke university chapters. In connection with the radio program, said Baldwin, script-writers and announcers are urgently needed.

One-Armed Student Attacked Friday Night

By Bill Sexton

As investigation of the recent series of night-time purse snatchings continues, city police reported yesterday that a student amputee had been attacked in the darkness by Davie hall Friday evening.

Chapel Hill officers, who do not see any connection between the purse thefts and the attack on one-armed Lowell Perry of 110 Manley dorm, said yesterday that a major epidemic of petty thefts, mostly unreported, may be developing on campus.

Escaped Uninjured

Perry, walking by Davie building at approximately 7:30 Friday evening, said he was attacked on his armless side by a white youth whom he did not recognize. Perry reported that both he and the attacker went down, but that he was able to regain his feet, strike with his one arm, and escape. He said he was not injured.

W. D. Blake, officer in charge of the thefts investigation, indicated that there was evidence of more loss of personal property than was being reported to police headquarters. He said investigation of the thievery was being "badly handicapped" by the failure of students and others who have been victimized to declare their losses.

The city police department released the information that a search of the vicinity of the purse-grabbing attack on Lula White, waitress, October 22, revealed the littered contents of a student's wallet. The owner of the purse, identified through a student passbook discarded by the thief, told police it had been stolen the day before.

Seen Entering Car

Police also announced that a Negro who corresponded to the vague descriptions of a mysterious thief who attempted to rob Lucy Denny, coed of Kenan dorm, had been seen earlier attempting to enter a locked car near the scene of the unsuccessful purse-snatching in the Arboretum.

Officers are continuing efforts to learn the identity of the student who pursued the thief after Miss Denny's screams frightened him away, in an attempt to obtain a more complete description.

Communism Subject of Talk Scheduled Tonight by Nash

The significance of Communism in a university will be the appropriate subject of Dr. Arnold Nash's lecture at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening in Gerrard hall. The newly-appointed head of the Department of Religion will discuss the Christian evaluation of the Communist view of the university, and its role in society, in this latest of his series of lectures on the Christian task in the modern university.

In his talk last Monday night, Dr. Nash explained the Nazi view of education in the Anglo-Saxon world, and explained how the Germans instilled a deep faith in their students, but a faith directed toward wrong ends. The remedy the Nazis applied to the lack of purpose in learning was worse than the disease, he argued.

Dr. Nash views the Communist outlook toward the role of the university as identical to the one of the Nazis, and he will endeavor to demonstrate this in his Monday evening talk.

'Happy Days' Set For Theme Song Of Sunday Sing

Aptly chosen tune "Happy Days Are Here Again" will lead off this evening's Sunday Sing at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall, as Coline Smith takes over as mistress of ceremonies in a program of a dozen singable old and new popular songs.

Specialties on the docket, aside from Coline's blues rhythms, are Hank Beebe playing Rhapsody in Blue and Sherry Adler in an Al Jolson routine.

Graham Memorial sponsors the weekly Sunday Sings, directed for the student union by Mark Barker and Avery Gibson. Frank Matthews assists as piano accompanist.

Expressionless Snavely Face Breaks into Broad Grin As Silver Fox Smiles over One-Sided Carolina Win

By Bill Kellam

Many surprising things occurred in and around Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon. Not only did the red hot Tar Heels unexpectedly run up their biggest score of the Carolina-State rivalry but in the Tar Heel dressing room after the end of the game something happened that probably passed unnoticed by most of the dressing occupants because of the excited confusion that reigned after the victory.

For in the Carolina quarters Coach Carl Snavely's usually expressionless countenance broke into a broad grin for the first time in probably many moons as he expressed his approval of his charges' performance against the overrated Wolfpack from State college.

"Things broke well for us this afternoon and the game was much harder than the score indicates," the Carolina mentor observed. "I was very pleased with the showings of the third and fourth teams." The Silver Fox paused a moment to think and then that rarely seen smile appeared and continued during his last proud words, "I'm even beginning to feel kinda proud."

As one would expect, the Tar Heel gridders themselves were tired but happy after fighting their way to the Field House through a host of joyful admirers. Charlie Justice echoed the team's general feelings with his comment that, "It was our greatest game this season and a real team victory. We were really hot."

Big Art Weiner, whose first quarter clowning on a pass from Justice brought the house down, amended his observation about last week's one half performance by the Tar Heels to, "It was double barrelled this time. We were hot in both halves to-

Doctors Deferred

Greybull, Wyo., Nov. 8. (UP)—"God will heal her" is what the parents of a four-year-old girl stricken with spinal meningitis here said today, when they refused medical treatment for their tiny daughter.

Francis June Baker's condition is described as "serious," but the faith of her parents will not permit doctors to take care of her. They belong to the Church of Christ here.

Reporter Finds That Physicists Out of Laboratories Are Too Innocent About Wicked Ways of Modern World

By John Stump

It was billed as an atomic energy program, and featured Dr. Oscar K. Rice who was to give a "report from Oak Ridge on atomic energy control." Being no atomic experts ourselves, with physics 24 about the extent of our erudition in the field, we nevertheless have some interest in the subject.

So Thursday night found us at Gerrard hall. One would have assumed from the handbills that Dr. Rice's audience would be regaled with mysterious formulae, tales of the centrifuge method, and words like thorium and fissionable isotopes. Instead we heard things like veto, hysteria, and Russia.

In fact we came away with the distinct impression that we had been to a political meeting. We do not use the word in any accusing tone; political meetings are all right—even for scientists. However, they should not be billed as experts in this field any more than Senator Pepper should attempt to speak on significant mutations. Not that Pepper is a political expert.

But scientists are definitely not, and this talk was an excellent illustration of both the fact and the reason for it. Rice is a kindly, naive old gentleman who believes with Father Flanagan that there is no such thing as a bad boy.

In his talk, he emphasized the three fundamental facts about the atom bomb. As he listed them they are (1) no secret, (2) no defense, and (3) it will never be employed.

Dr. Rice illustrated his Money Mystery

Chicago, Nov. 8. (UP)—Six-year-old Jean Fisher tried to buy a doll in a department store here today but the sale was refused when she offered in payment a crisp 1,000 dollar bill.

Local police authorities soon got to the bottom of the mystery with the discovery that the bill had blown off a shelf-hiding place in her home, and that her parents were frantic over what had happened to their daughter and the money.

Let the First Bite Be a Choice One

Despite the fact that last year's freshman election for class officers smelled to high heaven, and despite the fact that, last week, this column advised the Legislature to take every precaution and put this year's election on an even keel, the stench has already begun to arise—several days before election.

Three times last year a portion of the freshman class objected profoundly to the manner in which the election itself was being conducted. They did not like the monitor system of counting hands at the voting instead of using an election box and secret ballot. They did not believe that enough time had elapsed between the time the election was announced and the closing of nominations. They also thought that the announcement that elections would be conducted was not sufficiently publicized to attract the attention of all freshmen.

At least two of these three mistakes—insufficient publicity and amount of time—are again being charged by angry freshmen.

Clearly someone has fallen down on his job. It is difficult to determine who, because each time we hear the "story" on the election it changes with the story-teller. The chairman of the Board of Elections did not receive an "official" announcement that there would be a class election until a short time before the nominations were closed. However, a member of the legislature tells us that he notified him, in no official capacity, after the date was established. Also the Daily Tar Heels printed an account of the election dates and nominations Saturday morning in an article relating happenings in the Legislature.

We are not interested in pinning the blame on any individuals or groups. We are interested only in seeing that the freshmen are given the opportunity of nominating the men they want in office. Several groups, including the Freshman Friendship council and at least one group of independent freshmen, are investigating the possibilities of delaying the election and nominating the officers they wish in office.

If they are successful in their attempt, we propose that the Legislature instruct the Board of elections to carry out the following methods for publicizing it:

Prepare placards, which explain, in detail, the method, dates, and all essential information concerning nominations, and the election itself, and post the placards in conspicious places such as the quonset hut area and Alexander dormitory, places where freshmen are in number.

Notify this publication so that we can carry official notices, from the Election Board, of nominations and election procedures several days previous to the actual opening of nominations. This will provide freshmen with sufficient time to gather in groups and "talk up" their candidates.

Freshmen class elections should be one of the most carefully planned and best conducted elections. It is on these elections that freshmen get their first taste of University politics. Don't let the first bite into campus politics leave a bad taste in the mouths of potential campus leaders.

32 Hours for Kaye

The Purdue Exponent tells of an interesting situation up at that Indiana school. Danny Kaye is due to appear there on Nov. 21 to make his faces, so tickets for the affair went on sale some days ago. The interesting situation arose when three or four young men got in line to buy the ducats some 32 hours before the box-office was to open. The first man in line told a reporter that he intended to buy "about a thousand" tickets.

And where will the rank and file of the student body sit for the show? Outside, maybe.

We point to the Purdue pickle to give credit to the Order of the Grail here on campus. Their arrangement for the sale of tickets to the forthcoming Grail dances over the Duke-Carolina weekend is a sensible one and will not result in monopoly of blocks of seats as did the Purdue set-up.

The Grail has specified that no student will be allowed to buy more than one set of tickets. It is hoped that the Grail's excellent system will be so supervised that even distribution will result—as the Grail intends.

A further suggestion to the Grail: let the tickets be so designed that counterfeiting of them would be too difficult to make it profitable. The distribution system would be useless if counterfeits flood the campus as was the case at last year's Grail dances.

Marshall Plan Key to Fate of Europe

By W. C. Dutton, Jr.

Asserting that the Communists of Europe have mobilized to destroy the Marshall Plan, and with it the liberal and socialist leaders of Europe, top leaders of Americans for Democratic Action have challenged all American liberals to make their position clear on this issue.

"The Communist declaration is a challenge to Henry A. Wallace, to open-minded members of Progressive Citizens of America and to every American liberal to speak out on this vital issue." This statement appeared in the ADA World and was signed by Wilson W. Wyatt, national chairman and Leon Henderson, chairman of the Executive Committee.

In reference to the meeting in Poland where officials of nine European countries issued a manifesto which clearly revealed that Moscow sees the Marshall Plan as its most formidable opponent, the ADA has taken the position that the Marshall Plan is the key to the fate of Europe. If the high hope of the Plan is to be fulfilled, the American public must be informed that Europe's democratic leaders must overcome Communist harassment and be able to carry out the program of reconstruction.

As the new Communist manifesto was prepared for publication, the national board of Progressive Citizens of America met at Philadelphia. From that city came a somewhat less historic proclamation. It condemned the Marshall Plan as a "pressure" on Western Europe to force economic conformity to "the rigid, illiberal, backward-looking pattern acceptable to Wall Street Bankers and monopolists who increasingly dictate United States policy." The divergence between ADA and PCA on the Marshall Plan serve to clarify a difference which may have seemed obscure to some progressives.

The Marshall Plan is a concept of which we believe that every American has a right to be proud. If the Plan fails, Europe will be abandoned to hunger, want, and political chaos.

America can refuse to face stark reality or we can stand with the people of Europe and shoulder the responsibilities that fulfillment of the Marshall Plan imposes on us all.

DeGaulle Versus Communism

By Herb Alexander

In the recent elections in France, the Reunion of the French People won the majority of votes, not because of any positive policy DeGaulle had formulated, but because he stood strongly against the Communist party. The fear of war in any nation tends to make the populace look for strong leadership, and the voters saw that strength in DeGaulle.

The present Remadier government will in all probability continue its do-nothing program until elections are held next May. A weak executive and a strong legislature make it impossible for France to relieve itself of its plight. Economic and governmental problems lose their significance while the political parties squabble on the floor of the Legislature.

M. DeGaulle seems content to wait until May to take over the government, and assume strong burocratic power for himself. To achieve this, the Constitution must be changed. He will try to stabilize the currency and economic life of France. He will outlaw the Communist party and form a foreign policy. He will require the backing of the masses, which is Left, and he will need to enlist the full support of the Socialists and Liberals. In order to obtain this support, DeGaulle will necessarily have to turn to the Left. If he continues his Rightist policies, his government will fail and chaos and Communism will ensue.

Whatever Facistic tendencies DeGaulle may have, he will have to ameliorate them, for the French people are democratic and want neither Fascism nor Communism. However, it seems apparent that the people will have to surrender some of their liberties in order to achieve a balanced government and economy.

Much the same condition prevails in Italy. DeGasperi has been Premier for over a year and a half. Last July he dismissed all of his Communist ministers. Thus far he has managed to survive, probably because of American Military Government sanction. How much power the Italian Communists can muster is disputable. It is believed that Italian anti-Communists will work together, but it is problematic whether they will succeed in sinking the CP.

The United States must aid the European leaders in their endeavors to feed the hungry, for the only difference between a Communist and an anti-Communist may be a half of a loaf of a bread, depending on from where the bread comes.

Trailer Trouble

To the Editor:

Recently, the occupants of the UNC Trailer Court were forced to accept the installation of electric meters on individual trailers. this in itself, wouldn't be so hard to take, but now, that we're paying an unusually high rate of 3.8 cents per kilowatt hour, it isn't unreasonable to expect adequate voltage to play a small radio during "rush hours."

Why is this? Is it as we've been told, that the University can't get the heavy wiring? Or is it that they don't want to open their Monkey Ward's catalong and order a few hundred feet?

Maybe vets are getting too many privileges and can afford to let the hot plates burn like crazy for two and a half hours when the meal could be prepared in less than 45 minutes with sufficient juice?

Yes, vet's may have a high scholastic average, but it will be impossible to maintain this commendable record if we must study by lights weaker than candlelight.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

MacArthur-- A Man With Plans

By Drew Pearson

Washington. — General MacArthur dropped a very clear hint that he was wide open to run for President in talking to a newspaper friend in Tokyo some time ago.

The newsman was blunt and to the point.

"Are you going to run for President?" he asked.

"No, I'm too old," replied MacArthur. "Besides, I've got a more important job to do here. I've been able to keep the Russians in their place.

"If I were elected, I might not last an entire term," mused MacArthur, "but I'd certainly give everything I had. I could certainly take the country over the hump."

"How would you get around the GIs' feeling toward you?" pressed the newsman.

"Oh, that's easy," replied the General. "I'd show how Roosevelt boxed me in out here and didn't send enough materiel, and I would also show how carefully I used that materiel to save lives."

MacArthur said nothing definite, but he gave the distinct impression that he was getting really uneasy as he saw Eisenhower forging ahead as a political possibility, and that he, MacArthur, would give his right arm to be 58 instead of 68 in 1948.

Farmers don't need to get excited about the chances of farm co-operatives losing their tax-exempt status. Most members of the House Ways and Means Committee prefer not to be quoted on this hot tamale, but privately both Republicans and Democrats doubt that the co-ops will be hit in new tax legislation.

To get at the co-ops, the committee would have to "open up" sacrosanct Section 101 of the Internal Revenue Code, which exempts not only the co-ops, but also churches and religious groups, labor unions, educational institutions, the Daughters of the American Revolution, veterans groups and other segments in the "no-man's land" of our tax system.

Any effort to tamper with Section 101 to take one of these groups out of the non-profit class and make it taxable is likely to encounter strong opposition from the others, fearing they may be next on the program. Next to the co-ops, churches, universities and labor unions are perhaps the most vulnerable, because of huge real-estate holdings and other investments that are tax-free. The unions even operate banks that can hardly be classified as nonprofit.

All this is why Ways and Means Chairman Harold Knutson is so anxious to pass the buck to the Treasury Department, for an "opinion" on whether co-ops should be tax-exempt. Knutson has seldom sought Treasury advice in the past, but he is more than willing to let the Treasury take the lead—and the raps—in proposing any changes in Section 101.

Also the cagy Knutson wants to avoid political repercussions from his own constituents, because Minnesota is one of the biggest co-op states in the union.

A majority of the Ways and Means Committee favors some formula for tapping the revenues of the big co-operatives as distinguished from the small co-ops. Some of these big outfits export their goods, have advertising budgets and function much as private business.

Section 101 eventually will be amended so the Government can move in on these Big Berthas, but the country's 10,000 or more small farm co-ops won't be touched by Congress in the immediate future. They have too many potent allies in Section 101.

The Ring and the Cross

A Book to Burn-- Unfortunately

By Bob Sain

The Ring and The Cross, by Robert Rylee, 308 pages, Knopf, $3.

Rylee has written a fighting book; he has put a firm finger on American fascists, and surprisingly, he has provided four or five hours of just plain entertainment for most readers.

In "The Ring and the Cross" he tells of a Texas politician, Adam Denbow (who might be Jesse Jones) and he tells of Wesley Clayton, a southern aristocrat who admired Hitler's politics and sought to emulate them; of Vaiden McEachern, a Texas liberal, lost and confused in the maze of machine politics; of two women: Judith Clayton, who went to Spain's civil war, who helped labor unions in Texas with her money and personality, and Patricia Holloway who loves Vaiden McEachern.

Rylee shows clearly the fascism of America, the rich who consider themselves God-chosen to direct and supervise the "ignorant" poor in a sort of "parental relation." He hits the Ku Klux Klan and labor union persecution. He has written the sort of book that may be burned 10 years from now, or sooner.

The plot is sprawling: Senator Denbow returns to Texas to put down an up-and-coming political foe (McEachern), finds that his own assistant, Wesley Clayton, is usurping his Texas throne. Clayton tells the senator that he is getting old and should retire, which, of course, would enable Clayton to run the state, and, later the country. The Senator balks, finds himself drifting toward the political left, into the camp of his enemy, McEachern. Clayton eventually wins.

The love story is interesting, if sometimes laughable. McEachern is the target for the affections of both women: Judy, who was an accomplished pianist and had talked with Goering, who was not beautiful but who possessed "a feline magnetism," and the widowed Patricia Holloway, whose husband had been a great American painter. (She and McEachern are together less than half an hour before they are in each other's arms. Shades of True Confessions!)

Rylee writes well enough. Sometimes his style is poetic, sometimes straight. He overwrites on occasion, but the tale runs smoothly. Only hitch is that he sometimes puts weighty speeches on political and economic subjects into the mouths of Vaiden and Patricia while they are ostensibly together just for loving.

The book, dealing as it does with the southern aristocracy and with southern politics, will, inevitably, be measured by the standard of Robert Penn Warren's "All the King's Men." It doesn't approach the quality of Warren's Pulitzer-prizewinner—but what novel will in the forties?

Rylee's last novel appeared in 1937. It would seem that he has been 10 years writing this one. This reviewer considers his time well spent.

Klenz Recital

Stimulating to Listener

By John K. B. McDowell

Mr. William Klentz, violincellist, appeared in a solo recital this past Friday evening devoted to three Bach suites, the Suite I in G major, the Suite II in D minor, and the Suite VI in D major. This recital, the last in a series of three, again revealed Mr. Klentz' playing as consistently intelligent, and frequently passionate and exciting. Possessed of a full, rich tone, his playing never violates good taste in order to create effects, but maintains itself in a seemly manner both interesting and stimulating to the listener.

The Bach suites played find their prototypes in the lute music of the early XVII Century French court. This music was stylized as virtuoso keyboard and instrumental music. The technique and instrumental style is that of the traditional German school which emulates the harmonic and quasi-polyphonic effects of the lute and keyboard rather than the vocal manner of the Italians. This style died out with Bach but we find in the music of Hindemith today a renewed interest in it.

As encores, Mr. Klentz played the bourree from the Bach C major suite, and the sarabande from the suite in C minor.

In the first two concerts of this series, Mr. Wilton Mason, pianist and harpsichordist, appeared in joint recital with Mr. Klentz. The first program was devoted to four sonatas by Bach, Beethoven, Debussy and Faure. In the second concert a program of harpsichord and 'cello sonatas was presented with Mr. Mason playing for the first time publicly the new Challis harpsichord recently acquired by the Music Department.

His admirable playing, together with Mr. Klentz', helped make the performance of these sonatas of Gabrielli, Marcello and Vivaldi a noteworthy experience for musical enthusiasts in Chapel Hill.

'Y' Committees Conduct Active Campus Programs

With the main campus drive for WSSF funds about over—though certainly not the needs for which they were solicited—Y thoughts turn eagerly to things to come: Christmas plans, winter retreat, and right now, rejuvenated committee meetings.

New chairman of the recreation committee is Emily Ogburn of Winston-Salem. She and her committee will work to set up on campus such recreational facilities as a skating rink and bowling alley. They will also plan the recreational events for the Y's winter retreat, to be held sometime near the end of January.

At tomorrow's meeting, the Public Affairs committee will hear Dr. N. J. Demerath, associate professor of sociology and research associate in the Institute for Research in Social Science, discuss "Slum Clearance." Meetings of this committee, which is discussing economic, social, and political problems of the South, are held in the Y and are open to the general public.

The Music committee, under its new chairman Ferne Hughes, will provide special music for the Y-sponsored coed get-togethers and for vesper services in women's dorms. They are also starting a collection of recordings.

Though most committees meet at 5 o'clock Monday, the group discussing "You and Your Religion" has set its meetings for 7 o'clock Thursday. This week the Rev. Mr. J. Robert (Spike) Nelson will talk to them on the "Background and Beliefs of the Methodist church." They are hearing speakers from various religious groups in order to clarify their own religious beliefs. Meetings of this group are also open to non-members.

Undefeated DKE and Chi Psi Grid Teams Open Intramural Playoff Play Tomorrow

The Intramural playoffs for the tag football championship get under way tomorrow afternoon when DKE, winners in fraternity league 3, oppose Chi Psi, the victors in loop 4.

Both teams were undefeated during their regular schedule and the Dekes were also untied and unscored on. Chi Psi's goal line was not crossed until the final game, after victory was assured.

Only one league champion is still in doubt. In the number three circuit, Sigma Nu, SAE, and Zeta Psi are all tied up. The Sigma Nu and SAE teams will battle tomorrow and the winner will oppose the Zetes to see which club gains the title and with it the right to oppose the Phi Delta Theta outfit, league 1 champs.

The playoffs in the dormitory division are slated to start Wednesday.

Handball Tourney To Start Thursday

The Intramural office announced yesterday that applications for the new handball tournament are now being accepted on the entry sheets located on the handball courts.

The double - elimination tourney will consist of a doubles and singles division. The games will not follow a rigid schedule, but arrangement of matches will be made among the entrants.

Deadline for entries is six o'clock on Tuesday. Actual play will get under way Thursday. Prizes will be awarded by the mural department to the winners of both divisions.

Duke Trounced; Irish, Deacons, Penn, Tech Win

Duke's faltering Blue Devils dropped their second game in a row yesterday in Durham as a surprisingly powerful Missouri team ran over Wallace Wade's outfit, 28-7, in one of the top intersectional tilts of the day.

The visiting Tigers displayed a diversified attack that showed both good passing and running to completely bewilder the Dukes. The defeat was one of the worst that the Devils have sustained in recent years.

Coach Don Faurot's boys got rolling in the second quarter when they gained the ball on the Duke 34. Halfback Dick Braznell carried the pigskin to the 15 on a lateral play. It took Missouri only three more plays to go over.

Duke Rallies

Duke fought back, negotiating 80 yards for a touchdown, which was scored on a short end sweep by George Clark.

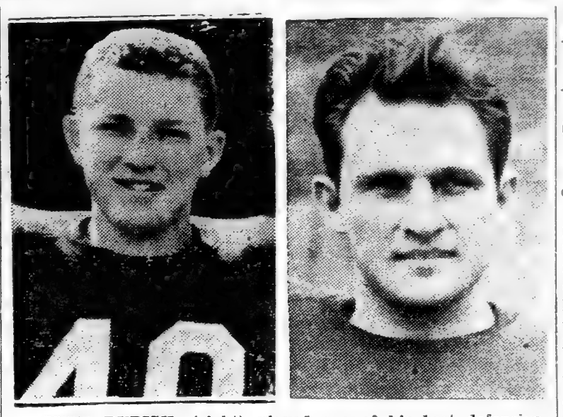
The rest of the game was all Missouri. Braznell, Howard Bonnett, and Fred Kling did the remaining scoring for the Big Six club to complete the Missouri touchdown output.

Down in Atlanta, Georgia Tech had its hands full before the Engineers eked out a 16-14 win over scrappy Navy team that can't seem to get out of the losing habit.

The Middies were leading, 14-9, in the fourth period before Tech recovered a fumble on the Navy 35. Two plays later Jimmy Patton uncorked a long pass to Jim Southward who took the ball on the 10 and went over to provide the winning margin.

Virginia Beaten

Pennsylvania continued undefeated by beating the University of Virginia's previously undefeated club, 19-7, in the East's number one game run off in Philadelphia.



In Boston, an underdog Wake Forest team snapped a two-game losing streak by topping Boston college, 14-13, in a real thriller. A pass, Fetzer to Hoev, and a short buck by Joe Dominick provided Wake with two first half touchdowns, and the stubborn Deacs withstood a second half BC flurry to preserve their victory margin.

End of Series

Notre Dame marched to a 27-7 win over Army before 58,000 fans to maintain its undefeated record. The game marked the end of the colorful series between the Irish and the Cadets.

Michigan, another unbeaten team, rolled merrily along to the Big Nine championship and a Rose Bowl bid by smashing Indiana, 35-0.

Two of the nation's other unbeaten elevens didn't have things quite so easy. SMU fashioned a 13-0 triumph over the Texas Aggies for their seventh in a row and heavily-favored Penn State had a narrow squeeze before downing Temple, 7-0, for their seventh.

MIKE RUBISH, (right) played one of his best defensive games of the year, yesterday afternoon, when he was constantly a thorn in the side of the Wolfpack ball carriers. BOB COX played well on the field and added five extra points, out of six trys, to run his total to 16 out of 19, for the season.

third touchdown. They started from their own 18, where Palmer had kicked out of bounds, with Justice, Camp, and Kennedy moving one ball to midfield in four running plays. On the the following play Camp got a late start on a deep reverse, bumping into one of his own blockers, but recovered his footing to break into the clear down the south sidelines, racing to the State 12, where cutting in to avoid Palmer, he slowed down just enough to allow Fletcher to catch up and drop him on the State 7. Camp was hurt on the play and forced to leave the game.

On the very next play, Justice hit inside tackle, cut to the outside just past the line of scrimmage and then danced into the end zone for another touchdown. Cox's try for the point was wide. Score, Carolina 20, State nothing.

Less than a minute later the Tar Heels had another one. This one came when Ogden Smith, backed up against his own goal line, threw somewhat of a desperation pass, which Bill Flamisch cut in on at the State 20-yard line marker, and scampered blal in hand down the sidelines for six more points. Cox added the point to bring the score to 28-0.

State threatened seriously late in the period on a Palmer-paced drive, getting to the Carolina 10 before Bowlby fumbled after taking a Palmer pass, the Tar Heels recovering as the half ended.

Second Half

The Tar Heels scored once again early in the third quarter, on another drive that started after an exchange of punts following the kickoff. Palmer having punted into the end zone, the Tar Heels began on their own 20, Pupa moving the ball in three rushes to the 39. Here Justice took over, started on a wide play, just missed getting trapped for a large loss, cut up field and slipped down the sidelines to the State 33 where he was run out of bounds.

Three plays later, the Tar Heels were only three yards farther down the field, but Pupa faded back on fourth down and flipped an aerial to John Tandy who took it on the 12, drove to the 5 where Palmer hit him causing him to fumble, the ball rolling out on the 2. Two plays later, Pupa banged over for the score. Cox again converted and the tally went to 34-0.

The Tar Heels' last touchdown came early in the fourth quarter when Bunting got things rolling by intercepting a Palmer pass on the State 40 and returning to the 28. Two running plays net-day."

Six placement attempts apparently did not wear out Bob Cox's trusty right leg for he replied to a query about its condition with "It's in great shape." He added, "The Farmers weren't on for this game. Beat Dook!"

Mike Rubish, who gave the Wolfbacks a hard time all afternoon, brought a roar of laughter from his teammates with this dig at the Aggies. "You can tell State to bring a team with them the next time they play us."

Husky Walt Pupa, who broke up the game with the first of his two touchdowns, was hurrying toward the door but he paused long enough to gleefully comment, "I'm mighty happy because I've waited a long time for this." Pupa was a member of the 1942 Carolina team that dropped a 21-14 upset to the Wolfpack.

Line backer George Sparger, also a veteran of the '42 game, felt that "It's wonderful to beat State by that score."

Massive Bill Smith, who turned in another excellent performance up front, was shaking with laughter as he gleefully roared. "I say the same thing I did last week—we did the same thing last week and we'll do the same thing next week."

Don Hartig proposed his toast to the vanquished foe. "A toast to State, may they play like that always."

Hosea Rodgers ,who was hovering sadly by the shower room door, said that he "enjoyed the game very much but would have enjoyed it more if he'd been playing." He thought that he'd be ready to go against Maryland on Saturday.

Joe Romano paused long enough while removing his uniform to chuckle, "State was rough but we were twice as rough." Several other comments, none of which was complimentary, were heard about State's enthusiastic brand of ball.

Coach Beattie Feathers slipped out of the State quarters for parts unknown immediately after the State team had all entered and thus was not available for comment.

Individual Honors Are Garnered Again by Miller, Milne, Magill

By Morty Schaap

Paced by the reliable three M's, Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne and Sam Magill, the Tar Heel cross country team racked up its fourth straight win of the season and the 16th straight dual triumph by downing State college, 15-51, in a meet run out of Fetzer field yesterday morning.

Six Tar Heels crossed the finish line before the Wolfpack could get a man in. The winners' time was 20:50.6 for the four-mile course. Alvin Smith and Mark Burnham finished in a tie about 40 yards behind the leaders. Julian Mackenzie put on a fine stretch drive to overtake Jimmy Adams of State and pass him at the finish for sixth place.

Chuck Herty, running unofficially for Carolina, was eighth and John Bristow of the Tar Heels was ninth. John Crowell and Jimmy Bales of State were the next two finishers and they were followed by Carolina's Halstead Holden. Chuck Vernon of the Red Terrors was next across the line. Bringing up the rear were Jim Hunt of Carolina, C. R. Rasbury of State, Basil Wood of Carolina, Johnny Egland of State, Dan Martin of Carolina, Clyde McAll of State and Walt Francis of Carolina.

Dave Dubow, State College's ace harrier, was in fourth position coming off Deadman's hill but took a wrong turn and did not finish.

In the freshman race, State nosed out the Tar Babies, 25-32, when John Hiatt was disqualified for taking a wrong trail. Bobby Black of Carolina won the race by several hundred yards in the excellent time of 14:46 for the three-mile run. Dick Carr of Carolina was second and Hiatt had third until he was disqualified. State finished five runners in the next positions to sew up the meet.

The meet today was the first defeat that State has lost and it also marked another addition to the personal record of Miller who now has gone through eight dual meets without finishing below first.

Coeds Compete In Two Sports

Volleyball and swimming hold the coed sports spotlight for the coming week, with the finals in one slated for Tuesday evening and a meet in the other scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

The volleyball finals will pit Kenan against Pi Phi in what looms as a close tilt. Both are undefeated in their four games during the tourney. Kenan edged Chi Omega, 19-17, to reach the final round, while the Pi Phis were topping the Tri Delts by a 27-19 score.

On Thursday, the Women's Athletic Association and the Splash club will sponsor a tank meet for all dormitories and sororities. Races scheduled for the event are a 20-yard freestyle, 20-yard backstroke, 20-yard breaststroke, 40-yard freestyle, 60-yard medley relay, and 160-yard freestyle relay.

The WAA emphasized that all girls entering the meet are required to have an A medical rating. Each coed may enter three events and each organization is allowed two entries in each race.

The pool will be open for practice for this meet and ones later in the year as follows: Monday through Friday, 4 to 6; Saturday, 10 to 11 and 2 to 6; and Sunday, 2 to 5.

ted four yards, and then Hayes passed up the middle to Max Cooke for a first down on the 15. On the next play, Hayes sweeped out wide, cut back in behind nice interference and romped 15 yards for a score. Once again Cox was on the scene to move the score to 41-0.

State's lone score came three minutes afterwards when Bernie Watts broke through to block a Bunting punt on the Carolina 12. The ball rolled into the end zone, where Fred Sherman fell on it, only to have it squirm away and into the arms of visitor Al Phillips for a State score. Palmer missed the conversion.

Reserves Battle

The rest of the ball game saw Carolina reserves battle the Wolfpack on even terms as Coach Snavely, all but cleared his bench.

The locals threatened once more at the close of the game, when Justice who was going in to do the kicking on third and fourth down, ran from punt formation, from his own 32 to the State 47. From here Hayes opened up his passing game, hitting Sherman on the 26 for one large gain and Weiner on the State 7 as the final whistle blew.

Offensively and defensively, the Tar Heels were potent throughout the afternoon, with stellar performances noticeable all the way down the line.

State, capably led by Charlie Richkus and Palmer, was an outclassed team, but fought doggedly throughout the game regardless of the scoreboard.

three "main" points well. But he spent only a small fraction of his time in speaking of them. The 'no secret' portion of his contention, he said, has not sunk in on the masses. Neither has the 'no defense' contention sunk in, he said.

"The British," he said, took two months to perfect a 90 per cent defense against the V-1 rocket, and it was relatively easy to defend against," which is the scientist's way of saying that there were 2 million British casualties before they devised a reasonably effective defense against something which bears the same relation to the atom bomb as a .22 to a 16 inch rifle.

Up to that point the meeting was just a scientific talk with a political tinge.

Anyone blundering in at that moment, however, might well have thought that he had come upon a meeting of the Party.

"I believe we must seek international control," the doctor said by way of introduction to the next part of his talk.

He assured us that on point the U. S. and Russia disagree only on the question of ownership and management of production facilities and the disposition of present stocks. Russia has guardedly conceded, in other words, that brief inadequate inspections by a conglomerate UN committee might under certain circumstances be permitted.

The next part of the doctor's talk was an astonishing series of facts all tending to prove that communist Russia is a peaceful but slightly nervous country and the toothless UN the proper watchdog to set on guard over the world's most destructive force.

Finishing Blow

Which brings to mind several recent European elections and the coincident disappearance of several eastern European statesman. Possibly mother Russia's exponents of sweetness and light caught them selling football parlays.

But Dr. Rice's finishing blow to the military and the politicians, who seem to think that there is such a thing as a bad boy, was his statement that the veto would not interfere with the day to day operations of the UN agency set up to administer the bomb: and that brought proof of his third point.

The Republicans should nominate Dr. Rice for president.

Tri-Delt Coffee Hour Slated Every Sunday

The Delta Delta Delta sorority coffee hour last Sunday started a series of Sunday night open house social activities. According to their seasonal program, the entertainment hour will be from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Seen among the girls at the house last week-end were some of last year's members that returnd to the campus as "imports." Some of those visiting were Jackie Blount, Washington, Betty Phillips, Orlando, Fla., Janet Johnson, Marion Castellow, and Dot Swain Mears.

Jackie was escorted by Dick Hall; Betty flew up to meet Fritz Pfeiffer, now studying law in Washington; and Dot came over from Raleigh with her husband, "Patches," a student at State college.

Another of last week's Tri-Delt functions which will form a regular part of their social calendar was the Thursday night supper for actives and pledges.

State Group To Sponsor 1947 Student Assembly

By Bill Sexton

A revivified North Carolina Student Legislative council has rescinded its cancellation of the 1947 statewide student legislature, and planning is under way for a session to be held in the state capitol this fall as originally scheduled.

Setting aside an earlier decision which not only called off the legislative session but would have dissolved the council as well, the State college group voted Sunday night to widen the representation to include other schools and faculty advisors.

The legislative council met Sunday following protest over the dissolution from other schools and the announcement that the UNC Debate council had voted to organize its own legislature if necessary.

All Schools Included

In a statement issued after the meeting, the council declared it would issue invitations for the 1947 session "to all the colleges in the state" as soon as arrangements are re-completed.

The statement announced a plan of general reorganization which included three major changes over past legislative set-up:

(1) Students from "several colleges' will be included in an administrative committee, which is to head the legislative council. The council is the legislature's interim governing body, previously composed solely of State college students.

(2) An advisory board of "prominent state citizens" is projected. "to assure continuing stability."

(3) At least one faculty advisor is to be appointed to the delegation from each college participating in the legislature.

New Interest Found

"Reawakened interest from students throughout the state" was given in the announcement as reason for the action giving a sudden rebirth to the group. Sunday's meeting was called, the statement says, "at request of a majority" of the legislative council.

The council will continue in its present form until planning for the 1947 session is completed. Ira Helms, president of the group, is to remain in charge temporarily.

It was indicated last night that the here-again, gone-again, back-again 1947 session "probably" will be held November 28-29 as originally announced.

Chapel Hill has been invited to name two delegates to the reorganized council, and the Debate council, previous sponsor of UNC delegations to the legislature itself, is expected to take immediate action. It was reported that three other schools—Women's college, Meredith college, and Shaw University—are also to be given seats on the new administrative committee.

Al Lowenstein, chairman of the UNC delegation to last year's session of the legislature, has been leader of the drive to reorganize the legislative council. A week of conferences between Lowenstein and individual members of the council led to Sunday's meeting.

Minister of Finland Will Speak Thursday

K. T. Jutila, Finnish minister to the United States, will speak in Hill hall at 8 o'clock Thursday evening under the sponsorship of the International Relations club.

Jutila, former cabinet member in Finland who once attended Cornell university, will discuss "Present-day Domestic and Foreign Affairs of Finland."

One-time professor of Agricultural Economics at Helsinki University, Jutila has served successively since 1928 as minister without portfolio, minister of agriculture, minister of supply, and again as minister of agriculture in the Finnish cabinet. In 1945 he was elected to Parliament by the Agrarian party.

Following studies at Helsinki and Berlin University, Jutila received a Rockefeller fellowship to Cornell university to study agricultural economics and marketing. He returned to the U. S. in 1939 as commissioner general for the Finnish pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

Grail Will Start Ticket Sale Today For Duke Week Set

Bids for the Duke weekend Grail dances will be placed on sale in the YMCA lobby this morning from 8 to 10 o'clock.

One-third of the tickets available for direct sale will be earmarked for distribution this morning. The rest will be sold this afternoon from 1 to 3 o'clock and tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Grail announced that the bids, available for single events or the entire program, will be limited to one per student. Purchasers will be required to show their ID cards.

STUDENT MUSICIANS

Three vocalists and three instrumentalists will be heard in Wednesday's student recital at 4 o'clock in Hill hall.

Rufus Norris, baritone; Phyllis Bradshaw, soprano; and Carl Perry, tenor, will be accompanied by Jeanne Fornoff, Jack Ellis, and William Waters, respectively.

Carolyn Bowman will accompany William Fitzgerald, clarinetist; and piano selections will be performed by Henry Beebe and Harold Schiffman.

ROOMS AVAILABLE

There are three vacancies available in the dormitories at the present time according to the university housing office. These vacancies will be filled on a 'first come, first served' basis from among the following men, all of whom have become eligible for dorm rooms:

Adams, Holcombe C.; Anderson, James W., Jr.; Crumpler, Earl H.; Hanson, John A.; Hunter, Rufas A.; Jones, Lamar; Kirk, Walter H., Jr.; Lane, Carl J.; Oliver, John H.; and Owen, James E.

PACKING A CHICKEN CRATE, Monroe C. Babcock, one of the largest poultry producers in the area near Ithaca, N. Y., gets ready to send it to either President Truman or Charles Luckman in Washington. The shipment was in protest against poultryless Thursdays and was made up of "dead heads"—chickens past the laying stage. Babcock says he can't dispose of them and that they are eating up grain he needs for new chicks. Shortly after he dispatched the crate to the Capital, the poultry ban was dropped by the Food Board.

Athletic Office To Begin Today Selling Special Student Tickets for Duke Game

A new system for student admissions to the Duke-Carolina game next weekend was announced yesterday by Athletic Director R. A. Fetzer.

Not only student passbooks and I Dcards but also a special admission coupon, costing $1.00 will be required of students for entrance to Duke stadium, Fetzer said. Sale of the special coupon begins at the Woollen gymnasium office of the Athletic association at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The coupons will be available at Woollen through next Tuesday afternoon. Following today the sales office will be open from 9 until 1 o'clock and from 2 until 5 daily except Saturday, when selling ends at 1 o'clock.

Students will be required to show athletic passbooks and ID cards in order to buy the $1.00 admission coupons, Fetzer said. Only one will be issued to each student, and none will be available after regular sales end one week from today, he warned.

Seating space in Duke stadium is already sold out, and no tickets will be available at the game November 22.

No tickets are to be sold for non-student dates or wives not already provided with tickets, the athletic director said. He warned that the admission coupons are non-transferable and that any attempt to gain fraudulent admission will be considered an honor council violation.

CONTEMPT HEARING

Washington, Nov. 10—(UP)—House Speaker Joseph Martin has called a private hearing tomorrow in connection with the contempt of Congress citations against 10 Hollywood writers, producers and directors.

Tickets for Caravan To Be Sold in 'Y'

Washington-bound students this weekend may save waiting in lines and a great deal of transportation uncertainty through purchasing their train tickets in the Y lobby Thursday morning, according to Bob Watson, Graham Memorial travel agent.

A special ticket salesman from the Southern railroad will maintain a desk in the YMCA lobby from 8:30 Thursday morning until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, to sell fares for the special Tar Heel football caravan train to Washington this weekend, which will leave from Durham Friday evening at 9:30. If sales Thursday are sufficient, he will return Friday.

Watson emphasized that this advance sale is being arranged solely as a service to the student body, since the $13 tickets to be sold are regular Washington - Durham round-trip railroad fares. Advance reservations may, nevertheless, be made for berths, compartments, and drawing rooms at this time. For regular coach space students need not buy tickets in advance, unless they so desire.

The 108 members of the University marching band, directed by Prof. Earl Slocum will also travel on this train. In the meantime, further information on the caravan may be obtained from Watson from 2-6 in the afternoon, and 8:30-11:00 at night, in the student union office.

Goldberg-style Invention Starts Printer While Inventor Sechriest Remains in Bed

By Albert N. Warner

Come 5 o'clock every morning and Stuart Sechriest, instructor of journalism at the University of North Carolina, gets a telepathic nudge, rolls over and smiles to himself—because he can sleep a while longer, thanks to his latest invention, the Sechriest - patented - (pending) - teletype-turner-oner.

Were it not for his invention, Sechriest would be responsible for turning on the teletype in the journalism building every morning before dawn, when the Associated Press machine begins functioning for the day. Sechriest likes his sleep, though, to the extent that he pondered a solution for 137 minutes, and expended three minutes in laboring over a device that outworks any Rube Goldburg brainchild.

Sechriest's newest gadget, following his recent invention of an automatic back-scratcher - and - beer - bottle-opener combination, is composed of articles retrieved from the most convenient army waste basket, plus a War Alarm Clock ($1.65, exclusive of taxes), well lubricated with mineral oil. Connected with the clock are one rubber band M-1, one teletype hook-switch M-2, one corkscrew M-1 (removed from the bottle neck), one bent paper clip, model P, and one loop of string M-1.

The operation of the thing-amadoodle is just as simple as are the ingredients, once the trick is learned. The string (A) is tied to the alarm winder (B) on one end and to the cork screw (C) on the other. The rubber band (D) is stretched from the paper hook (E) above the switch (F), connecting the switch. So that the switch will not go off, the corkscrew (C), is used as a wedge between the switch and the "on" position. When the hands of the clock reach 5 o'clock, the alarm unwinds and pulls the string (A) which pulls out the corkscrew (C), releasing the switch (F) which is pulled by the rubber band (D) to the "on" position, and Sechriest rolls over for more sleep while the teletype records the latest news for his easy consumption.

Sechriest, who uses the teletype for his classes in newspaper headlining and makeup, feels that he has found the secret at last. The only thing bothering him now is how to have the clock wind itself automatically.

Students' Vehicle License Stickers Ready for Issue

All student car owners who registered their autos with the University at the beginning of the quarter, are advised by Dean of Men Fred Weaver that the windshield license stickers are now ready for issuing, and should be picked up as soon as possible.

In Weaver's Office

General college, commerce, arts and sciences, special, and graduate students can pick up these decalcomanias as my office in Sout hbuilding," explained Dean Weaver. "Students in other schools may pick up theirs at their respective Deans' offices."

In this category, Weaver named the schools of Law, Pharmacy, Public Health, Medicine, and Library Science.

Trustee Regulation

In urging all students concerned to pick up their licenses as soon as possible, Weaver pointed out again the trustee regulation requiring all students possessing cars at the University to register their vehicles, secure these identification stickers, and affix them to the lower right-hand corner of their windshields.

"Those who have not as yet registered their cars may still do so at my office, room 207 in South building," Weaver concluded.

FRENCH CLUB DINNER

All students of French who wish to meet for dinner and speak French are requested to meet in the Carolina inn at 6:45 this evening. There will not be a meeting of Le Cercle Francais following the meal.

Officers recently elected are Marjorie Davis, president; Bill Baskin, vice - president; John Grier, secretary; Ann Tysor, treasurer.

English Department's Eaton Sets Up Poetry Writing Class

A course in the art of writing original poetry will be offered at the University next quarter for the first time in its history, the English department has announced. To be titled English 54, as a companion subject to the department's creative writing course English 53, the new course will be taught and guided by Charles Eaton, a member of the department.

Eaton is well qualified to launch this venture for the school's would-be poets, for his own work has received wide publication and much favorable comment. He has authored one volume of verse printed under the title "The Bright Plain" and has another, tentatively called "The Tropic of Youth," almost ready for the publishers.

His work has also appeared in numerous poetry anthologies, and various well-known British and American magazines including "Harper's," "The Saturday Review of Literature," and "The American Mercury."

Mr. Eaton, a graduate of the University, studied philosophy at Princeton and took graduate work in creative writing at Harvard. He has also served as a State Department vice-consul in Rio de Janiero, where most of the work on his yet-to-be published verses was done.

UVA ENTERTAINS

Tonight at 8:15, the usual open house held by the University Veteran's Association will be taken over by the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority at the clubhouse.

Highlights of the evening will be songs by the Monogram Club's Miss Payoff, Lucille Arnott, and dancing by Dusty Moore, in addition to dancing to the juke box, and refreshments.

All UVA members are urged to come stag.

Veto Hits Class Elections To Cancel Today's Voting

In a surprise move yesterday afternoon, Tom Eller, president of the student body, vetoed the freshman-junior class elections bill which provided for balloting to be held today to choose officers for those two classes.

The veto, Eller explained in a statement released to the Daily Tar Heel late yesterday, is based on several reasons, including the fact that the chairman of the Board of Elections, Al Winn, was given no official notification of the passage of the bill by the Student Legislature resulting in insufficient time to publicize the elections and deadline for nominations.

The decision to make the veto was announced yesterday after the student body president had conferred with Elections board Chairman Al Winn and Legislature Elections committee Chairman Miles Smith, also chairman of the University party.

UP Head Agrees

The UP head stated last night that, "In the best interests of student government, I believe that the veto of this bill is appropriate in the light of circumstances which have arised since its passage."

An amplification of the Elections board stand on the matter is expected from Al Winn today, and will be carried in tomorrow's edition of the DTH.

Eller's veto message follows in full:

"I have vetoed the Student Legislature bill providng for freshman and junior class elections Tuesday, November 11, 1947, for the following reasons:

Inadequate Time

"(1) The chairman of the Board of Elections received inadequate time for giving the elections proper publicity.

"(2) Despite the fact that many people have been operating under the assumption that the elections would be conducted, the chairman of the Board of Elections had no official notice of the elections date until one day prior to the close of nominations. I had not signed the bill at that time. He therefore printed no official notice in the Daily Tar Heel. (Those which appeared were news items only.)

"(3) Because of insufficient time, none of the three political parties were notified of the impending nomination deadline, although members of all three parties were present at the meeting of the Legislature when the bill passed unanimously. For the same reason no posters announcing the elections were put up in freshman areas.

"(4) Considerable feeling has arisen within the past few days both among the freshmen and in the form of an official protest from the Campus and Student parties in regard to the proposed elections. I am confident that the elections under this bill would be contested and in the light of testimony by the chairman of the Elections board probably would be upheld by the Student council.

"(5) The chairman of the Board of Elections has a plan by which he believes the board can conduct the elections in keeping with fairness and efficiency. He will submit it to the Legislature on Thursday night to handle at their discretion."

TOY EXHIBIT OPENS

An exhibit of toys for the preschool child opens at the Orange-Person-Chatham Health department today, and will continue through November 19. Parents are invited to inspect the display, which includes both manufactured and home-produced toys for young children.

Freshmen Meet to Consider Candidates For Class Officers; Committee Named To Ask Mass Meeting Call From Eller

By Chuck Hauser

Freshmen on campus got their first taste of politics last night. It was a large one, but not very tasty.

What began as a meeting of the Freshman Friendship council turned into a quasi-freshman class meeting and then degenerated into "an interested group of freshmen."

When the group finally adjourned at 10:35, all that had actually concretely been done was the choosing of a committee to request Tom Eller, president of the student body, to call an official meeting of the freshman class.

Jack Park, president of the Freshman Friendship council, gave the floor to Miles Smith, chairman of the University party, after the routine business of the council was dispensed with.

Smith disagreed with several points in an article printed on the editorial pages of this newspaper which was written by Park and John Brockmann expressing their views on the way in which the class elections were being conducted.

Smith's comments started the hot political arguments which soon brought forth the resolution to dissolve the meeting as the Friendship council and readjourn as the freshman class. This was later amended to "a representative group of freshmen."

Personalities, party issues, and politics in general received their share of the limelight as the meeting went wide open from there on out, following the election of Neill Partrick as chairman to preside over the group.

The floor was opened for nominations several times, but the disorder and confusion caused this to be ignored as the underclassmen hashed out party issues, the state of the campus, and just who had the right to do what.

The committee finally chosen to represent the group by asking Tom Eller to call a freshman class meeting is as follows: Joe Brady, Jack Ford, Graham Johnson, Ross Lane, Bill McNeill, Jack Park.

Durham to Address American Legion

Congressman Carl Durham will give an address in the American Legion Hut this evening at 8 o'clock.

In a special Armistice day talk, Durham will discuss the plans and policies of the Legion, and its present activities. The talk will be primarily for student veterans at the University who are interested in this organization and its purposes.

This meeting will be held in addition to the regular meeting which is held during the first Thursday of each month.

PHI DISCUSSES HOUSING

N. J. Demerath of the University department of sociology will address the Phi assembly tonight at 9 o'clock in the Phi hall when the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing Bill is taken up by the debaters. The Phi bill, to be introduced by Chester zum Brunnen, supports the proposed act, under consideration by the U. S. Senate.

Post-game Frolics Damage Dormitory

"By person, or persons unknown" is still the only identity that can be given to the vandals who sprayed the corridors of Mangum dormitory with the sulfuric acid contents of the building's fire extinguishers at some time following the football game last Saturday.

"The contents of the extinguishers on all three floors were emptied all over the walls and floors," said Bill Smith, dormitory supervisor. "A meeting of all the residents was held last night, but no one seems to have seen a glimpse of the culprits. Several of the boys, who were in their rooms at the time, said they heard the hissing, but saw no one near the cylinders when they went out into the halls."

'Gin Lane' Ticket Sale to Start Today; Gardner Sees Sellout of Reserve Seats

By Paul Rothman

Doug Gardner, president of Sound and Fury, has announced that the November 19, 20 and 21 production, "Gin Lane," is the "biggest thing the organization has ever produced."

According to Gardner, who is also the producer, the entertainment, which has a production cost of close to $1500, is utilizing a stage cast of 50 and an 18-piece orchestra in the pit.

For each performance there will be a section of 600 reserved seats. Gardner's brain child, for distribution of the seats is the sale of the reserved tickets in blocks to various campus organizations, including dormitories, clubs, and fraternities, so that the members and their dates may sit together during the performances.

Several organizations have already made arrangements to be seated in blocks. All others wishing to be so seated are requested to contact Gardner at the Sigma Chi house or the person in charge of the ticket booth, now operating in the "Y" court from 9 to 12 o'clock each morning.

Gardner says that all indications point to an early sellout of the reserved seats and that he advises all persons desiring to sit in the reserved section to make early arrangements for the purchase of the tickets.

In addition to the reserved seat tickets, there will be 900 general admission tickets for each of the three performances. These may be bought at the "Y" court, in a booth to be opened in town, or at the door.

Crisp on the Letter of the Law

Since Junius Scales announced that he is the leader of a group of Communists here in Chapel Hill, our "Write Away" column, which is reserved for reader opinion, has been monopolized with the discussion of Communism. In particular, it has been used as a medium to discuss the protection of the Communist party under our Bill of Rights and the statutes of our land.

We have been looking for professional writers and men with legal training to give us a legal insight into the question. Our search was ended when we discovered that Bill Crisp, a graduate student now in Law School and former DTH columnist, did research and preparation this past summer on the subject in question.

Some gleanings from his dissertation are printed elsewhere on this page. We will not apologize for its length. It is much longer than we would even consider publishing under ordinary circumstances. We feel that the article is the product of much forethought and research, is well-written and will, therefore, warrant your reading.

Mr. Crisp assures us that each of his statements are fortified with legal evidence. He has informed us that any reader desiring to examine the cases from which he has obtained his material has only to ask him and he will be only too happy to furnish a bibliography.

We sincerely hope that this article is complete and that it contains answers to many questions.

Definitely One Man

Indefatigible Al Lowenstein is definitely one man who should be commended for his effort in getting the North Carolina Student Legislative assembly back in its orbit. Lowenstein has spent the past several days and nights contacting personally each of the members of the Council and thrashing out the differences which caused the Assembly to be called off.

Recently we received a letter from Robert Morrison, former DTH editor and president of the Senate of the ninth and tenth annual Assembly, in which he stated "Let the Student Legislature of North Carolina continue to provide a glorious opportunity for students from all parts of the state to come together, make friends, gain understanding, and return better citizens."

We believe that the new Legislature can adequately perform these functions. If it proves that it is a worthless venture, a waste of time, and unbeneficial to those participating, then it should be discontinued—after this year's session. But first, give it a fair chance. According to delegates to last year's Assembly, the group worked in perfect harmony, and indications are that this harmony will continue.

The Student Body Knows

Conduct does make a difference, opinion of a loud minority of students who like to blow their tops on football weekends notwithstanding. And the cheering thing about conduct making a difference is that the greater part of the Carolina student body knows it.

Student conduct at the rosily-remembered State fracas Saturday was exemplary. In the words of the Student Body president Tom Eller: ". . . . our role as hosts this time is unparalleled."

Eller, in the same approving mood, gives credit to State students. He says the group from Raleigh "deserves since commendation for its conduct." An overwhelming defeat like the one the Wolfpack suffered often leads to nasty feeling following the game, but as Eller points out, State behaved itself.

Eller points out that "the football team is as proud of the Student Body as the student Body is proud of the team."

And, ending on an optimistic note, he suggests that "a duplication of the victory and conduct example on Duke weekend."—BS

Carolina Carousel

Giduz, Sweet Optimist!

By R. Foo Giduz

Okay, okay, so Carousel is yet the perpetual optimist and a bit presumptuous, but after watching the Jayvees steamroll over State last Sat., he's written off for New Year's day reservations in Miami . . . Y'just never can tell! . . . And anyhow, there's more hotels in Miami than New Orleans!

It's not particularly useful info now, but Saturday night's dateless males might be interested to know that those 1000 friendly females in the west end zone stands Saturday were all from Woman's college in G'boro . . . The ratio's much better there, men. . . . And an appeal to you guys who've just gotta throw the Egyptian stationery at the ball games: How about making sure it's half-unrolled before you toss it? . . . A full roll, landing on a noggin from 100 feet, makes a considerable dent in this soft head!

Sign seen in Smith dormitory: "Men are not permitted to carry bags upstairs without permission of the hostess or assistant hostess." . . . Now this raises several interesting questions in our warped minds . . . (1) Is it OK to go ahead and trot around the halls to your hearts content when carrying other parcels? . . . (2) Does the word "bags" refer strictly to luggage, suitcases, and trunks? . . . (3) How's the hostess on permissions? ("Thirsty" Pannill could certainly have used this information.) . . . Understand the attic is now jammed full of bags anyhow . . .

But that brings to mind the tale of one of the coy Book Ex crewmen a few years ago . . . The lads used to restock the women's dormitory stores every Friday,—So it happens one sunny afternoon a hard-working student stevedore was carrying two crates of drings down the third floor hall of Kenan dormitory to the room where their store was located when a daintily dressed damsel, stepping from her room, indignantly ejaculated, "Why didn't you holler 'man on the hall?" "Aw ,it's no fun that way," the unruffled crate carrier called back as he went on his businesslike way!

If you're wondering why the flags are at half-mast today, maybe you didn't remember this is Armistice day. Jack, November 11! . . . Guys and gals who want to keep up-to-date will do well by dropping over to Duke tomorrow evening to hear Ellis Arnall, ex-governor of Georgia speak on the timely topic, "The South Today."—That's 8 o'clock, Woman's college auditorium, East campus.

Campus Forum

Students Review Magazine

By Pete Gerns

Criticism on the latest issue of the "Carolina Mag" was lengthy and decidedly better than criticism on the DTH. It was necessary to cut some of the answers which seemed rather redundant.

"Get some of the real writers on the campus to contribute; have less poetry that nobody reads anyway (good poetry excepted!); editors might try co-operating with Phillips Russell and his excellent creative writing classes (once in a while something good comes out of them); a good contest might stimulate interest in writing for the Mag (even a five spot as first prize has lots of allure to aspiring authors)." J. Wright.

"I think the Mag is a waste of $7000. This month's issue was sarcastic and in bad taste. The articles were poor and had no objectives. Fred Jacobson should completely revamp his staff and get some life into it. More stuff by Sain will improve it." Ronald L. Denning.

"Put more pretty girls in it." Joseph Hoenig.

"The Mag must be rushed too much because the talented authors of the short stories do not seem to have time to write conclusions for their masterpieces or is it that the last pages were left out by the printer's mistake." J. A. Hanson.

"The magazine is merely an unnecessary evil." Fred Burgess.

"Its stories don't have sensible endings, if any at all." T. A. Graham, Jr.

"I don't think that the stories are very good for various reasons. Why must a story be full of morbid scenes, neurotic characters, and half baked cliches in order to be worthy of print? I am tired of reading stories which make me unhappy. . . . I am beginning to think that everybody in journalism must be a fatalist . . . furthermore, the contributors are writing stories about things of which they have only vague conceptions. I can testify for the majority of students in saying 'We don't get it'. Why not have someone write a story . . with a happy ending? Please send me a detailed translation of 'Summer Interlude.'" James W. Anderson, Jr., (Sorry, Jim, translations have been sold out for weeks)

For coming Friday: "What type of speakers would you like to see presented to the student body?" Deadline: Wednesday evening.

CHARLOTTE CLUB DANCE

Bids for the Charlotte-Carolina club dance will be distributed to-day, to-morrow, and Thursday at the YMCA, from 9 o'clock, until 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will play for the dance which will be held on December 30 in the Hotel Charlotte.

The Earl of Carolina

Politics? Movies Are Easier

By Earl Heffner

Rodger Sande, husband and political science major, curled his feet under the dinner table of his Victory Village domicile, shoot his finger at his missus.

"Madame, you fail to realize that every month when I hand you my check from our munificent Uncle Sam, that it is the American Legion that deserves our thanks."

His lovely lady tossed another spoon of coffee into the pot with the query, "Do you want this laced or not."

"That, my frail femme, is beside the point. I'll take my bourbon straight. But what I want to impress on your curly locks is that the veterans of North Carolina, the former soldiers of this glorious University are shunting their duties when they join with other idlers and accept the subsistence as a dole," her hubby replied.

It was ever thus with the Sandes of Mudville as the boss of his house and his better half waxed into discussions of current events.

"We veterans," sermoned Rodger Sande, student, "must become active if this progressive nation of ours is to remain true to its American heritage. We should join a national veterans' organization. Now the American Legion deserves our support since it is the one organization responsible for the GI Bill of Rights...."

"But," countered his missus as she swept the crumbs out the rear portal, "wasn't it the American Legion that fought against the latest proposed increase in subsistence."

Tracking side fashion, Rodger Sande, student and political science major, said, "Well, a veteran does not need—necessarily, that is,—to join the American Legion. He could cast his lot with the AVC, august organization which fought against bitter odds for the increase in subsistence and which—"

"Is reputedly dominated by leftist influences, is it not?" his demure spouse finished.

"Exactly," said Mr. Sande as he shook a pencil under his ever-loving's nose. "This leads us to our point.

"If we veterans are to aid the organizations which would aid us, we must select one of them and seek to direct its energies into channels suitable to us. If an organization has an undesirable element to us, then we must put our shoulder to the wheel—to use a trite cliche—and work toward our goal."

Innocent, child-like Mrs. Sande, student's wife, protested. "But is it possible, my modern Socrates, for one veteran to have any great effect. I should much rather have you take me to a show than worry your over-burdened mentality with social and veterans' problems."

Patient, tiring Rodger Sande tried again.

"My pet, one man can do little. But the cumulative efforts of a number of men can do a great deal. However, the veterans as this school are not taking advantage of opportunities offered to them.

"The AVC requests veterans to join, awaits with proverbial open arms. The American Legion has changed its meeting day from the first Friday to the first Thursday in every month so students may attend. Yet they do not.

"And tonight, on Armistice Day in the American Legion hut, Congressman Carl Durham will speak. All veterans have been invited to attend. But most of them wouldn't go to see President Truman unless he was at the local beer emporium."

"But you are going to hear him," said Mrs. Sande.

"Nope," replied Rodger Sande, student and political science major, "There's a good show on at the theater. Think that we'll see it."

Off to the shower he went with towel in hand. "These veterans. They're just like they were in the Army . . . take no interest in anything . . . should go to hear Durham . . . h-m-m guess the show would be better."

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

The American Dilemma

Crisp Takes Thorough Inventory On Reds Vs Constitutional Law

By Bill Crisp

The general response of the American people to the overpublicized activities of the Communists indicates that public opinion is divided into two contra-districtive categories: one group feelts that, so far as can be ascertained, the Communists are merely a political party whose existence, doctrines, and objectives (although objectionable to the majority of people) are perfectly compatible with the American concept of free government; another group feels that the Communists are a subversive element, and that the pursuance of their objectives should be made illegal.

While it would appear obvious that both of these viewpoints cannot be correct, the writer requests the reader to indulge, throughout the remainder of this article in the acceptance of the paradox that both viewpoints are correct. The writer shall not only endeavor to show that this paradox does exist, but shall attempt to reveal just how this paradox constitutes the essence of the dilemma which, with respect to the Communists, confronts the American people today.

In order to understand why this paradox exists, one must be prepared to perceive with clarity the distinction between (1) what we can reasonably assume to be true about the Communists and (2) what we can judicially establish as true about the Communists.

What can we reasonably assume to be true about the Communists? The writer believes that his opinion not only conforms to that of the overwhelming majority, but is a fair surmisal of the abundant evidence to be considered on the question: The Communists believe in a socialized State; they would be willing, if necessary, to sacrifice the basic freedoms of speech, press, etc. in order to achieve and maintain it; they would likewise be willing, if necessary, to achieve this socialized State by adverting to either of three methods, two of which are violent: by intensifying class consciousness through the abetting of an economic depression, by direct internal revolution, or by aiding the Soviet Union in the event of war between that country and the United States.

That the foregoing surmisal is, at least, reasonable, is indicated by the evidence: Their activity in the United States is in coincidence with the policies of the Soviet Union so consistently as to refute the idea that the American Communists are merely a spontaneous political party which is immune to direction by a foreign government. Their criticisms of the ever-present discrimination against certain racial and class minorities here in America, while founded on unimpeachable moral and constitutional grounds, are made in such a way as to intensify race and class minority consciousness, rather than to encourage an objective amelioration of this ancient problem.

In particular, their statements and activities concerning the Negro minority have been innocuous in appearance, but invidious in effect. They profess to be working for a socialized State which shall be achieved and maintained by the same representative form of government which we possess at present, and yet, odd as it may seem, they have made no effort whatsoever to conjoin their movement with the Socialist Party of the United States which has long been a respected party working, with some success, toward the achievement of the very same end.

Individually, they employ the same pragmatic means for which their official voice, the DAILY WORKER, has long been infamous; they will misrepresent, deviate, smear, evade, mis-quote, misconstrue, — in short, advert, without deference to honesty, to any available mens of argument or propaganda which might subserve their immediate purpose.

They are psychologically inadequate (the writer wonders why..) to the public confession of their actual identity: instead of identifying themselves ond openly crusading for their alleged objectives, they infiltrate and infest other, more respected and recognized groups, and, when therein discovered, affect the martyr's role by insisting that the American people are so intolerant as to subject them, if they candidly admitted their identity, to physical persecution.

And last but not least (and indeed the reason for which this article was written), while suckling at the breast of the Kremlin (from which they profess to have been weaned, and which has admittedly "inhibited" the basic freedoms of the Russian people), they vociferously claim protection under the American Bill of Rights. These foregoing statements, then, are the evidential proof of what we may reasonably assume to be true about the Communists.

But what, patient reader, can we judicially establish as true? Possibly the most appropriate way to answer that question is to take inventory on some of our Constitutional law.

The Supreme Court of the United States, during a century and a half of constitutional interpretation, has decided with relative finality that freedom of speech and press may be legally prohibited only if its exercise is of such a nature as to constitute one of the following acts: (1) an advocation of the overthrow of government by force or violence, (2) an incitement to riot, (3) an advocation of changing the status quo by some unlawful means, (4) an intentional provocation of the commission of any crime, (5) an intimidation of parties concerned with an impending judicial decision, (6) a giving of aid to the enemies of the United States, or (7) a revealing of government secrets to any person or government not in the confidence of the United States for that specific purpose. The reader should keep in mind that anyone today may be punished for utilizing speech or the press, provided it is judicially established that his speaking or writing constitutes one of these acts.

BILL CRISP

Before one decides unequivocally that Communist activity in the United States should be made illegal, he should peruse carefully the foregoing paragraph, for, brief as it is, that paragraph summarizes the constitutional questions that are necessarily involved.

The writer does not intend to leave the impression that these are the only questions involved, but he submits that any legislation which purports to illegalize Communist activity will inevitably be tested by these questions, and that any such legislation, to be valid, must pass these tests.

To illegalize the activities of Communists in the United States is necessarily and unavoidably to infringe on the freedom of press, speech, assembly, etc. If this be true, any such legislation, in order to be constitutional, must include only those activities which constitute one or more of the acts enumerated heretofore.

One looks to past federal court decisions to indicate whether or not Communist activity may be considered the equivalent of these acts. There are numerous lower federal court decisions, but there are few, if any, by the Supreme Court of the United States — the eventual and conclusive deciding tribunal. A majority of the lower federal courts not only have taken judicial cognizance of the fact that an intrinsic tenet of the Communist Party of America is overthrow of government by force or violence, but, and more importantly, have held that it is not an abuse of "due process of law" to find that any person who subscribes to the Communist Party subscribes to that particular tenet.

A minority of lower federal courts have held just the opposite on both these questions. But the Supreme Court of the United States has persistently refused to pass on these two questions, managing on each appeal in which the questions were raised, to decide the case on some other grounds.

The Supreme Court opinions, however, have invariably suggested that, if the Court were ever to pass upon these questions, it would decide with the minority of lower federal courts. (The reader is referred to Bridges v. Wixon, volume 326, United States Reports, page 135, and Schneidermann v. United States, volume 320, United States Reports, page 118.)

Indeed, there is considerable reason to believe that, if it is ever tested before the Supreme Court of the United States, that section of the Taft-Hartley labor law, which requires union officers to sign non-Communist affidavits, would be invalidated.

In view of the indicated disposition of the Supreme Court on these questions, it seems evident that few, if any, legal prohibitions of Communist activity as distinguished from political activity in general, can prevail under the Constitution of the United States.

And thus, the paradox becomes a dilemma: we can reasonably assume that Communist activity on this continent constitutes one of the most diabolical menaces ever to threaten the institutions of American freedom, but those same institutions preclude us from unequivocally suppressing that activity through legislation. We are, indeed, enjoined to answer and to act upon a very anomalous question: Do we despise the Communists more than we cherish the institutions under which their activity finds protection? The writer submits that the very nature of the problem presented constrains us to answer in the negative.

Let us not beguile ourselves. Let us not, in endeavoring to exterminate the parasite, infect the organism we are trying to save. Surely it would be better to listen to the Communist snarl his lie from every housetop than to suscept ourselves to the possibility that no one would be able, calmly and with impunity, to proclaim the simple truth.

The antidote for Communism is not suppressive legislation. However ignoble it may be, however pragmatic and despicable may be its means and ends, Communism is only a group of ideas. And one cannot stifle ideas merely by making their advocacy criminal.

If that were true the American Constitution would never have seen print, nor would the promise of that Constitution have remained intact and virile down through the years, offering, as it has, the hope and belief that, however inadequate our system may be, the solution to its evils must be realized through the sober deliberation of a people freely assembled, and most particularly through the deliberation of a people who are not fettered by a censored "enlightenment." The answer to that group of ideas which comprise Communism is the vigorous application of another group of ideas embodied in the following resolutions:

We shall look to the inequities of capitalism and, by employing the lawful, peaceful processes which are constitutionally afforded, we shall destroy their causes. We shall keep government constantly apprised of its legitimate status: it is the servant of the people, not vice versa.

We shall perceive the necessary relationship between political liberty and economic security, remembering that the individual and the society of which he is a member, insisting that each has its commensurate proper distinction between the former can never subsist minus the latter. We shall make the rights, and that neither may invade the province of the other to the extent of monopoly. We shall recognize the essential tragedy of our petty and absurd discriminations, and fight for a more tolerant, a more humane, a more truly democratic America. We shall observe with precaution the projections of our international contemporaries, lest they, because of our omission, implant despotism where freedom ought to grow.

We shall listen attentively to all who speak of reform, of progress, of "change for the better," but we shall never, on the pretense of a minor crusade, lend our strength to the destruction of our fundamental freedoms. We shall constantly and with impunity subject or framework of values to reconsideration, but we shall never preclude ourselves from being able to make such a reconsideration. And when, through importunity, we perceive the activities of Communism, or any other reprehensible force, we shall recall frequently and with apprehension the irony of that statement made by her who stood and watched the blood bath at the foot of the French guillotine: "Oh Liberty! What evil deeds are committed in thy name." Nor shall we forget him who said, "The price of liberty is eternal vigilance."

We Don't Want UBI on Campus

Dear Sirs:

It is with a great deal of concern that I have noticed the increasing number of ads asking for the return of articles which have been borrowed permanently. Check the "Y" bulletin board for additional evidence. Mistakes are made, but not so frequently. This should STOP.

In the old days a student could hang his coat in Lenoir (Exchange) or leave it in the class room; it was there the next day. No one thought of disturbing their resting place.

We (students) kept the "Honor System" and Student Government functioning after Princeton and Virginia had to give it up. It lasted because each individual looked out for John Doe. There was no need for "tattle-tales" or proctors.

Student government is on the up grade. Is the "Honor System"? Let's not have to establish a U.B.I. (University Bureau of Investigation).

The Sporting Picture

THE CHAPEL HILL TOUCHDOWN AND EXTRA POINT CLUB

THE REGULAR Monday afternoon meeting of the Chapel Hill Touchdown and Extra Point Club was held in Harry's yesterday afternoon with a large group on hand to discuss the affairs of the weekend.

After the meeting had been called to order, Aycock Al immediately moved to have a resolution adopted "reflecting credit on the entire Tar Heel team for their performance Saturday" and this was unanimously passed. The discussion then shifted to the game itself with someone bringing up the question of State-Carolina relations.

"Of course," he said in an unassuming voice, "there was no riot or the like, but that certainly was not the fault of the State students." The cry of "proof, proof" rang through the hall which drew the reply, "You didn't have to duck the pop bottles, did you, or did you notice the State students cheer every time a Tar Heel lay injured on the field."

At this point, Ole Man Mose, who had been sitting quietly in the corner all this time, jumped into the conversation. "Now, let us not call the kettle black. Did you notice our own students cheering whenever State was put at a disadvantage, such as having a 15-yard penalty marched off against them?"

His retort gained immediate replies. "At least," said one, "we stood up during the playing of the State alma mater song, which did not draw a similar courtesy from the State stands."

This went on for a while until the whole group came to the conclusion that the two schools shouldn't play in the first place since they were members of the same greater institution, to which someone had to remark, "why not play the Woman's College, too." All agreed this to be a fine idea, but no action was taken.

ON THE TOPIC OF ROUGHNESS

THE ROUGHNESS of Saturday's game was the next topic of discussion with all commenting on the fact of how well the Tar Heels can hold their own no matter who is dishing it out, with the cat calls of "typical State" and "it was to be expected" being heard from the outer recesses of the crowd. The consensus was that all was not well between the two teams during the course of the game, but that a team 20 or 30 points behind, resorts to all kinds of things that aren't in the rule book

Everyone was eager to get his two cents worth in about the play of the team Saturday with each separate club member boosting his own personal star. The name of Justice seemed to ring just a little bit louder than the rest, and soon everyone was devoting his full time attention to the discussion of the Asheville flyer. The comments ran from "greatest game he ever played for the school" to "he's a ball player's ball player" to "another solid performance by a solid performer. All agreed Justice, like radio, is here to stay etc.

Walt Pupa pulled in his share of the comments with Fred Flat remarking, "all he needed was a little rest." Some thought even this was selling the Long Island plunger short and added, "You couldn't expect a guy to be hot every game," with everyone chiming in about how good it was to see Pupa back at the top of his game.

Peter Poop, who goes to practice every afternoon and is really in the know, now came in to ask, "Hadn't I told all of you about this Bill Hayes?" No one could remember Poop's statement but all were quick to jump on the Hayes band wagon. The poise of the Arlington, Va., lad in his first varsity home appearance brought heavy comment from all sides, and it was decided upon that here was a future star that would bear watching.

BOWL TALK CAME

BOWL TALK came next on the agenda. Paul Pessimist said that it was much too early to talk bowls, plus the fact that he didn't think the Tar Heels were interested anyhow since a Sugar Bowl bid was none too promising. Oscar the Optimist was quick to reply to this, saying that he thought there was still a chance to make New Orleans if this and that happened here and there, and that he didn't think that Miami was such a bad place around New Year's anyhow. The question drew a split decision with too many "if's, and's, and but's" still to be decided.

The Duke-Missouri game got the next going over, with some wise soul rising to question if the club thought Duke's luck had run out at last. A Jack Horner booster here injected the comment that "Missouri could have beaten even Notre Dame Saturday, which clouded a few minds with doubt and even drew snickers. "Too bad, he hasn't seen us play lately," another added. On the question of Duke luck, most of the members agreed that Duke usually brought its own with them or made it once on the field. Yet they only beat State, Wake Forest, and Tennessee and tied Navy on breaks which all agreed proved nothing.

"They will be tough November 22," someone thoughtfully put in, and then added, "we haven't beaten them in Durham since 1937." All smiled as someone remembered the luck of a ten year cycle.

THE PESSIMIST broke in at this point to cast a dark note concerning this weekend's game with Maryland. "Why talk Duke when we haven't beaten Maryland? Tatum is always a tough cookie to deal with, and wouldn't he like to beat the Tar Heels in Washington, or anywhere else for that matter. It would be like a man inheriting a brewery." The Optimist was not at all impressed. "We've hit our stride at last," he said, "and nothing short of an act of God can stop us now." The members, remembering Wake Forest and Texas, frowned heavily at this remark and there was even a faint cry of "geek, geek."

The majority report on the coming clash was then given by the scouting committee who saw the Marylanders fall before Duke, 19-7, in Durham a few weeks back. The committee felt confident the Tar Heels could win, but warned against the false feeling of security. In concluding, the finance committee warned members to keep their investments down to M plus six.

There being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

Harriers Work for IC4A, Conference Meets Next Monday

Carolina's high-flying cross country team began work yesterday afternoon for the most arduous assignment that they will face or have ever faced, with preparations getting underway for the IC4A meet in New York city and the Southern conference championship at Raleigh, both scheduled for next Monday.

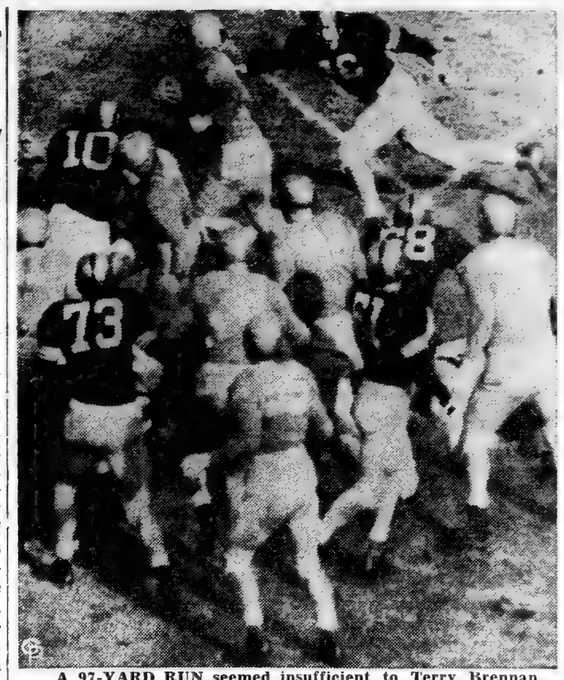
The team gunning for National honors in New York will be selected from Jack Milne, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Mark Burnham, Halstead Holden, Chuck Herty and Julian Mackenzie. All of these lads are strong runners and with a week of over distance running they should be ready to make a strong bid for the title over Van Cortlandt Park's five mile course.

Jimmy Miller will lead an aggregation of other runners to Raleigh for the loop title run and he personally will defend the individual title which he won here last year. The squad for this meet will be hand-led by assistant coach Joe Hilton and its personnel will come from a list made up of John Bristow, John Hoots, Frank Hooper, Dick Carr, Basil Wood, John Hiatt, Walt Francis, Jim Hunt, Dan Martin or any other squad member that shows up well in the time trials Wednesday. This event will be run over a four mile course. Maryland will be the team to beat with Duke listed as the second choice.

A third event that will see a Tar Heel in action on the same day will be the Freshmen IC4A event which will have Bob Black representing Carolina.

The Tar Heels finished fourth in the IC4A last year and are hoping to better that mark. Alvin Smith took a 6th place and Jimmy Miller was 13th in the 1946 race. This years race will attract over 250 runners from some 40 schools and should be a wide open meet. Leading contenders for the team laurels will be Michigan State, Syracuse, Penn State, Manhattan and the Tar Heels.

Jamerson Pleased With Time Trials



The Blue Dolphins of Dick Jamerson came out of their second practice meet with a much improved showing over their first endeavor.

Coach Jamerson announced this afternoon that he was very pleased with the times turned in by some of the boys last Friday afternoon. They were better than those of the previous week and even better than the ones from this stage of drills last year.

Still weak in the sprints and backstrike, the tank team will strngthen itself considerably when several proven performers arrive on the scene. Dick Twining, who at

Chi Psi, SAE Score Mural Football Wins

Chi Psi and SAE scored impressive tag football wins yesterday afternoon to advance in the mural grid playoffs. The former downed DKE, 21-0, while the latter was rolling over Sigma Nu, 31-0.

The Chi Psi, capable led by netter Vic Seixas and baseballer Vinnie DiLorenzo, were too much for their opposition, and advanced to the finals of the fraternity football playoffs by virtue of the win.

SAE was also a powerhouse during the afternoon, winning easily, and moving on to meet Zeta Psi for the championship of frat league No. 2 this afternoon. The winner of this game will move into the intra-league playoffs.

Snavely Works Gridders Lightly In Opening Drills For Maryland

Rodgers' Return For Weekend Clash Expected As Team Faces Tough Test

Carolina's Tar Heels went through their customary light workout on Monday at Navy field, but this afternoon is expected to see the resumption of heavy drills in the local camp as Coach Carl Snavely begins preparations for this week's battle with Maryland in Washington.

The Tar Heels justly deserved a day off in reward for their fine work in the 41-6 victory over N. C. State here last Saturday, but they will have to turn in an equally great exhibition if they are to get by Jim Tatum's tough Maryland outfit.

To date the Terps have won six of seven games, with the only loss coming at the hands of the Blue Devils of Duke over in Durham. Statistics show that Maryland outplayed Duke that afternoon, but the Devils managed to cash in on the breaks they got. Nevertheless, Maryland's performance that day was impressive.

This is Tatum's first season as head coach of the Terps. The former Tar Hell tutored the University of Oklahoma to a victory over State in the Gator bowl last season, after a successful won-lost record at that school. Before that he had been head mentor here at Carolina. His 1942 Tar Heel Club won five, lost only two, and tied two more. He seems to be having even greater success at Maryland

T-Formation

The Maryland attack, which is run from the T-formation, is spearheaded by Lucien Gambino, the Southern conference's leading scorer. Another notable in the Terp backfield is Vic Turyn, the quarter back who has developed into one of the game's best passers.

Last week Maryland swamped Duquesne, once a powerful grid school, by a 32-0 count.

Several Carolina players received rather bad bruises in the State game, but their playing condition will not be definitely ascertained until later in the week. One encouraging factor is that Hosea Rodgers, the regular fullback who missed the battle with the Wolfpack, is expected to be ready to go this week.

The game will mark Carolina's last out-of-the-state invasion this year. Following the Maryland scrap, the team will play Duke at Durham and Virginia at Chapel Hill.

A large delegation of Carolina students is planning to make the trip to Washington to cheer the team in its fight with Maryland.

Booters Make Plans For Return Contest At Duke Tomorrow

Realizing the importance of tomorrow's meeting with Duke in Durham, almost all of the members of Carolina's hustling soccer team were out warming up and practicing on Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon long before Coach Marvin Allen appeared.

The Tar Heels' current four-game winning streak will be at stake tomorrow afternoon for the vengeful Tobacconists will not only be out both to snap it, but they will also be trying to recover the face that they lost one rainy day a couple of weeks ago when they were trod into the mud of Fetzer Field by the Allenmen.

The Carolina eleven will be in top shape for the clash providing scrappy forward Al Singer's injured leg responds to treatment. Yesterday Coach Allen said that he expected Singer to be ready to go against the Gerardmen. Allen plans to open with the same lineup that started the Virginia and Roanoke tilts.

Locals Improve

The local shinbusters spent yesterday afternoon improving their teamwork in the forward line. Coach Allen sent his starting forwards against the first string backs as he attempted to smooth out the ragged passing and ball handling that has been predominant in almost all of their contests thus far this season.

Coach Allen was far from optimistic about his charges chances against the Blue Devils for not only will the Dukes be performing on their stamping grounds, but they are still chafing from the earlier smashing defeat handed them by the locals.

Tar Babies Practice T For Use With Varsity

Under the tutelage of George Radman, Carolina assistant coach who has been couting Maryland Terrapins, a squad of Tar Babies is working on T formation plays to run against the varsity later in the week.

The remainder of the squad spent most of yesterday afternoon on their own plays, scraping off the rust which had accumulated as a result

Fi Phis, Kenan Battle Tonight For Women's Volleyball Crown

By Virginia Forward

The women's intramural volleyball championship will be decided tonight when the Pi Phis tangle with Kenan dormitory in a contest getting underway at 7:30 at the Woman's Gym.

Both teams advanced to the finals by virtue of semi-final victories last Thursday night, the Pi Phis downing Tri Delt, 27-19, while Kenan edged out Chi Omega, 19-17.

Both teams are undefeated in the season's competition having gone through their schedules in impressive fashion. Coed officials are calling tonight's clash a tossup, with Kenan possibly a slight favorite because of their height advantage.

The probable starting lineups for the game are: Pi Phi: Bill Lloyd, Liz Eaddy, Pat Anderson, Donnie McDonald, Jane Morrison, Donna Burnett, and Tenny Royal. Kenan: Gloria Peters, Sarah Walker, Milageos deGuzman, Ruth Manning, Lib Curry, Mary Lou Donaho, Ann Martin, and Dot Lunsford.

A large crowd is expected to be on hand for the contest, with the public cordially invited to attend.

The next attraction of the coed intramural program will be an open table tennis tournament to begin November 17. All girls interested in competing are asked to sign up in the gym sometime this week.

Moore's State-UNC Forecast Captures GM Pigskin Contest

Missing only two of the tough 20 games, Blaine C. Moore, Winston-Salem sophomore of 317 Whitehead, won Graham Memorial's weekly football contest last weekend. Moore's 33-12 prediction for the Carolina-State game was closer than that of 21 to 0 by D. G. Fogle, 3 Pettigrew, who also cracked 18 of the 20 contests.

Close Predictions

Closeness in prognostication was indicated by the eight who missed but three and the 46 who missed four of the slate. Former winners such as Al Barth and Dan Sullivan lost out as most students generally guessed that Carolina would end up two to three touchdown victor over State.

Three prophets foresaw the correct score. Roy C. Moose, 29 Steele, who also picked the wide open Carolina - Florida score, did it again. He was joined by William D. Strayhorn, 200A Jackson Circle, and Smoe Kringle, whose address was listed as Kenan Stadium and the Arboretum. Edward Hecht, 204 Whitehead, was Optimist of the Week by predicting a 60 to 0 win for the Tar Heels. Three others, including Marjorie L. Miller, Chapel Hill, were off a single point.

Many Baffled

The Holy Cross-Colgate tie baffled all eight entrants. Leading those who cracked this nut was Professor J. Minor Gwynn of the education department. Nita Sigmon, 211 Church street, joined Professor Gwynn and six other male fans in predicting the tie.

Seven saw a win for North Carolina State while one predicted a tie for the Homecoming.

An as yet unannounced travelling squad will leave for Charlottesville, Va. Thursday to play the University of Virginia jayvee footballers.

"We don't know too much about the Virginia team, but we hope to do better than the 6-6 tie we got last year," predicted Tar Baby mentor Crowell Little.

present is still in the army at Fort Bragg, will bolster the sprinters. Jesse Greenbaum, on the soccer squad, and Sam McCauley, of the Jayvee gridiron squad, may prove to be the difference between a good and bad backstroke group.

The divers are hard at work, but the picture at the present is far from rosy. They will need plenty of improvement to measure up to the previous high standards.

The Whites, who were edged out by three points in the first test, came through with a decisive 153 to 114 win over their Blue brothers.

World Federalists

Martha Aiken, chairman of a committee to encourage new World Federalist membership, will make a membership report before a special meeting of the student chapter at 5 o'clock today in the YMCA building.

The membership goal has been set at 500, according to Russell Baldwin, president of the group. Membership fee is $1.50, one dollar of which goes to the national organization as a year's subscription to the publication, "Student Federalist."

Zionist Federation To Exhibit Picture At Meeting Tonight

The UNC chapter of the Intercollegiate Zionist federation of America will hold an open meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the Dialectic Senate hall (3rd floor New West) at which Mrs. E. J. Evans of Durham, former president of the Seaboard region of Hadassah, will be guest speaker on a program that will also include the Frederic March-narrated film, "A Pass to Tomorrow."

"A Pass to Tomorrow" is the inspiring story of the upbuilding of Jewish Palestine as revealed through the eyes of an American soldier, visiting Palestine on furlough from the North African fighting front. The movie was photographed in Palestine in glowing technicolor by Colonel Edwin H. Cooper, renowned explorer and lecturer, and produced here by the United Palestine appeal under the supervision of Joseph Krumgold, formerly associated with the Motion Picture Bureau of the Office of War Information.

Wallace-Men Hear Phillips Russell

Fifty people crowded into the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial Friday evening to hear Phillips Russell, University journalism professor discuss "North Carolina and World Affairs."

Sponsored by the newly-organized Wallace Democrats club the program was designed to bring contemporary problems before the public. Chairman Martin Knowlton announced that it was the first of a series which the group plans to present.

The 50th anniversary of the founding of the permanent Pharmacy school will be celebrated with appropriate exercises tomorrow afternoon and night. The afternoon program will be given over to talks, to be followed by a barbecue supper at 7 o'clock.

Principal speakers on the afternoon program will be Dean M. L. Jacobs, who will give an address entitled "Fifty Years of Pharmaceutical Progress," and Walter H. Hartung, professor of pharmaceutical chemistry, School of Pharmacy, University of Maryland, whose subject will be "Pharmaceutical Research." A reminiscence session will follow.

The second annual professional seminar for the school began yesterday and will continue through tomorrow in conjunction with the anniversary celebration.

Pictured above are the three different homes of the School of Pharmacy since it was established on a permanent basis 50 years ago. Building at the top is Howell hall, named for the late Dean Edward Vernon Howell, present home. Center building is New West, on the ground floor of which the Pharmacy school was first housed, and lower building is Person hall, second home.

At right, top to bottom, are pictured Dean Marion Lee Jacobs, elected last year; the late Dean John Grover Beard, who headed the school from 1931 to 1946, and the late Dean Howell, first head of the school, who served from 1897 until his death in 1931.

Semeniuk Speaks to Pharmacy Seminar In First Session

The first sessions of the second annual Professional Seminar of North Carolina pharmacists were held in Howell Hall yesterday.

Approximately 65 pharmacists from throughout the state and the seniors of the Pharmacy School were present at the two meetings of the day.

Welcomed by Dean

Members of the seminar were welcomed by Dean of the School of Pharmacy, M. L. Jacobs and W. J. Smith spoke on behalf of the N. C. Pharmaceutical association which is sponsoring the seminar jointly with the University.

The main address of the morning was delivered by Dr. Fred Semeniuk of the University School of Pharmacy who spoke on "Physiological Adaptation." The other speaker was Dean Jacobs who discussed "The Importance of Research in Pharmacy."

Delivers Lecture

H. C. McAllister, secretary of the N. C. Board of Pharmacy, delivered the main lecture of the afternoon on "The Role of the Pharmacist in Psychosomatic Medicine."

A similar program will be followed today with three outstanding lectures delivered at both the morning and afternoon sessions. The seminar will be concluded Thursday afternoon with the exercises celebrating the 50th anniversary of the University School of Pharmacy.

Guest Speaker

The program will include Dr. Hartung of the University of Maryland as the guest speaker. Talks tracing the history of the University School of Pharmacy will be given by several speakers beginning with the founding of the school in 1897.

Thursday's exercises will be concluded with a reunion barbecue at 5 o'clock. There are approximately 100 guests expected for the occasion.

Special Legislature Session Called To Discuss Redistricting, Elections

The first special session of the Student Legislature for this academic year has been called for 7:30 tomorrow night in Di hall by Speaker Jack Folger.

The session has been scheduled to consider several important items of business which must be cleared before December 1, according to Folger.

First on the agenda is the formal presentation to the assembly of the reprimand from the Men's Honor council, which was issued last week by Bill Tate, council chairman, on behalf of that group. It called down lax legislative procedure, specifically the handling of legislation pertaining to the expense accounts of delegates going to the National Students association convention in Madison, Wisconsin, this fall.

The Legislature will again bring the campus-town redistricting bill to the floor for discussion. The measure was not heard at the last session due to the lack of a quorum.

The freshman-junior class officers elections bill which was vetoed day before yesterday by student body President Tom Eller will be brought up for reconsideration. Eller vetoed the bill principally because it did not allow enough time for nominations to be made before the deadline occurred. The election was scheduled to be held yesterday; however, only one slate of candidates had been nominated.

Executive appointments of members to the Legislature and one person to the Men's council are expected to be reviewd by the legislative body. The appointments are Jim Taylor to the council, and Kennedy Gammage, John Miles, Mary Locke Craig, Margaret Goodman to the Legislature.

Two other bills slated to come to the floor are the publications appropriations measure and a bill which would assure all returning students of retention of their old living quarters.

CICA INITIATION

The Carolina Independent Coed Association will initiate all new members in a ceremony tonight at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge. Everyone is asked to wear either green or white. Following the initiation, refreshments will be served and group pictures will be taken.

KATTSOFF TO TALK

Professor L. O. Kattsoff, Chairman of the Department of Philosophy, will give a lecture on "Methods of Studying Man" at Guilford College in Greensboro tonight. He will talk on this same subject at the International Congress of Philosophy to be held in Amsterdam in 1948.

Di To Debate House Un-American Group

This evening the Dialectic Senate will debate the feasibility of dissolving the present House Un-American Activities committee. A bill to go before the Senate in its weekly meeting scheduled for 9 o'clock tonight in New West suggests giving the Federal Bureau of Investigation jurisdiction over inquiries which have recently embarrassed and ridiculed many innocent people undeservingly before the American public.

Th bill released today by John Zucker, chairman of the Di ways and means committee, charges specifically that so far the House Un-American Activities committee has failed to correct disloyalty and un-Americanism. Instead, according to tonight's bill, the House committee has only violated Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States assuring freedom of speech. Debate is expected on remedies for such public spectacles as the late inconclusive probes of supposed communists in Hollywood.

Before the regular session the Di will hold its executive meeting called for during the last week of each month to finish old business on hand. Charlie Long, Senate speaker, insists that all Senators except those who have filed adequate excuse be present. Gran Childress, chairman of the membership committee, also asks that the 12 students who have submitted application blanks for admission into the Senate come to the third floor of New West by 8:15 o'clock to be oriented and voted upon for membership.

Although the executive session is to be closed to the public, all interested students and townspeople are invited to attend the 9 o'clock meeting and to enter into the argument from the floor on the Un-American Activities Committee as freely as they please.

Lasley to Address Chess Club Tonight

Dr. John W. Lasley of the mathematics department will be guest speaker at this evening's session of the chess club in the Roland Parker lounge No. 1 of Graham Memorial at 7:30. An expert player and local authority on chess, Dr. Lasley will demonstrate some of the finer points of the game.

Invitation cards have been mailed to all freshman who expressed an interest in chess, club president Bill Brown announced, but the meetings are always open to all followers of the game, both experts and beginners.

Brown Will Direct Jam Session Today

Taking over as moderator for this afternoon's Graham Memorial jam session will be Otis Brown, drummer with Jimmy Marshall's Carolinians. The program, which will hold forth in the Rendezvous on the ground floor of the student union beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon, features three hours of wide open, unrehearsed playing. Spectators, as well as all student musicians, are welcome to the program.

Brown will choose several ensembles of six or eight men during the afternoon, from the rolls of musicians registered in the room. These "combos" may play three to four selections of their own choosing. Everyone participating in the program has a chance for solo rides, and no music is allowed.

Musicians are requested to bring their own instruments, though this is not absolutely necessary.

Radio Center Will Give Half Hour Play Tonight

A half hour radio play, "Give Us Pause," written by Sam Hirsch, graduate student in the department of dramatic art, will be presented Wednesday night over radio stations WRAL and WHHT by the University Communications center. The play is being directed by Earl Wynn, director of the center, and is one of a series of student written plays known as "Thirsty-three by Air."

"Give Us Pause,, was originally staged by the Carolina Playmakers on a bill of experimental plays last year, and it was mainly on the strength of this play and "Subway Rhapsody" that Hirsch was awarded the Joseph Felmet award in playwriting for this year. When produced by the Playmakers, "Give Us Pause" was voted the best play of the evening.

The cast of the radio version includes: H. M. Shaw as "Willie," Edna Dooley as "Martha," Mervyn Lentz as "Jake," M. Padgett as the "Woman," Don Maynard as "Mickie," Bill Sharsky, as "Stonev," and Bob Andrew as "Jeff."

A sixteen voice chorus, directed by Ed Easter, original music by Willard Mason, sound effects by Ed Kaplan, and John Young at the controls complete the crew. Avery Gibson is assistant producer.

Marshall Queried About Plan Division

Washington, Nov. 11—(UP) Will the Marshall plan erect a wall between Russia and the Western Powers was the question put to Secretary of State George Marshall today by the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

Marshall answered that our present relations with the Soviet government don't require much description, adding that in his opinion there is still some hope that the division is not going to be permanent.

The secretary's entire testimony added a partially grim though partially optimistic backdrop to Armistice day as he called Germany the

"The long-range European aid plan may fail unless the Germans receive new economic blood without delay," he said, indicating that other nations of Western Europe may collapse unless Germany's factories can pump out machines and goods.

Marshall denied that the United States is anxious to rebuild the German war machine. Without mentioning Russia by name, he stated that some countries are putting out propaganda that America wants to strengthen Germany's war potential. He declared that nothing could be farther from the truth.

FRESHMAN DANCE

Announcement was made today of an informal dance, sponsored by the freshmen of Woman's College, for freshmen of Carolina to be held in Greensboro on December 6. All freshmen interested in attending the dance may obtain bids by contacting members of the Freshmen Friendship council.

FOREIGN STUDENTS

A meeting of all foreign students on the campus will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in Roland Parker lounge No. 1. Representatives of all student organizations will be present.

Decorator To Speak On Interior Design

Frederick Moverly-Brine will speak Thursday at 5 P.M. in Person Hall Art Gallery on the subject "Contemporary Design of Furniture with Relation to Interiors." An exhibition in the small gallery of watercolor sketches of the "Precedent" furniture by Drexel Furniture Co. will illustrate the talk. He will also show textiles and fabrics, and discuss the use of color and texture.

Mr. Moverly-Brine, decorator for Drexel Furniture Co., was born in New Hampshire and educated in Canada, Richmond Professional Institute, and Parson's, New York. He was formerly with the Studio of Interior Decoration at Miller and Rhoads, in Richmond.

Car Owners Here Must Get Stickers

All student car owners in the General college, commerce, arts and sciences, special, and graduate schools who registered their autos with the University at the beginning of this quarter should pick up the windshield license stickers in the Dean of Men Fred Weaver's office as soon as possible.

Students in the schools of law, pharmacy, public health, medicine, and library science should pick up their stickers at their respective advisors' offices. Those who have yet to register autos may do so in Dean Weaver's office in 207 South building.

Food Committee Plans to Stress Needs of Europe

The two most immediate objectives of the local food conservation plan are to stress the dire needs of Europe, and for students and townspeople to readjust their eating habits with an eye towards saving, a meeting of the local steering committee of this plan decided Monday night.

Overall plans for a food conservation drive were discussed at Monday nights gathering, the second meeting of this committee. Charles MacRae, representative of the student body working with this group, said it was decided to distribute handbills soon to publicize the above points.

A delegate from the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, Aubrey Williams, attended the session and announced an open discussion on price control will be held shortly by the SCHW.

Members serving on this food committee are Paul Shearin, chairman; Claude Shotts, YMCA; J. C. Herrin, churches; C. W. Shields, merchants; C. W. Davis, superintendant of schools; Robert S. Nelson, IFC; Margaret Taylor, Pan-Hel Council; Mrs. Walter Spearman, housewives; Tom Fields, Victory Village; and Charles MacRae.

ECONOMICS MAJORS

All economics majors in the college of Arts and Sciences must check by room 113 Bingham before this Saturday, the department announced today. There they will receive instructions and make appointments for registration for the Winter and Spring quarters.

Reservation Deadline Announced By University Housing Office

The university housing office announced yesterday that Saturday is the last day on which reservations for university housing for the next quarter may be made.

This announcement applies to all men including those who plan to remain in their present quarters according to housing chief Wadsworth. Forms on which these reservations are to be made have been distributed by dormitory and quonset hut advisers. However, any man who has not filled out one is asked to come to the housing office at 22 New East Annex and get one.

According to the announcement, failure to do this by the 15th will result in the loss of assigned space.

Palestine Decision Displeases Britain

—Great Britain indicated today that it is not too pleased about the new Soviet-American compromise on Palestine. British UN delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan stressed that Britain will stand on its refusal to play a major role in enforcing partition of the Holy Land. Cadogan's statement is seen as at least a temporary rejection of the American-Soviet proposal that Britain remain responsible for law and order in Palestine until next May 1st.

WSSF Collects $4,836 in Cash and Pledges To Double UNC Contribution of Last Year

By Sally Woodhull

With $4,836.61 already collected in cash and pledges, World Student Service fund contributions this year will more than double last year's collections, according to drive co-chairmen Mimi Massey and Sam Magill.

Cash receipts turned in so far to statistical co-chairmen Emily Von Borries and Tag Montague total $4,570.86, and pledges total $265.75. Solicitors who have not yet turned in their complete reports are urged to do so at the YWCA office immediately.

Last year $2500 was collected on campus for WSSF, and, when all reports are in for this year's dirve, the total will pass the $5,000 mark it is believed.

More than $1,000 was collected at Saturday night's Battle of Bands dance, and $2,872.50 was collected in votes for the Miss Payoff candidates. The "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner" program last Wednesday netted over $300.

"Everybody responded well," said Emily Von Berries," and we are more than pleased with Carolina students' awareness of world responsibilities as shown in their response to this drive."

Among groups doing particularly well in personal solicitation were Alexander dormitory, upper and lower quads, Archer house, and the women's dormitories.

Among contributions received from campus organizations are the following: Coed Senate, $300; GM Board of Directors, $300; Wesley foundation, $250; Canterbury club, $200.

Arthur Loesser, High Ranking Pianist, Will Present Free Concert Here Sunday

One of the nation's top concert pianists, Arthur Loesser, will present a free program in Hill hall Sunday evening, under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial. At present the associate head of the piano department of the Cleveland Institute of Music, Loesser has played all over the world during the past few years.

His program has tentatively been arranged to include three sonatas by Scarlatti, a Beethoven sonata, selections by Chopin, compositions of Brahms and Handel, and two modern selections—Sonatina by Hisatada Otaka, contemporary Japanese composer and conductor of the Nippon Philharmonic, and a sonata by Arthur Shipherd, head of the music division of Western Reserve University.

During the war, as a language officer with the military intelligence service in Japan, Loesser was the first American officer in uniform to appear in a public performance, collaborating with a Japanese artist and playing before a local audience. He was discharged from the service last spring with the rank of major.

The Freshmen Are Waking Up

Freshmen, long only a quiet background to the supposedly more important politics of the junior and senior class, have come out of their long sleep and challenged what many of them consider domination of first-year men by upperclass politicos.

First blood was drawn by freshmen Monday night in a two-and-a-half hour session in Gerrard hall. The mellow, old building—quiet these two months since the fall term opened—rocked to a chorus of voices last night as freshmen, both independent and party-cular, sent rhetoric rattling across the hard benches.

Chief target for the new freshmen war the old, established University party and its leader Miles Smith. Insensed over what they considered, correctly or erroneously, an injustice by the UP, some 40 or 50 first-year men fired broadsides at fraternities, at Smith, at the state of party politics on campus.

The meeting grew out of the regular weekly gathering of the Freshman Friendship council, a YMCA organization which tries hard to keep away from politics. However, its leaders—Jack Park and John Brockmann—had accused Smith and the UP in a letter to the DTH. These two, along with a small group of independent freshman, were instrumental in getting the new men together.

UP chief Smith opened the meeting himself with an attack on Park and Brockmann. He scored the two for involving the FFC in politics, denied their charges that his party had "pulled a fast one" and did his best to lead the independent freshman over to his side of the fence.

He was heckled loudly and had difficulty holding the floor. Freshman shots at him were loud if not altogether pertinent. They applauded the letter when he read it to point out its "fallacies."

In the discussion that followed the new men considered lining up a slate of officers to oppose the UP ticket, but they were completely subdued when an upperclassman—who promped from the sidelines—pointed out that they could not do so since it was not "constitutional". He said they could get up a petition, but that any 25 men could do that.

There was much that was unpleasant about Monday night's session. The freshmen were not organized; few of them could think of anything constructive to do; the UP, according to some, packed the meeting to protect their party, and floor procedure was definitely not in line with Robert's Rules of Order.

But the freshmen are waking up. They are realizing that they can have a voice in campus affairs that they need not follow blindly any order given them. This new attitude may be due to the war-born maturity of many of the new men, or Monday's meeting may have been only an isolated uprising that will never occur again.

At any rate, what happened is a healthful sign. If freshmen continue to make themselves heard, it may result in a complete overhaul of the campus party system.—B.S.

Lest We Forget

There was no Armistice Day observance on campus yesterday save in the hearts of those who did remember—The veterans who watched their buddies earn Flander's Field resting places, the students who recall relatives and dear ones.

These students in their hearts remembered and paraphrased the immortal lines of English poet, Rupert Brooks' "The Soldier."

"If I should die, think only this of me,
That there is some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England."

This, and similar thoughts, constituted the University's sole observance of Armistice Day, 1947.

Last year, South building officials held a convocation: The University Veterans association under the guidance of sometime President Jim Chesnut sponsored a program in Memorial hall which featured an address by Major General McAuliffe, the hero of Bastogne who replied "Nuts" to a German surrender ultimatum sent to the famous 101st Airborne division.

This year lethargy dominated the trio which could have sponsored campus-wide observance. Student government officers emulated ostriches in problems of freshmen elections; South building officials turned their backs; the University Veterans association appeared engrossed in its social plans for an open house at the club last night. Even the Daily Tar Heel failed to request the one minute of silence at 11 a. m.

The Exigency of the Age

The Dam-- Will It Hold?

Did you ever hear the parable of the flippant flatterer? It seems that the villagers in a small mountain village decided that they had watched long enough while the turbulent mountain stream annually flooded its banks and swept away their homes and their crops. They met together to determine what could be done to save what remained of their once rich fields and the flimsy homes which now replaced their beautiful homes, long since swept away in the floods. After much oratorical haggling it was decided that the only way of stopping the floods was for every man in the village to contribute of his time and money to the building of a dam.

After much deliberation and delay work was finally begun on the great dam. Almost immediately an imposing problem arose. How strong should the dam be? Some argued that it should be very strong so as to insure little risk of failure; others contended that to make it so strong would be a waste of time and materials. As was to be expected the appeal of the easier method was decisive. The dam was built and it was an impressive structure

One day a storm threatened and the villagers looked with apprehension to their newly-constructed dam. This was to be its first test and the apprehension of the untried was oppressively prevalent. The crowds cheered as the great dam held, and they went back to their homes satisfied of their security.

The rape of nature proceeded at an alarming rate and those who had not been lulled to slumber by the security of the dam protested that since greater floods were now possible the dam was no longer strong enough. "It must be strengthened", they said. The villagers felt secure and they hated the "hysterical ones" who kept murmuring about a great flood soon to occur. "Don't be foolish", they said, "it's impractical to strengthen the dam."

The chief man of the village stilled the fears of the villagers by flattering them. "Look what a great dam we have built," he said. "Is it not stronger than the greatest floods we have seen? Even if it should fail, have we not always survived the floods before?" These were welcome words and the villagers felt secure.

The flood came upon them with a suddenness never before known to the village. The dam came tumbling down and the great forces impounded behind it burst forth triumphantly and devoured the village. The chief man of the village died first of all and the fears of the rest turned into hate....hate for the one who had deceived them. Thus they died.

That parable reminds me of a similar situation which exists in the world today. The world-village has been ravaged by floods of wars with insane regularity. Finally, man decided to build a structure to stop war, but, like the villigers who built the dam, he did not build it strong enough. He built the United Nations of weak materials and now he prides himself on what he has done. He hates those who tell him of its weakness, the "hysterical ones". It is impractical to strengthen the U.N. into a world government strong enough to withstand the stresses which will be thrust upon it, he tells you in a matter-of-fact, unthinking tone.

Will this parable have the same ending as the other one?

Rebirth of Culture

Another Aim Of Zionism

By Paul L. Furgath

(Editor's Note: This is the final in a series of three articles explaining the principles and objectives of Zionism.)

We have seen that Zionism embodies a national Jewish homeland in Palestine secured by public law, with free and unlimited immigration into this homeland. There is another aim of Zionism, a far reaching one, whose full effects will be felt in the future.

The essence of it is that there is something worthwhile, something good and constructive in the Hebrew way of life. A rebirth of culture is taking place, and the world will be benefited by being the recipient.

A country's first responsibility is to its children, and Palestine has not forgotten her sons and daughters. Two thirds of the Jewish children attend the public schools originally established by the Zionist organization. The crowning feature of this educational program is the Hebrew university in Jerusalem, which attracts students from various parts of the world. The mandate government contributes only 10 per cent of the cost of the educational system.

An integral part of this rebirth of culture is the General Federation of Jewish Labor in Palestine, better known as the Histadrut. The Histadrut is an instrument for transforming middle-class people into workers and farmers. It assists them in finding work, gives credit and support, has its own buying and selling organization, executes housing schemes and irrigation projects and has one of the finest hospital and health plans in existence, as well as invalid, old age and unemployment insurances. They have achieved agro-industrial settlements, and are also one of the biggest employers of labor in Palestine.

Without government help it offers its members the greatest advance toward social security yet achieved or planned in any country. All a part of this new culture.

Conducted by Arturo Toscanini, the Palestine Symphony, the finest of its kind in the middle east, had its first public performance in 1936. The Habimah, the cooperative theatre group is known throughout the world; art and music native to Palestine are developing a true originality. The cooperative movement, its hospitals, its social schemes, these are all a part of the new culture of Palestine.

Whatever one may think of political Zionism, there is much more to the achievements of Palestine than just an effort to solve the plight of the Jews. In that country something has happened and materialized for which the entire civilized world is still striving...thousands of human beings are living a new form of social life, and have made a success of it.

They do not wish to convert other people to their convictions and ways of living. It is only their way of doing what was previously denied to them; to live a decent normal life as other human beings can do in their own country.

George Elliot sums it up very well in her famous novel Daniel Deronda,

"There is a store of wisdom among us to found a new Jewish policy, grand, simple, just, like the old....a republic where there is equality of protection..Then our people shall have an organic center, a heart and a brain to watch and guide and execute; the outraged Jew shall have a defense in the court of nations....And the world shall gain as Israel gains."

This Is It

Vets Exert Influence

By Ken Rothwell

Whether you like it or not the fact remains that veterans organizations in this country exert a tremendous influence on both the local and national level.

That this influence is not always to the best interests of the people is axiomatic. But when it isn't even to the best interests of the veteran it is nothing short of tragic.

Thus we have the fantastic spectacle of the last American Legion convention in New York voting NOT to support the Taft-Wagner-Ellender housing bill on the grounds that it is harmful to "free enterprise".

Translated into English "free enterprise", under these circumstances, means that certain real estate interests might lose money on the deal. If this bill is indeed harmful to "free enterprise" the next logical step is for some mental giant to call Senator Taft a Communist.

Meanwhile, while the Legion draws up a compromise bill more favorable to the real estate lobbies thousands of World War II veterans can continue to enjoy the blessings of "free enterprise" in trailers, shacks and in-laws homes from one end of the nation to the other.

Another example of this business of not knowing where one's self-interest lies is the way that the old-guard vet's outfits overlooked the bill to increase GI subsistence in the last congress. Had they lent their support there is little doubt that it would have reached the house floor. Few realize that had it not been for the American Veterans committee with the wonderful support of Congresswoman Edith Rogers (and AmVets, another world war II organization) the bill probably would not have been introduced at all.

To get back to Chapel Hill—in the near future (about Nov. 20) watch for the campus wide protest on high prices which is to be sponsored by AVC and SCHW. All campus organizations will be asked to participate.

Tom McDade, out at the vet's co-op store, says that every week the co-op has to pay 50 or 60 dollars more for the same

Dr. Rice Clarifies A-Bomb Stand

Dear Sir:

Since it is likely that more people have read the editorial, in the guise of a news article, written by John Stump (DTH Nov. 9) than heard my talk on atomic energy control, I feel that some answer should be made. This is too important and serious a subject to allow misinformation to be spread about it without reply, though it is, unfortunately, true that it is difficult to repair the damage that may be done by thoughtless and uninformed writers on the subject.

First, however, I must apologize to Mr. Stump and any others who may have come expecting to be pleasantly mystified by abstruse formulas. Atomic energy control is largely a political subject; it was so treated by the Tar Heel the morning before my talk; if any misapprehension still exists on this point, it can only be taken as illustrating further the need for getting information on the subject before the general public.

Perhaps the most glaring inaccuracy of Mr. Stump's article is his misquotation of the scientists' third point, "International control," as, "It (the atomic bomb) will never be employed." How could he have obtained the impression that I said or implied this? I only wish I could believe it; if I could, I would not bother to make public addresses on the subject. If Mr. Stump had interpreted it as, "It MUST never be employed again," that would have been more nearly correct. The scientists are striving for the realization of their real third point, "International control," in the belief that will at least minimize the chances of its being used again.

If there is one thing which is within the scientists' competence, it is the knowledge of what effects the use of the atomic bomb in warfare will have on our civilization, and the fact that there is no hope of really adequate defense against it. Here, Mr. Stump did not really contradict me; though he garbled some of the details, I shall not take the space to correct these.

Being convinced that, if our civilization is to survive, international control is a necessity, the scientists who worked on the project set out to do something about it. In spite of their political naivete, which, as personified in me, was dwelt upon so at length by Mr. Stump, the scientists have convinced many important political figures, and have actually swayed the course of political events.

The hard fact remains that if we are to live in this world at all, we are going to have to come to some agreement with the Russians. This is realized by many intelligent people in the diplomatic world, and most acutely by people who have come close to the atomic energy problem; for example, by our delegates to the UN Atomic Energy Commission. As to how this agreement is to be attained without sacrificing fundamental principles, people may differ, and it is not, of course, to be supposed that all scientists have the same views on this subject.

But is it naive to assume that these problems will not be easily solved in an atmosphere of hysteria? And is it naive to suppose that understanding the aims and motivations of the Russians, rather than merely cussing them out, will be of some assistance in the matter? Anybody who speaks any sense on this subject is almost certain to be considered a communist by the undiscriminating, so I am not surprised that Mr. Stump has included a libelous implication that I follow the party line. Somewhat belatedly, Mr. Stump did apparently catch on that I was advocating international control. This seemed to be the cardinal point by which I was recognized as, at least, a "fellow traveler." It should, perhaps, be recalled that international control is a fixed policy of the United States government.

Mr. Stump certainly gave an entirely inadequate and inaccurate account of my statements concerning the American and Russian plans, in which I expressed my belief in the superiority of the American plan. He, perhaps, felt it confusing that in spite of this I advocated adequate study of the Russian plan, as a step toward final agreement. Nor did he seem to appreciate the significance of the fact that the Russians have conceded a number of points since the negotiations began, presumably as a result of increased understanding. And, incidentally, the Russian inspection plan, though hardly adequate, is not quite so toothless as Mr. Stump would have one believe. Finally, Mr. Stump to the contrary notwithstanding, the veto would, in fact, not affect the day-by-day operations of a control agency.

My main purpose in writing you is to correct the misstatements of fact in Mr. Stump's article, but I may emphasize in closing that there is no substitute for peace and order in the world, and that it is worth negotiating patiently, tolerantly, and understandingly for these ends, which are now so vital for the welfare of all mankind. Mr. Stump's article is in essence an argument for a continuation of the good old diplomacy which has gotten us where we are today. I ask him to look around him and see how well he likes it.

'Rice Was Vague,'

Apparently Dr. Rice, who, contrary to the vicious implication of my article, is not old, was a little vague in his statement of the third point of his talk. At least, no two statements of it agree exactly as to what it was.

I believed that it was that atom bombs will never be employed. One letter received here says that atom bombs must never be employed. Another says that international control is a necessity, and the outline of the doctor's speech which Dr. Straley of the physics department showed to me says that control is necessary. However, Dr. Rice now maintains that while he said in his speech that it must never be employed, the general point that he and other scientists have tried to put over is that control is necessary.

If my interpretation of the intent of his third point is incorrect, I am sorry, but my article clearly states that Rice favors international control, and the entire controversy obscures the main point of my story; it was that this point and many others in the doctor's speech are impractical and, if he is taken as an expert, dangerous.

The other criticisms which are contained in letters sent to this office and not printed because of lack of space are numerous, in many cases contradictory, and in almost all cases poorly taken if not false. The writers will be answered, but there is also not room to carry these answers here.

One letter states that the handbills were misleading, another that I was wrong in saying that they were misleading. One said that we should set up an international control agency while we have an advantage in know-how, another that our advantage in strength should lead us to hold down anti-communist 'hysteria' in this country. One letter pointed out that the Russian aims and methods are different from those of the Nazis while the same man says that he in no way denied the existence of a police state. Another said that his statement was that

GRIDDERS WADE IN KENAN

RAIN, RAIN, GO AWAY, may have been the theme song in and around Chapel Hill yesterday, but for all the inconvenience the downpour caused, there was also some good as a result. For it gave Coach Carl Snavely an opportunity to send his gridders through practice under wet conditions, something they might run up against Saturday in something more than a practice session.

In fact, many observers feel that the Maryland scrap might be one of the toughest games on the Carolina schedule. They point out that the Tar Heels have had trouble in two of the three "T" parties they've been on this year and that the split T of the Terrapins can be even more difficult to solve. They go on to emphasize that the tricky formation together with a halfback who ranks as the nation's highest scorer will cause Carolina no end of trouble.

WE RECEIVED two tips yesterday on the potent power of Jim Tatum and his Maryland crew. The first one was from an official source, in the person of assistant backfield Coach George Radman, who scouted the Old Liners in several tilts this year. "Even in defeat they looked good," Radman declared. "Their one loss was to Duke by 19-7 and even there they outgained their opponents. They made 288 yards rushing and 112 through the air for a grand total of 400 yards. A few fumbles, though, cost them some scoring opportunities but we can't depend on them fumbling this week."

TERPS TOY WITH DUKES

Last Saturday saw Radman up in Pittsburgh to watch Maryland toy with Duquesne, over which team they breezed to a 32-0 triumph. "These boys scored the first three times they had possession of the ball," he exclaimed. They passed for one TD and Lu Gambino trucked for 37 and 34 yards for the other two." Whereupon Radman began the story of how Gambino is making a bid for an all-conference halfback position this season.

"That boy had made at least one long run in all four games I've seen him play this year," the former Tar Heel halfback stated. "One of his best was a 64-yard gallop against Duke, but he fumbled when he was tackled. He's made 14 touchdowns—84 points—in seven games, and that's a lot of scoring."

One thing about the Maryland gridders particularly impressed Radman and that is that. "They've improved a whole lot since early in the season. Tatum's T was something new for most of the players, but they've caught on to it and have come along fast. No matter what the score of the game turns out to be, you can bet they'll give us a fight," he concluded.

LINERS LAY FOR TAR HEELS

THE OTHER HOT tip comes from someone in the know up at College Park. In a letter to the Daily Tar Heel, signed with "Tar Heel Born and Bred," our informer tells us that "Maryland has been laying for N. Carolina all season. The Governor of Maryland has invited the entire Maryland squad to his mansion after the game for wine, women, and song, if they beat the Tar Heels." A good incentive, we will agree.

The note goes on to say that "The Maryland students are betting even, they are so sure of winning," and concludes with "You have my O.K. to back Maryland to the wall."

SCATTER TO THE WINDS

THE DTH SPORTS staff will scatter far and wide to cover various sports events during the coming weekend. Saturday's big ball game up in the nation's capital will have Billy Carmichael, Taylor Vaden, Bill Gallagher, and Bob Goldwater in attendance. The Wake Forest-N. C. State scrap over in the state capital will be covered by Dick Jenrette, while Bill Kellam will be in Durham for the Duke-South Carolina tilt. Larry Fox will be with the soccer outfit when they invade the lair of the High Point Panthers Friday. And when Monday rolls around, Morty Schaap will be with the cross-country team up in New York for the IC4A meet. Also on that day, we'll be making a quick trip over to Raleigh for the Southern conference harrier championship event.

It's a full schedule all around, but we'll be satisfied to bring the four Carolina teams involved home to victory.

CLASSY PREDICTIONS

Predictions by the DTH five-man board ran unusually high this past week, with two members registering classy scores of 16. Bill Lamkin and Jake Wade were the brilliant ones, while Morty Schaap, Billy Carmichael, and yours truly hit on 14. Wade scored on two solo dashes, Davidson and Ohio State, while Schaap was correct on one, Missouri.

The seven-week standings on 140 games:

	W.	L.	Pct.	GB
Bill Lamkin	92	48	.657	—
Morty Schaap	89	51	.636	3
Jake Wade	89	51	.636	3
Bob Goldwater	85	55	.607	7
Bill Carmichael	78	62	.557	14

WONDER WHY?

YOU TELL US DEPT.: Anyone know the answer to the following questions? We don't.

1. How does Utah pull in ahead of Carolina in the latest AP ratings?

2. By how much more than 41-6 must a team win in order to better its 18th-place standing?

Tough Game Looms As Allenmen Seek Fifth Straight Win

By Bill Kellam

Rain or shine at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Duke University freshman field Carolina's booters will be gunning for their fifth straight victory of the season when they tangle with Duke's vengeance-seeking Blue Devils.

Today's tussle is rated as a toss-up even though the Tar Heels did hang up a 7-3 win over the Tobacconists on Fetzer Field earlier this season. Duke mentor Gerry Gerard undoubtdely has his charges primed to break the Carolina winning streak this afternoon so the locals will probably have the roughest battle of the season on their hands.

Carolina coach Marvin Allen disclosed yesterday that he will open tomorrow's contest with the same lineup that started the Roanoke game with the exception that Hank Pallulat and dead-eyed Wayne Johnson will trade places and start at outside right and center forward, respectively.

It was learned last last night that Al Singer, Tar Heel's scrappy right halfback, will be unable to take part in the Duke game today due to a leg injury. Tommy Williams or Mac Hagaman will take his place.

Yesterday afternoon's steady rainfall kept the Carolina squad indoors but Coach Allen took his boys down into the basement of Woolen Gym where they worked out on the handball courts. Allen had hoped to get outside and spend some more time polishing the Blue and White offense for today's tilt but unfortunately the elements intervened.

Scrappy little Joe Bach and speedy Wayne Johnson will provide most of the Tar Heel scoring punch tomorrow with shifty Dave Boak, chrome domed hustler Gus Johnston, and wiry Al Singer will be taking care of the ball handling. Frank Nelson, Porter VanZandt, and Al Williams will form the backbone of the tight Carolina defense which has given up only three goals in the last four games.

High scoring Chico Craniotis and Arnie Rostad and ball handler Rodrigo Rigioni will be the Duke men to watch. The Gerardmen have played only High Point since their game with the Tar Heels and that contest resulted in an easy 9-2 Duke win.

Three men are currently tied for the individual Carolina scoring lead. Wayne Johnson, Joe kicked four goals apiece. Dave Bach, and Dave Boak have

Footballers Preparing All-Weather Offense

If there should be rain in Washington, D. C. this Saturday when Carolina and Maryland meet on the gridiron, the Tar Heels certainly should be prepared, for their workout in Chapel Hill yesterday was staged on one of the muddiest fields and rainiest afternoons that observers of the locals have ever witnessed.

Coach Carl Snavely had the drills run off on Kenan stadium instead of Navy field, where the team usually practices. Both fields were muddy, but evidently it was thought that the turf of Kenan was a little firmer.

Because of the trip to Washington, the Tar Heels probably won't be able to get in much rough work this week even though they did practice hard in yesterday's rain. Defense featured the session, with the Jayvees running plays from the T-formation, which Maryland uses. The running plays clicked for several nice gains despite the slippery ground.

Last season's game between Caroilna and Maryland resulted in a 33-0 victory for the Tar Heels in their third game of the season. That game was played in a driving rain, and Maryland might have made the score a bit closer had not its passing game been slowed up by the rain. A hard-charging Carolina line was also a big factor in the win.

Maryland has virtually the same players back this year that were on the 1946 team, but Jim Tatum has taken over the coaching reins and has worked a minor miracle in developing the Terps from a second-rate grid power to one that has copped six of seven games thus far.

Tatum is a former Tar Heel coach himself, and he also served as head mentor at Oklahoma last year.

The game will see the Tar Heels making their bid for a fifth straight victory. After defeating Georgia and losing to Texas and Wake Forest in their first three games, Carolina has beaten William and Mary, Florida, Tennessee, and N. C. State in order on the comeback trail.

Ole Jupe Pluvius Causes Cessation Of Mural Schedule

The Intramural football championship playoffs were set back two days because of yesterday's downpour. Games yesterday and today have been cancelled by Mural Director Walter Rabb.

Tennis championship matches were also held up because of rain and wet courts. Deciding matches in all divisions will be played next week to determine the campus champions.

The only mural activities that continued, uninterrupted by rain, were the volleyball and table tennis matches held in Woollen gym.

Entries for the handball tournament closed yesterday. Starting tomorrow doubles and single matches will be played to determine the winners in their respective divisions. Prizes will be presented by the Mural department to winners in each class. The tournament will be conducted on a double elimination basis.

All questions concerning Mural schedules should be addressed to the Mural office, room 311, Woollen gym.

Harriers Meet

The following men are asked to report to Coach Joe Hilton at Fetzer field at 2 o'clock this afternoon to go to Raleigh to run over the Conference four-mile cross country course. Men will dress here for the session.

John Bristow, Dick Carr, Walt Francis, Frank Hooper, Dick Hollander, Jim Hunt, John Hoots, Dave Hiatt, Dan Martin, Jimmy Miller, and Basil Woods.

Pi Phis Rout Kenan, 41-27, To Grab Coed Volleyball Title

Pi Phi defeated Kenan for the coed volleyball title last night, 41-27, to cop their fourth straight title in a like number of years.

The Pi Phis, paced by Liz Eaddy and Pat Anderson, who scored 11 service points each, took an early lead and jumped to a 22-15 margin at the half.

The dormitory girls rallied at the opening of the second half, but the victors withstood the challenge and went on to win handily. Sarah Walker was the high scorer for the losers with six points.

The game was featured by numerous long volleys and a sparkling brand of play was demonstrated by both teams. A crowd of around a hundred were on hand to witness the proceedings.

SOME THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

AVIATION CADET TRAINING

Here, in question and answer form, are some facts on the U. S. Air Force Aviation Cadet program. They cover details you may have been wondering about—and will be useful to you if you want to learn to fly and begin a career in one of today's fastest-moving fields.

1. Who is eligible for appointment to the Cadets?

You, if you're physically fit, single, between 20 and 26½ years old, and have completed at least one-half the requirements for a college degree from an accredited institution — or pass an equivalent examination.

2. How long does the training last — and what does it cover?

You receive approximately 52 weeks' training — worth $35,000 — in primary, basic and advanced flying, along with other related courses designed to give you the finest background in your specialty.

3. What's the story on duty after graduation?

After successful completion of the course, you will be commissioned a Second Lieutenant, Officers Reserve Corps, and assigned to pilot duty with the U. S. Air Force at a starting monthly salary of $336 (including flight pay). You will serve on active duty for three years unless sooner relieved, and be eligible for $500 a year bonus for each year of active duty as a Reserve Officer. If you're interested in a Regular Air Force commission, you'll be given a chance to qualify.

4. What are the civilian career opportunities?

That's one you can answer for yourself by taking into consideration these facts: Contrary to what some people think, aviation is not overcrowded — for pilots or anyone else. No field is expanding more rapidly or offering more profitable openings to qualified men. After Aviation Cadet training, you can compete on an equal basis with any flier in the world.

These are only a few of the advantages. Why not stop in today at your nearest U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station and get all the details?

Durham Challenges Chessmen to Match

Invitation to chess players to try Durham's best at the City Hall there was offered at Graham Memorial last night by Ronald Ware, publicity chairman of the Durham Chess club. Visitors are welcome at any weekly meeting, Thursdays at 7:30 o'clock.

The 25 members of the Durham club will be hosts to the State Chess federation championship rounds for 1948, during the week between Christmas and New Year's Day. The visitor said the Durham group would be interested in a match with the Chapel Hill players as a team.

The club there beat Duke University representatives nine games to one in June, and have not been able to arrange a return match. Raleigh was 4 1-2 to 2 1-2 victim in July.

Hughes Ends Testimony In Blaze Of Oratory

Washington, Nov. 11—(UP)—Howard Hughes wound up his testimony before the Senate War Investigating committee today in a blaze of oratory.

First, he denied in angry tones that he made a profit out of the war and that he owes uncollected taxes on war profits.

The handsome plane-builder had been a study in composure during the second round of the committee investigation into his war plane contracts. Today, however, he blew up when the examination got around to his alleged wartime profits.

"I am prepared to state upon any evidence," he shouted, "that I suffered a loss on my wartime contracts."

Republican Senator John Williams of Delaware promptly refused to retreat from the statement he made last week that Hughes' companies made more than 15 million dollars profit during the war years.

Hughes retorted that all this profit was made selling oil drilling tools and beer and had nothing to do with war contracts.

He also objected to the impression which he said Williams had created that he owes the government five million dollars in taxes.

Hughes' long, lean face was flushed with anger as he glared at the senator and growled "I don't owe five million dollars in taxes and no tax deficiency has been shown."

Senator Williams, one of the most quiet men on the committee, bristled under Hughes' attack. He replied that the matter is in the hands of the Internal Revenue bureau, and said appropriate action will be taken in time.

This statement didn't stop Hughes as he charged "A lot of you senators have been talking about 'outside pressures,' and I consider it is outside pressure when a senator tries to force a Treasury department decision contrary to one it might make of its own accord."

Hughes then went into an extemporeaneous speech praising President Roosevelt. He said the president overrode normal military procedures when he ordered the baby airplane carriers and the atomic bomb.

Hughes said if he did get any of his plane contracts through White House influence, it wasn't President Roosevelt's fault if the planes flopped. The president, he said, was entitled to a few mistakes. Hughes added he was sure his planes would be successful.

The next witness, retired Major General Bennett Meyers, took the stand to deny that he had ever tried to get a job or a large loan from Hughes while the plane contracts were being negotiated.

Railway Caravan, Rally in Capital Set For Travelling Tar Heel Rooters

Fans To Parade Through Capital On Way To Field

By Marty Carmichael

A mammoth pep rally and parade in Washington are slated to supplement the railway caravan this weekend, the University club announced today.

Myrt Sherrard and the cheerleaders predict a huge turnout for the pep rally, to be held at 12 noon on Saturday in the park directly across from the Hamilton hotel, 14th and K streets.

Route of Parade

Chuck Voigt, University club president, has secured a parade permit for the following route: From the park at 14th and K streets, east on K streets to 9th, north on 9th to V street, and east on V street to a special parking area at the stadium. All parade participants are encouraged to adorn their vehicles.

The parade will leave immediately after the rally, in order to reach the stadium on time. "If the students and fans really 'steal the thunder' Saturday morning, the folks at home will know that the Tar Heels are really backed up with that old Carolina spirit and are out to win," Mike Loftis, former White Phantom manager, said last night.

Plane Will Provide One-Day Round Trip To Game Saturday

A special football flight will be made from Chapel Hill to Washington Saturday to provide one-day round trip transportation to the game.

The flight leaves Chapel Hill Airport at 9 o'clock Saturday morning and arrives in Washington at 10:45. Returning, the plane leaves Washington at 7 o'clock and arrives at Raleigh-Durham Airport at 8:45 p.m.

Total round trip fare for this one-day flight is $20. Reservations can be made at the Carolina Motor club office, 111 West Parrish street in Durham. The plane is a DC-3 and there are 28 seats available.

A regular air line flight leaves Raleigh-Durham airport at 11:57 a.m. and arrives in Washington at 1:17 p.m. Reservations must be made at Raleigh-Durham airport.

Alumnus Kay Kyser Warns N.C. Leaders About Good Health

Raleigh, Nov. 12—(UP)—Orchestra leader Kay Kyser warned leaders of North Carolina health associations that private enterprise is getting its last chance to meet the medical needs of the people.

Kyser a University of North Carolina alumnus, has been a leading advocate of the Good Health program from his native Tar Heel state. The program to build new hospitals and medical centers and a four-year medical school was passed last spring by the state legislature.

Kyser has made a recorded address for the first annual North Carolina Education conference in Charlotte, sponsored by the North Carolina Hospital association.

The Tar Heel radio star says that of the medical profession and existing health agencies don't provide an adequate program for medical care, the people will take over and tell them how they want things run.

Kyser says various health agencies, the nurses, and doctors are tangled in what he calls "A kind of guerrilla warfare." He says it is time for them to get together and lay the groundwork for cooperation at the present meeting in Charlotte.

Tickets For Special Will Be Sold Today In YWCA Lobby

Complete with band and cheerleaders, a special train has been scheduled to carry Carolina fans to the Maryland game in Washington, and a railway agent will be on duty in the YMCA today from 8:30 to 2 o'clock to sell tickets.

The caravan will leave Durham tomorrow evening at 9:30, arriving in Washington at 6:45 Saturday morning. The passengers may stay on the train until a later hour if they wish.

Return Sunday

The return trip departs from Washington Saturday night at 11:55, and is scheduled to reach Durham at 8:30 Sunday morning.

The round-trip coach fare, including all of the extra enjoyment of good company and lots of fun, will be 13 dollars, and it will be easy for large "parties" to assemble aboard the train. In addition to the coaches, a limited number of Pullman accomodations will be available. Further information can be secured from the ticket agent at the YMCA, or from Bob Watson at Graham Memorial.

Last year organized caravans accompanied the Tar Heels to Baltimore and Knoxville.

AVC Hears Franz On Discrimination

"Racial discrimination in this country lowers our prestige in the eyes of many countries whose citizens are not of the white race," said Laurent Franz Tuesday evening at the Presbyterian church.

Speaking before the local chapter of the American Veterans committee, Franz, former southern delegate to the Civil Rights congress, emphasized the threat to civil liberties inherent in such acts as the Truman loyalty oath.

The veterans group voted to join the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in sponsoring a campus-wide protest against high prices to be held on November 20. Martha Aiken was appointed to work with SCHW's Aubrey Williams in preparing a program to which all campus organizations will be invited.

Following a report by chairman Jehan Van De Velde it was decided to cosponsor a program on religion in life with the American Friends on December 7.

Wake Forest To Be Seminary

Wake Forest, Nov. 12—(UP)—The campus and buildings of Wake Forest college will be offered to the Southern Baptist convention as a seminary for the southeast.

The North Carolina Baptist conference meetings in Winston-Salem has voted to offer the property for sale because the college will move to Winston-Salem some time in the next few years.

The state convention has ordered a committee headed by Doctor Ralph A. Herring of Winston-Salem to negotiate for the sale of the campus. The group hopes to get one and a half million dollars from the deal.

The director of the Wake Forest enlargement campaign reports that more than one million dollars has been pledged for the campaign. Horace Easom of Shelby says that sum has been pledged by 509 churches.

WNC YACK PICTURES

Bud Reagan, president of the Western North Carolina Club, announced today that there will be a special meeting of the club tonight at 7:30 in Graham Memorial for the express purpose of having pictures made of the group for this year's Yackety Yack.

Plane Hogs Highway, Truck Driver Fined For Resulting Wreck

Jerseyville, Ill., Nov. 12. (UP)—There is still plenty of room in the skies for the growing number of airplanes. But when a plane starts tangling with highway traffic, there is apt to be trouble.

That's what happened near Jerseyville, Ill., when a converted army trainer ran out of fuel and landed in a field. The plane was refueled and its pilot, M. G. Davis was given permission to take off on highway 67. State patrolmen held up traffic on the highway while the plane took off. But at the head of the traffic line was a truck driven by S. R. Swartz of Jacksonville, Ill. Just as the plane roared down the highway, Swartz started up. The plane hit the top of his truck, knocked off several oil drums and broke the tail gate, causing $100 damage. The plane was not damaged and Davis continued on his way.

Today Swartz was fined 60 dollars because of the collision. He said he thought the officer had given a signal to go ahead.

Playmakers Will Hold Public Tryouts For Cast of 'Mikado' Friday, Tuesday

Public tryouts for "The Mikado," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta which is to be the third major production of the Carolina Playmakers, are to be held Friday afternoon between 2:30 and 4:30 o'clock in Memorial Hall and again Tuesday afternoon at the same hours.

"The Mikado," which is sponsored jointly by the Playmakers and the Music department, is scheduled for presentation on January 30 and 31, in memorial hall. Lynn Gault, dramatic art department, and Paul Young, music department, are co-directors of the production.

The tryouts will consist of chances to both sing and read, but the directors pointed out that no one will be expected to sing music from "The Mikado." Students and townspeople are urged to come prepared to sing something of their own choice, and an accompanist will be present to help.

"We are holding early tryouts because work on the music must begin as soon as possible," Gault explained, "although we probably won't rehearse on stage until after 'An Enemy of the People' has closed."

"An Enemy of the People," Henrik Ibsen's drama, is the second major production of the Playmaker season. It is scheduled for December 3, 4, 5, and 6, and rehearsals are now in progress under the direction of Kai Jurgensen.

Flu Shots Offered Starting Tomorrow

One-does flu shots will again be given free to all University students on a voluntary basis starting tomorrow, announced Dr. E. M. Hedgepeth on the University infirmary.

The shots are being given, as last year, to prevent a possible influenza epidemic which would be disastrous in Chapel Hill, due to the limited medical facilities here in proportion to the large student body.

The inoculations will begin tomorrow in Memorial hall, chosen for its central campus location, from 9 o'clock in the morning until 1 o'clock, and will continue from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The schedule calls for continuance Saturday morning, 9 to 12, and next Tuesday, 9 to 1 and 2 to 5 o'clock. Students may report to the Infirmary during regular office hours and receive the shot any time from Friday until December 1.

"There is enough vaccine on hand now to inoculate approximately 80 per cent of the student body," said Dr. Hedgepeth, "and more can be obtained if the demand calls for it.

"Last year about 85 per cent of the students availed themselves of this free service," he continued, "and out of that number we had only three people report any serious reactions."

The vaccine on hand, which cost almost $3,000, is judged about 80 per cent effective, and in addition to the expense, considerable time and trouble has been involved in obtaining the preventative.

When the University provided the shots in late October of last year, they were pioneering in a program which is being carried out in many colleges and universities all over the country this fall.

Dr. Hedgepeth stressed the responsibility each student has not only to himself but to everyone enrolled in the University to prevent a possible flu epidemic by taking the shots which are available at no cost to the individual.

Sixteen Names Still Waiting On Last Winter Housing List

J. E. Wadsworth, University housing director, announced yesterday that on his records of students who entered school here during the winter quarter last year and are still waiting for dormitory rooms there remain only 16 names.

These students may receive assignments as soon as they occur by contacting the housing office in room 22 of New East annex immediately. Unless they report there before next Monday, their $6 room deposits will be refunded and their names cancelled from priority lists so that other students might be accommodated.

The following men should see Wadsworth at once: Holcombe C. Adams; Grady T. Allred, Jr.; Calvin B. Baldwni, Jr.; William C. Brown; Frank S. Bryson, Jr.; Marvin W. Cates; John A. Hanson; Harvey R. Honig; Homer Hudson, Jr.; Rufus A. Hunter, Jr.; Lamar Jones; Charles E. Lassiter; John H. Oliver; James E. Owen; Thomas G. Smothers; and Arvin V. Thornburg.

Delta Sigma Pi Will Hear Dykstra

The Delta Sigma Pi commerce fraternity will hold a professional meeting tonight in room 103, Bingham hall at 8:15. The meeting, originally scheduled for 7:30 o'clock, will be open to all students in the Commerce department as well as members and pledges of Delta Sigma Pi.

Mr. J. E. Dykstra, professor in the Commerce school, will lead a discussion on "Production and Job Possibilities." The meeting will be the first in a series of professional programs planned to continue throughout the year.

Expensive String of Thefts Reported By Dormitory Occupants, Weaver Says

By Paul Rothman

Over $200 in cash and personal property valued even more have been reported stolen on campus, Dean Fred Weaver reported yesterday.

On September 27 one of the occupants of "C" Alexander lost a pair of shoes, green suit, green sweater, pair of gray flannel trousers, three "T" shirts, and a sport coat. The clothing was taken while the men living in the room were attending a football game. That same night of September 27 Talmadge Rose, 218 Lewis dormitory, had $49 stolen from his room while he was taking a shower.

On October 24 thefts centered in the quonset hut area. James Street, hut 10, lost a red wool shirt, and Bob Edwards, hut 9, a brown corduroy jacket. Three nights later the robberies were located in Manley dormitory, where money and football tickets were taken. A wallet containing $70 cash, German club dance tickets, and identification papers was stolen from L. C. Rights, room 212, and two tickets to the Tennessee-Carolina football game were taken from Mead Diggs' dresser drawer, room 406.

Two reports from Everett dormitory show that thefts there occurred while the men were taking showers. On October 31 Mike Plumides, room 301 missed a wallet containing $35, and on November 4 Joe Diab found that $30 had been taken from his wallet.

In Lewis Dormitory Nick Long and John Dunlap, room 214, had $22 taken from their room while they were asleep last Monday night. Nick lost $17 and John $5.

The biggest theft reported occurred during the football game last Saturday. A car belonging to Jesse Castlebury of Durham was broken into, and property belonging to Miss Nell Lee, Smithfield, taken. The articles stolen included a purse valued at $15, an engraved cigarette lighter, and a suitcase containing a yellow suit, black dress, housecoat, and Mr. Castlebury's tuxedo shirt. The suitcase and its contents were estimated to be worth $150.

Bill Smith, manager of dormitories said that while investigating conditions in the dormitories that might lead to loss of property, he found that from 50 to 100 rooms are left unlocked "any afternoon." He strongly urged yesterday that all students lock their doors when they are not in the rooms.

Jutila To Speak This Evening In Hill Hall; Winiewicz Set To Deliver Address On Monday

Polish Ambassador To Be Sponsored By CPU and IRC

By Sally Woodhull

Josef Winiewicz, Polish ambassador to the United States, will speak Monday night at 8 o'clock in Hill hall under the sponsorship of the Carolina Political union and the International Relations club.

Named ambassador to the United States at the end of 1946, Mr. Winiewicz arrived in this country in January, 1947. He is a graduate of the University of Poznan, and has been editor of newspapers in Poland and in Hungary.

In London

For several years he was in London as an expert in problems concerning preparations for the peace conference, and from November, 1945, to December, 1946, he was minister counselor of the Polish embassy in London.

As a member of the Polish delegation to the Peace conference in Paris, in the summer and fall of 1946, Mr. Winiewicz took a leading part in discussions of treaties with former Axis satellite nations.

UN Delegate

He was one of Poland's delegates to the preparatory commission of the United Nations organization in London, and was named a delegate to the first session of the United Nations assembly in London and the second session in New York.

A reception for Mr. Winiewicz will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial immediately following his speech.

Ohio corporal who holds the Congressional Medal of Honor has re-enlisted and has been assigned to recruiting duty. And that is something he should have do difficulty taking in stride.

Demerath Tells Phi Housing Program Is Very Badly Needed

By Gordon Huffines

Stressing the need for a comprehensive housing program that would operate on a national and state level, Dr. N. J. Demerath of the sociology department addressed the Philanthropic assembly Tuesday night as the body debated the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill.

Dr. Demerath, speaking in Phi hall, told members that the annual expenditure of $150,000,000, as proposed by the bill now under consideration by the U. S. Senate, was a small price to pay for the present needs in American housing. He added that the housing problem is not merely a slum problem, but one that faces the middle class.

The sociology professor pointed out that the housing shortage exists either because not enough houses have been built at low enough selling prices or because incomes have not been raised sufficiently. He asserted that private construction companies were unable to meet the one and one quarter million housing units annually provided for by the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

The Phi resolution favoring the bill was passed by a close 10 to 8 vote. Chester Dzum Brunnen, speaker - pro - tem, introducing the bill, stated that the Taft-Ellender-Wagner proposal presented a long range plan for the construction of 15,000,000 city and rural dwelling units in the next 10 years.

No Unemployment In Finland, Says Finnish Minister

By Jim Spence

"There is no unemployment in Finland," said Dr. K. T. Jutila, Finnish minister to the United States, in an interview last night shortly after his arrival in Chapel Hill with his wife and daughter. "There is a shortage of labor, power, and raw materials but the Finnish people are working hard."

Dr. Julia, who will speak at 8 o'clock tonight in Hill hall under the auspices of the International Relations club, is head of the Finnish legation to this country and has served in this post since 1945. He has been in this country several times before, however, once as a Fellow of Rockefeller Foundation studying agricultural economics and marketing at Cornell university.

In an extemporaneous address tonight, Dr. Jutila plans to stress the problems and accomplishments of postwar Finland. "For instance," he says, "We have to pay Russia 300 million dollars reparations under the Paris peace treaty of September, 1946. We have already paid 40 per cent of that amount. We will pay the remainder within the next five years."

Dr. Jutila states that Finland has received 120 million dollars from the United States in the last two years which is being used for industry, agriculture and the import of certain foods. He says that American money is the third factor in the rising production of Finland—listing Finnish forest resources and the people's hard work as the other two factors.

When asked about the reported 99 per cent literacy of the people of Finland, Dr. Jutila said that the figure was very correct. "Since the 16th century," he stated, "the Lutheran church has been advancing education to the people. A couple could not even be married unless they could read and write."

Dr. Jutila has been a member of the Board of Directors of the Bank of Finland since 1938. He was minister of supply in 1944 and a member of parliament in 1945.

He will address the student body at Wake Forest college this morning at 10:30.

He will be introduced before his address here tonight by Elton Edwards, former president of the local International Relations club and a law student here.

SP Schedules Consideration Of Nominations for Today

The Student party will meet at 4:30 this afternoon in Rolan Parker lounge No. 1 to consider nominations for Student Legislature, Student, Men's, and Women's councils, and for junior and freshman class officers, announced SP Chairman Charlie Long yesterday.

Long added that stress would be laid on the class nominations in view of the bad publicity given them in light of student body President Tom Eller's veto of the elections bill. He asked that all interested persons be present at the meeting.

Continuing on the subject of class elections, the SP head stated, "Complete confusion reigns on the issue of freshman class officers for two main reasons. The Legislature, in an attempt to rush the election, failed to properly provide enough time for publicity. The result was that some parties failed to nominate and the freshmen did not know what was going on.

"President Eller very wisely saw fit to veto the entire measure," continued Long, "so that the Legislature could meet and revamp the election bill."

The second reason given by the chairman was that the majority of freshmen on campus are completely ignorant of election procedure here, and could hardly be expected to understand a subject which, in his opinion, many officials in student government do not entirely understand themselves.

"When the news of what was happening became known to the freshmen they took immediate action," declared Long. "Due to a lack of knowledge of procedure they may have made some mistakes, but they did show that they are interested in their own welfare and what is going on in student government.

"Our freshmen are the leaders two years hence," the

'Hey How You' to Be Exchanged Tonight In Ten Different Languages at Meeting

By Bob Rolnik

"Ni how ma! . . . Comment allez-vous! . . . Saludos Amigos! . . ."

Chinese, French, Spanish and seven other versions of Carolina's friendly "Hey you" will be exchanged at 8 o'clock when sixty foreign students get together in Graham Memorial's Roland Parker lounge for a reception and organizational meeting sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

With refreshments to smooth the way, the students from every continent but Antarctica will formulate future plans, give their impressions of America and hear from Foreign Student Advisor Dr. Sturgis Leavitt, head of the Romance Languages department.

"The University has a greater number of foreign students than ever before in its history," stated Dr. Leavitt. "They are eager to learn our language and customs. We should help them feel at home on the campus."

Following through with this purpose, the CCUN's foreign student committee, urged all interested American students to attend tonight's "get-acquainted" meeting. Invitations have been sent to all foreign students listed by general records office.

Dr. Leavitt pointed out that Carolina has pioneered in educational programs for foreign students. In 1941 and 1942, a special "Summer School" was held her from January through March to coincide with South America's summer vacation. The University was the first school in the United States to institute this project.

Unsung Heroes in the Back Room

The history and development of the University Pharmacy school can be traced to its housing. It started out in 1897 occupying only three rooms on the ground floor of New West; soon it expended over the entire ground floor. Following this they moved into a building of their own, Person hall, and in 1925 built a thirty-five room building and called it Howell hall, honoring the founder of the school, Edward Vernon Howell. This is fifty years of progress in the school of Pharmacy — a record of which those associated with the school are rightly proud. They are proud that their enrollment has jumped from 17 men in the first class to this year's enrollment of 223.

But we cannot dispense with the history of the Pharmacy school in just a short paragraph showing how they have outgrown their buildings. To a great extent the men who have been graduated from the school have written a more important history which add to the glory of the school.

The pharmacist is unlike the soda jerk in the front of the drug store who performs for the customers by using all off his antics in mixing his concoctions of goo and sweets. He works in privacy in the back of the store where he uses his four years of training in the compounding of prescriptions. He is a man, like the doctor, who is on call at all times. Disease and sickness have no regard for his posted hours. His hours, in the small-town drug store to which the majority of students in training here will be employed upon graduation, are long and tedious. There is no glory in their work, such is for the soda jerk as the fountain.

These are the men who are being trained in Howell hall. They are learning the virtures of drugs, and how to take their place in the community as a public servant. Over the period of fifty years in the Pharmacy school on campus, hundreds of men have been trained in this creed and many more will be during the years to come.

Shall They Take Up Snakes?

Never very strong on snakes as playthings, we have been wondering off and on just why reptiles have become the vogue in some circles. If there were some sensuous pleasure to be derived from caressing a copperhead or petting a python, it would not be too difficult to get the slant. As it stands, though, snakehandling definitely rates a place on our list of bizarre things to do on rainy nights.

All this came to mind as a result of the trial over in Durham yesterday of the religious leader, who had a penchant for fondling the fangsters. As this is written we have no idea what penalty, if any, the city will impose on the gentleman. And we must confess also that we are not quite sure just what they could do to him. But all this is beside the point. Our investigation of snakehandling has been purely academic.

We remember attending—long, long ago—a service in a little, wooden church on the outskirts of a Carolina city. Inside the regular members of the church were worshipping—with a guitar and a shiny trombone to accompany their hymn. They sang loudly, if not well, and they were certainly sincere, for two elderly women fainted dead away. They had "gone away" during the preacher's outburst about the pain of hellfire. This we interject because we have been told that these are the sort of worship services at which snakes are handled.

And, we might add, ladies like the two who "went away" have been bitten by snakes; children have been bitten, and this is tolerated in many parts of the country under the bill of rights.

There has been much talk as to whether the leaders of the snake-handling cults should be allowed to endanger the young and the infirm by providing poisonous snakes. It seems to us that the whole thing hinges on the sincerity of those participating. And we here and now express ourselves as doubting that they are handling snakes out of religious motives.

In this age of Freud and even heavier men of psychology, few of us are unacquainted with the phrase "death-wish." It means something like this: people, subconsciously, want to come as near as possible to dying—without actually giving up the known for the unknown. We believe that the snake-handlers are letting themselves be carried away by their subconscious. Not that they can help that.

If they really wanted to show their faith, if they wanted to prove that that faith would keep them from danger they would put a gun to their head and pull the trigger. That would be, so to speak, a trial by fire.

Inside Dope: No Parking Meters

By R. Foo Giduz

From inside dope gathered here and their it appears fairly certain that the issue of parking meters in CH is dead—for a time, at least. . . . In a recent Merchants association poll, the businessmen of the town voted against the mechanical mercenaries by a count of 53 to 4, with two merchants abstaining from voting . . . The general assumption is that the aldermen in originally proposing the installation of parking meters on Franklin and Columbia streets, were more interested in the revenue which would eventually be derived therefrom.

Sadie Hawkins day, the festival of the reversal of the sexes, took at least one reverse itself last Friday:—Eager SH spinster Ann Wells got off to an extra-fast start in the grand Human Race . . . Dead set on catching her man, she was way ahead of her cohorts and had already passed by when a guard flagged the women around a short-cut detour by the woods at the fare end of Fetzer field. . . . So, suddenly agile Ann found herself out in the woods, in the middle of some 150 fleeing (?) bachelors whom she was supposed to be chasing!—What happened from there is best left to imagination.

It was a two-way tie and dead heat this week between coeds Rachel Taylor and Joan Lucas for first place in the Creep-of-the-Week contest . . . Judges said according to entry blanks both "talked like Mumbles," and were so similar in several other distinctive ways, that it was impossible to pick one over the other. . . . One slap-happy entrant listed his or her, as the case may be) date for "Geek of the Week" evidently remembering last Sunday's cinema at the Carolina theater! . . .

It's no joke; according to "public promoter" Billy Carmichael (III) the Chapel Hill Touchdown and Extra Point club will soon begin actual functions and have printed membership cards . . . CHTAEPC brings back fond memories of Yank's Marching and Spam club. . . Were any of you other dogfaces ever members?

Looks like more Tar Heels are joining the Washington caravan than any previous trip this year . . . Just want to tell you before you leave to be sure to remember to YELL! . . . And stop in at Carolina headquarters, Hotel Hamilton, 14th and K streets, NW.

No Horse Lovers Wanted

By Dan Sapp

At the council meeting Monday night, Tom Field who is representing the village on the Chapel Hill food conservation committee, reported on the committee's actions. Tom says that posters will soon be up in the village to encourage everyone to join in the food for Europe drive. Tom told us that Claude Shotts talked to the committee during its last meeting and gave some pretty impressive facts on the food situation in Germany. Mr. Shotts who just got back from Germany told the committee of an organization "Meals for Millions" which can give a person a meal for five cents Tom had a copy of a letter from one German family to Mr. Shotts and he said that it was only one of many of its kind. Tom is planning a program with the aid of the council to raise money from the village for one German family each month. At only 5 cents a meal everyone should be able to contribute everal meals to these people.

The housing resolutions came up for some pro-ing and con-ing Monday night. It seems that several of the citizens feel that the resolutions might endanger their position in the village. According to the author of the resolutions they are intended to straighten out any confusion that has arisen as to the assignment of units in the village and should, if anything, make all legal residents more secure.

Bill Goulding reporting for the dog committee says that dogs are not the only pets kept in the village, there are among us cat and even chicken fanciers. Personally we feel that the village should organize immediately and present a solid front in case any horse lovers should appear. According to a recent scientific article, horses have been known to frighten cars into a panic. But to get back to the business at hand. Bill says that so far the dog situation does not appear to be too serious and he hopes to have a peaceful settlement to offer by the next council meeting.

Other business attended to Monday night was the election of Haywood Wyatt as secretary to replace Tom Cole who has served us long and well in that capacity.

More About Freshmen

Editor:

After witnessing the fiasco which took place in Gerrard Hall Monday evening I no longer wonder about the lack of interest in student government and affairs. I have seen a freshman class in high school better organized among themselves and showing more sense than the group of college freshmen at Monday's meeting.

Reasons for the mess created can be laid at the doorsteps of a half dozen groups. First offender seems to be the student legislature. The bill sponsoring Freshman and Junior elections was duly passed and according to my source of information by a unanimous vote After passing it it seems the legislature forgot it. There was almost no notice of the bill made public whatsoever. Members of the University party were not asleep, however, and feeling that they had come in contact with a representative group of freshmen during the past weeks, undertook to do what the freshmen were unable to do for themselves, nominate a slate for class officers. The other political parties yelled foul and finally Tom Eller saw fit, wisely, to veto the bill.

Now that I've mentioned Mr. Eller let me apportion to him his share of the blame. If there is one man on campus who should always be on the ball it is the executive. Certainly he should have reminded the legislature of their obligation to publicize the new bill. He is the man who is supposed to look out for the student body as a whole.

Next to be censured is the University party, who without a doubt tried to pack the meeting to gain a double endorsement for their slate. Evidently those representatives who dreamed up this master political move had overlooked the fact that in an electorial system such as ours more than one set of nominations is quite in order and is in fact welcomed: This act incidentally was not sanctioned by the UP steering committee.

Having censured one party lets get to another, the Student party. The whole affair was their brainchild or at least the work of several of the S P steering commitee members who were present at the meeting. According to my information it seems as though these men promised certain members of the Freshman Friendship Council that the Student party would endorse any slate the Freshman Friendship Counill should care to nominate. I wouldn't say that was dirty politics, would you?

Finally I come to what I believe is the main cause of the trouble, constitutional inadequacy. An obvious solution to preventing the same mess next year would the setting up of a definite date in the constitution for holding elections of Freshman and Junior class officers. This would eliminate all vagueness surrounding the elections. Certainly someone would remember such a provision each year and would see to it that it was well publicized.

Having laid the blame where I believe it belongs I now wish to ask of these censured groups an honest united effort to try to effect an elections policy which will clear the muddle and give the freshman a fair chance to break into student government. No one single election credited to a political party can mean so much to that party that they are willing to endanger the successful procedure of student government such as has been done in the freshman elections of last year and this year.

FFC Non-Political

To the Editor

I wish to clarify the position of the Freshman Friendship Council in reference to the freshman meeting held on November 10 in Gerrard Hall.

The action of the FFC in calling the meeting was motivated by the desire that the freshman class might have a fair opportunity for nominating candidates for their class officers.

The FFC was not prompted to call this meeting for political reasons, and therefore was not opposed to any political party or fraternity represented except to the extent of seeing justice done to the freshman class.

Vera and Max

By Donald McDonald and Raney Stanford

Strictly for laughs we'd like to point out a striking comparison. We contend that the memoirs of Vera Scales at the World Festival of Demcartic Youth this summer which the DTH printed seem a great deal like one incident in Max Shulman's "Barefoot Boy with Cheek," which first appeared as a column in the "Minnesota Daily" years ago.

At a Communist party meeting, Shulman's "Brenda Molotov" makes the following report of her summer vacation. (The parallel we wish to point out here is, of course, strictly a literary one. Note the similarity in style, with the same joyous picture painted for public viewing in the same everybody-loves-everybody tone. Note how many tongues are in how many cheeks.)

BRENDA: "Last summer we had a camp on beautiful Lac Qui Parle in northern Minnesota. We all had a real nice time There were many healthful exercises and games, in addition to which we had many discussion groups and seminars concerning Marxian dialectics. We also had many interpretative dances. Also we had a communal garden in which we grew what we believed to be cabbage. In the evenings we built a camp fire around which we sat and had discussions and sang many songs, such as 'I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Industrialist, You' and 'Let the Bosses Take the Losses.' We also burned many prominent capitalists in effigy."

Here's how Vera describes her summer vacation. (And just as a passing stab, we think she should be writing for Tarnation.)

VERA: "I was determined to go (to the WFDY), even if I had to sell my girdle. . . . Every few miles we passed through a village where the children and old folks lined the sides of the road, yelling 'Nazdar' . . . with a friendliness that gave us a warm feeling inside that many GIs have shared. We couldn't resist them; we found ourselves yelling back, 'Nazdar'. . . . Turning suddenly into the town square we met eight thousand villagers standing, smiling, shouting 'Nazdar.' A brass band played as they made an aisle for us to tables which held great piles of food—platters of pastries and good Slovakian wine. . . . They lit a bonfire as high as a house and served us wonderful Pivo. . . . We rode home, singing in the dark, so full that we did not even taste the fruit and pastry which we held in our arms. . . . The next day delegations from all countries were rounded up in their native costumes and driven around the city in open trucks so the people of Prague could see them . . . In the famous destroyed village of Lidice we worked with international youth brigades leveling ground for a new building with pick-axes and shovels." (SHUMAN: "Strong, bronze bodies marching side by side the people's way, into the sun!")

BRENDA: "Although we all agreed that it was a very nice summer and we had many good times, we were also happy to come back to the University and carry on our work. Thank you."

VERA: "While returning home on the SS Radnik the American delegation had several weeks to reflect and discuss our experiences of the trip. We were agreed that in order to bring about the understanding and friendship . . . American youth should affiliate and work with the WFDY and other international youth groups in order that we may do our share to reap a lasting peace."

Is Vera being Vague?

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Aboard the Friendship Train—While the American people are working hard to save food and send it to Europe, a significant thing is happening behind the scenes with the big whiskey distillers.

They would throw conniption fits if they knew outsiders had found out about it, but they are quietly planning to send twenty field men out to soften up editors and sell them on ending the whiskey holiday. The sales argument will be that President Truman double-crossed the distillers, whereas, if anything, the big distillers did (and are doing) their best to double-cross him.

After attempting to soften up the newspapers, the big four of the distilling business plan to have a greased-lightning bill introduced in Congress to call of the "misguided" Truman's whiskey holiday. If successful, the distillers wil then go back to using 8,500,000 bushels of grain per month—as they did in October—or as much as they can get away with.

This columnist has now obtained a copy of the hitherto confidential propaganda bulletin prepared by Licensed Beverage Industries and the Distilled Spirits Institute. It makes interesting—and to anyone who doesn't know what's what—highly convincing reading. But it carefully conceals the fact that just before the whiskey holiday, distillers were using grain at the rate of 100,000,000 bushels a year. Incidentally, this amount —100,000,000 bushels—is just the amount we need to make up the deficit of grain to Europs.

One interesting statement made in the distillers' confidential propaganda report is the amazing contention that:

"Processing grain by beverage distillers leaves 100 per cent of the feeding value for beef, dairy cattle, swine and poultry."

This is equivalent to saying that the distillers have learned the secret of making something from nothing —which they have not. When they make whiskey they use up entirely the most important single constitutent of the grain — the starch or carbohydrate content. This represents about 65 per cent of the grain.

Actually, the only materials left over after distillation are the unfermentable constituents of the original grain—ash, fiber and protein. While this is fed to cattle and does help the protein content of cattle feed, it represents only 30 per cent of the feed's value—not 100 per cent as contended by the distillers.

This is only a small part of the whiskey boys' mumbo-jumbo prepared to make the unsuspecting public think that the whiskey holiday should be revoked. Actually, the distillers have more than three years' supply of whiskey on hand, and they are more prosperous than ever.

It will be interesting to see if the public falls for their cleverly concealed gall.

Disaster In Headlines

CHICAGO (UP)—Death and disaster made the big headlines of the last 10 years.

Grant M. Hyde, director of the University of Wisconsin school of journalism, has made a survey of the big news stories, excluding those dealing with World War II.

Hyde picked 33 stories as the top news of the decade from 1937-47 for the Encyclopedia Britannica's new four-volume history of the 10 years.

When the editors of the book looked at his choice they found that individual or mass deaths accounted for 14 of the top 33 and that another, the Bikini bomb tests, were as important for their disastrous implications as for their scientific interest.

They classified six as dealing with political or economic subjects and four each with labor, adventure, and court trials.

They added a letter to Hyde's year-by-year choices to designate the categorv in which the stories had been placed: (A) for adventure; (D) for death and disaster; (C) for court trials; (L) for labor, and (P) for politics and economics.

Speaking of what's in a name, let's make sure that the U. N. "Little Assembly" doesn't get that way because of what it is expected to acomplish.

IRON-MAN STUNT

WHEN ALL the noise ceases and the crowds have poured out of Griffith Stadium on Saturday afternoon one group will have heard the game on the radio as they finish up their practice prepreations for the big IC4A event come Monday.

Coach Dale Ranson's harriers, that is half of them, will depart from the quiet of Chapel Hill, Friday and head for the big city. Headquarters for the northward trip will be the Hotel Paramount. Seven men will make up the varsity team with Bob Black going north to compete in the IC4A freshmen three mile event. The varsity will be made up of Jack Milne, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Mark Burnham, Halstead Holden, Chuck Herty and Julian Mackenzie. All but Herty and Holden have competed over the rugged five mile plus course in the spacious Van Cortlandt Park just above the great White Way.

There will be some 250 competitors take the mark in one long line awaiting to break at the starter gun. These men will be representing Colleges and Universities from the North, North East, Middle West and the South. Three southern conference teams are members of the association but only Carolina will be making a bid for harrier honors. Duke and Maryland the others that belong will be battling a strong Carolina reserve team for loop Honors at Raleigh, at the same time on the same day. It was a hard choice to make as to which title to shoot for, but Coach Dale Ranson decided that a trip to New Yory would be good experience and also would build up team spirit by letting an additional eight men compete in big time competition.

Carolina cannot be counted out of their defense of the conference title as some mighty fine runners will be wearing the light blue .Jimmy Miller will defend the individual crown which he captured at Chapel Hill last season in record time for the four-mile course in 20:00.3. He will be ably supported by such lads as John Bristow, Jim Hunt, Dick Hollander, Dan Martin, Walt Francis, Basil Wood and such fine freshmen prospects as Frank Hooper, Dick Carr and Dave Hiatt and many other boys who are still battling for positions in this meet. Maryland with a perfect season so far will be the favorites and Jim Kehoe, who is the Terrapin quad has a fine group of runners. Duke will be in the runner-up spot, pre-meet ratings with five other schools, Davidson, South Carolina, Carolina, State College and VPI making up the rest of the field.

The individual honors should prove a dual between Bob Wisner of Maryland, Miller, Frank Magill of VPI and Bob Strickland of Duke. Magill incidentally, is the older brother of Tar Heel star Sam and both boys are mighty fine competitors and grand boys too.

So here's best wishes to the Carolina harrier squad as they make their bid for honors in three meets on the same day.

ON THE LIGHTER SIDE

A NEW SPORT that would give many a man that has thought there was no place for him in college football is gaining impetus under the guidance of the University Monogram club. Bill Pritchard, Tar Heel football end, has contacted all of the northern schools that are engaging in 150-pound football for information pertaining to the game. So far a very encouraging letter has been received from Mr. Kane, director of athletics at Cornell university, who wrote that every year over 100 men report for the sport. The expense is kept to a minimum by the hand down system of uniforms from the varsity and jayvee. The only new items that are purchased for the lightweights are Helments and shoes.

Unofficial sources would lead one to believe that the Athletic Council here at Carolina would be in favor of the sport if a suitable schedule could be obtained without too many long trips. It would be a wonderful project to give those football enthusiasts that cannot play in the rough schedule that the Tar Heels engage in because of their light weight. If the Monogramers could make schools like Duke, Wake Forest, Virginia, State, South Carolina and a couple of other southern institutions it would be an invaluable addition to the intercollegiate agenda.

It would be a worthwhile venture for all students and a great game to be watched by spectators. Let's hope that we can find enough interested schools that would like to engage in such a program.

JAYVEE CHATTER

The undefeated and unheralded jayvee football team will engage in its third fotball game when they clash with the Cavalier juniors in Charlottesville on Friday afternoon. It will also be their try for contest number three win. Besides playing fall guy for the varsity every week to prepare their big brothers for the coming engagement, they find time to click off as a winning combination. Coach Crowell Little has done a magnificent coaching job and some of his best showed when his boys got a chance against the Wolfpack in the second half of the game last Saturday. Names such as Gus Purcell, Dick Bunting, Dick Featherof, Irv Holdash and a host of others from this years squad will in time take their place as valuable cogs in Snavely's machine. The rest will have contributed their services to the school's cause and to aid a varsity football team make a great showing.

Gridders Drill Against Terp T; Jayvees Off To Virginia Today

Tar Babies Play In Charlottesville

By 1:05 this afternoon, the bulk of the Tar Baby squad will be en route for Charlottesville, Va. for their game with the University of Virginia Squires tomorrow afternoon.

All but 11 of the jayvees will be with the group that will board the bus at Woollen gym. The remainder will stay in Chapel Hill until after varsity football practice so that they may continue to run Maryland plays against the Tar Heels. They will leave by train immediately after today's scrimmage is completed.

The Tar Babies will be in good shape for this contest. Fullback Marion Parker injured his knee in Tuesday's scrimmage and will be out for the Virginia clash, but Jack Brasington has recovered from the hand injury that forced him to the sidelines and will probably see a lot of action at tailback for the Blue and White.

Advance Guard

The 28-man advance guard of the Tar Babies is scheduled to reach Charlottesville by about five in the afternoon and they will be promptly escorted to the Hotel Albemarle, their headquarters for the contest. The contingent travelling by train will arrive at 10 o'clock that evening.

The Tar Babies will be attempting to continue their twin string of victories and shutouts which has now reached two and also to make up for the 6-6 tie they had with Virginia last season. The local jayvees scored early in the game, but the Blue and Gold rallied to even up the count.

Gus Purcell will be seeing service with the varsity this week so the starting backfield for Carolina will probably have Dick Bunting at tailback, Bob Koontz at fullback, Merl Norcross at wingback, and Joe Gurtis at blocking back.

Fred Bauer and John Stoioff will start at ends, Roscoe Hansen and Pete Rywak at tackles, Dick Featheroff and Bob Quigly at guards, and Joe Neikirk at center.

Table Tennis Tourney Scheduled For Tonight

Graham Memorial's third table tennis tournament of the quarter will be staged tonight starting at 7:30 o'clock in the main lounge of the student union.

Both previous tourneys were won by Ray Morris, Tar Heel tennis star, and he will rate as favorite in tonight's competition.

CAROLINA'S HEAD mentor in 1942 will be doing the master-minding for the opposition this week end when Jim Tatum, above, sends his T-minded Terps against Coach Carl Snavely's single-wing Tar Heels.

Coed Swimmers Compete Today

Final plans were completed yesterday for the coed swimming meet scheduled for 4 o'clock this afternoon with eight teams entering the competition.

Four sororities and the same number of dormitories have filed entries in the meet and a close race is expected for team honors. Outfits entered are Alderman, Carr, Kenan, Smith, Chi Omega, Alpha Gam, Tri Delt, and Pi Phi.

Enough contestants are slated to be in the meet to warrant holding two heats in each event, according to Co-Chairman Bill Henderson and Randy Hudson. Since there will be two heats, winners will be judged by their times. Officials will be members of the Splash club and graduate assistants in the women's physical education department.

Events in the meet are 20-yard freestyle, 20-yard backstroke, 20-yard breaststroke, 40-yard free style, 60-yard medley, and 160-yard freestyle relay.

Team Works Hard Despite Wet Field

The weather man gave Coach Carl Snavely a break yesterday, coming through with an afternoon of sunshine that enabled the Tar Heel mentor to give his charges a full session of hard work in order to get them ready for their game with the Maryland Terps in Washington on Saturday.

Navy field was still wet and muddy from Tuesday's downpour of rain, but the Carolina squad still got in plenty of work on both offensive and defensive measures to be used against Maryland. The team was divided into two groups, one of which faced a Jayvee version of the Maryland T-formation while the other concentrated on advancing the ball over the soggy turf.

The Carolina - Maryland game will be broadcast by Station WDUK of Durham, it was announced yesterday. . . .

Injured Players

There was bad news from the standpoint of injuries. Co-Captain George Sparger, who operates at center, is out with a leg injury sustained in Tuesday's practice. Hosea Rodgers, the speedy fullback who missed the State game last week, also has been slow in recovering from his knee injury.

Rodgers was on hand in light togs yesterday, but the Tar Heel trainers aren't so confident he will be ready to go against the Terps, as was originally hoped.

The practices this week also have been distrubed by an epidemic of colds. With a cessation of the rainy weather in prospect, however, these illnesses should be cured by game time.

Depart Tomorrow

The Tar Heels will hold drills here today and tomorrow, with the team leaving tomorrow evening by train for Washington. A large contingent of Carolina fans will follow the team to Washington for the game. Most of the Carolinians will travel by train. A parade and pep rally

Allenmen's Four-Game Streak Snapped; Dave Boak Tallies Lone Carolina Goal

By Bill Kellam

Durham, Nov. 12—Carolina's four-game soccer winning streak came to an abrupt end this afternoon on the wind-swept Duke freshman field for here before a microscopic crowd the Tar Heels were unable to halt a scond half Duke cameback and dropped a raggedly played contest to the Blue Devil booters, 3-1.

The Carolina eleven was definitely not up for yesterday's tilt for there was little teamwork evident among the booters and most of their shots aimed in the general direction of the goal were easily blocked by the stellar Duke goal tender.

Even though the Allenmen did play one of their worst games of the season yesterday they battled the victorious Blue Devils to a 1-1 tie at the half and it took goals by the Honduran Hot-shots, Chico Craniotis and Rodrigo Rigionis, to sew up the game for the Gerardmen.

Tar Heel Standouts

Dave Boak sent the Tar Heels into their short-lived 1-0 lead early in the second period when he headed a corner kick from Jesse Greenbaum into the goal for the lone Carolina score. The play of Boak, shaggy-headed Gus Johnston. Al Williams, and the two Tar Heel fullbacks, were the only bright spots in an otherwise very dark afternoon for the Allenmen.

Rigioni knotted the score shortly before the end of the period when he booted a penalty kick high into the corner of the net from about ten yards out. Goalie Al Williams just missed blocking the kick.

Both Williams and Duke goalie Harry Thorman, a hardy lad from Switzerland, turned in brilliant performances. Williams blocked well over a dozen Duke kicks and his long return boots broke up the Duke drives time after time.

The Blue Devils came driving back after the intermission and went into the lead permanently when Craniotis took a pass from Rigionis and booted the ball home. Rigionis ended the day's scoring by heading in a corner kick from D'Alonzo midway in the fourth period.

Scott Steps Up Cage Workouts

Coach Tom Scott whipped his cage squad through another stiff drill yesterday as the 1947-48 edition of the Tar Heel basketball team began to take shape.

The cagers spent part of the afternoon developing an offensive against the zone defense such as Richmond used against the locals in the Conference tournament last winter. The varsity squad got a taste of what to expect from this type of offense and of how to combat such a problem.

The rest of the day was devoted to standard floor drills with hard running and three-on-two play being the items mainly stressed.

The squad seemed to be rounding into physical shape for the December 3 opener, but mid-season shooting and passing accuracy are still in the making.

Coach Scott looked well pleased with the progress the team is making and will continue drills on a five-day-a-week basis.

On the accompanying court, Coach Jim "Pappy" Hamilton gave his jayvee squad a similar workout with the same fundamentals being stressed. Several freshmen were among those showing up well in the course of the afternoon.

Practice begins daily at four.

BERLIN (UP) — Americans sent 1,500,000 gift parcels to Germans during August, the American military government announced.

The total is exculsive of parcels sent under organized relief programs such as CARE (Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe) and CRALOG (Council of Relief Agencies licensed to operate in Germany), the announcement said.

Most of the packages contained food, with clothing and medical supplies making up the rest.

British railroads now are conducting tests with radio-controlled switching which are expected to result in big advances in railroad techniques.

Di Senate Inducts 12, Debates House Probes

After the initiation of 12 new members, the Dialectic Senate meeting Wednesday night was highlighted by a hotly contested floor debate on a bill to dissolve the present House un-American Activities committee which recently dragged supposed Hollywood communists into the press spotlight.

Introduced Bill

Senator Noah Edwards introduced a bill which would give the jurisdiction now enjoyed by the House committee to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in hopes that hereafter disloyalty hearings might be conducted in a manner more becoming to the United States government. Argument arose on the floor as to whether investigation of un-American movements should be made public to expose and publicize those who are guilty or whether such probes should be handled more secretly by the F.B.I. for the sake of those accused and ridiculed without just cause.

Amendment Made

Four amendments to the bill of the evening were presented and debated in a floor discussion that lasted until 11:15 o'clock. Three of the proposals were defeated, and only Al Lowenstein's suggestion to condemn the Hollywood hearing in particular was inserted into the bill. By the time of the actual vote, a shortage of a quorum froced the Di to count its decision as unofficial. Those Senators and visitors present until the end of the session, however, did vote in favor of killing the House un-American Activities committee entirely.

New Members

The new members inducted in the earlier stages of the meeting brought the roll of the Di Senate to a total of 54. The night's initiates and the 11 other new Di Senators of this term are: Richard L. Bowen; John L. Brockmann; John L. Dameron; Harrel L. Darden; Osborne Fields; Charlie Gibson; G. Frank Huffman: Hurshell H. Keener: Edie Knight; Don R. Latta: Reynaldo Lesaca; Randall A. McLeod; Patsy McNutt; W. Jerry Pettigrew; Herbert O. Phillips; Herbert W. Price; Edwin M. Robins; Chick Slack: John Van Hecke; D. Dortch Warriner; M. Jerry Weiss; Ann Wells; and Charles L. Wilder.

DR. K. T. JUTILA, Finnish minister to the United States, spoke on campus last night under the auspices of the International Relations club. Dr. Jutila's speech could not be summarized by press-time but will appear in a review tomorrow.

M.E. Cline to Head Local ROTC for Year

Marshall E. Cline, a senior from Newton, N. C., will head the the local NROTC unit as company commander for the current year according to an announcement made yesterday by Captain D. W. Loomis, U. S. N., university professor of naval science.

Other company officers will be John G. Hines of Greenville, S. C. who will fill the combined post of company sub-commander and adjutant and Leslie McLeod of Wauchula, Fla. who will serve as company mustering petty officer.

They will be assisted by the officers of the four platoons of the company. The names of these men which were also announced yesterday by Captain Loomis are: first platoon, Aldeen Hall, commander, Allen Pollock, mustering petty officer, and Sam Summerlin, platoon guide; second platoon, Floyd Hudson, commander, John T Pitman, mustering petty officer, and Theodore R. Wall, platoon guide; third platoon, Jesse C. Johnson, commander, Cran Henderson, mustering petty officer, and James C. Wilson, platoon guide; fourth platoon, Joseph K. Albertson, commander, Harvey Jettson, mustering petty officer, and Allen Wyley, platoon guide.

'Gin Lane' Tickets Are Selling Rapidly Says Production Head

"Gin Lane," Sound and Fury musical comedy scheduled for production November 19, 20, and 21, is "rapidly becoming a sell-out" according to Douglas Gardner, S & F president.

"The best seats are going fast," he continued," although there are still plenty left for all three of the nights."

"Gin Lane," the most ambitious Sound and Fury undertaking since before the war, has an original book written by Pete Strader and Ken Gammage, the inimitable authors of the now-famous "Blip!" skit, and music by Frank Matthews.

The three-act melodrama is set in the period of the Roaring Twenties, and features numerous bootleggers, flappers, rumrunners, and gangsters of the type that flourished in that era.

Additional songs popular in the twenties and a singing and dancing chorus round out an evening's entertainment.

COFFEE HOUR CANCELLED

The Tri Delts will not have their regular Sunday night coffee hour this week because of the Maryland-Carolina game. However, the house will be open the following Sunday night.

Aldermen Approve Vote on Bond Issue For Sewer System

Warned that complete breakdown of Chapel Hill's sewerage disposal might occur at any time due to present overloading, the city's board of aldermen have voted to call a special bond issue election for financing municipal improvement "as soon as possible."

At a meeting Wednesday evening with representatives of the University, the aldermen approved plans for a bond issue which would provide $225,000 to match a similar University grant for new sewerage disposal facilities and $50,000 for road repairs and equipment.

Dangerous Overflow

District Health Officer O. David Garvin and Town Manager Gilbert Ray told the aldermen that the sewer system had already undergone dangerous overflows and might break down "at any time." The present system was designed in 1931 to serve 7,500 people and has been operating at a 100 per cent overload for several years.

University representatives at the meeting included Business Manager Claude Teague, Supervisor of Operations J. S. Bennett, and A. H. Shepard, assistant to the business manager.

The state legislature last spring included in the University's biennial budget $225,000 as the state's share in enlarging the Chapel Hill sewerage system, which serves both University and city. This, with the town contribution from the proposed bond issue, would be used to erect a new disposal plant on the Mason farm and provide connecting sewer lines.

The proposed plant is designed to serve 15,000, approximately the present population of Chapel Hill.

The additional $50,000 included in the bond issue proposed by the aldermen would be used to seal-coat present paved streets, provide paving for present dirt streets, and purchase equipment.

Mailman Hater

Goshen, Ind. (UP) — A truck driver who doesn't like mailmen was hunted by sheriff's deputies today.

Sheriff Luther Yoder said a man driving a flat bed truck took off on a zig-zag course down a six-mile road between Dunlop and Goshen and knocked down 37 mail boxes, every one along the road.

ADDRESSING the Ohio Society of New York, Sen. Robert Taft (R-O), said he believes that the United States should provide aid to Europe in reasonable amounts. Taft, an announced candidate for next year's Republican presidential nomination, told the society, meeting in New York, that the rest of the world should be rationed before this country is called upon to ration itself in behalf of a program of foreign aid. Special Broadcast Of Game to Be Made

Frustrated radio dialers during the Tar Heel-Florida football fracas need have no fear of a repeat performance this week-end, for through the special efforts of the University's Communication Center staff members, the Maryland game will be broadcast to this area by WDUK, Durham, on 1310 kilocycles.

"We have made arrangements to pick up the play-by-play accounts from station WWDC in Washington," Earl Wynn, director of the Center explained." I contacted Herman Duncan, manager of the Durham station, and was told they would cancel their commercial commitments to carry the game, if all technical details could be arranged."

Only Broadcast

Wynn said all these arrangements have been made and the Durham station, the only one in the state to carry the game, will come in from Griffith Stadium at 1:55 o'clck Saturday afternoon, and continue the special program until the final play. The commercial announcements by the sponsor in Washington will be replaced by items of public interest by WDUK.

YWCA to Sponsor Two Needy Drives For World, Vicinity

This coming month the YWCA will conduct two worthy drives on campus, one to prevent world-wide starvation and the other to brighten Thanksgiving for needy Chapel Hill families.

First, next week the YWCA will open a center for the collection of clothing to be sent to poverty ravished European families. This project, scheduled to last throughout the year, is to enable all students to contribute their discarded or unused garments for foreign needs. From January 25 to 31, however, a community and campus drive will be sponsored to receive additional contributions.

In the meantime, the winter season has arrived in Europe; and starving, homeless families need clothing badly now. The Y center will serve to furnish those clothes in as little time as possible before the January drive. All students possessing wearable garments of any size are requested to deposit them in the center provided by the "Y" building.

Second, a co-ed "get-together" is set for Monday, November 24, at 5 o'clock. At this time all Y committees will meet jointly in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. The program, carrying out the Thanksgiving theme, will make it possible for guests to donate articles of food to be expended to needy families in Chapel Hill during the Thanksgiving season. This food may include canned goods or any non-perishable fruit.

One basket of this food, for example, will be distributed to a local colored family of eight children. This particular family is very hard-pressed and the children will be grateful for the cheer which the Y basket will afford. The youngest child, a little girl of two and a half, was used in the recent baby-sitting demonstration; and it was through her that the girls attending were able to learn the principles of baby care. In addition, it is hoped that enough baskets will be filled for distribution among many other families.

This program is headed by Sally Lee with Betsy Green and Ferne Hughes in charge of music.

Fetzer, Voigt Ask For Safe Driving To, From Grid Game

Coach Bob Fetzer and Chuck Voigt, president of the University club, have asked that all students be especially careful both driving to and from Washington today and in the city during the parade from the Hamilton hotel to Griffith stadium in order to avoid any accidents which would mar the fun and high spirits the football caravan involves.

Another point stressed is no drinking on the way to or from the game. "The old adage about whiskey and gasoline not mixing may be hackneyed, but it is still truer than most students realize," Voigt stated.

"Everyone knows that he can party to his heart's content once he reaches the Capital. Friday night and Saturday should be enough for anyone to get a good hangover," Voigt continued. "The point is that drinking on the open road is an invitation to suicide."

"Nobody likes to be preached to, particularly Carolina students," the University club head concluded, "but anyone going to college should be adult enough to know how to be sensible."

Student Legislature Amends, Tables Redistricting Measure

Former Air Force procurement officer, Maj. Gen. Bennett Meyers, retired, rests his head in his hands while listening to Howard Hughes testify before the Senate committee, in Washington. Using a hearing device to pick up questions, Hughes testifies that Meyers tried to borrow $200,000 from him while government plane contracts were under negotiation. The plane builder also said that Pan-American Airways tried to pressure the Air Force into buying 19 Republic XF-12 photo-planes so that the cost of transport versions of the craft would be sharply lowered.

By Jim Spence

The Student Legislature in its first special session of the year last night voted to amend Charlie Long's campus redistricting bill reducing the number of districts from nine to three. The entire bill was then tabled on a motion by Long himself.

The amendment to the redistricting bill was introduced by Tag Montague and provided for Victory Village as the only area to be set up as a district other than the residents on each side of Columbia street. The bill was further amended to specify that number of representatives from each of the three districts would not be determined until next spring when a census could be taken.

Publications Board

The Publications board was appropriated $550 to cover an anticipated deficit, in a bill which came to the floor from the finance committee. Privileges of the floor were extended to Ed Joyner, member of the Board, who stated that all the publication expenses had been cut to a minimum and that the appropriation would be a necessity if the Yackety Yack was properly published. Charlie Long, speaker pro-tempore of the Legislature, expressed a belief that the Yack editors had intentionally overrun their budget and that their operating conditions had not changed as had the Tar Heel's. The bill was passed by a vote of 14 to 5.

A third bill was read by Speaker Jack Folger proposing that the University student body become a member of the National Student association and accept the responsibility of paying $241 in required dues. After a short discussion, the measure was tabled on a motion by Charlie Long.

Dormitory Rooms

A bill was unanimously passed to insure returning students of their dormitory rooms. The resolution stated that many students through negligence or for other reasons had failed to give proper notification to the housing officials and had returned in the fall to find themselves without a place to stay.

Five executive appointments to the Legislature were confirmed. The new members are Mary Locke Craig, Jim Taylor, John Miles, Margaret Goodman, and Kennedy Gammage.

At the opening of the session Speaker Jack Folger read the reprimand of the Student Legislature by the Men's Honor council.

Bill Mackie Nominated by SP As Student Council Candidate

Bill Mackie, law school student and Chapel Hill native, was nominated by the Student Party yesterday as candidate for Student Council in a late afternoon session which also named candidates for freshman class offices.

Freshman Class

In the announcement of Mackie's candidacy, Chairman Charlie Long also disclosed the nomination of Fred Thompson, Rocky Mount, for the position of freshman class president.

Other candidates nominated for freshman offices were: vice-president, Bill Swain, of Randleman; secretary, Tom Kerr, of Pasadena, Calif.; treasurer, David Orr, of Grove Hill, Ala.; and social chairman, Max Lindsey, of Draper.

Mackie, Student Council candidate, has served in the legislature for two years. He was chairman of the finance committee, authored the first student budget last spring, and is former critic of the Di Senate.

Dormitory Representatives

The following nominations for dormitory representatives to Student Legislature were named Don Robertson, Asheville; Wilbur McFarland, Brevard; Bill Jernigan, Louisburg; Floyd Jones, Morehead City; Charlie Long, Thomasville; Russel Baldwin, Leland; Charles Howe, Clearwater, Fla.; Hurchell Keener, Hudson; Herbert Alexander, Waterbury, Conn.; Basil Sherrill, Gastonia; and John Gaskin, Albemarle.

Candidates for town representatives to the Legislature were nominated as follows: John Zucker, Hamlet; Joe Byrd, Morganton; Gran Childress, Chapel Hill; and Randy McLeod, Maxton, for one year's term. Six-months term candidates nominated were George Drew, Live Oak, Fla., and John Van Hecke, Chapel Hill.

Other Nominations

The nominating session began at 4:30 yesterday in Roland Parker Lounge No. 3. When the meeting adjourned at 6:45, nomination of candidates for three town men for Legislature; five dormitory women for Legislature; one town woman for Legislature; one man, one woman, and one graduate student for Student Council had not been made. Candiates for these positions, together with nominees for Men's and Women's Councils and all junior class offices, will be nominated at a Student Party session Monday night, Long said.

Preregistration

Preregistration began yesterday in the General College although the schools of Arts and Sciences, Commerce, and Pharmacy and the Graduate school will not start registration until Monday.

Dean C. P. Spruill, Jr., asked that all General College students report promptly at their advisor's office at the time for which they made appointments last week in Memorial hall. However, those who have not yet signed the appointment sheet should not crowd their advisor's office now. Instead, for later consultation about their "green forms" these students may still make a date at the information desk in South building.

Preregistration in all schools will end on December 3. Anyone who has not completed his "green from" and submitted it to the Registration hall in the Venable annex by that time must register with new students on Saturday, January 3, 1948.

Taylor Clarifies Writings of Shakespeare In New Book of Essays on His Favorite Bard

Popularizing Shakespeare by tossing out some of the dramatic setting and poetry and leaving his ideas, which are sometimes lost by the average reader in the maze of words, is what Dr. George Coffin Taylor, popular professor of the Bard in the University of North Carolina for many years, has done in a new book, "Essays on Shakespeare," soon to be released by G. P. Putnam Sons, publishers.

"It is surprising that no one before has thought of clarifying and unifying the dramatist's thought by the simple means of taking it out of its dramatic setting, freeing it from the distracting element of its poetry, and arranging it in logical and highly readable form," the publishers point out.

Dr. Taylor has shown, in his, or rather Shakespeare's, essays, that the thoughts uttered by the dramatist's many characters "group themselves into coherent arguments, consistently developed and superbly phrased."

What Dr. Taylor has done is bring together all these essay ideas found in Bard's writings, and, without altering the text, print his poetry as prose. In this clear, simple form, it seems that Shakespeare had miraculously up-to-date ideas.

Dr. George Coffin Taylor

Many scholars, without questioning Shakespeare's eminence as poet and dramatist, have denied that he was a great thinker. But with Dr. Taylor's simplyified version of this thought processes, the Bard's arguments boil down to essays on subjects which correspond in many ways to those about which Bacon wrote.

According to the publishers, the result is a body of comment on men and things which is "exhilarating and delighting. . . . In brief, whether one is born with an infinite variety of intellectual interests or with a single track mind, he will find in these essays exactly what he is thinking about said as he, himself, would like to say it."

They also point out that for those who fancy they know their Shakespeare well enough to enter "Information Please," "they may have the time of their lives, as the quotations in the volume are drawn from every neck of Shakespeare's words. Kieran, Adams, Tunney, spotters as they are, will for once be back on their heels and hanging on the ropes."

Union to Sponsor Bingo, Piano Concert, Square Dance, Sing over Busy Weekend

Student union activities go on an upswing this weekend, with a square dance, bingo session, piano concert, and all-campus sing booked on Graham Memorial schedule for successive evenings.

Arnold Wilson will be in charge of this evening's square dance, to be held in the Roland Parker lounges of the student union beginning at 8:30. Due to the extra number of stags who invariably turn out for the affair, union recreational director Nancy Tucker urged that coeds come with or without dates. Music will be recorded and round dancing will be held later in the evening.

Saturday evening's bingo session in the main lounge is again under the direction of John Van Hecke. Cash prizes are awarded for each game, made by the pooling of the two cent charge for every card. Also in the main lounge, tomorrow afternoon the Carolina-Maryland football clash will be aired from 2-5 o'clock. Latest football scores are to be posted in the lounge immediately after the broadcast, and running statistics will be kept on a blackboard during the game.

Sharing Sunday evening's activities are the special Arthur Loesser concert in Hill hall at 8:30 and the Sunday sing, to be held in Gerrard hall beginning at 8 o'clock. "Music by Candlelight," the recorded Sunday evening Graham Memorial chamber music concert, will not be heard this week, in deference to Mr. Loesser's concert.

Chess and checker enthusiasts are urged to sign up in the YMCA office immediately for tournaments in these games to be held next week. It was announced that a chess tourney will be run off in Graham Memorial next Wednesday night, under the direction of Frank Strong. Thursday evening a smiliar contest in checkers is to be held.

We've Got to Prevent an Epidemic

Respiratory infections, especially colds and influenza, are most common between November and April. They are highly infectious and easily communicated to others.

Influenza and colds can only be evaded by avoiding large groups of people, and staying away from all crowded or poorly ventilated places. With curently crowded classrooms it is impossible to avoid coming into close contact with persons — persons, some of whom probably have colds or influenza.

The University Health service will be giving influenza serum today, tomorrow and Monday on a voluntary basis. The student owes it not only to himself to get innoculated against the infection which is prevalent at this time of the year, but also to his fellow students. Although the shot is not an absolute insurance against influenza, it is about 80 per cent effective. And is also quite effective in preventing the common cold.

Each student should do all in his power to avoid the epidemic of influenza which medical authorities predicted would occur either in 1946 of 1947. It did not occur here last year, and ,therefore, we must accept the medical authorities prediction and take every precaution against such an epidemic in Chapel Hill this year.

Only one dose of the vaccine is necessary. Dr. E. M. Hedgpeth, of the University infirmary staff states that the three-day period in which innoculations will be given was so arranged in order that those students who do not attend the game this weekend will be able to receive their innoculation today or tomorrow. The remainder of the students may be given serum Monday.

Concerning the serum, Dr. Hedgpeth stated, "A fairly large percentage of the people who take the vacine will get some local reaction in the way of a sore arm and a slight amount of redness at the site of the injection, and some will also have general muscular aching and maybe even slight fever from 24 to 48 hours. The records show that approximately 5 per cent of the people who take it run fever from two to three days. The majority, however, will suffer only a very slight amount of inconvenience." He specifically stressed that everyone will be over any ill efects long before the Duke game next week-end.

But the inconvenience that the innoculations cause is quite trivial as compared with an epidemic which could break out in Chapel Hill. The Health officials hate to even think of the idea of such a thing. For they "do not know what we would do."

The shots are free. Each student owes it to himself and to the others on campus to be innoculated. It has been obtained only through considerable trouble and expense.

The possibility of controling the disease is directly in proportion to the number who receive the serum.

Take Your Time and See the Game

Today the migration from Chapel Hill to Washington will begin. If your are going by automobile, drive carefully and consider the other man on the road as well as those riding with you. There is little doubt but that a new record will be set in the number of students who attend an out-of-town game fro mthis campus.

The six hundred mile round-trip to Washington will be filled with a constant stream of vehicles over the week-end and danger will patrol the entire course. The trip up is usually domineered by a desire to get there as soon as possible to start the week-end of events. Everyone on the return trip will probably be fatigued from the festivities of the occasion. These two things make drivers take chances which they would not do under ordinary circumstances. Take a little more time and care and be sure that you arrive at your destination without any mishap.

Thus far this year we have been very fortunate in that no serious accidents have occurred to UNC students. Last year several students, none of whom were from this student body, were killed enroute to games. Our student body did suffer the loss of several students last year in automobile accidents.

Just remerber to drive safely, take your time. Washington will still be there — Congress doesn't start until Monday.

Lock Those Rooms

Culprits are around. They have entered rooms in practically every mens dormitory on campus and have left heavily ladened.

We hate to think that the articles which have been missing were stolen by one of our number. At first it was easy to lay the guilt on visitors since each of the thefts occurred on the weekends during which we had football games here. But we have almost been forced to discard this theory since theft is reported regularly during the week as well as weekends.

University officials and police are working on the cases now in an effort to capture the thief or thieves involved. Until they are put away for safe keeping, we urge you to lock your room each time you leave. Lock it even if you are going out just long enough to take a quick shower and then dash back.

Decalcomaniacs

News item: University students will be required by the administration to prominently display UNC stickers on their automobile windshields. Some students have complained that the stickers (officially called "decalcomanias") are inconveniently large.

Our comment:

Decalcomanias,
May the furies hound them!
Our cars are wrecked;
We can't see around them. — B. S.

Just Here

A Second to Hold the Door

By Larry Berry

Courtesy is the name of a habit which tries to manifest itself into our everyday life. Webster tries to pin it down with the following: (a) A favor performed with politeness. (b) An expression of respect.

In Chapel Hill there are a number of very heavy swinging doors, and not the kind behind which is told the tale of a fool and his gold. Most of us usually manage to encounter at least one of these swinging doors on the rebound every day. We probably also let the door free after we fight our way through in order that someone else may have his or her face smashed. These doors are very heavy and will be left to swing on their hinges most of the winter. A second to hold the door for the next person will not take too much time. Some of these times when we are rushing to a building with plenty of books and a cup of cofee; maybe instead of being made to feel like a mashed hunk of humanity, we can catch the edge of the door before it starts to swing.

Courtesy extends over the entrie campus, to the "whiz" kids in the snappy convertibles, to the people on the bicycles, to the thought for the persons in the room under you, to the person trying to sleep while you are trying to sing, and anywhere else you wish to use it.

I merely tried to point out in the first paragraph an example of the abuse of the word. Now for a few words in our favor. We have been very courteous to our visitors. While some of them have not acted the parts of ladies and gentlemen, we seem to have behaved ourselves up to now. Of course this applies especially to the football visitors, although other visitors have received the courtesy of a mature student body also . . .

Naturally we are glad to hear of the revived State Student Legislature. At present we do not know of the arrangements concerning the reserving of the Capitol. In the past we have seen the bad effects of one school having control of this. This seems to us to be a function and responsibility of a council composed of the members from the various schools. If the State Student Legislature makes a mistake, let the blame fall on the group and not one school. State College has been worried about the racial problem in the Assembly for at least the past three years. They believe this reflects upon them as the host to the meeting. This is natural, and can only be aleviated by the setting up of a strong and representative council . . .

Sadie Hawkin's Day did not seem to go over in the true spirit this year. Everyone who participated had a fine time and good relaxation. This is one of the few things our school claims some originality in performance. Are we becoming too sophisticated to have a good time by old-fashioned slapstick? The meaning of the day is lost unless the schobl as a whole goes "Dogpatch." In past years the student body has done so, and had a very good time . . .

The importance of the UNC Student Legislature seems to be greatly played down in comparison with the function of the Body on our campus. Of course when any other branch of Student Government can push its mistakes on the Legislature, this is done. One of the reasons for this is that a great many of our Legislators do not take their duties seriously. A large part of the Legislature just answer the roll, and then either leave the building or else catch up on their lost sleep. A few members actually set the policy of our legislative body.

We would like to see printed in the Tar Heel on the front page the Legislature absences, preferably with a wide black border since insofar as their duties are concerned these members are dead. The officers of our Legislature continually run into the difficulty of a quorum being present. Under our system the Legislature has the responsibility of making our laws. Our Student Fees are delegated by the Legislature, and we all want to see this money spent in the best possible manner. Maybe it's time we began to get behind these elected lawmakers with suggestions and criticisms to help the student body!

Editor:

Being the beleaguered author of "A Summer Interlude" in the last issue of the Carolina Magazine, I dutifully offer this "detailed translation" requested by one James W. Anderson, Jr. in Tuesday's Tar Heel.

First of all, Jim, it takes place in a Niagara Falls' bedroom, or maybe it was on Park Avenue, or perhaps a pile of leaves in Pinetop, N. C., anyway, its in a bedroom and there's a member of both sexes involved. I think they were humans, but I'm not sure. They might have been anteaters, armadillos, or Dodo birds, but the important point is that there are two sexes, and they are not the same, and they are in a bedroom. Get it?

Now the guy in the story looks like he might be a maniac killer escaped from an insane asylum. Well he is, and not only that, but he is also the renegade leader of a savage band of marauding Indian killers from the Black Hills of South Dakota who flit around from one bank robbery to the next in supersonic jet jobs equipped with stationary elevating rocket tubes. As a sideline, he and his gang sell black market babies for adoption.

The girl, she's lying on the bed in a negligee, is a sweet young thing about thirteen years old. She has a pale wan face and no fingernails. Her just being released from prison on a narcotics charge might explain this. That rusty spot on her left hip was caused by her chastity belt which she has just taken off. Following me, Jim?

The guy walks over to the bed. He put out his hand—and he lights a cigarette. He puts out his other hand—and he takes a slug of whiskey. This builds up suspense, Jim, and helps fill space, both of which are very important when writing for the public. He puts out both hands (this is it, BOTH hands!)—and then the door is battered into splinters. In rush four detachments from the FBI, Dick Tracy, Buffalo Bill, a squadron or two of B-29's, and oh yes, the Chairman of the Boston Vice Committee with his blood testing apparatus. But is it all over with our boy? Not on your life (nor in my story).

In through the windows pour four-thousand howling redskin braves, come to rescue their leader from the foul clutches of virtue and goodness. The next ten pages contain four-and-one-half-million rounds of small bore ammunition: twelve-thousand bows with arrows to match; several small atomic explosions; and six-hundred-and ninety - eight - and - one - half blood transfusions. This last figure is explained by an oversight which interrupted Dick Tracy's transfusion, and left him bleeding to death under the bed, but don't worry, he'll pull through, and you'll see him again next week.

Of course, law and order prevail. The villians are dragged off to the dungeon, and the maiden is rescued without a stain (except that rust mark).

Now what could be simpler or happier?

Usurpation?

Editor:

In the Friday issue of The Daily Tar Heel it was announced that no further letters about local Communist issue would be printed . . . "unless further developments warrant."

It seems to me that for the editors to take it upon themselves to decide for the students just which issues are to be discussed is a high-handed usurpation of a supposedly free press. Students undoubtedly disagree as to the importance of the issue being censored. However, I am sure that there is a general agreement that the principle of thought control, once accepted, will have extremely dangerous consequences to the democratic philosophy. Civil liberties are seldom eclipsed at one stroke. They are progressively corroded by this kind of nibbling.

The aim of a truly free press should be to reflect accurately the ideas and interest of the readers it serves.

Bill Evans

(Editor's Note: Immediately following Scales' statement that he is head of the local Communist party we were flooded with a deluge of letters. We printed many of them at the expense of letters received pertaining to other subject matter. Also we devoted space regularly used by our columnists to letters related to Scales. This Changing World

Students Must Defend Right To Criticize

By Bill Robertson

In his book, A History of Freedom of Teaching in American Schools published in 1941, Professor Beale mentions that the post-World War I period "left in its wake disillusionment that led many young teachers either to cynicism or to revolt against the old order and determination to improve it."

This statement is even more true of education after World War II. Concretely, here at the University economics professors who certainly should know better, tell their students that the job of an economist is to collect the facts about the economic situation—and not to propose remedies. It is as though the chemistry professors were to tell their students that their main job is to collect chemicals but not to propose the application of their knowledge for practical purposes! A position which would look ridiculous in the natural sciences is accepted as "logical" in the social sciences. In this case, it does not take deep thought to see that "economic interests" affect the political positions of economics professors.

On the other hand, there is a small but growing group of professors and students on this campus who believe that the operation of the trusts and monopolies by and for the people represents the next stage in the developmnt of society-just as capitalism succeeded feudalism. Unfortunately, the political and economic pressure against the honest expression of such views is terrific.

The only way to fight the repression of ideas at the University is for the students to bring them out into the open and to organize, when necessary, to see to it that education does not become a brush with which the truth about our society is painted over. We should defend the right of criticism at a time when there is so much to criticize.

SENATE CHARGES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14 —(UP)—Senate investigators have accused Major General Bennett Meyers of deliberately concealing his wartime stock interest in aviation companies. They confronted the retired Air Force procurement officer with an anonymous letter charging he made between one and two-million dollars out of the war.

Campus Forum

Varied Speakers Wanted

By Pete Gerns

Letting "constructive criticism" lie in peace for a while, we're going to take up the question on what type speaker students would like to see presented to the campus. Of the 100 students polled, 47 want to be informed on politico - economic trends, 5 like to see speakers representing a conservative standpoint, 15 are interested in world government, 27 in veterans affairs exclusively, and 2 want to hear an informative talk on Socialism, by someone "who's got the dope."

John Van Hecke says: "I would like to see speakers in Chapel Hill who represent many different types of political, social, and economic views, and who are known as authorities in their various fields. Too many times speakers give a fine lecture written by someone else, but are unable to answer many of the questions from the floor intelligently.

Bill Wood believes that campus speakers should be men "who are today shaping our government and economy. Entirely too much emphasis is being placed on foreign ministers, etc, in that too often we miss the real opportunities that could be offered by speakers versed in our problems, which, after all, are the problems that we can understand more readily and which are of greater importance to us."

"Current affairs", thinks T. E. Holden, "should be presented by speakers like John Kennedy, who was excellent; they have their fingers on the pulse of national affairs".

J. Anson Byrd feels that more speakers on world government should be brought to the campus. To him this is the most important problem facing us today.

Other opinions were as follows:

"Someone who can get the straight dope on veterans' affairs and report it; I'd like to know where the $75 subsistence bill is now". Doc Clark. "Let's have a mature businessman, a conservative speaker for a change from these exhibitionists." Charles Hodson and Paul Mullinax. "I'd like to hear great men of literature, travel and science". William Webb.

General quality of speeches was considered average by all students questioned. Jack Folger summed it up in a few words: "A speaker should have enough humor in his delivery to hold students' attention and still give an intelligent talk".

Question for next Tuesday: "What would you like to see most of in the 'Yackety Yack'?" Please deposit your answers by Sunday night in the "Campus Forum" box in Graham Memoriel.

PREMATURE BOWL TALK

THREE MORE BIG Saturdays still remain on the 1947 collegiate grid card, but there's already lots of talk floating around on the subject of two of football's biggest bugaboos—post-season battles and all-star teams. And as far as Carolina is concerned, all bowl talk is premature—three weeks premature to be exact.

For, as everyone knows, Carolina's only chance to go "blowing" come January 1, 1948, lies in three straight victories over three dangerous opponents. And that looms as a hardy task for any grid squad. Two of the opposing teams—Maryland and Virginia—have been defeated only once in seven contests, and as for the twice-beaten third outfit—Duke—'nuff said.

As far as Coach Carl Snavely is concerned, should Carolina gain victories in its next two outings, it will still be too early to begin sorting bowl invitations. "All three of our opponents coming up will be rough and that's our only worry right now," was the definite word coming from the office in 217 Woollen gym. "If we can get through these three all right, we might start thinking about a bowl bid."

THREE TOUGH OPPONENTS aren't the only thing to be considered on the question of a post-season clash. Another item to be thought of is where might the Tar Heels be playing when the New Year rolls around, should they come through the next three contests in fine fashion. Some bowls obviously don't want Carolina and Carolina doesn't particularly desire several other bowls. Feelers have reached Chapel Hill from numerous bowl committees all the way from Jacksonville to El Paso, but only one bowl that might invite a team with two setbacks interests the Tar Heels to any extent. That one is the Orange Bowl, in Miami. And here, as might be expected in any instance when one has two strikes against him, a third strike would mean "Out!" In the cold, that is.

DIRE THINGS TO COME

UP IN COLLEGE PARK, Maryland, dire things are being planned for Carolina come Saturday, but one wouldn't believe it to read the papers. For according to the press reports being issued from the Terrapin headquarters, Head Coach Jim Tatum isn't too happy about his team's chances for victory. "The boys are not aggressive, they're lackadaisical," moans the ex-Tar Heel mentor who was also a brilliant tackle for Carolina back in the early 1930's. He continues by asserting—and here comes the crowning statement of all—"If we don't pep up, North Carolina will lick us by 10 touchdowns."

But that isn't what we hear from other sources. According to Jake Wade, Carolina sports publicity chief and currently a one-man advance guard for the Tar Heels, the Maryland team and campus is keyed up for the approaching grid week-end more than ever before in the school's history. "Don't be fooled by any statements that they aren't ready up here," Jake told Coach Snavely via the telephone yesterday. "They're ready and willing but how able remains to be seen."

PICKING UP THE LOOSE ENDS

TENNIS: Local racquet fans can expect the professional tennis tour featuring Jack Kramer, who inked a contract Wednesday, and pro champ Bobby Riggs to hit Woollen gym sometime in mid-January while the basketball team is on the road up North. It will be Riggs' second Chapel Hill appearance—he and Don Budge toured through this way in May, 1946.

FOOTBALL: Charlie Justice continues to lead the nation in punting with an average of 44.2 for 45 kicks. . . . Hosea Rodgers has the top rushing average in the state, gaining a net of 223 yards on 26 attempts for a phenomenal 8.6 average . . . and Art Weiner is among the top ten in the nation in yardage gained on pass-snaring.

POETRY: With seven more days still left in which to write a poem answering Virginia's "Ode to the Tar Heels," eight entries have already been received in the sports office.

PREDICTIONS: Today's the day for our little guessing game to show again, and there ought to be a great difference in the results for the week. Leader Bill Lamkin was the lone member of the board to pick conservatively and Morty Schaap stayed in the deep end throughout most of the predicting. As for the scores of the Carolina game, we just want to show that we have confidence in our team.

WOMEN IN SPORTS: The crowd at a high school game in Texas tonight will witness something new for football. At least it's new to us. One of the teams plans to use a girl at right tackle on defense. It's not a stunt either, for according to her coach "she's a solid 123 pounds and a very good tackler."

Booters In High Point Today; JV Gridders At Virginia

Allenmen to Play Without Johnson

Another regular will be missing from the Carolina starting lineup this afternoon in High Point when they tangle with High Point College's shinbusters on the Panther soccer field at 3 o'clock.

Wayne Johnson suffered a badly sprained ankle in the last period of the Duke game on Wednesday and will subsequently be sidelined until the Virginia tilt next Friday. The Tar Heels will be kicking for their fifth victory of the season as against three defeats.

Veteran forward Al Singer will sit out his second game in succession this afternoon because of the bad leg that has bothered him all week. Singer's smooth and steady ball handling was sorely missed by the Carolina offense in the Duke contest.

Two more regulars may also be on the bench this afternoon in the furniture city, but not because of injuries, The spirited performances in practice sessions this week of scrappy little Dave Ferebe and chunky Hank Pfautz have won the praises of Coach Marvin Allen and the duo may possibly replace Joe Bach and Jesse Greenbaun at the inside right and inside left positions, respectively. Hank Pallulat will replace Johnson at center forward.

PFAUTZ DEPRIVED

Incidentally, Pfautz was deprived of a chance to get his name in print after the Roanoke game for in that contest he scored a forth period goal that was incorrectly awarded to Herb Faught.

Coach Allen was far from confident that his charges would emerge from today's fray with a victory. "If we don't play any better today than we did Wednesday, we'll surely get beaten today," he commented yester-

Tar Heels Take Final Workout; Entrain for Washington Tonight

Team Puts Final Polish of Attack; Injuries May Hamper Chances of Win

Carolina's Tar Heels ran through a light workout at Navy field yesterday to conclude their pre-game practices for their battle with Maryland in Washington on Saturday afternoon.

The Tar Heels will embark from Chapel Hill this evening on the first lap of their journey to the nation's capital. The trip will be an overnight ride by train. Carolina won't get a look at Griffith stadium until game time.

In the drill here yesterday there was no rough scrimmage. Emphasis was placed on such items as extra point kicking and straightening out individual blocking assignments in the plays.

The Tar Heels were able to get in but one really thorough practice this week, with that coming on Wednesday afternoon. A deluge of rain curtailed activities on Tuesday, although the squad trudged around that afternoon in the mud of Kenan stadium.

Several members of the team have been bothered by colds this week, but all of these ailments should be cured by Saturday. There are a couple of big losses to the team however. Center George Sparger probably will miss the game because of a leg injury. Hosea Rodgers also is a doubtful performer because of his leg injury which was sustained in the Tennessee game and which has failed to respond to treatment.

Interest in the game is reported to be high in Washington, and Maryland supporters are inclined to disagree with the experts who have set Carolina up as a two touchdown favorite. The current Maryland team is the best that that school has had in recent years, and with Jim Tatum at the coaching helm, the Old Liner fans may be justified in their confidence in their team.

Carolina will be seeking its sixth win of the season and fourth in a row. Maryland is out for its seventh victory.

The game will be the first time a Snavely-coached team has met a club coached by Tatum. The Maryland mentor, a Carolina grad himself, played tackle for Coach Snavely on the 1934 Tar Heel team. So the game will pit the master against the pupil.

NROTC Riflers To Battle Penn By Mail Today

The NROTC sharpshooters from Carolina will stage their second match of the season today with the naval trainees from the University of Pennsylvania. The match will be conducted by mail.

The local sailors dropped the first contest of their 25-meet schedule to the Illinois Tech marksmen by a score of 1583 to 1746. This was on a basis of 2,000 as a perfect score.

The personnel of the Tar Heel team coached by Marine T-S Herschel L. Baker, varies from match to match, but James Corey, Jr., Jimmy Smith, Tom Peterson, Floyd Hudson, and Hank Schoolfield comprise the team at present.

Captain Lawrence W. Smith, Jr., USMC, in charge of the rifle team announced that the future admirals would stage meets with the NROTC units in such schools as Rice, Yale, Ohio State, Auburn, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Tulane and Michigan.

Chi Psi Wins Another In Tag Grid Playoffs

Chi Psi's intramural tag football team advanced further toward the campus championship of the fraternity leagues yesterday afternoon as they defeated Phi Delt by a 13-6 score. Yesterday's playoff victory was the second in a row for the Chi Psi gridders who need but one more decision to clinch the crown. A win in Monday's clash with Zeta Psi would provide that margin.

In the other fraternity playoff battle, the Zetes pushed over a lone touchdown and toppled SAE, 6-0. Braxton Schell scored for the winners. Also in tag football play, the Grads came out victorious over the Mud Dobbers, 34-0, in finishing up the last half of a protested game.

Vinnie DiLorenzo heaved an aerial to Tom Clayton for Chi Psi's first score in their important tilt, and another pass from Vic Seixas to Joe Proctor accounted for the other tally. True-toed Buck Hardee, who has kicked 14

Chuck Taylor, Cage Expert, Here Monday

Chuck Taylor, eminent basketball authority and a former member of the famed New York Celtics, will conduct a cage clinic at Woollen Gym next Monday evening at eight o'clock, Coach Tom Scott anounced yesterday.

Taylor, a representative of the Converse Shoe company and Wilson Sporting Goods, will present a demonstration lecture that should be of interest to all basketball fans and followers.

All basketball players in this area have been invited to attend the session, and anyone else who would like to come, is cordially invited to do so, Coach Scott added

Taylor is a nationally known basketball coach, critic, and selector of leading cage players. His annual choice of an All-American squad is always highly regarded in cage circles.

Warning

The Athletic department announced that next Tuesday is the last day that students will be able to secure coupons for the Duke game.

Vernon Crook, spokesman for the department, said yesterday that there will still a very large number of students who had not gotten their coupons, and that if all wished to do so, he did not think they could all be handled at the gym on the day of the deadline.

Students are therefore asked to pick up their coupons today or tomorrow if possible.

Pi Phis Capture Coed Swim Meet Nosing Chi O's

The Pi Phis captured first place in the coed swimming meet yesterday afternoon before a crowd of approximately 150, edging out Chi Omega by six points, 47-41. Tri Delt came in for third place honors with 29 tallies.

The victors took three first places out of six events, with the Chi O's who took an early lead in the meet, capturing the other three firsts. The Tri Delts copped four seconds to provide the majority of their points.

Randy Hudson, Goodie Nufer, Bill Lloyd, Kit Finney, Donna Barnett, Donnie McDonald, Sally Kee and Teeny Royal paced the Pi Phis for two individual wins and a relay victory.

Helen Bouldin was the individual meet leader, capturing the 20-yard back stroke and the 20-yard free style swimming under the colors of Chi Omega. Teammate K. D. Durham took the other Chi Omega first, splashing to victory in the 40-yard free style. Dudley Hill, Liz Leggett, Jean Ramsdale, Faith Adams and Pat Hole led the Tri Delts to their third place spot.

Tar Babies Seeking Third Win of Year

Charlottesville, Va.-Nov 13—The University of North Carolina Tar Babies arrived here this afternoon for their game with the University of Virginia jayvee footballers tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and were hustled off to the Hotel Albemarle, their command post for the invasion.

The Carolinians bring with them a perfect record of two victories and two shutouts in as many games, and will attempt to extend their string against the Squires. They also hope to better the 6-6 tie that resulted when the two elevens collided last season.

Not all the Tar Heels were present when the bus pulled into Charlottesville. Eleven members of the squad will join the team later in the evening. They are still working with the varsity by running Maryland plays in preparation for the game in Washington Saturday, and they will entrain for the Old Dominion immediately after the scrimmage.

Little is known of the Virginians except that they will run from the T formation. Coach Crowell Little will attempt to counteract this by running some of the Maryland T plays that the boys have been practicing all week.

John Stoiff and Fred Bauer will probably guard the Carolina flanks when the opening whistle blows at Scott Field and they will have tackles Pete Rywak and Roscoe Hansen, guards Bob Quigley and Dick Fetherolf, and center Joe Neikirk up front to keep them company.

Dick Bunting, tailback, Bob Koontz, fullback, Merl Norcross, wingback, and Joe Gurtis, blocking back round out the starting eleven.

Marion Parker, Bob Koontz, and Pete Rywak share scoring honors for the Tar Babies this season with each having registered one touchdown. Bill Slate is runnerup with one conversion to his credit.

Train To Maryland

Plenty of space is yet available on the Maryland train to Maryland football game, leaving from Durham at 9:30 tonight. Round trip fare on the six-car special is $13, coach fare, and tickets may be purchased up until time of departure.

Graham Memorial travel agent Robert M. Watson said that response for the special has been excellent thus far. "In addition to having an enjoyable trip up to Washington, with all of their friends," said Watson, "those riding on the special train will save hotel bills for two nights, since they will be traveling during that time."

W-S Carolina Club Slates Next Dance

The Winston-Salem Carolina Club will hold its first dance of this school year in the Twin City on the ballroom roof of the Robert E. Lee hotel November 26 with music by Jimmy Marshall and his Carolinians.

On the same day that the Thanksgiving holidays begin here, this dance is to be held from 9 until 1 o'clock. Bob Haire, newly elected president of the group to which all students from Winston-Salem enrolled in the University automatically belong, announced yesterday that the dance will be held on the Robert E. Lee hotel roof this time for better accommodation of such large crowds as the ones at the highly successful dances last Christmas and Easter.

This affair, Haire stated, will be the Carolina club's first informal dance, its first Thanksgiving social, and the first Winston-Salem stand for Jimmy Marshall and his popular campus band. Sending flowers is unnecessary and discouraged in accordance with University ruling.

In addition to Haire this organization's other new officers are Jack Burke, vice-president, and Marty Hinkle, secretary-treasurer. Bids for the Thanksgiving dance will be available this week end and all next week from any of these executivies or from the following dance committeemen: Henry Welfare, David Robinson, Lenue James, Charlie Gibson, Ed Brennegar, and Jim Paschall.

Warren Makes Presidency Bid

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 14—(UP)—Governor Earl Warren of California has tossed his hat into the ring as a candidate for the 1948 Republican Presidential nomination.

Warren says he will be a candidate but will not seek delegates in states other than California. He says he will allow a delegation which has pledged to support him to be entered in the California primary next year.

The California governor adds that he will not do any campaigning outside of his state before the Republican convention meets next June.

Warren made his statements after meeting with the chairman and vice chairman of the California Republican committee. The committee had adopted a resolution urging Warren to become a candidate and to allow his name to be placed in the nomination.

day afternoon.

Although Allen was not too pleased with the performances turned in by his forwards in Wednesday's game, he had nothing but praise for Gus Johnston, Frank Nelson, Porter VanZandt and Al Williams.

Johnston's spirit and head work paced what there was of a Carolina offense throughout the Duke game while the two Tar Heel fullbacks, Nelson and VanZandt, teamed to break up most of Duke's many scoring drives. Williams was hampered somewhat by the slippery turf while performing his goal tending chores, but he still turned in another of his usual first rate jobs.

What you-konw-who said to the Governor of South Carolina was obviously "Yes."

Donor of University Building To Make Official Presentation; Astronomy Instruments on Way

Ceremony Launches Morehead Building

By Raney Stanford

Cornerstone-laying ceremony for the new Morehead Planetarium and Art Gallery will be conducted on the morning of Saturday, November 29, Chancellor Robert House announced yesterday.

John Motley Morehead, University alumnus and donor of the million-dollar plant, will be on hand to make the official presentation of his gift to the school. Acceptance of the building will be a three-way affair, with Chancellor House acting for the University; Tom Eller, president of the student body acting in behalf of the students, and a yet-unnamed delegate from the school's board of trustees.

Starts Friday

The prominent industrialist and benefactor, and a group of friends and associates, will arrive on the campus Friday, Chancellor House said, to sightsee over the University lay-out, making a side-trip to Duke University, that afternoon. The day's events will be concluded by a banquet in the Carolina Inn.

The building-site ceremonies will get underway at 11 o'clock the next morning, and are to be broadcast throughout the state. Chancellor House will preside. Invocation will be delivered by Dr. Howard E. Rondthaler of Salem College. Various dignitaries, expected to be present and participating include Governor of North Carolina Gregg Cherry; Governor of Virginia William M. Tuck; Colgate Darden, president of the University of Virginia; and Edward R. Stettinius, member of the board of governors of Virginia's university and former Secretary of State. Music for the occasion will be provided by the University band.

Following the presentation and stone-laying, the party will attend the Carolina - Virginia football game as guests of the university. A buffet supper at the Franklin street home of Dr. Frank Graham will conclude the two-day affair.

Two Modern Works To Featute Concert By Pianist Loesser

Highlight of tonight's concert by the distinguished pianist Arthur Loesser will be two sonatas by the modern composers Hisatada Otaka and Arthur Shepherd. The program will be held at 8:30 in Hill hall, under the joint sponsorship of the music department and Graham Memorial.

"During the last few months I have become quite interested in playing certain modern sonatas," Loesser write recently, "And I would like to play two compositions by hte present day composers Otaka and Shepherd."

The conductor of the Nippon Philharmonic, Japan's leading symphonic organization," he continued, "Otaka has incorporated certain elements of the older Japanese scale lines and instrumental allusions into Western patterns."

Arthur Shepherd, a native of Idaho, has lived in Cleveland for the last 25 years, and is chief of the music division of Western Reserve university. Of Shepherd's work, Loesser stated: ". . . It reveals alertness to all contemporary musical trends, yet fails to indulge in any wholesale repudiation of the past."

Arriving in Chapel Hill this morning, Loesser will stay over until tomorrow afternoon.

Machine On Ship Sent from Sweden

The elaborate optical instruments to be installed in the new Morehead building are on the way to the University and should arrive here next month, Claude E. Teague, business manager of the school, said yesterday.

"We have been notified the Zeiss Planetarium and other affiliated projection equipment sailed from Sweden November 8. The transporting craft is scheduled to dock at Baltimore, and the instruments will be shipped by rail or truck to Chapel Hill," Teague explained.

The intricate projection machine obtained for the University by the donor of the building, John M. Morehead, and corresponds to the famous Hayden instrument in New York City. It is used to present a mathematically-correct picture of the heavenly bodies on the inside of an overhead hemisphere.

According to information received by Teague, the carefully-packed instruments will arrive in 14 huge shipping crates, weighing from five to seven thousand pounds and occupying a space of 750 cubic feet. Along with the Planetarium itself is a "sciopticon," an optical device used to demonstrate individual star groups.

Teague said that John L. Morehead, a cousin of the donor and a member of the Morehead Foundation, was on the campus this week to advise as to the handling of the instruments, along with making arrange-

Winn Announces Regulations for Class Elections

A six-step procedure for the nomination and inclusion on the ballot of candidates for class offices was made public last night by Al Winn, student chairman of the board of elections.

They were formulated, according to Winn, because of the recent confusion concerning these processes, and in order to clarify them for the benefit of all freshmen and new men.

The six regulations:

1. Nominations may be made by the political parties and by typewritten petitions, bearing the signatures of the nominee and 25 qualified constituents for the following positions in the freshman and junior classes: President, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and social chairman.

Deadline Tuesday

2. All political party nominations must be signed by the party chairman and the party publicity manager.

3. Typewritten nominations must be presented to the chairman of the board of elections, No. 8 Steele, before midnight on Tuesday, November 18th. No nominations will be accepted after that time.

4. A mass meeting of all candidates, party chairmen, and party publicity managers will be held in Gerrard hall at 7:00 on the evening of November 19th. Candidates failing to attend said meeting will be consequently disqualified unless they promptly comply with Article XII, section II of the election laws.

Expense Accounts

5. Typewritten individual and party expense accounts must be submitted to Al Winn, No. 8 Steele, before 6:00 on the evening of Monday, November 24th. Samples, if feasible, of party and individual paid publicity and vendor's bills must be included with the submitted expense accounts. Candidates failing to comply with this rule will be disqualified.

6. Voting for the freshman and junior class officers will take place in Gerard hall on Tuesday, the 25th of November between the hours of 1 and 6 in the afternoon. ID cards must be presented to obtain ballots.

Winn pointed out that signatures appearing on these petitions must be those of persons officially registered in the same class as the person nominated.

Grail Ticket Resale

Tickets for the Vaughn Monroe Dance and concert are still available and may be purchased at the Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday, November 18 from 8:00 until either 4:00 o'clock or the supply is exhausted.

Although the tickets specify formal dress, Jack Fitch, delegate of the Grail, announced that the evening's dress would be semi-formal — coats and ties for the men, evening clothes for the women.

Carolina and Maryland Battle Today In Loop Contest Set for Washington

By Bob Goldwater

Washington, Nov. 14—For the second time this season, the Tar Heels of North Carolina tangle with the charges of a former Carolina mentor when they seek to continue their winning ways of the past four games against Jim Tatum's Maryland eleven here tomorrow in Griffith stadium.

A near-capacity crowd of 35,000 is expected to be on hand in the double-decked baseball park when the two teams square off at 2 o'clock. The Southern conference scrap will be aired back to North Carolina over station WDUK, Durham.

The battle against a Tatum-tutored team will provide a homey touch for a quartet of Tar Heels due to see a lot of action tomorrow. All four —Walt Pupa, John Tandy, and Co-Captains George Sparger and Joe Wright—played under Tatum as freshmen in 1941 and moved up to the varsity along with the coach in 1942.

Beat Ray Wolf's Team

The Tar Heels are hoping to meet with the success against Tatum's team that they enjoyed against Florida, coached by Ray Wolf, who also tutored for a number of years at the North Carolina institution. Carolina beat Wolf's charges this year by a 35-7 count.

There's another angle to tomorrow's story—the old story of teacher opposing pupil. Tatum served as an assistant to Coach Carl Snavely at Cornell between 1936 and 1938. Tatum also played under Snavely when the Gray Fox was coaching in Chapel Hill in 1934.

Opinions of the majority of the nation's sports writers indicate that the Tar Heels are due to come out on top in their scrap with the Old Liner team. Both have good records, the Tar Heels have won five of seven games and Maryland has copped six of seven.

Must Stop Gambino

Biggest problem facing the North Carolinians is that of stopping the high-stepping Lou Gambino, Maryland's balding scatback who is one of the nation's top scorers. Gambino raced to three touchdowns in last week's 32-0 win over Duquesne in Pittsburgh.

Vic Turyn, the quarterback in Tatum's intricate split T-formation, also will cause the Tar Heels supporters some uneasy moments with his passing. Fullback Harry Bonk is the other big man in the Terp backfield.

Carolina will counter with a trio of speed merchants who

Student - Civic UN Assembly Set for Statesville by CCUN

By John Stump

Plans for an educational and civic conference on the United Nations to be held at Statesville on the 20th and 21st of this month were discussed at a meeting of the state staff of the Collegiate council for the United Nations held here yesterday.

The proposed conference which will be sponsored jointly by the CCUN and the state district of Lions' International will be held for the dual purpose of making the people of North Carolina more aware of the existence, aims, and accomplishments of the United Nations and the extension of the CCUN to include chapters on all of the state's campuses, according to Lincoln H. S. Kan, state director of the CCUN.

Twenty-Four Schools

Twenty-four colleges and 102 Lions' chapters will have representatives at the conference, for which Mitchell college and the Statesville Lions club will be hosts. Registration for the conclave, which will open to all interested observers, will be at the Vance Hotel in Statesville.

A banquet on the 20th with Oscar Ivanissevich, the Argentine ambassador to this country, as the principal speaker will officially open the two day meeting. It will be immediately followed by a ball honoring the various students, faculty representatives, and the ambassador.

The second day of the conference will be largely devoted to group discussions and a plenary session to be held on the campus of Mitchell college. The conference will be closed with a banquet at the Statesville country club on Saturday. Yugoslavian ambassador Sava N. Kosanovic, who was present at the CCUN Salute to the UN held here in October, will deliver the main address.

Invitations to attend the conferences have been extended to the presidents of the student bodies, college presidents, and newspaper editors of the state's schools. Carolina student body president, Tom Eller, has already indicated that he will attend.

Payment of Debts Best Practice, Says Finland's Minister

Paying back debts is a sound business practice from the international as well as the individual standpoint according to Dr. K. T. Jutila, Finnish minister to the United States who spoke under the auspices of the International Relations club in Hill hall Thursday evening.

Jutila, who was introduced to his audience by Elton Edwards, former president of the IRC, pointed out that Finland was the only country to pay its World War I debt to this country and had already returned 44 per cent of the reparations which Russia required of them after the invasion of 1941.

Aid Appreciated

"We still feel it is our duty to pay back our war debts even though our country had very little to say in the making of the peace treaty," he said in thanking America for the 110 million dollar loan granted to his country two year ago. He also expressed his country's appreciation of the aid extended them by the American Red Cross and the American Friends Service committee. "Your country has done so much to help us get on our feet again," he said.

The minister stated that although the Russians took more than 10 per cent of Finland's territory including the city of Petsamo, its only ice-free port, the economic and social condition of the country is better than in most Central European countries. He amplified this statement by pointing out that "we are working so hard to rebuild that we don't have time to be influenced by anyone."

Jutila is not a stranger to this country, having studied at Cornell university as a fellow of

Price Control Seen in Doubt

Washington, Nov. 14. (UP)—Hopes for quick Congressional action against inflation grew dimmer tonight.

Sen. Robert Taft has expressed doubt that the special session will be able to handle all the legislation the President is expected to request for breaking the price spiral. The Ohio Republican predicted that Truman will ask for renewed controls on exports, rents and consumer credits. He said Congress also will have to decide whether to slap on controls in commodity exchanges to keep down the cost of living.

After a meeting of his Republican policy committee, Taft told reporters that he doubted whether Congress would be able to dispose of all the President's price recommendations before Christmas. He pointed out that the bill granting emergency aid to Europe will have top priority on the Congressional agenda.

Taft's Joint Economic committee will give prompt action to any anti-inflation proposals but a hot partisan fight seems to be shaping up in the House and Senate group, the GOP Presidential candidate avowed.

Two broad programs for dealing with high prices were submitted to the committee today but Taft sent one back to a subcommittee after the Democrats complained of its partisan attitude.

Strangling Russian Boycott Is Feared In United Nations Korean Agreement

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 14.* (UP)—The United States gained a victory, of sorts, today as the long battle over the future of Korea was settled by the United Nations general assembly.

The assembly voted to establish a special UN commission to go to Korea and supervise an election to be held there in March. The election will set up a representative government to remain in power until the nation is given complete independence, all of which is in accordance with the plan drawn up by our delegates.

But there is one big hitch. Russia, who fought the plan bitterly and threatened to boycott the commission, refused with her five satellite members of the assembly, to take part in the vote.

Now, if Russia, who wanted to withdraw both U. S. and Russian troops from the country by the first of the year, goes through with her threatened boycott, it means that there will be no UN supervised election in the Russian occupied zone which comprises 1-3 of Korea's people and most of her industry.

And another note of anxiety was added to the worried delegates growing list today as a group of US economists announced that the United States will have a recession and possibly a general depression if we do not make new foreign loans.

Their report emphasized that Europe has used up almost all of her dollar supplies, and must stop buying our goods unless we finance her with loans. This, according to the report, would lead to unemployment in this country.

Second Trip Fatal To Thirsty Burglar

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 15 (UP)—A burglar almost made a successful liquor run here recently, but his eyes were bigger than his stomach.

After tossing a rock through the window of a liquor store and running like the wind with his haul, the thirsty thug must have decided that he just didn't have enough.

He returned for another only to walk right into the hands of two policemen who were sitting in the window waiting for him.

Students in CCUN Foreign Groups Represent All Habitable Continents

All inhabited continents on this rapidly shrinking globe were represented at what was teemed a highly successful meeting of the Foreign Students committee Thursday night.

Thirty-five students from the four corners of the world embracing Switzerland, China, Persia, India, Central America, South America, Cuba, Italy, Australia, Canada, Korea, South Africa, and Egypt, attended the social and organizational event.

Main speaker of the evening was Dr. S. E. Leavitt, faculty sponsor of FSC, who gave an informal talk to the assembly. He emphasized that the English language was the most difficult in the world, and to prove his point he cited examples of confusing words which brought laughter. He concluded with the advice that the best way to learn the obstinate language was for foreign students to take active part in as many campus organizations as possible, as they would be regarded as authorities on America upon returning home.

Following Dr. Leavitt's speech, Kan arose to outline possible activities of the FSC as planned by their committee chairmen. Included in the report were social affairs; seminars on U. S. Government, language studies, college customs; article writing for local and home consumption; foreign student speakers, and participation on the staff of the CCUN news-sheet to be published in December.

The proposed ideas met with instantaneous enthusiasm, and a group of foreign students volunteered service on the organization's steering committee.

Reserve Collection Will Rent Volumes

A duplicate rental collection, from which extra copies of reserve books most frequently used may be borrowed on payment of five cents a day, has been established by the University library.

The new collection is designed primarily to aid the commuting student who cannot take a book out on the limited time allowed for reserve books and the student with a great deal of reading who does not want to be bothered with rechecking a book every few hours. The new system will permit the reader to take a book from this special collection at any time and to keep it as long as he is willing to pay the daily five-cent rental fee.

In Reserve Room

About 40 of the most frequently used titles are included in this group, which is located on the shelves behind the desk in the general reserve room. They were purchased from a special fund, which will be repaid from the rental fees collected, and have no connection in a financial way with the main collections of the library.

In addition to paying for the original books, the five-cent fees will be used to enlarge the collection with additional titles. Since the fees

He's a Man of Many Hobbies But It's Music That Vaughn Monroe Considers His Favorite

A frustrated airplane pilot turned bandleader—that is the the best way to describe Vaughn Monroe, who will bring his orchestra here to play for the Grail dances on the Duke week-end.

However, that doesn't mean that the suave young bandleader had only those two careers to choose from. As a matter of fact, Monroe is an avid motorcycle fan and some have suggested that he give up orchestra leading for the open road.

Possibly, he has solved the problem by organizing his group of musicians into the Camel Caravan band. At least, the title carries the idea of the open road to faraway places in exotic lands.

Life Story

But to be perfectly truthful about this thing (and to discourage anyone who may feel at this point that the ability to fly a plane automatically guarantees the type of five figure success that Monroe has enjoyed since throwing over the direction of a motorcycle for the equally hazardous job of directing a top flight swing orchestra) perhaps a few facts from the unusual life story of this unusual man are in order.

He was born—of that we are sure. The place was Akron in the Yankee state of Ohio. He went to school in Wisconsin and Pennsylvania and lives in New York state. His business enterprises center around the state of Massachusetts, all of which gets us no farther south, but serves, nevertheless, to explain why

SUNDAY SING MOVED

The weekly Sunday sing will be held in Gerrard hall instead of Memorial hall, it was announced by sing director Mark Barker. Beginning at 8 o'clock, the program will be directed by Katherine Royall, who will also sing a specialty number.

The Score Clearly Seen

Ex-governor of Georgia, Ellis G. Arnall is making a series of speeches to colleges and the public in general. Wednesday night he spoke in the Duke University main auditorium, before a packed house .Last Monday night the students of the University of South Carolina heard his talk, "Whose Country Is This Anyway?"

"The South Today", the topic of his Duke address is a subject which he more than adquately covers in his 312 page disseration, "The Shore Dimly Seen."

Arnall, who bucked the machine in the Peach State to win the governnorship from "Old Gene," is a man who is constantly in touch with the constituents he represents. When he wanted office he traveled his state from one end to another. He talked with the dirt farmer and to the man in the mill. He talked to, andwith, the schools; he ran on a platform to put the Georgia college system back on the list of accredited college, from which they had degenerated during the Talmadge regime.

But what is Mr. Arnall plugging on his tour? He advocates a better education system. He favors federal grants to individual students rather than government subsidies to colleges and universities. He goes on record for improved health facilities. He remembers that 40 percent of the men of the country were unfit for military service, and emphatically states that he does not want government controlled medical service.

One of the main proposals pushed by the ex-governor, who insists that he not be called a "liberal" but instead "a democrat with a small d," is the fight against sentralized industry. He is a staunch advocate of spreading out manufacturing through the South and the West. According to his way of thinking, centralized industry, owned and operated by a group in one area, borders on Fascism. For instance, the South needs to draw the woolen mills to this section when the manufacturers begin to bring them up to date in equipment and methods. The natural resources will be closer at hand, and, therefore, the finished product would be cheaper for the buyer. There is only a slight hitch—the discrimination between freight rates. This is an obstacle which must be hurdled before industry can be enticed to this section.

Racial tension and education are two other "ills that afflict the South today." Arnall, in a straightforward manner, denies that there is a "Negro problem." He says that is simply "our economic problem." And the facilities for educating the Negro, even though the law specifies that they must be on a par with the White school system, falls short. One of the fallacies lies in the fact that there are not enough facilities for the training of Negro doctors and dentists in the South. The system whereby the state pays for the Negro medical or dental student to train in other states is not very advantageous to the South. There is a great demand for Negro doctors and dentists in small Southern communities. The Negro men who receive their training in other sections of the country either take up their practice in the section in which they received their training or set up office in the larger Southern cities.

Yes, it is quite evident that Arnall, the "small d democrat," is a politician and began his career, as he says, when he was six years old after drawing from a hat the title of "governor." But he is also a type of politician that we need—the type that, when he goes out on a political tour to meet his constituents, gets down to earth with them and realizes their problems. And what is more important, knows how to attempt to remedy them.

The Relative Merits of Darnell and Jutila

Dr. K. T. Jutila is a benign-looking gentleman with kind eyes and a friendly, wide mouth. Undoubtedly he came to Carolina fully aware of our reputation as one of the rare "enlightened" spots in the South. We will give you two to one that now he thinks we're about as enlightened as a group of 7,258 Hottentots in darkest Africa.

Dr. Jutila, as Finnish minister to this to this country, is probably a very busy man. The Carolina International Relations club went to all the trouble to get him down here to talk Thursday night, Dr. Jutila went to an equal amount of trouble to get here.

So what happens on Thursday night when he is supposed to address the "enlightened" citizens hereabout? Less than one hundred persons showed up. And that is probably a fair estimate of the number of students here who deserve that appelation.

T. Earl Heffner, our esteemed editorial assistant, sounded off on this same subject last week. His mythical Roger Sande, Victory Village student and husband, made some comment about most people preferring movies to education talks.

Heffner and his friend Mr. Sande were right. Dr. K. T. Jutila, who is in a position to know much about what's going on in the world and is willing to tell us about it, ran a very poor second to Linda (Amber) Darnell who displayed her charmes at the Village.

We have little or nothing to say against Miss Darnell, whom we have viewed on the screen many times. We merely point out that Dr. Jultila is somewhat more important these troubled days.—B.S.

Illumination

Senior walk, which should be well lighted because it is the one link which keeps the coed dormitories from being isolated from the rest of the campus has been dark for the past week or longer. The lightposts are still there, and it has been a custom in the past for University personnel to check each lamp daily to see that none have burned out.

Senior walk and other dismal parts of the campus are equipped with lamps. These lamps should be kept burning each night, preferably all night long, but if this is too expensive, they should be lighted until after coed hours.

Several reports of purse-snatching have been reported in the areas which should be lighted. Such incidents probably could have been prevented if the area was not in darkness.

Senior walk is the most direct route from the coed dormitories to the campus at large. Coeds, who have labs, classes or business on other parts of the campus do not think that it is wise for them to walk unescorted on a pitch-dark campus.

Whether the lamps are not checked regularly or whether vandals are throwing rocks at them nightly and putting them out of order we do not know, but the matter should be looked into immediately, and the situation remedied.

Poland: A New Democracy?

By Bill Patterson

Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, leader of the Polish Peasant party, was the one leader in the country on whom all hopes of freedom rested. During the hectic months when the Communists were postponing the Yalta-guaranteed parliamentary elections while they rigged the election setup, the popularity of the leader of the Peasant Party was dramatically evidenced at a meeting held in the important coal-mining town of Katowice.

The Communists tried three strategems to break up this meeting, all three in vain. First they called a meeting of their own, compulsory for all miners, whose union cards were checked at the door to assure their attendance. Then they announced that UNRRA parcels would be distributed at their meeting. Despate the packing of the front rows at the Peasant party meeting with Communist hecklers, Mikolajczyk spoke to over 10,000, while the combination of bribes and threats produced a crowd of only 2,000 at the Communist meeting.

How did the Communists eventually overcome the will of the majority in Poland? A look at the budget under which Poland operated during the months when the elections were being "arranged" will shed some light on the situation. In that budget Agriculture, Poland's mainstay, was alloted one and a half billion zlotys. The secret police got four billion, and the Communist minister of propaganda got over a billion.

Then there is the matter of the Ministry of the Interior. In Poland, as in other European countries, Interior controlled the secret police. Upon Anglo-American insistence, a member of the London Polish Government was given the Ministry of the Interior. Before he reached his desk, however, they simply removed the secret police from the Ministry of the Interior and turned it over to a Communist who brought from Moscow 12 members of the NKVD, who reorganized the Polish secret police and instructed them in their "new duties."

Now they have had their elections. Poland is now a New Democracy. Mikolajczyk, for whom over 75 per cent of the Polish people would have voted in a genuine free election, has fled to Britain in fear of his life. With him went the last organized opposition to control of Poland by Moscow-trained Communists.

I sincerely hope that the Polish Ambassador will get the same courteous reception here on this campus that we would like for our country's representative to get in his country. I also hope he is asked some pointed questions about the New Democracy that is Poland.

Everybody Likes 'Marriage'

By R. Foo Giduz

So the question comes up, "What courses shall we take next quarter?" . . . Registration begins Monday, a bad day anytime, but with such heavy decisions to be made, it's best to be ready ahead of time this time. . . . Now a very helpful chap suggests Sociology 62, a most legitimate elective course for seniors and probably a good choice for those cold winter evenings. "Marriage," it's more popularly known as. (No labs available at present.) . . . This chap tells us it is an extremely popular and enlightening class, taught by Mr. Wayne Kernodle, quite an affable and entertaining gentleman who took the course while at Carolina before the war, decided it was a good idea, and got hitched himself a couple of years ago.

And as useful and sober a course as "marriage" is, it doesn't seem to be without its lighter moments. . . . Understand the students really got their kicks last summer when Mrs. Ernest R .Groves was teaching marriage. One of the first assignments they had was to write a paper on their sex teachings and life.—So early one morning an unabashed coed came into class a few minutes late, put her paper on the table and started to her seat. "Are these papers supposed to be up to date," she asked. "Of course," replied Mrs. Groves. "Well, give it back then," the ever-ready damsl dryly demanded.

That helpful traffic cop in front of the Y every morning is R. A. Womble, in case you've wondered. . . . And maybe he's there for personal reasons. . . . While working as a night watchman for the University one evening last fall he was struck by a coed-driven automobile, and suffered several broken bones.

What most people don't know is that he was to have retired seven days later. . . . But instead he joined the Chapel Hill Police force and now directs traffic a scant 100 feet from the the place he was hit'

Frank Maxa, 82, of Miami, Fla., doesn't know whether he married a 22-year-old girl after having had a few drinks, but if he did, he wants the marriage annulled. If, as suggested, she's into him for a $7,500 liquor store, we 'low he rates relief.

GM GRIND:

America's greatest party game, Bingo, is becoming more popular with every Saturday night playing in Graham Memorial. . . . Over "four score" of students played last week, running through 26 games during the evening . . . . "Joker John" Van Hecke, caller for the session, was amazed to hear the same couple shout "BINGO!" five times during the play. . . . It was an engaged couple, vet and coed, with the little lady winning three times, to the gent's twice.

Ten cents from each pot went to WSSF, totaling $2.60 in all. . . . Gran Childress added an extra dollar to the charity pot at the end of the evening. . . . Though most winnings came to about a dollar a game, the final jackpot came to seven dollars.

Editor:

Many of us are rather discriminate about our friendliness to people in general but we are usually very friendly and compassionate when it comes to dogs, regardless of their color, breed, or pedigree. (Anthropomorphistic interpretations notwithstanding, score one for the dogs.) Being a typical North Carolina country hick, a bus boy at the dining hall, an incurable kibitzer, maudlin romanticist, self-styled (book) worm, rabi(e)d reader of Albert Payson Terhune, would-be member of the SPCDA, and at present in the manic stage of my favorite psychosis, I love dogs.

Loving these dumb (?) creatures as I do, I should like to present the case of the Dining Hall Dilemma for the judgment and opinion of the student body. The form through which the collective opinion may best be expressed shall, I hope, be determined by the persons who specialize in such things.

Here begins my tale of woe: the management of Lenoir Dining hall is faced with the dilemma of having the health and safety of patrons and personnel menaced by the presence of dogs during mealtimes, on one hand, and incurring the wrath of outraged public compassion (often a falsified compassion) and possible lawsuits in case the animals are kept from the dining hall by questionable artificial means, on the other hand.

The "No Dogs Allowed" signs are generally ignored by dogs, collared and uncollared, corticate, but particularly by certain masters of certain misanthropic monstrosities which wear collars. Some law student might probe the aspects of liability in the latter case.

It has been suggested that a mild solution of ammonia be squirted on the dogs' chests, taking care to keep the liquid from their eyes. Since all animals hate ammonia it would probably require only one or two trials to keep them from entering the dining hall. At the same time no cruelty, per se, to the animal would be involved—only the temporary discomfort of the odor of ammonia—and they could be fed outside the dining hall each night (I'll volunteer). Outside feeding alone, however, will not accomplish the desired end; anyone who is a sucker for a wistful pair of brown eyes knows this. What do you say, folks?

Herbert S. Hendricks.

Against The Law?

Dear Sir:

In reference to the requirement for and use of windshield license stickers (Daily Tar Heel, 12 Nov., 1947) I would like to refer to G. S. 20-127 (General Statutes of North Carolina, 1943) which reads as follows:

"WINDSHIELDS MUST BE UNOBSTRUCTED. — (a) It shall be unlawful for any person to drive any vehicle upon a highway with any sign, poster or other nontransparent material upon the front windshield, side wings, side or rear window of such motor vehicle other than a certificate or other paper required to be so displayed by law."

If the students desire voluntarily to put stickers on the windows of their cars that is their business, but should the administration order all students having cars in Chapel Hill to violate the State law?

Names Withheld Upon Request.

Questions Policy

To the Editor:

As of the present moment it appears that the Tar Heel has managed to get itself into the following situation:

(1) It has irresponsible reporters who apparently sleep through talks on vital problems and who write comments more indicative of their prejudices than of the happenings.

(2) The Tar Heel prints these comments as stories rather than as editorials.

(3) These reporters make errors many of which are never acknowledged in later issues of the TH.

(5) The TH supports the prejudices of the reporters by giving him the courtesy of having the last word, permitting him of all people to give a resume of correspondence which has reached the editor but which correspondence is not to be printed.

(6) The reporter being supported so valiantly by the TH believes himself so expert on foreign affairs as to be qualified to determine who is or is not also an expert.

Really, don't you think you have made a mess of things?

Joseph W. Straley.

Eat On Saturday

Dear Sir:

Saturday evening, very famished, I chanced into a local eatery located near the post office. When glancing at the menu my eyes were focusd to the right of the page—the prices started at a dollar. Faintly I could remember, in by gone days, the 55-60-70 cents assortment of meal.

When asked the meaning, the waitress, well-meaningly, inquired as to my student status. Being a student, I could have the hamburger steak for 70 cents (listed at $1.00)—the weekday student price. Discrimination? How many inquired as to the difference? How many cared? I didn't feel right about it, but I did feel hungry, so—I ate the meal in indifference — feeling only a mild surge of conflict. Later I thought. How do you feel about Saturday prices? Preferential Prices?

Royal Bridal Gown To Remain Secret

London, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Britain's poet, Rudyard Kipling, once hinted that the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady were sisters under the skin. However, Britain's Princess Elizabeth wants the similarity to stop there. As far as the gown she will wear at her forthcoming wedding to Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten is concerned.

No princess was ever more proud of her marrying togs than Elizabeth is of the creation designed by Norman Hartnell. Today the princess put her royal foot down. "No," she told the designer. His suggestion that copies of her wedding dress be shown in department stores in the United States was out of the question. When the princess steps out of her coach at Westminster Abbey on November 20, the crowd will gasp at a wedding gown almost no one has ever seen before.

Designer Hartnell has been living in a moviellike air of espionage ever since he submitted the prize-winning dress design, trying to keep it a secret. Today he had the satisfaction of hearing some preliminary "ohs" and "ahs" when reporters were invited to a preview of sketches and parts of the gown. The catch is those reporters who got through security precautions around the ornate salon were sworn to security on what they saw.

No More Records?

We Shall Have Music

Local platter merchants don't seem to be shaking in their boots about the upcoming (Dec. 31) "no records" plan of the American Federation of Musicians. It has been generally known for some weeks now that James Caesar Petrillo, AFM boss, has decreed that no more records or transcriptions be made after the end of this year. And he says, "once and for all."

Depending on your attitude toward disc jockeys that could be either good or bad news. At any rate, Petrillo wanted royalties for the AFM welfare fund from the records and record companies said okay. He claims that the musicians who cut the records deserve some compensation for each record sold—and until Dec. 31, the AFM welfare will continue to get it.

But the Taft-Hartley bill expressly forbids royalty payments to union welfare funds—and that, apparently, is that. Petrillo says, "We're quitting."

But the situation is not half so grave as it seems. A "recording official" has said in the New York Times that records will be made again just as soon as the record companies decide whether or not they want to circumvent the Taft-Hartley bill and pay the royalties anyway. They could do it.

However there is no cause for alarm, since record companies have shelves full of unreleased records and are making the waffles at an unprecedented clip this fall and early winter.

But forestry programs positively are not designed to assure more trees for politicians to be up. . .

"Filth Piles Up In Paris," says a headline. That's news — filth usually emanates from Paris.

What the world needs is an explosive force which will blow it together instead of apart.

BAPTIST CENTER VOTED

The North Carolina Baptist convention voted yesterday to establish a student center in Chapel Hill. A resolution passed during the annual conference's closing session at Winston-Salem called for purchase of property near the university to set up a Baptist student headquarters.

TATUM AND T-ATOM

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 15.—One of the more potent means of destruction now on the market is TNT, which all goes to prove anytime you find split "T's" you are liable to be playing with something quite explosive. All of which is a problem the North Carolina Tar Heels may have to face this afternoon here in Clark Griffith's ball orchard against the split "T" tactics of cagey Jim Tatum.

There isn't any doubt in anyone's mind in the nation's capital, or for that matter, in the nation, that big Jim is lying in deadly ambush for the visiting Tar Heels. And he has as his accompanying weapon, the powerful variation of the T-formation that proved so devastating for the Blue Devils of Duke when they ran up against it in Durham last weekend along with the Tigers of Missouri. The score, for those with poor memories, was 28-7, Missouri. Even J. Horner had trouble explaining that one.

Of course, there are few that will claim the Terps of Maryland have the potential manpower that Missouri mustered in Duke Stadium last week, but they have a bunch of capabilities that playing over their heads as they probably will be doing today, can easily be a match for Coach Carl Snavely's mid-season powerhouse. The term "over their heads" is used since the word is out that the Terps are pointing for the Tar Heels—pointing being an old English word meaning—ready with everything but the kitchen sink.

Not that the Tar Heels will be utterly incapable of defending themselves. They have come a long way since Texas and Wake Forest, metamorphosing from a highly-routed team to a highly-touted one. The Tar Heels have progressed well in the past week and are now ready for most anything that can be thrown their way if they are in the mood to handle it. One should hope that, like the Boy Scouts, they are prepared.

DRIFTING BACK to Tatum and the split "T," research proves that big Jim first ran into the formation in the service while stationed at the Iowa Pre-flight School. Don Faurot, the present Missouri head man, was there at the time coaching the thing, and as the story goes, with Tatum it was love at first sight. Tatum scouted mostly for Faurot that year, doing such a fine job for Iowa and Great Lakes Naval Training School at the same time, that the two stopped the great Notre Dame team of that year (1943)—Iowa losing to the Irish 14-13 one week, and Great Lakes taking them into camp the next, 19-14.

After the war, Tatum left the service, taking the Faurot system with him, this time to Oklahoma, from the musical of the same name. At the University there he had quite a successful season for a first year man, giving Texas and Army quite a hard time though losing to both, and then going on to trample State College in the Gator Bowl last New Year's day.

Last winter Tatum moved to Maryland, and he and popular (in Maryland) Curley Byrd have cooked up quite a football team, or so the clippings say.

'WAY BACK WHEN

TATUM PLAYED his college football for the University 'way back before ID cards had ever been heard of. According to the record books, that was back in 1932, 1933, 1934. Tatum was an All-Southern tackle a couple of those years, and in 1934 even received such a high honor as being named to the Most Handsome All-American team by a board of college girls.

Tatum was quite a tackle, so they say, but had one failing in that he hated to go to practice. He was definitely a weekend ball player, but that is what counts when the chips are on the line. Big Jim was a fine defensive player and performed equally well on offense, doing a little "ad lib" booting to boot in the kickoff, extra point and field goal departments.

After leaving Chapel Hill by way of graduation, Tatum tried it with the pros for a few weeks—with the New York Giants to be exact—but this wasn't what he was looking for, so he turned to coaching which he has done to a turn ever since.

He was freshman-team assistant to Snavely at Cornell in the late thirties, scouting the Big Red's big opponent, Penn, each year while at Ithaca. After this, Tatum returned to his alma mater to take over similar duties under Coach Ray Wolf. He scouted Duke the year we doubled the score: 6-3, in Kenan (1940).

In 1942, Tatum became head coach of the Tar Heels and turned out a team that lost only to Tulane and State and was tied by Fordham and Duke. Then came the war, and big Jim, like most of his comrades in athletics, decided there was a bigger clash going on than was to be found on the nation's gridirons.

DISCOVERER OF THE DOCTOR

ONE OF TATUM'S biggest distinctions is his "discovery" of Doc Blanchard, a cousin of big Jim's, although Bob Kellogg and others will contest this statement. Even if Tatum didn't actually "find" the lad, whom war destined to star for Army with Davis, instead of for Carolina with Justice, he was instrumental in bringing the Doc to Chapel Hill where he played freshman football, and laying the cornerstone for a great grid career.

So goes the athletic history of the man who today sends a fine, well-trained, if slightly inexperienced football team against a seasoned and talented group of Tar Heels. With such a background and grid ducation, it may be a case of the student showing the old master how the game is played. Maybe, that is. . . .

Bob Koontz Scores Lone Carolina TD; Purcell Runs Well

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 14.—The North Carolina Jayvees fought to a 6-6 tie with the Virginia junior varsity here this afternoon in a game that turned out to be a repetition of the 6-6 score between the two clubs in 1946.

Both Carolina and Virginia missed numerous scoring opportunities during the afternoon, but final statistics showed that play was fairly even. Virginia scored first, pushing across a score on a pass play in the second quarter, but the Tar Babies evened the count with a third period touchdown.

The game somewhat marred the Carolinians' heretofore spotless record. Carolina had beaten South Carolina and State by shutout scores before today, so Virginia also got the satisfaction of scoring the first touchdown of the season against the Tar Baby outfit.

Koontz Goes Over

Trailing by a 6-0 score, Carolina rolled to its only touchdown midway in the third quarter to tie up the game. Gus Purcell was the hero, running back a punt from his 15 to the Virginia 35, a run of 50 yards. A few plays later Bob Koontz carried the ball over on a 3-yard buck on third down.

The visiting Jayvees also had numerous other scoring opportunities but were unable to cash in on their breaks. Just after the Virginia touchdown, Carolina drove all the way down to the Cavalier 5, only to have the half-time whistle halt them.

There were two Tar Baby threats in the second half that failed to pay off. Dick Bunting scampered for a 45-yard gain to the Virginia 40, but after four plays the Carolina team was only on the 32, so Virginia took possession of the ball.

Long Pass Fails

A long pass from Bunting to Stoiff from near midfield into the end zone nearly gave the visitors a touchdown, but Stoiff was unable to hang on to the pitch.

Neither team had a statistical edge. Each had eight first downs. Carolina looked best with its ground attack and the Virginians completed several long aerials to hold an edge in this department.

John Quigley, John Stoiff, and Joe Gurtis were the defensive leaders for Carolina. On offense it was Purcell, Bunting, and Koontz that showed the way.

NROTC Riflemen Has 25-Game Slate

Undiscouraged by the drubbing they received at the hands of Illinois Tech in their first outing of the year, the future admirals of Carolina's NROTC rifle team have scheduled a large number of 'matches-by-mail" with other teams over the country.

The local marksmen who shot yesterday against the University of Pennsylvania and are now sweating out the results presumably at the post office, will play a 25 match card between now and April 10th.

Coach Herschel L. Baker of the Tar Heel squad has made no statements yet as to prospects, but with several ex-marine sharp-shooters on hand the chances for at least an even break look good.

The next match will be on December 5, when the team contests a squad from Rice. On the next day the Tar Heels shoot against Yale.

Trouble for Terps Today

Jim Camp, Tar Heel wingback, is being counted on as one of the offensive leaders when Carolina meets Maryland today. Camp has been a standout in all the Tar Heel games recently.

Bowl Officials Will Be Busy At Nation's Top Games Today

Possible bowl bids and conference titles will be at stake today when the nation's football powers get back into action. Most of the top games will be observed by representatives from the various January 1 classics.

In the top game in the South, Georgia Tech, unbeaten in seven games and the leading Sugar Bowl prospect, faces a fast-improving Alabama eleven that is rated an excellent chance of dumping the Engineeers for their first loss. The game also will have important bearing on the Southeastern conference standings.

The battle between LSU and Mississippi is another top-flight attraction for the Southern sports fan. Both teams have a good chance of taking the Southeastern championship if Georgia Tech loses.

DEACS MEET STATE

Southern conference highlights are furnished by Wake Forest and N. C. State and North Carolina and Maryland The former should prove particularly interesting in view of the heated rivalry between the two Wake County schools. State will be trying to rebound from a 41-6 loss to Carolina last week. The Deacs topped Boston College, 14-13, in their last outing and are the favorites today.

Duke, the current pacesetter in the conference standings, has a chance for its fourth loop win without loss when its meets South Carolina in Durham. Duke is the favorite despite two straight losses to non-conference foes.

Virginia, a Southern independent whose lustrous record places them in the bowl limelight, will be favored to take a win over West Virginia. The Cavgaliers have been

Up in New York

New York, Nov. 14.—The last contingent of the Carolina cross country team rolled into town last night and kept right on rolling to the Hotel Paramount, where the Tar Heel harriers are quartered for the IC4A meet on Monday afternoon.

Coach Dale Ransom took the wraps off his seven man squad this morning and sent them over the five mile IC4A course to stretch their legs and familiarize them with the terrain and route.

Jack Milne, who was slowed down last year by a stone bruise, Sam Magill, who ended 30th last year; Mark Burham, 27th in the '46 meet; Alvin Smith, 6th in last year's event; Chuck Herty; Halstead Holden; and Julian Mackenzie all turned in good times on the trial trip over the uptown course.

recently have been equalling their fine play in 1946 that led the Tar Heels to the Sugar Bowl. Charlie Justice alone rang up over 100 yards from scrimmage in the Tar Heels' 41-6 win over N. C. State.

Jim Camp, who at one time this year lost his starting wingback berth to Johnny Clements, is another Tar Heel who has been weaving in and out of the arms of tacklers in recent games. Camp's improvement along with that of Walt Pupa has been one of the main reasons that Carolina has been able to get its ground attack functioning after a poor showing early in the season.

Hosea Rodgers, the regular fullback, is still being slowed up by knee injuries and won't see much action, if any, tomorrow. The Tar Heel trainers want to have the big Alabama lad in shape for the battle between Duke and Carolina next week.

Sparger Injured

George Sparger, co-captain and regular center is the only other Tar Heel expected to miss the game because of injuries. Dan Steigman will replace him at the pivot post.

The game will mark the sixteenth time that the two schools have met on the gridiron. Carolina has won 11 of those games with the Terps holding four wins. Seven of those Tar Heel wins have been consecutive. Carolina won last year's game, 33-0, on a rain-swept field in Chapel Hill.

The game will be observed closely by representatives from the various bowls. Carolina has been mentioned for the Orange Bowl if it can get by its remaining three games without loss, and Maryland might also land a share of post-season glory if the Terps can apply a successful finishing touch to their schedule.

Good Even in Defeat

Maryland's only loss was to Duke, 19-7, but the Terps looked good even in defeat by outgaining the Blue Devils.

The game is a Southern conference affair and will see each club battling to preserve its chance for the title. Each has one loop loss but so do most of the other teams. Duke is the only team unbeaten in the conference, but Carolina could put an end to this in their game next week.

Even though Duke should lose a game, both the Terps and Tar Heels can't lay claim to the title so easily. William and Mary has lost one game, but the Indians have won more loop tilts than any other team.

Carolina students are expected to turn out in large numbers for tomorrow's for tomorrow's clash. A special train and numerous private cars transported the Tar Heel rooters here.

Morris Is Winner In Ping Pong Play

Favorite Ray Morris breezed through a field of 16 players to cop his third Graham Memorial table tennis tournament Thursday evening.

The Carolina net star was extended only in one of his four matches, by Jack Breakstone in the finals. Breakstone captured the initial game but Morris came back to win the next three and the tourney. The scores were 18-21, 21-19, 21-19, 21-15.

Morris' victory enabled him to retire a cup given by Graham Memirial.

In the semi-final encounters, Morris eliminated Archie Goodwin and Breakstone triumphed over Bob Goldwater.

GOOD ATTENDANCE

Attendance at Carolina's games has been the greatest in the University's history according to figures compiled at the Daily Tar Heel. Approximately 249,000 fans have turned out for the team's seven games. or an average of about 36,000 per game.

Another big turnout in Washington for the UNC-Maryland game today should up the total to over 280,000. With at least a combined total of 30,000 slated to turn out for the Duke and Virginia games, a record should be set.

Dave Ferebee Gets Winning Marker For Tar Heel Club

By Larry Fox

High Point, Nov. 14—Catching fire in the third quarter, a listless Carolina soccer team came from behind to edge an inspired High Point eleven, 3-2, in a game played on the Panther's home field yesterday.

The Tar Heels were behind all the way until Dave Ferebee and Porter VanZandt combined to score the winning goal. Carolina was awarded a free kick at midfield and VanZandt's boot headed straight towards the goal. Ferebee leaped up and headed the ball into the nets.

High Point registered first when Hebron Coble counted on a penalty goal kick in the closing seconds of the initial quarter.

Bach Ties Score

Joe Bach quickly made it up as the second stanza opened when he pounced on a fumble by the opposing goalie and rammed the oval home. George Davis put the home team back in the lead midway in the same period.

The Blue and White began to roll in the third quarter. Dave Boak started the scoring when he took a pass from Pallulat during a scrimmage in front of the goal. Ferebee's spectacular goal ended the scoring for the day.

Al Williams, Carolina goal tender, hurt his ankle during the course of the contest, but he was able to finish the game. Another of the Tar Heel casaalties, Wayne Johnson, viewed the game from the bench.

Allen Not Satisfied

"We'll have to improve very much before we meet Virginia Friday," commented Coach Marvin Allen dourly. "Our passing game was terrible today as well as in the Duke game."

Coach Allen remarked that only Gus Johnston, Van Zandt, and Williams played as well as they were able. Playing-coach Coble shone in

Saleeby Elected President For Interdormitory Council

Emile Saleeby, president of Stacy dormitory and vice-president of the University Club, has been elected to head the Inter-Dormitory Council for the coming year. The elections, held at the group's last Memorial meeting, also placed Pete Gerns in office as Vice-President, and installed Bob Ormond as secretary.

The newly-chosen president told the group he hoped the council would bring about a better organization of men in dormitories and in quonset huts than has been accomplished in previous years. A group of rules governing the conduct of the University residents of these buildings was then brought before the group for approval. The rules, which come from Dean of Men Fred Weaver, are as follows:

1. A "quiet" hour shall be observed from 7 in the morning until 8 o'clock in the evening, from Sunday through Thursday.

2. Any willful destruction or damage to University property will be considered a violation of the campus code.

3. Shooting or possessing of firearms or fireworks is prohibited.

4. Drinking or having intoxicating liquors is contrary to University regulations.

5. Residents accused of any offense may be recommended by the dormitory councils to the Inter-Dormitory Council for trial.

6. Cases which the Council deems serious enough to warrant dismissal from the University shall be referred to the Men's Council.

Following the submission of these rules, Ray Jeffries, head of the freshmen advisers, cleared up the question of quonset huts plained that there are to be four hut representation. Jeffries ex-delegates on the council from the huts, to be elected by the residents.

Monroe

Vaughn himself, if not his band, has earned the title of the Camel Caravan. And early in life too (to quote Jimmy Durante.)

He also is a 'hound' for calisthentics, but maybe we oughta shouldn't mention that since this is supposed to be a pleasant article.

Anyway, Vaughn's business affairs are managed by his former boss, Jack Marshard. It was Marshard who first encouraged him to start his own band when Vaughn was employed as a trumpeter in Jack's now forgotten Boston Society band.

Carnegie Tech Student

The immediate success of the new enterprise proved Marshard's business and professional acumen (in addition to proving something about Monroe's musical talent) so Vaughn hired him as business manager and, as the saying goes, they lived happily ever after.

Monroe has been playing the trumpet since he was eleven and from the trumpet to music is really quite an easy step. He also studied music at the New England Conservatory of Music and at Carnegie Tech. Although he wanted to be a concert baritone, success, as it must to all men, visited Vaughn Monroe and instead he had to be satisfied with a job as a first rate orchestra leader at a paltry five times what the most successful concert baritone is able to make.

Which may serve to explain his many hobbies . . . any psychology major could tell you that they are an escape mechanism. Vaughn is a photographer, pipe collector, model train enthusiast, carpenter, electrician, motorboat racer, ad ifinitum.

But his leading hobby is leading one of this country's best bands which is our chief concern. So, see you at the dance.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Clyde Hardy telephoned a Little Rock newspaper office today and said a $15 saw had been stolen from his home.

"So what?" snapped the hard boiled voice on the other end of the line.

"Well," said Hardy, "the saw is broken and dangerous. I want to warn whoever has it to be careful."

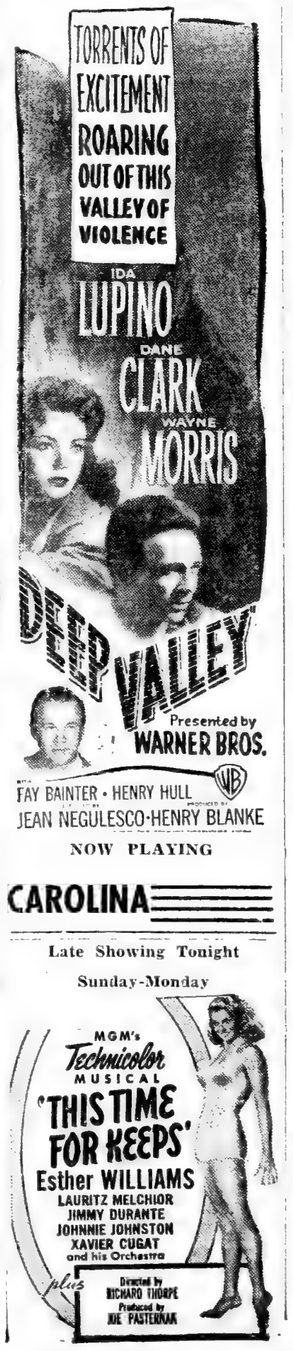
Upon arrival at the University, the equipment will probably be stored in the basement of an available class building, until they can be installed under the dome-shaped roof of the special astronomical wing of the Morehead building. As the completion date of this Planetarium and Art Gallery is tentatively set for January, 1949, the only university-owned "theater of the skies" will probably, in large part, stay crated until then.

SUGAR BOWL NEWS

New Orleans, Nov. 14. (UP)—A request that Notre Dame not be invited to participate in the Sugar Bowl was made by Lloyd Glaudi, sports editor of the New Orleans Item in an open letter to the selection committee.



Glaudi quotes other observers to support his belief that it would be almost impossible to find another college team that could give the Irish a battle. To quote the letter, Notre Dame is "just too good."

JOZEF WINIEWICZ

Polish Ambassador To Talk on Germany In Gerrard Monday

"Poland and the German Question" will be the topic of Jozef Winiewicz, Polish ambassador to the United States, who speaks tomorrow night under the auspices of the Carolina Political union and the International Relations club.

Time and place of the speech have been changed to Gerrard hall at 8:15, rather than Hill hall at 8 o'clock as orginally announced.

Bill Kemp, chairman of CPU, will introduce the speaker, and there will be a reception for him in the main lounge of Graham Memorial following the speech. Ken Cruse is in charge of the reception, to which the public is invited.

Former Journalist

Appointed ambassador to this country near the end of 1946, Winiewicz has been active as a jounrnalist in Poland and Hungary, and in the diplomatic service in England. He has also participated in the United Nations, representing Poland on the Political and Security committee, and on the Social, Humanitarian, and cultural committe in addition to serving as delegate to the first and second sessions of the General Assembly.

Well-informed on Polish-German relations, Winiewicz is author of several books and pamphlets on the subject, among them "German Withdrawal in the East," "German Failure in Poland," "The Quest for German Blood," "Aims and Failures of the German New Order," "Have We Allies Inside Germany?", and "The Polish-German Frontier."

TRUSTEES WILL MEET

The executive committee of the university's board of trustees will meet at Raleigh tomorrow. The regular session will be held in the governor's office in the capitol.

Use of Capitol For Assembly Still in Doubt

By Bill Sexton

Planning for the 1947 State Student legislature remains at a standstill while efforts are being made to assemble the State Board of Buildings and Grounds. The five-man board must hear the Legislative council's application for use of the capitol November 28-29, proposed date of the 1947 legislature session.

Governor Gregg Cherry said in Raleigh yesterday that he had attempted to call a meeting of the board Friday, but that three members were unable to attend, though only one was actually out of the capital.

New Permit Ordered

Secretary of State Thad Eure, a member of the board, ruled that a new permit was necessary following the legislative council's reorganization last week to include delegates from schools other than State college, original sponsor of the student legislatures.

Meanwhile Earl Fitzgerald, vice-president of the UNC Debate council, has been named to represent the University in the reorganization of the State Student Legislative council.

Fitzgerald's appointment was announced yesterday by Maurice Braswell, Debate council president, who said pressure of academic work would prevent him from taking an active lead in the reconstituted legislature.

Lowenstein Named

Al Lowenstein, UNC delegate at legislature sessions in 1945 and 1946, was asked by Braswell to serve as an advisor. Lowenstein's conferences with members of the old legislative council at State college were largely responsible for the council's rebirth following an unexpected dissolution.

Selden Will Speak At Baptist Group

An idea from the works of Thomas Wolfe, in which the famous novelist states that everyone is looking for a father, will form the theme of a talk to be delivered to the Baptist Student union at 6 o'clock this evening by Samuel Selden, director of the Carolina Playmakers.

Selden will present to this weekly supper session an application of his thought along these lines, to life in general and religious life in particular. He will attempt to illustrate his talk with incidents from the news of the day, with special references to the problems facing the citizens of North Carolina.

Europe Aid Plan, Tax Relief, Controls Disputed As Special Session Approaches

By the United Press

Washington, Nov. 15 — With President Truman scheduled to address the recently-called special session of Congress tomorrow, disputes over the proper way to put across the Marshall plan and still keep the country's economy on an even keel are becoming sharper and sharper.

The question of return to price control and rationing is one major issue. The chief executive is not expected to ask for outright wartime controls when he opens tomorrow's session, but some officials predict he will ask Congress for the authority to slap down controls if other anti-inflationary steps fail.

However, it looks as if this request, if made, will run into a stiff fight, not only from Republicans but also from top Democrats. One Democrat, Sen. Walter George, has already made his stand against controls quite clear. George said today he will oppose any steps leading the country back into what he calls a "regimented economy" in order to help Europe back on its feet.

Taft Opposes OPA

Many Republicans, led by Sen. Taft, have indicated they would fight a battle royal against any mention of a peacetime OPA. Speaker Joseph Martin, Jr., today told reporters he does not think price controls could be put through the House. Chairman Jesse Wolcott of the House Banking committee reiterated that he can see no chance of "another OPA."

As for the tax-reduction proposal, party leaders say they can not see any hope of this being carried out along with the Marshall Plan.

However, other Congressmen have indicated that cuts are possible with the proposed aid to Europe.

Midtown Tar Heel Pep Rally Amazes Washington Dwellers

By Chuck Hauser

Washington, Nov. 15 — In a slow drizzle that was reminiscent of a Chapel Hill football weekend, the Tar Heels hit Franklin square at noon today, with a pep rally that caused staid Washingtonians to stop and wonder.

After a night of fun-making that had turned most DC hotels into a little bit of Chapel Hill, "Hark the Sound," "Tar Heels on Hand," and "Hey, how you" rang over gloomy, wet streets, as a single-file string of Carolina cars, stretching as far as the eye could see in both directions, twisted through the rain.

Police Busy

Capital police had their hands full directing the blue and white streamer-clad automobiles, but the parade wound them from the Hamilton hotel (team headquarters) over the many blocks to Griffith Stadium without so much as a fender being creased.

The Hamilton was relatively quiet last night in comparison with the rest of the city, while the football squad got a long night's sleep before today's mud-splattered grid contest.

A sign in the lobby, however, proclaimed this to be "UNC Headquarters, Room 604." The headquarters turned out to be extremely unofficial, as glass-in-hand Tar Heels greeted information seekers at the door with effusive welcomes.

The Roosevelt and Ambassador hotels took their share of the memory-making also, with the halls of every floor looking like a sunny court at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The Franklin square spirit was dampened only by the icy temperature which chilled every Carolina toe that wasn't encased in at least three pairs of socks.

Tear Gas for Terps

Maryland students also had their pep rally, a spirited one last night that lasted a little longer than university officials intended for it to.

As the evening wore on, about 600 Maryland students congregated on US Route 1, which runs through College Park, and snarled up traffic so badly that the police of Prince George county were forced to use tear gas, among other things, to quell the affair.

The game, played literally in a sea of mud, was one for the books.

Food Experts Meet To Study Health

Nutrition experts from many of the southeastern states concluded a two-day conference at the School of Public Health here yesterday. Dr. A. H. Bryan, professor in the department, headed a committee that brought these public health educators to the University to participate in discussions on agriculture, community and public health nutrition, and the whole range of soil-plant-animal-human relationships.

Faculty members from the University taking an active part in the two-day meeting were Dr. James Andrews of the Biological-chemistry department.

ARTHUR LOESSER

Well-Known Artist Will Play Tonight In Piano Program

Arthur Loesser, distinguished concert pianist, will present a program of modern and classical selections in Hill hall at 8:30 tonight. Rated as one of the nation's top concert pianists, Loesser's local appearance is sponsored by the music department in collaboration with Graham Memorial.

His program as tentatively scheduled will feature selections from Beethoven, Scarlatti, Chopin, Brahms, and Handel as well as two modern works, Sonatina by Hisatada Otaka and a sonata by Arthur Shepherd, the head of the music division of Western Reserve university.

"The university is extremely fortunate in securing Mr. Loesser for this concert," said Dr. William Newman of the music department, "and I am positive everyone will be glad they went to hear him."

Born in New York

Born in New York City in 1894; Loesser studied at the Loeb Institution of Musical Art in that city, and in 1911 won their Loeb Memorial prize for music. He made his debut in Berlin in 1913, and in New York three years later.

Since that time, he has played in most of the larger centers of the U. S., and has toured Europe and the Orient. During the war, he served in the Far East with the army's military intelligence service.

It was during this period that Loesser is believed to have been the first American officer in uniform to appear in a musical performance in Japan before native audience.

Justice, Sherman, Pupa Score During Last Quarter Spree

By Bob Goldwater

Washington, Nov. 15— The grid elevens of North Carolina and Maryland wallowed around in the mud of rain-soaked Griffith stadium for three scoreless periods here today before the Tar Heels pushed over three touchdowns in eight minutes of the fourth quarter to register a 19-0 triumph—their fifth win in a row since two early season losses.

It was definitely a story of Carolina waiting for the breaks and then making the most of them when they came. A fumble set up the first Blue and White touchdown, an errant lateral the second, and the interception of one of many desperate passes only served to add to the score. Otherwise, it was a hard-fought ball game in which the only advantage lay in Carolina's margin in the statistics department.

Pupa and Justice Again

The same pair of backs that led the Tar Heels to their easy victory over N. C. State last week again provided the power punch in this week's attack. Walt Pupa continued his battering tactics on enemy lines with net gains of 135 yards on 32 attempts, while Charlie Justice picked up 106 yards in 21 tries. The much-heralded Maryland star, Lu Gambino, was held to a net 18 yards in 13 rushes.

That item was one of the main factors leading to the Carolina victory. A hard-charging Blue and White forward wall—led by guard Bill Wardle—swarmed all over the Maryland runners and the Terrapins were kept in their own territory throughout most of the game.

On the first one, Pupa plunged for two. Then it became Justice's turn and he didn't disappoint the large gathering of Carolina rooters. The Ashville choo-choo swept wide to his left, cut inside the flankman and crossed into the corner of the end zone before being pushed outside. Cox missed the conversion attempt—his fourth bad kick in 19 attempts—but a 13-0 margin appeared sufficient.

Sherman Scores

The final break —and touchdown—came in another five minutes after Justice had punted into the end zone. Two of Turyn's aerials fell incomplete, so he tried a third one. That turned out to be a big mistake. For freshman

New Look Only One Feature of Roaring Twenties Included in Sound and Fury's Shameless Program

By Paul Rothman

The "New Look" will not be the only part of the "Roaring Twenties" found in Chapel Hill this week; on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights Memorial hall stage will be full of the gunplay and bawdy life of that period when Sound and Fury present Pete Strader and Ken Gammage's musical comedy, "Gin Lane."

The musical's plot revolves around a character named Trixie O'Toole (Faith Adams), a tender, gin drinking housewife who eliminates her husband Sam (Diek Nunis) and his roommate Billie (Alice Denham) in true "Frankie and Johnny" style.

After the smoke clears, sweet Trixie forms another triangle with "Lucky" Luigi (Mac Shaw), an unpolished rum runner, and "Kraut" Schultz (Norman Sper), a more suave member of the bootlegging profession. Attempting to stretch the new triangle into an overmanned quadrangle is a clever lawyer named Claude Barrow (Tommy Thomas).

To add to the confusion—and to give a couple of people a chance to sing—an innocent love affair between one of Luigi's lieutenants, Rudy (Sam Greene), and Schultz's daughter Clara (Pat Ellis) is thrown in for counterpart.

A couple of principle characters putting the comedy into the musical comedy are a reporter neamed Mike Flannery (Erle Hall) and a sob sister called Mary Maudlyn (Violet LaRue). There are many speaking roles in what Strader and Gammage call "the extravaganza." Some of the actors not already mentioned are Jane Hunter, Audrie Green, Jerry Weiss, Charley Joyner, Mark Barker, Doris Weaver, Dan Morgan, Barbara Bess, Dolly Colwell, Harold Kastner, Patsey McNutt, Bob Hurley, Jack Daniels, Tommy Thompson, Ann Humphrey, Rufus Bynum, Mary Lou Williams, James Caudill, Forrest Covington, Coline Smith, Richard Burbage, Colbert Leonard, and Pat Winslow.

6Other Voices

In addition to the singing done by Pat Ellis, soprano, and Sam Greene, a baritone who sang with the Great Lakes Naval Chorus during the war, the singing voices of Audrie Green, contralto, Coline Smith, Jimmy Caudill, a baritone who plays junior varsity football when he isn't singing, and Tommy Thomas, bass, will be heard.

Forming the musical background for the show will be a chorus, under the direction of baritone Forrest Covington, composed of Jack Clinard, Bob Hurley, Bob Dockham, Steve Osborne, Bob Barber, Dan Morgan, Wilton Stewart, Jane Hunter, Doris Weaver, Barbara Bess, Ann Humphrey, Pat Winslow, who also sings a solo, Mary Lou Williams, Harold Kastner.

Veterans To Elect Officers And Study Committee Reports

The University Veterans association will hold elections for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer during its business meeting, to b held in the UVA clubhouse at 7:30 tomorrow night, Hugh Wells, president of the organization, announced yesterday.

Among other important items of business to be carried out will be the presentation of a new constitution by a committee formed during the summer quarter as a result of a resolution passed last May .

Housing Report

Also to be submitted will be reports on housing, eating facilities, and prices in restaurants by two committees appointed at the last business meeting.

The report on housing will be used to negotiate with University authorities and the state legislature to seek means for alleviating housing difficulties in Chapel Hill.

Another item to be discussed will be plans to bring strong pressure on Congress for early passage of subsistence and job training bills.

Woodhouse to Talk On Civil Liberties

"Civil Liberties in the Light of Current Events" will be the subject of a talk to be delivered by Dr. E. J. Woodhouse, university professor of political science, at the meeting of the Carolina chapter of the Students for Democratic Action to be held at 7:30 Tuesday evening in Roland Parker lounge No. 2 of Graham memorial.

The speaker will pay particular attention in his talk to civil liberties in relation to the Durham snake handlers and the recent congressional investigation of communist activities in Hollywood according to W. C. Dutton Jr., president of the SDA. He is also expected to comment on the report made last week by the President's civil liberties committee.

WESLEY TO MEET

Seminars in Christian Life will continue, by request, at tonight's meeting of Wesley foundation Methodist student group: Following supper at 5:45 four discussion groups will meet under Mr. Claude Shotts, Prof. Fred Ellis, Prof. Guy Johnson, and Mr. Joe McArthur.

Campus Drips and Droops with Team and Students Away; Christmas Spirit of 'Jingle Bells' Odd in Wet Village

By Rancy Stanford

University stay-at-homers plodded sluggishly about a quiet, dripping campus yesterday, clad in hats, overcoats, galoshes, and good wishes for the athletic warriors away in the Capital City.

The campus walks and streets were not deserted; the usual pre-war vista of an empty campus that was presented on away-from-home gridiorn week-ends, seems to have gone permanently into the memories of old grads. But things could be said to have "thinned out" considerably. Local police officials said that so far the week-end had been "mighty quiet", with only six or seven arrests of a minor nature. And one could even get a cup of coffee in the Y building without getting bruised and lacerated in the process.

The animal student body was particularly disgruntled by the dampness; there wasn't a happy squirrel within miles of the Old Well, and soggy dogs wandered aimlessly about, seeming to find no vitality to chase after anything or anybody.

A campus secretary, "taking five" from her Saturday morning typing, commented over her coffee cup in the Y that she felt right at home now Chapel Hill's own peculiar variety of "sunshine" had come back again.

"Been wondering where it had gone this fall," she said, "now it seems to be back to normal once more."

A certain book and record store in the downtown district, with a rather sadistic sense of humor, blared the cheery lyrics of "Jinble Bells" by public address system over the streaming sidewalks all morning.

By 2 o'clock in the afternoon, all the residents of the were able, were curled up school and community who comfortablely by a radio receiver, and feeling rather sorry for anyone out in a cold, wet football stadium on such a day.

Campus Confederate Soldier Tipples; Open for Possible Military Tribunal

By Charlie Gibson

At his post on the center of campus yesterday the Confederate Soldier stood fortified against a drizzling rain with a pint of cheap whiskey and a soft drink chaser.

Looking towards Franklin Street without the faintest sympton of shame, the guardsman clutched his trusty musket to prevent either spongers' begging a shot of the bottle in the crook of his right arm or teetotalers' swiping the Seven-Up tucked under his collar. Below him Liberty, always the lady, placed an admonishing hand on the shoulder of a more sober and intellectual student as if voicing a 'tsh, tsh" to reprimand such a display of low morals.

How the historic soldier became a "man of distinction" is quite a mystery. Perhaps a squad of fraternity pledges with an invitation to bend an elbow with them brought back booze from Durham for him. Maybe football celebrants left him liquid spirits for his low spirits over not being able to get released from his post to make the trip to Washington this week-end. Or were the Four Roses meant as a floral wreath in late observance of Armistice Day?

Since the last drop of the liquor was gone by yesterday afternoon, the Southern militiaman faces possible courts-martial under the 86th Article of War for being drunk on guard duty. His only hope for promotion to corporal is that someone will remove the bottled evidence.

Freshman Chapel Would Solve Many Problems

At the Coalition council meeting last Wednesday afternoon, Jack Booraem stated and it was generally agreed that the whole mix-up concerning Freshman elections could be blamed to one weakness—there is a great need for a freshman chapel. We are inclined to agree with Booraem, and add that until there is an organized freshman class there will always be chaos and ill-feeling over the election of class officers. There is no adequate way to disseminate information concerning the election.

The plan under which the freshman chapel used to operate at least deserves consideration.

The meeting was compulsory for all freshmen; they were assigned a seat and the honor council was responsible for taking attendance. For a short period, at the first of the fall quarter, chapel was held daily. Then it was held once a week. The exercises were at 10:30 in the morning, and those who were not freshmen and were not required to go to attend chapel, enjoyed a "Y court session." The morning classes began at 8:30 in the morning instead of at 8. Since freshman chapel was a half hour session from 10:30 to 11 o'clock, classes resumed on the hour each day beginning at 11 o'clock.

Perhaps this system is antiquated and designed for a smaller student body than we have at present. Perhaps it would be unwise to sacrafice a class period for a chapel session. But we believe that this plan should definately be looked into, and, if it will not work, then other possibilities should be examined.

Freshman chapels performed a worthwhile function. It reinforced the gaps that were left from orientation week, because of inadequate time. Fresman chapel was the one place where the new men were taught the football cheers. The cheerleaders from the campus itself and from other ers were asked to attend one of the gatherings and lead the men in the yells. Speakplaces were invited to appear before the freshmen and speak for a few minutes.

But perhaps the most important function which it served was to familiarize campus newcomers with the Carolina Way of Life. and dissiminate among them pertinent information such as how freshman class officers were elected. You can go down the list and say that fraternity rushing would be a much smoother process if it could be discussed and explained to the men at a mass meeting.

All during the year various groups and the administration find that their work would be much easier and that the spirit on the campus would pick up one hundred per cent if there was some way to get the new men under one roof. A return to holding freshman chapel is the answer.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

How Morgenthau Got The Gate

Washington.—There's one story Henry Morgenthau probably won't reveal in his "kiss-and-tell" series. It is the story of how he could have remained on as Secretary of the Treasury under Truman if he hadn't muffed the ball.

Under Roosevelt, Morgenthau had achieved the record of having been Secretary of the Treasury longer than any other man in history.

When Truman took office, however, Henry found himself not a member of the new inner circle and a couple of months after Truman had got settled in the White House, Henry thought he could get a definite commitment as to whether he was to remain permanently.

To this end, Morgenthau called in Clinton Anderson, then Congressman from New Mexico, now Secretary of Agriculture, who had been an intimate friend of Truman's during his days on Capitol Hill. Morgenthau explained his quandary and asked Anderson's advice.

"I think I'd better have a showdown," Morgenthau suggested. "I think I should ask the President whether he definitely wants me to remain on with him during the rest of his term."

"I wouldn't do that if I were you," advised Anderson. "Truman's funny about things like that .He might misunderstand you."

What Anderson couldn't tell Morgenthau was that he had already talked to Truman about both Morgenthau and Ickes. Truman had called Anderson to ask if he would take the job of Secretary of Interior. Truman had in mind the fact that Anderson was from New Mexico, and he wanted a Far Westerner to fill the interior post. Anderson, however, demurred.

"I'd let Ickes stay if I were you," he advised. "The old man has done a good job, and I'd keep him on—certainly until after the war's over. He has a big following, and he deserves credit for his work."

"What about Morgenthau?" Truman then asked.

"I'd keep him on, too," advised Anderson. "He's known as a great friend of Roosevelt's, and you need to keep some of Roosevelt's friends."

"I could use Vinson in that spot," Truman countered.

"Yes, but Vinson's too important where he is," replied Anderson, having in mind the fact that Vinson was pinch-hitting in various jobs as War Mobilizer and Federal Loan Administrator.

So, when Morgenthau consulted Anderson some weeks later, the latter strongly advised Morgenthau—in view of his previous talk with Truman—not to force a showdown.

Morgenthau, however, ignored Anderson's advice. Going over to the White House, he told the new President, in brief:

"I want to see where I stand with you."

"What do you mean?" asked Truman.

Then Henry explained that he wanted to know whether he was to remain on as Secretary of the Treasury as long as Truman was President.

"I can't make any promises like that," Truman replied, becoming irked.

"Well, in that case, I'll have to resign," said the Secretary of the Treasury.

Whereupon, Truman handed him a piece of paper.

"Start writing," he said.

And that ended the term of the longest Secretary of the Treasury in history.

The old Washington adage that too much publicity is worse than none is making life a little too tough for young Clark Clifford, President Truman's able special counsel and speech writer.

Clifford differs from such erstwhile brain trusters as Tommy Corcoran, Ben Cohen and the late Harry Hopkins in that he has never been afflicted with a "passion for anonymity." A gregarious, likable individual who enjoys being around people, Clifford is too considerate to brush off reporters who want to write about him. Result: He is constantly being ribbed by colleagues inside the White House.

Military aide Harry Vaughan, partly out of jealousy, has been one of the chief ribbers. Once the President laughingly commented that his talented young aide has a slight case of "Potomac fever," which he would get over in due time.

Report on Civil Rights

By John Burrowes Sevier

Coming during a time of recurring and ever-increasing anti-Negro, anti-Jewish, anti-Catholic, anti-Communist—in fact, "anti" just about any thing that you or I may not like one hundred per cent, the recently published finding of the President's Committee on Civil Rights undoubtedly will stir up considerable controversy, both pro and con.

Briefly, the report states that the system of "separate but equal" education in the South invariably reacts against the Negro through inferior equipment, curricula, expenditure, and teacher's salaries in the Negro schools.

In some Northern colleges Negroes, Jews, and Catholics are limited to certain regidly enforced quotas. The Committe found that in the Nation's Capitol—which, by the way, is a federal district, and ordinarily would not be expected to cater to the traditions or customs of any one section of the country— that discrimination had even penetrated the finals of the marbles tournament where the white contestant was always declared the winner and the Negro the runner-up. this not to mention segregation in the district's schools, theatres, restaurants, transportation, etc!

By its own admission. the Committe confined itself to reporting the "dark" side of the picture, and made the following recommendations: federal legislation against lynching. poll taxes. segregation in the armed forces. and discrimination in employment; state legislation against discrimination and segregation in schools, health services, and public services; setting up an FBI unit on Civil Rights; clarifying the loyalty obligation of federal employees to protect their civil rights; full voting rights for citizens of the District of Columbia; other minor points clarifying the above recomendations.

Criticism of the report takes two forms: first. those who contend that the report was unduly harsh on practices of the South and other areas point to the fact that the report mentioned little if anything on the postive side of the ledger; and second. those who feel that the recommendations contained in the report did not go far enough. since it placed quite a bit of responsibility upon the states which have thus far, with the notable exception of such states as New York, done little to guarantee equal opportunity for all.

But there is another factor which seems to have been minimized so far. How can our economic and social system, based as it is on the private appropriation of the social wealth, maintain itself against the demand for economic and social democracy in the fullest sense of the word without drastically altering our social and economic institutions?

Those who hold this view maintain that rights in the economic sphere are the fundamentals on which rights in the political sphere are based, and they ask how can society, as presently constituted under "private enterprise," do more than scratch the surface of a subject that requires long range planning. What, say these critics of the report, do we want, full opportunities for all, or our present system?

WOMAN FLIER ABASHED

By Broken Garter

Lexington, Neb. (UP)—A North Platte woman flier landed her light plane at Lexington and was startled by her greeting.

As she stepped to the ground, a bystander said: "You have a broken garter."

The woman took a quick look to see if she could remedy the calamity. But it required a mechanic.

The "garter" is a band that surrounds a landing strut on the aircraft.

Book Review

The Bitter Art Of John O'Hara

By Bob Sain

Hellbox, By John O'Hara, 210 pages, Random House.

John O'Hara is the kind of writer who believes that if everything is okay there isn't much point in writing about it; it is only when lives get out of whack that he finds them interseting enough to put into one of his hard, dispassionate short stories.

Somehow O'Hara writes about worthless people who lead pointless lives and manages to make these same useless people attractive; you care what happens to them, There is much of the philosophy of Baudelarie in O'Hara: this modern American writer seems to find the most beauty in what is called "evil," as did the 19th century French poet.

For there is beauty in O'Hara's bitterness. Of course, he is recognized as one of the few masters of the clean "Hemingway" prose style, but that is not the selling point of his stories. His characters possess glamour—they are all rich or beautiful or strong or evil, but O'Hara has no monoply on this. He is certainly entertaining, for he writes stories, not simply incidents; there is a beginning and a middle and an end to everything O'Hara writes—but this commodity is readily available in the works of O'Henry and numerous other writers.

The beauty of an O'Hara story is not, then, in its sure craftsmanship, nor in its ability to entertain; it is in the author's philosophy of realism which recognizes that everyone is selfish and that no one is good and that these are the very things which make living something more than monotony.

O'Hara is 42 years old. has not become widely popular, but has a noticeable influence the same influence that was on younger writers. This is attributed to Hemingway in the middle thirties; (it is certain that O'Hara has read much Hemingway and profited by it) But now the influence, though still indirectly from Hemingway, is once or twice removed.

(In passing, it might be well to note that O'Hara has borrowed only the crisp prose of Hemingway, not his obsession with death. O'Hara's focal point is sex, which is not half so grim.)

"Hellbox" contains 26 stories, all entertaining and two or three of which are contemporary classics. His cast of characters ranges from a young cafe owner who wants to be a cowboy to a slipping, middle-aged movie actress who calls a male passenger into her train drawing room to help her pass a night. There are assorted showpeople, both el-keepers, writers, society tramps, small-town businessmen and New England villagers.

The stories seldom exceed 3,000 words in length but —for the most part— appeared in the "New Yorker" and are probably the best O'Hara has done since he first took the market in thelate thirties.

For those who want to be entertained, and especially for those who want to write "Hellbox" is the book to read.

Tips on Toggery

Fashions for Spectators

With bullets passes whipping through the air, line bucks picking up short—but sweet yardage, tackles turning in the ends, and backs reeling off touchdowns, there's no doubt about it—football is in for one of its greatest seasons. No idlers in this excitement, we've been scouting the games not only for the flavor of fine football, but to see what university men are wearing on the campus and as spectators at the gridiron game. We've seen enough to convince us that college fashions are doing some high scoring themselves this year. For one thing, we've observed a lot of the raglan topcoat.

The military collar, set high and folding snugly at the neck, the roomy sleeves with seams extending clear up to the collar, slash pockets and flowing lines lend dash to young men who prefer the casual, well-groomed look. For some, the raglan is a dualpurpose rain-topcoat in water-repellent tan gabardine, easily recognized as a twill weave, worsted fabric. But it looks equally well in covert cloth, a smooth finish, closely woven, diagonal weave woolen. It's a deft fit in grey herringbone or diagonal weave tweed. And, of course, it is a perennial favorite in natural tan camel's hair.

As always, astute undergraduates are accepting certain ideas in clothes and accessories and emphatically rejecting others. For example, khaki hats: the khaki-colored felt hat is obviously favored by college men. The hat band is the same color as the body of the hat but in a darker shade. The brim, finished with a stictched on felt binding, is about a half-inch in width and in a much lighter tone of the hat's basic color. An unfailing fashion note on every campus is the diamond shaped crease and pinched crown. It tops off an outfit astonishingly well and is observed at every football game of any importance. And as a tip to the budget wise, its neutral tone is good company with various colors in odd jackets, suits and topcoats. Always a requirement for good grooming, hats are beable on the campus; particucoming more and more noticelarly with near-graduates readying to cross lances in business and professional careers. A positive asset, at that.

Pigskin gloves are another item the complete undergraduate is wearing. A fashion favorite in the cork shade, they are winners for extra warmth. Naturally they go well with the heftiness characteristic of the wing tip shoes widely accepted in brown grain and smooth leathers .The wing tip shoe has a handsome, sturdy look emphasized by thick leather soles. With rubber available, one also sees wing tips with plain rubber soles,molded traction bottoms, or crepe rubber soles.

It's apparent, then, that the university man's fall wardrobe is colorful yet conservative; practical yet interesting. And certainly seen to no better advantage than on every campus and in the nation's stadia: where North meets South and East meets West; and where the hocus-pocus of the grodiorn gladiators is King from coast to coast.

WSSF Chairmen Thank Students For Donations

Dear Sirs,

This year's World Student Service drive showed a substantial improvement by doubling the amount collected last year. This is the third year that the drive has been held and each year the total contributions have doubled. Five thousand dollars is by no means an insignificant figure but we feel that next year this amount can and should be doubled.

The fact that the contributions have steadily risen from year to year shows an increasing awareness among Carolina students of the necessity for assuming a responsibility for the rehabilitation of students in war-torn countries. The indications are that this awareness will continue to grow until this student body is contributing to its full capacity. We must give more if we expect to see our fellow students educated in a decent manner.

We want to thank publicly at this time, all those people who so graciously gave of their time and money which all too often, was very precious. Without the wholehearted efforts of every member of our huge staff, the drive would have been a failure and without the substantial contributions from the student body at large all of our efforts would have been for nought.

May we thank you, for the destitute students, for the help that you have given them.

Water Pistols and Individual Firewatchers Suggested for State Student Legislature

By Al Lowenstein

North Carolina is the only state in the Union which has a governor who does not have the veto power, which has a state university older than Georgia's, and which has (or had at press time) a state student legislative assembly.

Since no other state would ever want a vetoless governor, and since only Georgia would like to change the chronology of the founding of state universities—something she cannot do even if three or four of her simultaneous governors were to try at once—Tar Heels can feel pretty sure of these two distinctions, at least.

The danger to North Carolina's splendid isolation in being the only state with a student legislative assembly appears to come from two sources: Virtually every other state would like to emulate it, and (one is tempted to believe at times) some within the State would like to liquidate it. In fact, sometimes it seems that, given time, North Carolina will be the only state without what it is now the only state with.

Governor Speaks

The Student Legislative Assembly meets annually in Raleigh. Certain generalized observations about latter- day Assemblies may be in order They seem always to meet the weekend of the Carolina-Virginia game, a state of affairs which undoubtedly fails to impress most of the delegates, but one which invariably causes hectic dashes back to Chapel Hill by loyal Tar Heels. There are always speeches by the Secretary of State and other worthies, highlighted by the Governor except when he gets called out of town like he did last year; there are always plans to "make the students' wishes known" by setting up a permanent governing board for the Legislature. And there are always last-minute crises of great proportions in High Places before the Children can meet.

The variety of dreaded events which can be conjured up as a result of this revolutionary conclave (before it has met) are not to be sneezed at merely because nothing dreadful ever happens. Nor should the whole matter be lightly dismissed simply because some naive people may wonder what the fuss is over, when 150 college students are scheduled to get together for five or six hours to discuss current events and get ensnarled in the Parliamentary procedure which ensnarls the distinguished men they are playing at being.

Red Fire, Maybe

There is time to consider only the most distressing and far-reaching of the horrid things which might happen during, or as a result of, this aberration of somebody's mores: Presumably fire, a real, live, red fire, might break out in the Capitol building. (Maybe this is what is meant by "certain flames being fanned".) It is of course, possible that the Capitol is fireproof, but if it isn't or if it is and were to catch fire anyway, the cost to the State would be great, and the cream of the youth of the State might be trampled to death trying to escape or burned to death by the flames they had fanned while trying recklessly to escape.

Last Year Different

One is tempted to suggest that if flames are indeed the problem, is is a concern which ought to apply equally—if separately— to adult legislators. Perhaps it will be determined that no one should meet in the Capitol; or perhaps firemen should be stationed behind each Legislator; or perhaps everyone should be armed with a water pistol and a bucket of sand as he or she enters the building.

Maybe there is fear that Youth would be too radical

'Deloof Niaga!'

New Orleans Nov. 15—(UP)—Even the people who breeze through French menus were stopped by an item which showed up on the bill of fare in one of the most select restaurants here.

The dish read "Florida Fried Spmirhs," and was ordered by some of the establishment's most discerning customers, who didn't bat an eyelash as they gave it a very French pronunciation.

They all felt a bit crestfallen when the fried "Spmirhs" turned out to be nothing more than "shrimps" —spelled backwards.

Bridge Enthusiasts Hold Heated Meets In Student Union

By Margie Taylor

On the Carolina campus one doesn't have to look far to find bridge players. More than 50 per cent of the students play, some quite frequently perhaps, but all with a desire to run through just "one more hand," hoping for a grand slam and a grand score.

It might seem difficult to believe, but the life of a deck of cards is only three months at Graham Memorial. And to discover the number of hands it has passed through one should begin by counting the members of the Carolina Bridge association who meet every Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock for their weekly bridge tournament.

Duplicate?

The term duplicate might confuse the average player unless he is familiar with tournaments, so a brief summary of the theory may be in order.

It is obvious in large city clubs that some members like nothing more than an intoxicating bridge game and play with more ease when under som influence. The Carolina members haven't reached the stage of dark glasses and inebriation which the big tournaments reveal but often there are explosive games in the club.

In the midst of all this bridge activity is Howell Peacock, student director of the group. Howell maintains an impassive expression during a bridge game, but an explosive pitch within himself in enthusiasm for the Carolina Bridge league. As Graham Memorial bridge director since June, 1946, he has been a moving spirit in making the tournaments interesting and successful.

Since he has been in charge of the tournaments the record score for one evening has been 71.9 per cent and considering that 50 per cent is average this is an excellent record. However, not all players are capable of running up such a score. Howell announced that classes are held in the student union every Monday evening at 7:30 for those who want to learn the game, or improve their playing.

Copperhead, Frenzied Women Mark Snake Cult

Reporter Gives Eye-Witness Account

By Chuck Hauser

We found the building wedged in between two others on dimly-lit Peabody street in Durham. Black letters proclaimed it to be the Zion Tabernacle.

"What time are services supposed to begin this evening?" we asked a young woman who was walking toward the door.

"They usually start about 7:30," she answered. The time was then 6:15 on a dark and cold Sunday evening. About a dozen people were already inside.

After calling time out for a couple of hamburgers, we returned to the small structure about 7 o'clock to find all the seats taken and people already beginning to fill up the standing space in the rear of the small quasi-auditorium. All ages were present, from babes in arms to 85-year-old great grandmothers.

We pushed our way down to the front and moved over to the side wall where we could stand out of the way and still see every thing that went on. A small group of seven or eight people were standing around the upright piano singing loud, rhythmic hymns which were slightly reminiscent of Negro revival meetings.

More people joined them in their singing. The music was growing more noisy and emotional by the minute. A young girl who was seated on the front row of benches got up and began dancing to the strains, jerking her head around in spasmodic movements. She couldn't have been over 14 years old.

A middle-aged woman caught the spirit and started a jitterbug step up on the platform that the most fanatic hep-cats would envy. Her eyes rolled around, giving her a half-crazed look.

About 7:30 a small, dark-haired man of about 35 stepped into the center of the clearing between the platform and the rows of seats. He told how previous services in the Tabernacle had been visited by officers of the Durham Police force, and how they had seized a copperhead snake which was being used in that part of the service.

All Cowards

"If you folks in the rear see any policemen, please step aside and let them through. We have nothing to hide from the law here. And if any of you people are police in plain clothes, please put your badges out where everyone can see them. Otherwise you are all cowards."

"When the police took one of our serpents, they arested me for handling him," the man, whom we assumed by this time was Colonel Bunn, declared. (The "Colonel" is not a title, but his given name.)

He went on to explain how the police had been too "cowardly" to arrest all of the other people who had been handling the reptile.

"Tonight," he said, "I want you all to gather around me when they come, so if they want to take the snake, they will have to take all of us."

Fabulous Bunn

The services began. More singing brought on more exhibitions such as the ones the two women had put on earlier. Bunn began preaching. By this time the rear of the room was packed. Sardines had nothing on the mob of curiosity-seekers who practically stood on one another's shoulders to get a glimpse of the fabulous Bunn. There must have been over 400 people in the tiny building as its walls strained outward.

Sudden Appearance

"Someone asked me earlier if I would bring out a serpent tonight. I don't know. I only know that I will do what I feel like doing. What we need here tonight isn't serpents. What we need is God."

"Praise the Lord. Thank you, Jesus," was echoed over the room. "Amen. Praise

'Students Decry Alcoholic Waste' Says Writer In Dry Era Tar Heel

(NOT SO LONG BACK, nationwide prohibition was the order of the day. Exactly twenty years ago....in the November 15 issue of the then tri-weekly Tar Heel....a student journalist wrote how "Students Decry Alcoholic Waste," reprinted below—Ed.)

"Don't cry over spilled milk," did not apply to sweet essence of corn Saturday afternoon when a passing motorist dropped from his car a half gallon fruit jar of corn whiskey on Franklin street in front of the Carolina Confectionary. A recent addition to the police force was a block away and smelled the whiskey, so he said. When he arrived on the scene there was a score or more of mournful looking students standing around the fragments of glass and the large wet spot where the liquid landed on the pavement. Nor did the students simply take a look and walk away. Instead they stood over the spot as they would have over their grandmother's grave, and now and then came close to get the full benefit of the penetrating odor.

Some wag, probably wishing a test drill for the fire department, lit a newspaper and threw it on the large wet spot where the whiskey was still standing in small puddles on the street. Everyone quickly retreated to avoid the blaze, but instead of the alcohol igniting and burning up, the spectators heard a sizzling sound of water and fire in contact, and the paper was extinguished. Some bootlegger knew his mixtures too well.

The whiskey was thought to have been thrown from a car bearing a Sanford license which was seen to pass the corner coming from Sanford only a moment before the crash of the bottle was heard. The officer stated that the only charge against the party would be breaking glass on the street as there is no law to prosecute a person after he has spilled the whiskey. However, no one admitted the less in hope of regaining it from the city.

MacArthur for President?

By United Press

Though Gen. Douglas MacArthur has not publicly stated whether he will run for the Republican presidential nomination, a national campaign in his behalf is getting underway.

Lansing Hoyt, a lifelong friend and leading supporter of Mac Arthur, has announced organization of a national MacArthur - for - President group. Representatives of ten states met in Milwaukee yesterday to name a national chairman and state leaders for the campaign.

Hoyt, himself chairman of the Wisconsin MacArthur backers, said he didn't expect to make any startling announcements during the conference. He didn't. But he guardedly predicted that the general "could announce his candidacy" before Christmas.

For some time Hoyt has maintained that MacArthur would accept the nomination if it were offered him. A correspondent for the Baltimore Sun papers reported earlier this month that MacArthur had told friends in Tokyo that the general in fact would actively seek the nomination—"later."

Pledge Officers, Parties

The pledge class of the Kappa Alpha Order, after being honored by the KA chapter last weekend with a dance featuring the Bull City Nighthawks, elected the following officers for the year: Pohn Campbell from Shelby, president; Don Nicholson, Brooklyn, N. Y., vice-president; Carl Braswell, Monroe, secretary; and Joe Satterthwaite, Edenton, treasurer.

Married men in the chapter under the leadership of Dave Stephens "o organized a special Kappa Alpha Ball and Chain club to leave KA husbands more time with their families and to offer their wives a more tangible means of fraternity appreciation.

Friday night of the Homecoming weekend a weiner rost was given by the Kappa Chapter of the University of North Carolina in honor of the Kappa Sigma Chapter at State. A brunch was served to the guests, their dates, and the members of the local chapter on the following morning. After the game the Carolina brothers entertained the guests and alumni at a buffet dinner. Later in the evening The Kappa Sigs were announced the winners of the homecoming display.

Alderman Has Five In Miss Payoff Race

Alderman with its reputation for beautiful girls, was spotlighted last week when five of its occupants entered the "Miss Payoff" contest sponsored by the WSSF. The girls, totalling higher than those chosen by any other dorm on campus, were as follows: Tenn Mason, Beckie Holton, Babs DeWitt, Joan Lucas, and Martha Manning.

On Tuesday night, November 11. Alderman co-eds were entertained at an informal dance by the Veterans' club. The evening included vocal selections by Sam Green, and mints and nuts were served to the guests.

McIver Fete

One of the big events of the week for the girls in McIver dorm was the unexpected serenade by members of the Sigma Chi Fraternity last Monday evening.

SORORITY NOTES

Chi Omega

The two parties, a pin-up, and a baby form the news from Chi Omega.

Lewis dorm was host for the Chi Omegas at an informal open house in Graham memorial October 30. A week later the Chi O's entertained Beta Theta Pi at a wiener roast in Coker's Meadow.

An ATO serenade Wednesday marked the pinning of Joan Butler by Al Ruggles of Chevy Chase, Maryland and word comes from Raleigh that the former Nancy Wood, now Mrs. Edward Carson, is the mother of a son, Edward Carlisle Carson, Jr., born in October.

Chi O formally pledged Jay Williams Thursday, and entertained Mrs Joseph Pratt of Chapel Hill at dinner Wednesday.

The sorority will entertain at coffee Sunday evening.

Pi Beta Phi

The Pi Beta Phi sorority gave a "football" dinner party for the Sigma Chi's Tuesday, November 11. Following the dinner and an entertaining skirt giving a woman's version of football (T-formation and let's all have a cup), the Pi Phis and Sigma Chi's went to Woollen gymnasium to watch the volleyball game, which the Pi Phis won over Kenan, 41-27.

Two of last year's alumnae, Estelle Boyce, Pi Phi, and John Stedman, Phi Gamma Delta, were married in Warrenton, N. C., November 6. They are honeymooning in New England.

Hank Hopkins of Fayetteville has returned from Japan where she spent the past five months with her father, and will re-enter the University in January.

Alpha Gamma Delta

After winning first prize for the best float entry in the Sadie Hawkins day parade, the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority climaxed Homecoming weekend by their traditional open house with the State cheerleaders as special guests.

Alpha Gams and veterans attended a party at the Veterans' club last Tuesday night. Thursday night, the Alpha Gams rounded off two busy weeks of partying by a get-together with the Phi Delts.

Last week the Alpha Gams held an ice cream party for the ATO's. A program of skits and initiations was followed by an hour of coffee and conversation.

Delta Delta Delta

Last Thursday afternoon the Duke chapter of Delta Delta Delta got together with Alpha Sigma Tri Delts at a tea given by the Carolina chapter at the Carolina Inn.

The party was from 3 until 5 o'clock, and refreshments of tea and cakes were served. There was much talk of the forthcoming Duke - Carolina battle, but good will prevailed on all fronts.

Surprise of the week in the way of "pin-ups" was Phyllis Bradshaw, who is now wearing a shiny Phi Delt pin, and has been as of Tuesday night. The original wearer of the pin is Al Williams, now in first year law school.

Alpha Delta Pi

Dorothy Dashiell, member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, has set November 25 as the date for her marriage to Adrian "Duke" Smith, Phi Delta Theta. The sorority presented the bride-to-be with two pieces of silver at a bridge party given in her honor by Peggy Cates, ADPi alumna from Hillsboro.

Recently pinned to Bob Edwards, Sigma Chi, was Shirley Small, ADPi alumna from Kansas. Shirley, who came down for the Tennessee week-end, is still in Chapel Hill, staying at the home of Mrs. I. W. Rose.

Betsy Fountain of Fountain pledged ADPi in a ceremony held last Monday night.

Kappa Epsilon

Kappa Epsilon sorority welcomed two new pledges, Lucille Earl and Virginia Limbough at a party given in honor of the pledges and the veterans' wives of Pharmacy School Wednesday night in the Horace Williams lounge.

Forty guests took part in the bridge games after which refreshments were served, members of the sorority acting as hostesses. The color scheme of the Kappa Epsilon sorority was carried out in the pink and white ice cream and the white frosted cup cakes with the pink lettering of the sorority monogram.

Pat Burgess and Lynn Blanchard were responsible for the planning of the entertaining evening.

Harriers In Loop, IC4A Meets Monday; Wolfpack Upsets Wake, Duke Tied

Squad Is Divided For Big Events in New York, Raleigh

By Morty Schaap

New York, Nov. 15 — North Carolina's harriers, undefeated thus far this season, get their biggest test yet here on Monday when they participate in the annual IC4A cross country meet.

Approximately 250 entries representing some 40 schools will participate. New York University is the defending champion, but Carolina, Penn State, and Manhattan each have strong outfits entered this year that will give the New Yorkers a real race.

There will be two divisions in Monday's race. An array of freshman talent will start off at 2 o'clock, followed by the varsity participants at 3. The freshmen will run three miles while their bigger brothers go a full five miles over the uptown track. The final mile leads over cemetery hill and then across about 440 yards of flat-running space and thence into the stadium, where the last 220 yards will be run.

Milne Highly Regarded

Standouts in the varsity race are Jack Dianetti, durable Michigan State runner; Bob Black, Rhode Island State; Armand Osterburg, NYU; Dick Church, Syracuse; Gerry Karver, Penn State; Bob Ashenfelter, Penn State; and North Carolina's Jack Milne.

New York's Larry Ellis is favored to take the frosh title. He had a great season in high school last year, running the mile in 4:17.

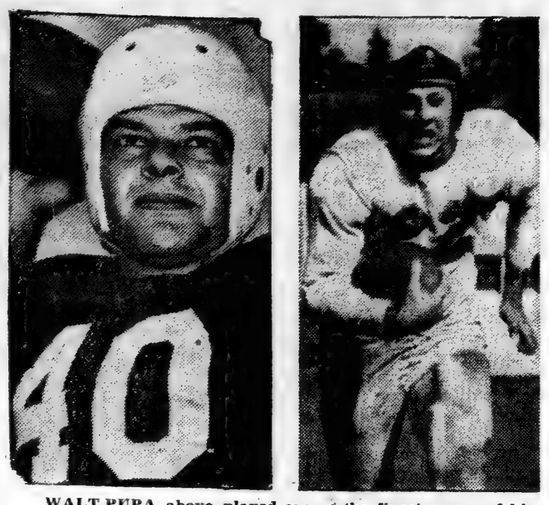
Coach Dale Ranson's North Carolina squad will not be at full strength for the race. The Southerners are in the difficult position of having to participate in two races on the same day. The Southern conference cross country title will be decided in Raleigh, N. C., tomorrow, and part of the Tar Heel squad stayed behind for that meet.

Fo[illegible] Last Year

Making the New York trip are Milne, Al Smith, who finished sixth in the IC4A last year, Sam Magill, Mark Burnham, Chuck Herty, Halstead Holden, and Julian Mackenzie. Carolina will be out to better a fourth place finish here last year.

The team is quartered in the Hotel Paramount for its New York stay. Most of the members have been here a couple of days and have had an opportunity to work out on the IC4A layout.

Carolina will have one man entered in the freshman race. Bob Black, out of Mercersburg academy in Pennsylvania, is regarded as one of the best middle distance prospects in the country, and Coach Ranson hopes he will do just as well in the cross country race.



SOUTHERN CONFERENCE MEET

Raleigh, Nov. 15.—The Southern Conference cross country title will be at stake here tomorrow afternoon when representatives from at least seven loop schools toe the starting line on the N. C. State track.

Defending champion North Carolina won't be its usual strong self today because of the absence of eight of the team's better runners who are in New York for the IC4A meet there. But sports observers in Raleigh

Leaders in Tar Heel Attack

WALT PUPA, above, played one of the finest games of his career yesterday in the mud of Griffith stadium to lead Carolina to a 19-0 win over Maryland. Pupa scored the first touchdown, and Charlie Justice, right, found himself in the second half and also scored with a 10-yard end run.

Carolina vs. Duke

Duke Still Leads Conference But Gets Big Test This Week

By Dick Jenrette

Duke's wobbly Blue Devils still cling to their precarious perch at the head of the Southern Conference according to the latest tabulation of the loop standings, but the charges of Coach Wallace Wade meet their biggest test yet when they play North Carolina's Tar Heels in Durham next Saturday.

The Blue Devils could do no better that get a 0-0 tie with South Carolina yesterday, but they have four conference wins to balance the tie, all of which gives Duke a slim lead over William and Mary, now second with six wins and but one loss. Carolina is the only other team with a chance for the title.

The eyes of the state and South will be focused on Durham Saturday for the Duke-Carolina battle. Prior to tying South Carolina yesterday, Duke had dropped two straight tilts; so Carolina will be a definite favorite to take the Dukes into camp.

The Tar Heels have won five straight games now, capping this with a 19-0 win over Maryland. But the natural rivalry between Duke and Carolina and the many upsets in the past between the two will probably restrain any avid Tar Heel rooters from being too confident of a win over the Devils.

Indians Next in Line

If Carolina should beat Duke, William & Mary undoubtedly will be crowned the new conference champion in place of Carolina, which took the title in 1946. The Indians were beaten by the North Carolinians earlier in the season, but the fact that they play more conference games than either Carolina or Duke would give them the title on a basis of having more wins than the other aspirants.

There were many surprises over the conference this weekend. Stat stumped the experts and astounded the South by rolling over Wake Forest, 20-0. Only the week before State had been beaten by Carolina, 41-6. And Wake Forest had beaten Carolina by 19-7.

Chi Psi Can Clinch Grid Title Monday

One victory stands between Chi Psi's unbeaten gridders and the fraternity football championship, and a win in their clash with Zeta Psi tomorrow afternoon would clinch the crown.

The Grads will haul their creaking bones onto an adjacent gridiorn to fight it out with the Lewis nine for the dormitory league title.

Play in the intramural volleyball league continues fast and furious with another full schedule slated for the netmen this week.

The schedule for Monday:

Form Chart Wrong In Many Big Tilts On Grid Yesterday

Saturday was a rough afternoon for most of the nation's grid powers. Some came out with wins but mostly by narrow margins, and there were several tnat were the victims of upsets.

In the top game in the South, Alabama's up-and-coming Crimson Tide called on the talented passing arm of Harry Gilmer to knock Georgia Tech from the ranks of the unbeaten and untied power with a 14-7 victory. Prior to that game. Tech had marked up seven straight victories.

An underdog Army team spoiled Penn's bid for a perfect season by tying the Quakers, 7-7, in an Eastern headliner. Boston College, reportedly a bowl contender, took its second straight defeat, bowing to lowly Tennessee, 38-13, in another surprise. Some 30,0000 fans witnessed the game in Knoxville.

Penn State was one of the few unbeaten teams to get by without difficulty. The Nittany Lions beat luckless Navy, 20-7.

Michigan Looks Good

Michigan had a surprisingly easy time, beating Wisconsin, 40-6, to lay its hands on both the Big Nine title and a Rose Bowl bid, Michigan will probably move into the number one post in the nation this week since Notre Dame had such difficulty in subduing Northweastern, 26-19.

Southern Methodist got its bumps in the Southwest but in the end came through with a 14-6 win over Arkansas. SMU is still unbeaten.

In the South, once-unbeaten Virginia edged out West Virginia, 6-0, in a game that did little toward bettering the Cavaliers bowl chances.

Only Two Days

There are just two days left in which Carolina students can obtain cards which will permit them to get into the Duke game in Durham next Saturday. After Tuesday ,any students who didn't have their tickets simply will be out of luck.

The athletic office emphasized yesterday that the student ticket books would not gain admission to the game without the cards that are now being issued This is contrary to procedure in the past.

Almost 3,000 students have yet to pick up their cards at Woollen gym, and indications point to quite a rush for the ducates on these last two days.

Tar Heel Line Plays Big Role In Shutout Win over Maryland

Fred Sherman came out of nowhere to intercept on the Maryland 32 and go all the way down the right sidelines for a touchdown. Cox missed again, but it didn't matter—Carolina was in with another win.

There was just one disappointing feature for the Tar Heels. Charlie Justic's punting average for the day was only 23 yards a kick. But it should be considered that he was booting a soggy ball and on many occasions he was kicking inside Maryland territory and aiming for the sidelines rather than for distance.

On the bright side, two freshmen—Hayes and Sherman showed that they will be capable performers for Carolina's teams in the future. Both looked extremely good today.

The Tar Heels started right off the first time they gained possession as if they were out to step all over their opponents in the same manner as last week. Taking over on their own 35, Coach Carl Snavely's gridders, with Pupa and Justice alternating, marched 52 yards to the Terp 13 before a holding penalty moved them back. Three plays later, Jake Rowden intercepted a Pupa aerial and ran it back to the Marvland 45, where he fumbled as Joe Wright tackled him, Carolina recovered and began another goalward march that again ran out of steam. this time on the Maryland 21.

Looked Like Tie

And so it went, with Carolina continually moving the ball into Maryland territory only to be stopped short of the goal line each time, As for the Terrapins, the ywere finding the going even harder than the Tar Heels. They pushed their way into Carolina territory only once in the first half, then fumbled the slippery pigskin over to the Tar Heels on the Carolina 46. The visitors from the South moved down to the Maryland 24 late in the second stanza but that was as far as they could get. All of which meant that at half time, many in the crowd of 22,151 were predicting that the two teams would wind up in a scoreless tie for all their trouble. But the breaks decided otherwise.

The third quarter followed the same pattern as its two predecessors, although Maryland did exceed all its other drives by pushing to the Carolina 42. But three straight tackles by Wardle put an end to whatever threat the men of Jim Tatum had planned and that was the ex-

State Racks Up Win Over Deacons, 20-0

Raleigh, Nov. 15—(UP)—N. C. State's Wolfpack rebounded terrifically from last week's crushing loss to Carolina to bury highly favored Wake Forest by a 20-0 score in the mud of Riddick stadium.

The first half of the Southern conference battle was scoreless today, but a pair of backs, Charlie Richkus and Leslie Palmer, put on a sensational exhibition of offensive ability in the final stanza to stop the bigger Deacon team that was favored by at least two touchdowns.

Richkus opened the third period with a one-man show that went 70 yards in seven plays for a touchdown .He capped the drive with a beautiful 17-yard pass to Oscar Bozeman on the goal. Palmer added the extra point.

State struck again before the Deacons could hardly recover from the swiftness of the first touchdown. A blocked kick gave the Wolves the ball on the Wake 40, from which point Palmer and Richkus carried to the three. Two plays later Palmer scored.

With only a few minutes left in the game, Palmer contributed to the Deacons' misery by scampering 35 yards for a score. The successful conversion left the final score at 20-0.

Wake Forest had been mentioned as a possible bowl contender, but today's loss knocked Peahead Walker's Deacs out of further contention.

Blue Devils Battle Red Hot Gamecocks To 0-0 Tie in Mud

By Bill Kellam

Durham, Nov. 15—South Carolina's rugged Gamecocks, rated as 18 point underdogs by the experts in pre-game predictions, apparently hadn't read this week's newspapers for here this dreary afternoon in rain-soaked Duke Stadium Rex Enright's inspired charges mudded it out with the overrated Blue Devils and ended up with a well earned 0-0 tie. A cosy gathering of some 6,000 chilled and dampened fans witnessed today's doings.

South Carolina's second string quarterback Harold "Bo" Hagan presented the Blue Devils with a pair of golden scoring opportunities (their only two of the game) in the last half but each time the brawny Gamecock forwards dug in and halted the sputtering Duke attack.

Hagan Enters Game

Hagan entered the game late in the third period and wasted no time starting his presentations of the ball to the Wademen. A couple of plays after his appearance on the scene he wildly lateralled the ball in the general direction of a teammate, and after a wild scramble Duke tackle Dick Gardinier fell on the soggy oval on the Gamecock 20.

The Blue Devils took over and proceeded to march to the South Carolina 23 in four plays. Folger made two long but unsuccessful passes toward the Gamecock end zone, Bettis Herlong dashed over 50 yards across the field on an end run, but still ended up only at the line of scrimmage, Ben Williams lost three yards at center, and then the Enrightmen took over.

No More Threats

From here until the end of the contest both teams mauled each other at midfield with the Wademen getting the worst of a punt exchange.

Enright's huskies staged their only real scoring threat early in the third period when a trio of hard running Gamecocks, tailback Bishop Strickland, fullback Red Harrison, and wingback Harry DeLoach, paced a drive that started on the SC 29 and went all the way to the Duke 7 before the Blue Devil line did a little digging-in of its own to bring down the high flying Gamecocks.

South Carolina picked up 114 yards rushing to Duke's 102, although the Blue Devils rolled up 8 first downs to the Gamecocks' 6. The forward passing was very inaccurate and the yardage gained negligible.

Snakes

God."

The time had moved to about 8:30. Suddenly the copperhead seemed merely to appear in Bunn's hands. Who handed him the snake, we missed completely. The people in the rear crained their necks. Several dozen of his followers gathered around him as he fondled the snake. Music was coming now not only from the piano, but from an accordion and guitar which had been added a short while before.

A young woman took the serpent from him and caressed it lovingly. It was passed around the circle. All eyes were watching it intently, some fanatically.

As suddenly as it had appeared, the deadly little snake disappeared, and the music grew louder as Bunn shouted. "How many people here will come up to me and admit that they want God?"

Embraces Bunn

An elderly man pushed his way forward and embraced Bunn as the teary-eyed little preacher whispered words of blessing in his ear. A hefty middle-aged woman with a dark, foreign complexion pushed he way into the circle and held out her hands to Bunn.

He placed his hands on her temples and looked into her face. She collapsed quietly onto the floor. Two young girls moved to the front and received exactly the same treatment. Within several minutes, there were at least seven women stretched out on the floor. Other women danced and jerked their heads and bodies around as if in convulsions. A boy of about 14 hugged Bunn as blessings were showered upon him.

The women were helped up from the floor as the singing and dancing continued.

Quited Down

Things quieted down again as Bunn went into another excited "sermon," exhausting himself as he paced back and forth before his congregation, raising his voice one moment and quietly pleading the next.

The services seemed ready to go on for hours. The snake had been put away, and the police had not shown so we decided to leave, convinced that we had seen something we would not forget for a very long time.

We pushed our way back through the crowd, reached the door, and slipped into the dark of Peabody street.

tent of their penetration for this Saturday.

Pupa Really Moves

The rest of the story on the first touchdown was Pupa all the way. The hard-running full back collected 10 yards on his first battering attempt to move the ball down to the seven. He picked up two more on his next try and the third time he went all the way. Bob Cox converted and Carolina led, 7-0, with two minutes gone in the fourth period.

Five plays and two and one-half minutes later, the Tar Heels were again reaching the promised land. The break this time came when Turyn lateraled to no one in particular. Larry Klosterman pounced on the ball for the Tar Heels on the Maryland 12 and from there it took only two plays.

Assembly

when gathered in quantity for discussion periods. The trouble is that, much as it may behoove Youth to be radical, noone ever thought of this objection while for eight years things like World Government resolutions, bills to aboulish Jim Crow, and "legislation" even more Biblical than that , got passed and then got passed again and then got passed again (over, you understand, a succession of years). Indeed, last year what might be described as constructive color could be discovered at the Assembly, for not even these dreadful bills of preceeding years were passed.It must be just that a sort of blase unconcern suddenly descended on assembled Youth, who felt that surely everyone knew by 1946 their veiws on certain issues. But to allay any last, unappeased fears of "radical" Youth, all that is necessary really is to spend one quarter enrolled as a student at, say, the University of North Carolina, where the only rebels one is likely to find are one left ovr from The War of the Sixties . . .While we're at it though, would someone please tell us exactly what "radical" deeds the Youth of the State for six hours assembled could peretrate, even if they set out to prove their mettle red. Which brings us to:

Violence

Possible Assination of Prominent Men: This is most unlikely to transpire. If students have heard with patience interminable orations for ten years and all of the orators have survived intact, it seems far-fetched to think anyone will suddenly become desperate enough to take pot shots at big shots. (To safeguard against this, however, we would cheerly delete the suggestion that water-pistols be distributed). And, in passing, let it be realized that the students are also in danger of assault from Bigger Men than they—and yet the students brave it!

Nor does it seem probable that anyone will blow up the Capitol. This could be done with greater safety by staying outside the building anyway. As for the University's appropriations being cut, it need merely be pointed out that University appropriations have risen steadily during the decade of Student Legislatures(this is not necessarily a claim of an affirmative correlation; indeed it is specifically not such a claim).

So we have been running true to form so sar: The meeting is scheduled for the weekend of the Carolina-Virginia game; we've had our last minute crises of great proportions in High Places: and, now, the form calls for plans to "make the student's wishes known" by setting up a permanent governing board for the Legislature, and for speeches by the Secretary of State and other State worthies highlighted by the Governor . . . .unless, of course, he should be called out of town this year.

-Harriers

aren't considering the Tar Heels lightly.

Jimmy Miller, who finished first in last year's race, will be back again to plague the other participants, and Miller has been rated the best bet to pull that same trick again.

Maryland Favored

Maryland seems to be a slight favorite on the basis of an undefeated season thus far, but Duke also is reportedly strong. The superior manpower of these two schools over the divided Carolina squad may mean a new conference champion.

In an effort to keep the title in Chapel Hill, a spirited contingent of Tar Heel harriers have been working daily and their efforts may allow the Tar Heels to retain the crown. Those besides Miller who will run for Carolina are John Bristow, Dan Martin, Dick Hollander, Walt Francis, Basil Wood, and freshmen Dick Carr, Frank Hooper, and Dave Hyatt.

Other teams entered that are rated highly are Davidson, South Carolina, State, and Virginia Tech.

Alderman has been vacated temporarily by three-fourths of the students, some of whom are attending the Maryland game. Others are spending the weekend in their respective homes.

Governor Plans Meeting Today On Capitol Use

By Bill Sexton

Though there is no indication of what stand the State Board of Buildings and Grounds will take on use of the capitol for the 1947 State Student legislature, hope at least that action would be forthcoming was aroused by the announcement that the board would probably meet today.

Gov. Gregg Cherry said in Raleigh last night he "planned" to call a meeting today of the board, which must approve or reject the Student Legislative council's request for use of the capitol before planning on the 1947 session can proceed. Date of the coming assembly has been set, pending the action expected today, for November 28-29.

New Permit Needed

Ten previous annual sessions of the student legislature have been held in the capitol building at Raleigh, but Secretary of State Thad Eure ruled last week that dissolution and subsequent reorganization of the legislature's sponsoring body made necessary a new permit from the buildings board.

Efforts have been underway more than a week to obtain approval of the legislative council's request, made by Ira Helms, president of the old State Student Legislative council and acting head of the reorganized group.

Use of the capitol November 28 and 29 had already approved when the sponsoring group at State college abruptly dissolved itself. When pressure from other schools led to a reconstitution of the council to include representatives from colleges other than State, the original date was again set. But Eure's ruling requiring a new permit plus the continual unavailability of various members of the buildings board have prevented further planning.

President Urges 10 Point Program To Bar Inflation

By The United Press

Washington, Nov. 17—President Truman cited dollars and cents figures today to show Congress how prices have risen to what he called "an alarming degree of inflation."

Speaking before both houses of the Congress which he had called back to Washington in recognition of the critical situation now existing in Europe and in our own country, the President called for a ten-point program to combat inflation here at home and to assist Europe through the economic crisis there.

The President indicated that Congress—in passing such legislation—will achieve a double-barrelled objective—hold down prices at home and make it easier for the country to aid Europe.

In outlining the situation which must be remedied, the President said that Austria, France, and Italy have nearly exhausted their financial resources, and that starvation faces millions in these countries unless we act quickly. He called for aid to the already revealed extent of 597 million dollars to prevent this calamity.

Moving to the domestic situation, Mr. Truman pointed out that since controls were removed in the middle of 1946 cost-of-living items have risen 23 per cent, clothing 19 per cent, and food 40 per cent. He further showed that, in the past four months, the cost of living has risen at annual rate of 16 per cent.

He said, "The housewife who goes to buy food today must spend 10 dollars for what 7 dollars bought a year and a half ago."

He asked Congress for the power to put ceilings on wages and prices and to bring back rationing, but he emphasized that he would this authority only if it became absolutely necessary.

Polish Ambassador Hurls Charge That German Underground Seeks To Reestablish Nazi Doctrine

Unity in Big Four 'Must' for Peace, Winiewicz Declares

Warning that "the Germans at this moment are speculating on the disagreements among their former enemies," Jozef Winiewicz, Polish Ambassador to the United States, urged last night that Germany should not be reconstructed sooner than other countries of Europe because of the possibility of another war of German instigation.

"The information we Poles have from Germany indicates," he declared, "that a new underground movement is working there which is based ideologically on the same principles that led Germany to aggressive wars in the past

"Nothing would give the Germans more pleasure than an open break among the great powers, a rift among the United Nations," the ambassador said. "Nothing would suit Germany better than a separate peace conclude between the western German zones and the Western allies which some impatient people are advocating."

Former Editor

Winiewicz spoke in Gerrard Hall at the University tonight under the joint auspices of the Carolina Political Union, non-partisan student organization, and the International Relations Club. Presiding were Bill Patterson, CPU chairman, and Will Kemp, head of the IRC.

Longtime editor of one of the oldest newspapers in Warsaw, Poland, the Ambassador was Minister Counselor of the Polish Embassy in London during the war and was a member of the Polish delegation to the Peace Conference in Paris in 1946. He came to the United States as Ambassador last January.

Tracing the history of German aggression during five wars, which he said that nation had instigated in the last century, the ambassador said that his country is more concerned with post-war Germany than any other question at the moment. "First, we are concerned because the power of a United Germany has continually menaced our independence, and secondly, because Germany in the last war caused such great destruction in Poland, that only a lasting peace, a peace enduring for several generations, and not for just 20 years, as was the peace following 1918, can allow us to make up our losses in population as well as in our economic substance." He pointed

Dean's Office Says Thief Still Lurks In Unlocked Rooms

Petty theft still sneaks around the campus, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dean Fred Weaver. "Because of students' carelessness and their forgetting to lock their rooms, especially during football weekends," Weaver stated, "two more cases of larceny have been reported through my office."

While Harry LaRue attended the Tennessee game, a Smith-Corona typewriter was stolen from his room on the third floor of Lewis dormitory. Late last Wednesday night Matthew Crisp left a $75 Hamilton wrist watch in the wash room of Miller hall, missed the watch the next morning, and could not find it.

Bill Smith, University dormitory manager, made a poll of students' dormitory doors earlier this term and found that from 50 to 100 rooms are left open "any afternoon" when their occupants are gone. He strongly urged that "this and all other carelessness with personal property be avoided."

Phi Assembly Will Discuss Federal Anti-Lynch Law

Heading the agenda of the Philanthropic Assembly when it meets on Tuesday night at 9:00 p.m. on the fourth floor New East is the proposed Federal Anti-Lynching Law, slated to come up again at the current special session of Congress.

The bill is to be introduced by Chester Brunnen, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Professor Clyde Cass Carter of the Commercial Law Department has been asked to present the case for the bill. Several other faculty members have been contacted to speak against the proposed law. Leading the debate for the bill are Phi members Bob Coulter, Herman Sieber, Emily Baker, Phil Morris, and Lester Sneed. The opposition will be lead by George Rodman, Mintie Cantrell, Charles Dixon, David Sharpe, and James McNider.

The Assembly bill states in part that the Phi favor action by Congress to make Federal law enforcement agencies responsible for the prevention and prosecution of lynching and crimes involving mob action.

The adherents for the enactment of the federal statute cite the fact that the bill would be beneficial to the cause of law, order and justice in the southern states, while the opponents say that legislation upon this matter would be unconstitutional and the need for the law is slight since there was only one case of lynching in the United States in 1945.

More Grail Tickets Go On Sale Today

Approximately 400 tickets for the Duke weekend Grail Dances will be placed on sale from 8 this morning until sold out in the YMCA, Grail Delegate Jack Fitch announced yesterday.

The tickets—400 each for the two dances and concert—were left over following two days of selling last week. Price is $3.00 per couple for each dance and $0.75 per person for the concert.

Despite directions to the contrary on the printed dance tickets, Fitch said, the dances Friday and Saturday will be semi-formal: coats and ties for men, evening dresses for dates.

Duke Game Tickets

Today is the final day for securing student coupons for the Duke-Carolina Saturday, the Athletic department announced last night.

Any students wishing to attend the game must get their coupons today if they wish to sit in the Carolina student section. No exceptions will be made.

Tonight Is Nominations Deadline; Candidates Hold Meeting Tomorrow

Campaign Funds Must Be Submitted By 6 P.M. Monday

Herb Nachman

All nominations for class officers must be presented to Al Winn, chairman of the board of elections, in No. 8 Steele before midnight tonight.

The nominations must be typewritten and signed by the party chairman and party publicity manager. No nominations will be accepted after tonight, Winn said.

Tomorrow night, candidates, party chairmen and party publicity managers will meet with Winn in Gerrard hall at 7 o'clock.

Election Rules

Six regulations for conduct of the special election were announced earlier by the Elections board. They are:

1. Nominations may be made by the political parties and by typewritten petitions, bearing the signatures of the nominee and 25 qualified constituents for the following positions in the freshman and junior classes: President, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and social chairman.

Deadline Tuesday

2. All political party nominations must be signed by the party chairman and the party publicity manager.

Typewritten nominations must be presented to the chairman of the board of elections, Al Winn, Steele, before midnight on Tuesday, November 18th. No nominations will be accepted after that time.

3. A mass meeting of all candidates, party chairmen, and party publicity managers will be held in Gerrard hall at 7:00 on the evening of November 19th. Candidates failing to attend said meeting will be consequently disqualified unless they promptly comply with Article XII, section II of the election laws.

Expense Accounts

Typewritten individual and party expense accounts must be submitted to Al Winn, No. 8 Steele, before 6:00 on the evening of Monday, November 24th. Receipts, if feasible, of party and individual paid publicity and vendor's bills must be included with the submitted expense accounts. Candidates failing to comply with this rule will be disqualified.

4. Voting for the freshman and junior class officers will take place in Gerrard hall on Tuesday, the 25th of November between the hours of 1 and 6 in the afternoon. ID cards must be presented to obtain ballots.

5. The elections board will meet in Graham memorial at 8:00 tomorrow evening, following the meeting with candidates at 7:00.

Leaders Cited for Interest in CCUN

"College students are encouraged and gratified to see the renewed interest that civic leaders of the state are taking in student activities such as the Collegiate Council of United States," Lincoln S. H. Kan, State Director of CCUN said yesterday.

The council is co-sponsoring the state-wide conference on the United Nations with the Statesville Lions Club and Lions District 31A in Statesville on Thursday and Friday of this week. Guest speakers will include the ambassadors from Argentina and Yugoslavia.

Final plans and committee appointments were discussed and made at a dinner meeting in Statesville Saturday night at the Vance Hotel, which was attended by Kan, Roberta Stirling, secretary-general of State CCUN; Bill Cromwell and Bill Buchan, Carolina representatives.

Discussing the meeting, Kan said, "The interest and actions of the civic leaders is indicative of a common desire for the peach which can only be secured through the United Nations. We are especially grateful for the wonderful work and co-operation which we have received from Hugh Mitchell, Lions International counsellor and Statesville Lions Club. They have more than proven their sincere belief in the UN and the worthwhileness of CCUN."

Playmakers Need 15 Actors For Norwegian Play

Kai Jurgensen, director of the Carolina Playmaker production of Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People," sent out a call last night for members of the student body who are interested in appearing in the play.

"We need about fifteen people for the climax scene in the meeting hall," Jurgensen said. He went on to explain that the crowd scene is the most powerful in the play and that any students or townspeople who are interested are invited to attend the rehearsal Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Playmaker theatre.

"Only three or four rehearsals will be necessary, although several speaking parts are to be filled," he added.

"An Enemy of the People" tells the story of a health officer in a small resort town in Norway, who fights a corrupt city administration, and the power of the press, in order to bring truth to the people. It is a new modern American translation, one of twelve Ibsen plays translated by Jurgensen and Robert Schenkkan, of the radio department, for Henry Holt company.

LEGISLATORS TO MEET

Pete Gerns, parliamentarian of legislature, announces that the constitution committee will meet at 7 p.m. this evening in the Tarnation office of Graham Memorial instead of Phi hall, as originally planned.

Campus Party to Meet Today For Class Vote Nominations

A meeting of the campus party for the purpose of considering nominations for the coming elections has been called for 4:00 this afternoon by Jess Dedmond, party chairman.

The meeting, which will be held in Roland Parker lounge No. 2 of Graham memorial, will be open to all students who may wish to attend. It is anticipated that the party will be able to nominate their entire slate for the class elections scheduled for next week and for the general campus elections of December.

Dedmond stated yesterday that the selection of the person who will be the campus party nominee for the post of the Student council slated to be filled in December is the most important single piece of business on the agenda.

"However," he said, "there will be several posts for which nominations must be made, and we hope to finish the job tomorrow. If so, there will be a meeting of the candidates for the purposes of discussing campaign arrangements immediately after the general meeting.

FRESHMEN AIR ROTC

The Elementary course of the Air ROTC program, which is open to Freshman, will begin January 2, 1948, and applications are now being accepted. No previous military experience is necessary for freshmen students to enroll, but those interested are requested to see the Professor of Military Science and Tactics in the NROTC Annex as soon as possible.

AVC, SCHW Join To Protest Prices

Letters were forwarded to all campus and town organizations yesterday announcing a campus-wide protest meeting against high prices to be sponsored by the American Veterans committee and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

According to Aubrey Williams, Jr., SCHW chairman, the meeting is being held to focus the attention of the campus on rising prices.

"Through this process of airing and discussing all ideas a constructive program will emerge that will prove far more effective than the scattered efforts of individual organizations," he said.

Congress Meets

Timed to coincide with the opening of the special congressional session in Washington, Williams pointed out, a unanimous agreement on a price program here at the University will serve as one yardstick of public opinion for Tar Heel representatives in the congress.

The program will include brief talks by faculty, student, and town leaders on various aspects of the situation. Following this the floor will be opened for resolutions on the subject.

Student body president Tom Eller has indicated that he will make every effort to attend while leaders of practically every organization in town and on campus are also expected.

Deans Will Issue Student Auto Tags

Campus automobile licenses for those students in the Arts and Sciences and the Commerce schools who registered their cars earlier this fall have been removed from 207 South building to the offices of Dean William Wells and Dean D. D. Carroll, respectively.

Students in the General College may still get their windshield stickers at the registration desk at the head of the third floor steps in South building.

Dean Fred Weaver, after handling the distribution of these tags originally, urges all student car owners who have not yet picked up their campus licenses to do so "immediately."

PORT CITY STUDENTS

The Wilmington-Carolina club will meet in Horace Williams lounge at Graham Memorial at 7:40 this evening.

Student Hit by Washington Streetcar Unconscious; Condition Said Critical

John D. Ebbs, Carolina student struck by a Washington streetcar late Saturday night, was reported still in "critical condition" in a District of Columbia hospital last night.

Ebbs, member of Lambda Chi Alpha, was reported by fraternity brothers to have been struck after he had stepped out of a cab at M and 33rd streets. He was enroute to Chevy Chase following the Maryland-Carolina contest.

Taken to Emergency Hospital following the accident, Ebbs was listed as suffering skull fracture, concussion, and possible laceration of the brain. Friends reported that he had regained consciousness once since the accident but had since lapsed back into a coma.

A senior English major, Ebbs is a resident of Winston-Salem.

Motor Vehicle Inspection School Will Start at University To Train Examiners Under New Highway Patrol Program

By Donald McDonald

"Safe roads, safe drivers and safe motor vehicles are the three pillars of the North Carolina program for highway safety," said Dr. David G. Monroe, director of the motor vehicle inspection school scheduled to begin here Monday, as he announced plans yesterday for the Institute of Government-sponsored school.

"From approximately 3,500 men who have made application to attend the three-weeks school," Dr. Monroe added, "approximately 200 men will be selected for a series of schools which will be held in Chapel Hill in future months. The first school, which begins Monday will be restricted to 40 applicants. The program is in every way a screening process and only those men who pass rigid tests will qualify for entrance."

Held in accordance with Article 3A of the Motor Vehicle Laws of North Carolina passed by the 1947 General Assembly, which requires inspection of all motor vehicles in 1948, the school will offer 27 courses ranging from classes in "Necessity of the Program" to "Traffic Laws and Rules of the Road."

Classes, which will be held at the Highway Barracks on Raleigh road, will begin at 8 o'clock each morning and continue until 5 o'clock, Sundays included, making what Dr. Monroe calls "a very intensive program."

Representatives of the mechanical inspection division of the State Department of Motor Vehicles, who will act as instructors, include Mrs. Cora Rice, William L. Bishop, Arthur T. Moore, W. E. Koonce and George Dale. Two representatives of the Weaver Equipment company which manufactures inspection equipment who will act as instructors and will be in charge of the inspection equipment when it reaches here are W. H. Squyers and R. Logan.

Institute of Government staff members who will serve as instructors are Dr. Monroe, Albert Coates and Terry Sanford. Members of the State Highway Patrol will act in an advisory capacity.

"The overall purpose of the school," concluded Dr. Monroe, "is safety on the highways by eliminating the unfit and dangerous vehicles."

Maybe the Scientists Have an Answer

The way certain officials of the State and others are handling with kid gloves anything pertaining to the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly an uninformed observer would think that the Assembly is for the exclusive purpose of doing research in atomic power, and that everything it comes in contact with will become radioactive. First the Legislature Council, composed solely of representatives from N. C. State college, cancelled the Assembly. Then last week, after Al Lowenstein paid each of the Council members a visit, plans were drawn up to hold the meeting as previously scheduled. Now come word from the State capitol that the Assembly must obtain another permit in order to be able to use the State capitol building.

There is little doubt but that every attempt is being made to squelch this year's Assembly. Obstacle after obstacle has been thrown in to add to the chaos.

But we cannot interpret this last move to mean but one thing—a final, almost desperate, effort to wear down the forces which are pushing the Assembly, in the hopes that they will forget that there ever was such a thing. Months ago detailed plans were made to arrange for the use of State capitol building for November 28-29, a date which has not changed despite the fact that the Assembly has been dissolved and reorganized. The excuse offered by the Secretary of State is a very anemic one. The Legislative Assembly was in no way altered by the overhauling of the Legislative Council from a State college group which had complete autonomy to a more demoeratic and representative body of the Assembly.

It is quite evident that the capitol building has not been engaged by another group during the interim between the cancellation and the reorganization. Since the Assembly was previously given permission to use the State capitol building it would seem that it would be adequate to contact each of the members of the State Board of Buildings and Grounds personally and arrange for the use of the building. They know the nature of the Assembly since they authorized the building to its use earlier in the year, and the Assembly has been using the building there in Raleigh for years.

The capitol, unlike the buildings used for atomic research, has not become radioactivated after its use. But a certain group evidently feels that the harmonius student assembly which gathered there last year was an experiment with uranium and the other necessary ingredients.

Scientists have thought of filling huge concrete containers with the highly-dangerous waste products which necessarily develop from atomic research, and get rid of it in that manner. But they have given up the idea since, in several years, the cylinders would burst open and kill the fish in the nearby waters. They have even experimented in piping the radio-active waste into caves for it to remain dormant; this idea too has been discarded. Both the scientists and the "no-Assembly" group have a problem on their hands. Maybe the scientists will develop a solution to get rid of the radio-active atoms which he has no use for, and the same remedy can be applied to annihilate the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly.

Two Roads: Take Your Choice

Tolerance is all right in its place.

Lately, however, our campus pinklings have gone all out tolerant and found themselves in the somewhat confusing position of having tolerance for the intolerant.

Far be it from us to practice double-talk, but that is the situation. Bubbling over with an over-dose of enviromental psychology and carrying tatters of the comforting clothing of the scripture, the more sensitive of campus humanitarians seem to have decided that you can't really blame Negro-haters, Jew-baiters and the like, because, after all, they can't help it; isn't that the way they were brought up?

Environment? Baloney!

Klansmen, Columbians, the rank-and-file of the reactionary have just found out one of the first laws of the universe. You see what you want to see.

On the other side of the fence, the communists have found the same principle. They have set aside reason (they will beat their temples at that) and declared that dialectic materialism is all.

And that is the secret to effective action: direct your thought and actions toward the end which you believe to be the best.

Try to spend your life at the place where the two roads branch off. It isn't easy. We might go so far as to say it isn't possible. It is the only sensible place, we grant that. Indeed it is, but it is also the place of stagnation, the arm-chair of quietism.

It is beyond our power to pull the two roads into one, or, failing in that, to beat a new path between that. It is simply that nothing exists between the two roads.

In an age where action is essential and in which the contemplative life is impossible, we recommend a good sturdy set of blinders—similar to those used by that noble animal: the trotting horse.—B.S.

To Prevent Fires

Much of the damages caused by the fire in a quonset hut yesterday morning could have been avoided if the fire department had been able to drive their truck into the area and use their equipment. The entrance to the quonset hut area is closed to vehicles by a post which is locked to everyone except the oil trucks, which come to refill the tanks, and the University buildings department. The fire department should have access to a key in order to be able to extinguish fires which may happen in the future.

The Chapel Hill fire truck is equipped with soap guns which are effectively used in combatting oil fires, such as yesterday's which was caused by the explosion of an oil stove. But, since the truck could not be driven far enough into the quonset hut area, the hose would reach only a few feet into the hut.

Luckily the fire did not cause as much damage as it could have. This should be a cue to the University to take all preventive measures against any other occurences of this sort.

Perhaps rather than give the fire department a personal key to the post which keeps out unauthorized driving, they should mount an emergency key in a box with a glass front, of the fire alarm variety, which would be broken only for emergency cases such as the one yesterday morning.

Goils, Lots of Goils

By Pete Gerns

75 students thought that their picture would improve the Yack most when asked what they would like to see most of in the Yackety Yack of '48. Almost 200 students sent in their opinions which ranged all the way from "We want Justice" to "Goils, lots of goils".

Unfortunately lots of answers hadn't been signed, so we'll have to proceed at random to pick out some of the representative thoughts. At this point, though, we want to say "Thank you" in behalf of the editors of the Yackety Yack who appreciate the interest taken in the yearbook and who will be only too glad to include what students want, if it is novel. If you have any good suggestions, you'll be welcome on the mezzanine of GM.

Now to the suggestions: "About Thomas Wolfe, the most famous alumnus of UNC" — "More space devoted to Senior activities" — "I would like to see a little more emphasis placed on dormitory life" — "Less emphasis on fraternities, such as using heavier print in the senior section than for other activities" — "An individual page for each football game with pictures taken at the game similar to the football section in the 1940 and 1941 Yacks".

"More campus scenes". Keith Graham.

"Women." S. Magaman.

"I think the Yack should stress the coeds more. Perhaps a section on Carolina's bathing beauties". Woody Coley.

"I should like to see more pictures of the activities of the graduate students". Margaretta Douglas.

"More informal shots of campus life". I. C. Nichols, Jr.

"Please include some of the details of the planetarium now being built". Dean Matthews.

"More gals, greater coverage of informal affairs such as Sadie Hawkins day, football game, etc. — of the students, that is". William Siler.

Included is also a plea from Bill Mackie for "Less money!!!" and one from an anonymous man: Big pictures of the big piles of money made by the "Y" and the Book X on those prices they charge, and the heaps of money this joint beats the government out of". Quote, unquote.

Question for Friday's issue: Do you think that there are too many organizations on this campus? Deadline is set for Wednesday evening.

Knock, Knock

Ancient Jokes Come Back In New Movie

By Patricia Clary

Hollywood—(UP)—Today's youngsters, whose antics are such a joke to grown-ups, are going to have a chance to see how their parents used to behave.

Richard Sale and Mary Anita Loos have disinterred the American way of life, 1933 edition, for "End of the Rainbow," Republic's movie about the lighter side of the depression days.

Things like this are happening daily in front of the cameras:

Roscoe Karns, the incarnation of every breezy traveling salesman, strolls up to Marsha Hunt, clerk at a hotel desk.

"Knock, knock!" he challenges.

Miss Hunt glares but replies, "Who's there?"

"Hobart," Karns said.

"Hobart who?" says Miss Hunt.

"Hobart a little kiss tonight, baby?" Karns howls doubled up with laughter.

Another "knock-knock" Sale and Miss Loos dug up was about "window."

"Window who?"

"Window moon comes over la mountain!"

Another choice was "orange juice" — "orange juice sorry you made me cry."

And the racy set. Sale and Miss Loos, recalled, like this one:

"Who's there?"

"Emerson."

"Emerson who?"

"Emerson nice legs you got, baby!"

Arthur Loesser

Distinguished Performance

By John K. B. McDowell

A pianist of consummate artistry appeared in Hill hall Sunday evening and, for those fortunate persons present, it was a memorable recital and a great privilege to be in the large audience.

Mr. Loesser began his program with three sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti. All three were played superbly, the first two, exquisite in themselves, were endowed with that rare communicative quality which negates the piano (or whatever instrument is used) and brings the music itself to the listener, unadorned with virtuosity, bare of adventitous and mechanistic dynamics.

Beethoven's Sonata, opus 101, was next played by Mr. Loesser. The pianist again turned in a distinguished performance with the last two movements especially noteworthy. Mr. Loesser's control of the bass, noticeable in his playing of the Scarlatti sonatas, was very much in evidence in the Beethoven work.

The first half of the program was concluded with the Berceuse, opus 57, and the Valse in A flat, opus 42, of Chopin. Even Chopin, in the company of his peers, when played as Mr. Loesser did two nights ago, provides a rewarding experience of sentiment rather than sentimentality.

At this point may the reviewer pay tribute to Mr. Loesser's musicianship. At a time when a fine tenor with an altogether adequate income finds it artistically convenient to share honors with a mermaid (in the movies, or what is laughingly referred to as an art form); in a period of harmonic progression when a noted and excellent cellist is so moved by the intrinsic beauties of Saint-Saens' "The Swan" that he adds to his own spiritual performance of it the efforts of six maidenly harpists and the imminent acsension, implied, of Little Eva; namely, in an era of vulgar musical movies, athletic pianism, and virtuoso violinists it is a great pleasure and an honor to hear a performer of Mr. Loesser's calibre.

The second half of the program began with the Brahms' Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Handel, opus 24. The Fugue and the variations calling for a delicate and sensitive performance were most notably played in this work. The regular part of the program came to a close with a performance of the Second Sonata in F minor by a well-known American composer, Arthur Shepherd. Though Mr. Loesser's remarks prefatory were most kind, this work, especially in the first movement, made this reviewer think of Gertrude Stein's remark about Hemingway, that he "looks like a modern but smells of the museum."

As an encore Mr. Loesser gave an exquisite reading of the "Forlane" from Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin. To finish the evening the pianist played a sonatine of the Japanese composer, Otaka. The second movement of this work, though pleasant to hear, is but on a par with the pretty-pretty music of Leo Delibes. The third and final movement was musically and rhythmically the most interesting.

WNC Club

The Western North Carolina club has completed arrangements for its annual Christmas dance to be held December 27 at the George Vanderbilt hotel in Asheville. Music for the dance will be furnished by Carol Henry and his Buccaneers.

Invitations for the dance, which is to be semi-formal, will soon be made available for distribution among members.

Betty Brown and John Brady, co-chairmen of the social committee, have announced that the committee is making plans for a Thanksgiving party to be held in Asheville during the holidays.

Say What You Think, Bud

Editor:

Having recently returned to America after a year's stay in Europe, I am alarmed even more by conditions in this country than I was by the relative poverty in Europe.

More than one person who has just come back to the United States notices the unmistakable symptoms of fear in our citizens. Fear of what? Fear of expressing unequivocally the things which we believe, fear of criticizing those aspects of our government, economy, and culture which merit criticism.

Perhaps, this change has been so gradual that those who have been in continual residence here have failed to notice it. It is my impression, after a little more than three months of observation, that the present anti-Communist hysteria is being exploited by some utterly selfish and by some merely self-righteous people to intimidate sincere critics of uncontrolled capitalism, racial supremacy (master race under another name), and high handed military methods in the conduct of civil affairs.

Without alert, fearless citizens the power to rule will fall into the hands of well-dressed roughnecks who can brow-beat the public in the name of democracy. Our traditions, however fine they may be, are no full guarantee against selfishness. In moments of intellectual and emotional confusion selfish men can be very vindicative and self-righteous in the "unselfish protection of the principles upon which our nation was founded."

Let us remember this much: the freedom to make money unhampered by government interference or scrupulous consideration of other people was not the only principle upon which this government was founded. In fact, if it ever was understood as a principle in the first place, it is a principle which need be constantly adjusted to changing economic conditions.

A man who criticizes the government and the institutions of the United States today is not necessarily a Communist or a Communist sympathizer. That is what some malicious people are trying to make you believe. Don't believe it. And don't be afraid to say what you think.

SCHW TO ASSEMBLE

There will be a business meeting of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the lounge of Presbyterian Church. Final plans for Thursday's price protest meeting will be discussed.

This Is It

One Body: High Price At 31 Dollars

By Ken Rothwell

Thursday evening at o'clock representatives fr some 38 town and campu ganizations will meet in G rard hall to decide what can do about high prices. will co-sponsor it with th Southern Conference for H man Welfare.

An interesting item fr the "Wall Street Journal lustrates rather dramat just how much meeting this are needed.

"The chemical content the human body, formerl valued at 98 cents to a doll are now calculated to worth, at current pri about $31."

Why not bring your body around and help bri its price back to normal?"

At the last AVC meetin the chapter went on record as supporting congressional resolution No. 24 which pro vides that "the Congress and the President . . . should take the initiative in calling a general conference of the United Nations . . . for the purpose of making the United Nations capable of enacting, interpreting, and enforcing world law to prevent war."

Most of the local membership probably felt that in the final analysis an "impractical" idea like this is a darn sight more practical than attempting to solve our problems with atomic bombs. Most AVC members, too, have long memories and do not intend to forget the last war, just yet.

Word has come from national headquarters that the CIO's Phillip Murray recently contributed $7500 to the AVC treasury.

"To my mind AVC is the most outstanding and certainly the most deserving veteran's organization in the United States," said Murray.

We think that this is high praise. After all the average GI Joe was no millionaire. Chances are he was a working man. And it stands to reason that if the CIO approves of us that means we are pursuing policies which favor the vast majority of veterans.

Don't forget that meeting on high prices Thursday evening in Gerrard hall. This something in which both erans and non-veterans have a common stake.

Tar Heel Harriers Far Back In Conference And IC4A Meets

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

MUDDY MUDDLE

THERE COMES A TIME in everyone's life when the weather is just not suited to play football or any other outdoor activity, and that is exactly the conditions that both Tar Heel footballers and followers alike were forced to contend with in order to do and see battle with the Terrapins of the University of Maryland last Saturday in Washington. Man, it was awful.

The rain, which might be classified as "a driving mist," began to fall early Saturday morning and by game time, Griffith stadium, whose groundskeeper must be on vacation, was neither fit place for man nor beast. The expression—here's mud in your eye—was the order of the day. But some 22,000 fans did show up and sat it out, through bullheadedness or diehardedness, one, and were well rewarded for their efforts.

FOR CONSIDERING the effects of the weather, the game was an absorbing one. The Tar Heels confined solely to their ground game all day, began to march the very first time they had the ball, or better said, big Walt Pupa began to march. The Carolina fullback carried the ball a total of 32 times during the day, rumbling through the Maryland line with truckline efficiency. There were holes there though, which always helps out.

As was being said, the Tar Heels moved the first time they got the ball, but on this drive and the rest of those they made in the first three periods, the inability to spread the defense just a wee bit with a pass or two because of the elements, threw a proverbial wrench in the Tar Heel scoring plans.

Meanwhile, the Maryland entry of Coach Jim Tatum also found the weather to its apparent dislike, and forced to contend with the mud of the playing field and the muddle of stout-hearted Tar Heel linemen, just didn't go much of anywhere.

WEDGE WARDLE

KINGPIN OF THE TAR HEEL linemen was Bill "The Wedge" Wardle, who wrapped himself in all kinds of glory in standing out among some standout line play. Even when the numbers of the players became unrecognizable, Wardle could still be distinguished making many tackles, and above it all, setting up the first Carolina score early in the fourth period, sliding on Terp Vic Turyn's fumble on the Maryland 17. From that point, Pupa hustled the ball over for a score in four straight charges.

After the first Tar Heel touchdown it seemed as though Maryland lost most of the spirit that had previously teamed with the weather to keep the Tar Heels in check. They all, but fell apart at the seams shortly later, when Lou Gambino, who definitely must not be a mudder, fumbled a lateral from the before-mentioned Mr. Turyn, with a mud-clad figure believed to have been Larry Klosterman touching the ball for the Tar Heels just before it went out of bounds on the Maryland 11. Pupa hit the middle with only two-yard success on the following play, but then Charlie Justice sloshed out wide around his own left end, slipping into the end zone right at the flag for the next six points.

Freshman Fred Sherman supplied the Tar Heels' last touchdown just a few minutes thereafter, grabbing a desperation Terp toss on the Maryland 32, and selling out with great haste down the sidelines for a score. All these scores took a little over seven minutes to enact.

BIG JIM TATUM didn't let those down who were of the belief that the College Park mentor would throw all kinds of things at the Tar Heels. Defensively he used most everything in the book, shifting from five to six to seven man lines with all sorts of varied combinations. To add to the confusion, he had defensive guards, tackles, and occasionally a few others stand in a little group in front of the ball before each play, as if discussing telephone numbers; the group deploying to defensive position just before the proceedings would get under way.

Offensively, Tatum used most of his conventional split-T stuff, but threw in a little double wing at the end of the game, apparently for variety's sake, since the Terps did not profit by the use of it.

THE TAR HEELS did not have as much trouble with the split-T as had been anticipated. They solved Gambinos' wide game, by spreading wide and allowing the Terps to take a few yards at the tackle holes, but never enough to do serious damage. The key play from the split-T originates with the quarterback taking the ball from under the center and running laterally toward the sidelines. He moves directly at the defensive end who is not blockd, but is left to commit himself. If he moves in to tackle the ball carrier, the latter laterals off to the halfback moving out wide; if the end drifts, the back cuts into the tackle hole and up field. Turyn, the Maryland quarterback, ran the play all afternoon with the Snavely strategy being to drift the end and allow him to cut with the secondary moving up fast to minimize the gain. This defense almost completely neutralized Gambino running wide and prevented any breakaway runs by the Maryland ace.

THAT MARYLAND WOULD probably have taken the Tar Heels into camp had not the rains come, was the contention raised by local fans and officials, but taken with a grain of salt by the visitors from out of town. True, Maryland fumbled often and disasterously during the game, but to pass all this off on the poor, helpless weather, is a large contention. The Terps played a type of offense that is dangerous on any kind of field, and the fact that they were guilty of numerous costly fumbles against Duke in Durham on a dry field with the sun blazing down, should prove

Palmer Leads Way As Maryland Gain Loop Championship

By Bob Goldwater

Raleigh, Nov. 17.—A new Southern conference cross-country champion was crowned here today when the University of Maryland, pushed into the favorite's role by the absence of most of North Carolina's top runners, came through in fine fashion to triumph by a wide margin over eight other loop teams.

Led by freshman Bob Palmer, who ran the four-mile course in the excellent time of 21:22, the Terrapins were easy victors as they improved by one position on their second-place finish of a year ago. Another Maryland harrier, Jim Umbarger, finished 350 yards behind Palmer to nail the runner-up slot in 22:04. Three more Maryland runners tied for sixth to complete their team's scoring with the exceedingly low total of 24.

Miller Turns Ankle

As for the Tar Heels and their efforts to retain their team title, they were never in the running. Their lone shot at individual honors—what with Jack Milne and Sam Magill up in New York for the IC4A meet—was rudely shattered halfway through the race when Jimmy Miller, the 1946 winner, fell and turned an ankle. Until the mishap, Miller, biding his time, was moving along comfortably in second place two yards behind Palmer.

The other Tar Heels finished way back. First Blue and White runner to cross the finish line was Frank Hooper, who ended up 28th. Walt Francis was 29th, Basil Wood was 39th, John Bristow finished 42nd, and Jim Hunt was the 49th across. The team score of 181 gave Carolina a dismal seventh in the final tabulations.

In between Maryland and Carolina in the team scoring, the order read VPI, Duke, N. C. State, VMI, and Davidson, Curt Shelton of VPI followed Umbarger across the line by four seconds, and Frank Liddell of VMI and Dave Dubow of State were close behind.

The Maryland trio of Gene Greer, Howie Umberger, and Bob Judy tied for sixth and two VPI runners, Frank Magill and Bev Middleton were deadlocked for ninth. Magill is an older brother of Carolina's Sam.

Palmer led throughout the race, from start to finish. He moved out front before the 65-man pack had gone 50 yards and by the time the half-mile point was reached, the battle for first place had narrowed down to two men—Miller was the other.

At the two-mile mark, when the runners passed in review at the State track and began the grind all over again, Palmer and Miller were more than 100 yards ahead of the rest of the field. It was right after the two leaders left the track that Miller fell and Palmer had things to himself the rest of the way.

The team scoring:

Maryland	1	2	6	7	8	24
VPI	3	9	10	25	26	73
Duke	14	16	18	19	20	87
N. C. S.	5	17	21	23	37	103
VMI	4	22	33	35	41	135
Davidson	11	30	31	32	40	144
UNC	28	29	39	42	44	181

South Carolina and William and Mary did not finish five men.

Milne Takes Third Place, Magill 18th In Five-Mile Event

BY Morty Schaap

New York, Nov. 17—North Carolina's cross country team finished far down the list in the IC4A meet here this afternoon in Van Cortlandt Park but Jack Milne, Tar Heel standout, reaped a share of the individual honors.

The New Jersey lad, holder of the record for the fastest two mile ever run by a Southern intercollegiate trackman, took a third place among some of the nation's outstanding distance men. Milne traversed the five-mile course in 26:19, less than a minute behind the winning time of Rhode Island State's Bob Black. Black set a new course record by hitting the tape in 25:37.1.

Right behind Black as he crossed the finish line was Bob Ashenfelter, Penn State's star distance man. Carolina's Sam Magill did well by coming across in 18th place, but the rest of the Blue and White squad finished far back. Halstead Holden was 94th, Alvin Smith 118th, Mark Burnham 144th, and Chuck Herty 146th in the 250-man field.

The team title was captured by Manhattan, which wound up last year in third place, one ahead of Carolina. Syracuse was second behind the New Yorkers. Two other highly rated units, NYU, which won last year, and Penn State, which was runner-up, slipped back from their high positions.

Practice Tank Meet Planned With State

The Carolina Blue Dolphins will step up a notch in the practice competition field this week when they tangle with the State College tank team in Raleigh Thursday afternoon.

It is strictly a practice show, and no scores will be kept, but there will be races in most events in a regular meet.

According to word from Coach Dick Jamerson, the team seems to have gotten themselves into a rut in the past few weeks. In the last practice meet held Thursday, there was little individual improvement in the previous

Carolina And Duke Gridders In Light Drills; Chi Psi Gains Intramural Fraternity Crown

Chi Psi's intramural tag football team captured the championship of the fraternity leagues yesterday afternoon by defeating the Zeta Psi gridders, 16-7, in one of the best games played during the fall pigskin program.

Dazzling pass plays featured in the Chi Psi victory and the extra-point-kicking toe of Buck Hardee held true to form, as the young booter completed his 16th extra point out of 18 tries.

Chi Psi drew first blood when John Wilson heaved a touchdown pass to Vic Seixas, with Hardee accounting for the seventh point. Another aerial from Vinnie DiLorenzo to Clyde Finch sent Chi Psi comfortably ahead. A safety was tallied by Tom Hurpz to assure a safe winning margin.

The Zetes pushed over their touchdown on a pass play from Sterling Gilliam to Braxton Schell. Adam Thorp added the extra point from placement.

In the dormitory playoff division, the Grads rolled easily in downing Oakwood Drive, 20-0.

Another championship was also decided yesterday, this one in the novice doubles of tennis play as Cash and Lambeth defeated Gallion and Turner for the crown.

Duke-Carolina week officially began on the campuses of the Universities of North Carolina and Duke yesterday, and although student interest in the game was mounting steadily, the respective football squads of the two schools took things lightly in Monday practices.

The Tar Heels of Carolina, who spent this past Saturday ploughing through a sea of mud in Griffith stadium, Washington, were in light togs yesterday as Coach Carl Snavely handed out a few pointers and corrections of the team's play in the 19-0 win over Maryland. A wet field and chill afternoon were the worst parts of the drills.

Wallace Wade's Blue Devils were held to a 0-0 tie by South Carolina in their last outing, and the Dukes are in for a week of intensive drills before Wade sends his club against the Tar Heels. Duke started this season off in fine style, being undefeated for its first five games. But the Blue Devils have been beaten in two of its last three games with the tie with South Carolina being the other result.

The meeting will be the 32nd between the two ancient rivals, and the series now stands at 14 victories for each team along with three ties. Carolina won last year's game, 22-7, but prior to that the Dukes had copped four wins in a row during the war period.

The Tar Heels undoubtedly will enter the game as rather decided favorites because of their five straight wins this season and Duke's recent collapse. However, in the past series the underdog has been almost as frequent a winner as the favorite.

The best example of this was a 6-3 Carolina win in 1940 over a Duke team that was favored by a couple of touchdowns. Only the week before that game Carolina had been upset by little Richmond university and there were few who even conceived that the Tar Heels could beat the Devils, who were having one of their best seasons before that game. A second half pass from Jim Lalanne to Joe Austin plus some mighty fine line play gave Carolina its big upset.

Conditioning and distance events still seem to be receiving the most work in the dailly sessions. Co-Captain Mike Morrow, Bob Hutton, Ronnie Basescu, Ike Norwood and Carl Drews were the only men who showed any appreciable improvement in last week's time trials.

The main purposes in the informal test are to give both squads a line on their weak points and also to bring the boys around to a better training mood.

Bursley Announces Necessary Return Of Photo Proofs

Harold Bursley, Yackety Yack editorial board member, yesterday had an announcement for any student who has failed to return his proofs to the Chidnoff studio in New York.

Stating that he had received a letter from them asking that the announcement be made, Bursley said that the studio was considering taking the first of the four poses on the individual picture sheets, in cases where a selection is not promptly made by the student concerned.

He suggested that any student who had not received his proofs check with the Yack office, and those who had received them but had not returned them to New York do so by the end of the week.

Tryouts To Be Held Today For 'Mikado'

The second public tryouts for the Carolina Playmaker production of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Mikado," are to be held this afteroon in Memorial hall between 2:30 and 4:30, under the direction of Lyn Gault and Paul Young.

First tryouts were held Friday, and casting will be concluded after today's session. Candidates are not required to sing material from the operetta, but are asked to come prepared with selections of their own choice. An accompanist will be present to help.

The 1947 meeting between Duke and Carolina is attracting even more attention than in previous years. The Tar Heels have come roaring down the homestretch with consecutive wins over William and Mary, Florida, Tennessee, N. C. State, and Maryland to climb back among the top teams of the nation after dropping two of their first three games. They have been mentioned frequently in connection with various post-season bowls.

The Southern conference title also will be affected by the game. Duke at present leads the league but must beat Carolina to keep its position. If the Devils lose, William and Mary, with six loop wins and one loss probably would take the title. Carolina also has lost just one conference game but has but three wins so far.

out that Poland lost six million people in the last war.

"As long as harmonious, friendly cooperation of the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain exists, no German politician and no German can dream of the rebirth of German imperialism." Mr. Winiewicz declared. "The lesson of the past indicates that Germany is not dangerous so long as there exists against her a united and closed front of all peace loving nations.

"It is for these reasons that Poland looks with some anxiety at the present state of relations among the Great Powers. In their unity we see the guarantee of peace and our own safety. . . For this reason the full success of the Conference of the Great Powers in London is much to be desired. . . . Let us all trust that the unity of the Great Powers and the unity of the United Nations which endured through the last war with such fruitful results will be preserved."

"I think we should have representation at the meeting," Mackie said, but he indicated that no plans for such had been made.

that they are daring and sometimes wreckless in nature.

The concensus of opinion about the game changed as often during the contest as did the Tar Heel offensive and defensive teams. First, it looked as if the Carolina boys would run wild; then that they would just run to a point; then at the half, it looked like the makings of a scoreless tie; after three quarters it was sure to be; late in the game it was developing into a Tar Heel rout, and at the close of the contest Tar Heel footballers had turned to thoughts of Duke, while Tar Heel fans wondered how the Terps had held their idols as long as they did. Who ever said weather was a great equalizer, certainly knew what the score was. For the stragglers, it was 19-0, Ca'lina.

Washington was none too receptive to the Tar Heel followers, constantly fearing possible damage to life and limb. It was the greatest march on the capitol since the Veteran Bonus issue in the early twenties.

ALL IN ALL, it looks as if no one actually profited from the ball game, but the weather and the laundry man.

Directory Available At Y This Morning

By Raney Stanford

The University student directory for the 1947-48 school year has been completed and is now available to students, faculty, and townspeople at 10 cents a copy, Charles Foley, president of the YMCA announced yesterday.

Thirty-seven hundred copies of the new directory will go on sale this morning at 9 o'clock, and the official sale will run through Friday. The books can be obtained in the lobby of the Y, at Graham Memorial and Ledbetter-Pickard between the hours of 9 and 12 in the morning, and 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon on these days.

Cost Explained

In explaining this year's cost for the book, that has in the past been distributed at no charge by the campus YMCA, officials of the organization said that the current printing costs left them no alternative.

"Last year's publication costs of $815.75 caused the directory to sustain a considerable loss," a Y official said. "Now this year the costs have skyrocketed to $2,038.38."

Charge Necessary

So, despite "the excellent work of Howard Bailey, business manager, and the cooperation of the Chapel Hill merchants," the YMCA said this small charge is necessary.

The directory, which has been enlarged this year, contains 160 pages of students; including names, local addresses and home towns, class and religious preferences, a list of campus student organizations, and their heads, social and professional fraternities, men's and women's dormitories, university officials, department heads, faculty members and a list of Chapel Hill churches and their ministers.

Marine Veterans May Enlist in Reserve, States Lt. Stewart

Enlistment in the Voluntary Marine Corps Reserve will be offered to Carolina marine veterans according to an announcement made here yesterday.

The only document necessary to those desiring to join is a copy of their discharge certificate, according to 2nd Lt. Richard K. Stewart, U. S. M. C., who made the announcement. Members of the voluntary reserve will be obligated to go into active duty only in the case of a National Emergency.

The advantages of association with the program, according to Stewart, are that those who enlist will not lose credit, time and seniority for the time served and positions held while in the Marine Corps.

Men will be accepted on a 2, 3, or 4 year basis with the opportunity of withdrawing at any time at their own request. They will also be permitted, in the event of a National Emergency, to choose their own branch of the service, to maintain the rank held while they were on active duty, and accumulate the reserve service which is legally counted towards longevity.

All those interested in the program may join or receive further information on the subject by contacting Lt. Stewart at 20 Village Apts. or calling him at F-3656.

YACKS AVAILABLE

All students wishing to obtain 1944, '45 and '46 "Yacks" may pick them up on the mezzanine of Graham memorial announced Gene Johnstone yesterday. There will be no charges made for the yearbooks.

Dr. Rice to Discuss Atomic Implications Thursday Afternoon

Dr. Oscar K. Rice, member of the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers, will speak on "The Implications of Atomic Energy" at a panel-discussion program tomorrow at 4:30 in Roland Parker lounge, Graham Memorial.

The discussion is the second to be sponsored by the Association of Carolina Scientists. A similar meeting, at which Prof. Rice spoke on "Report from Oak Ridge — Atomic Energy Control," was held November 6, co-sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. Tomorrow's meeting will be presented by the ACS and the student chapter of United World Federalists.

Forum Follows

An open forum will follow Dr. Rice's report, which will include, besides the speaker, Dr. Joseph W. Straley, Dr. Nathan Rosen and Dr. W. A. Bowers.

Conducted "at the requests of the scientists," the panel-discussion is expected to be a vindication of the scientists' position and a new challenge to study the problems of world peace, Russell G. Baldwin, president of student World Federalists, said yesterday.

Report Criticized

Following Dr. Rice's first report, an article appearing in the DTH by Reporter John Stump was criticized by the speaker as a "misquotation" and as misrepresentation of the address.

"Tomorrow's panel is being conducted," said Baldwin, "at the request of the scientists who appeared in the previous panel. They feel that their integrity was undermined by improper reporting in the DTH and that their standing in the eyes of students and citizens of Chapel Hill was jeopardized. The purpose of this panel is to clear up any false impressions created by the above-mentioned factors and to present a more extensive analysis of the need for, and possible methods of, controlling atomic energy. Everyone is invited to attend."

GEOGRAPHY LECTURE

Sigma Gamma Epsilon will present the second in a series of lectures on subjects related to geology and geography at 8:00 o'clock tomorrow night in room 203 of New East.

Guest speaker will be Dr. A. C. Howell of The Department of English, who will show color slides and present "A Panorama of Guatemala." All interested persons are invited to attend.

ADDRESSING THE PRECEDENT-SETTING special session of Congress in Washington, President Harry Truman is shown as he appealed for sweeping peacetime powers and for stop-gap aid for western Europe. He urged price and wage controls and rationing of basic products which affect the cost of living. In seeking interim help for Europe he asked for quick action "lest we lose the chance to obtain a world where free peoples can live in enduring peace." Di Plans to Discuss Inflationary Trends

The program to curb inflationary tendencies which President Truman presented Monday afternoon before the special session of Congress will be discussed and expanded here tonight at 9 o'clock when the Dialectic Literary Society meets in New West.

Open floor debate in the sixth Di meeting this quarter will cover six of Truman's proposals and three additional suggestions made by the campus society's own ways and means committee, John Zucker serving as its chairman.

The recent Presidential plan calls for (1) price control on scarce items which are essential to basic living and industrial needs, (2) consumer rationing, (3) regulation to control commodity speculation, (4) allocative powers over vital goods and industrial materials, (5) restoration of rent control, and (6) reinstatement of wartime installment buying and credit controls.

The Senate committee's additional ideas provide for (1) substantial increase in income tax rates to remove surplus income from the commodity market and prevent inflationary prices, (2) special surtax on unearned income derived from short-term or speculative investment, and (3) tax on commodities withheld from the market after the government has declared such goods essential for public consumption.

Charlie Long, speaker of the Di, urged yesterday that all Senators and all interested students, faculty members, and townspeople—especially campus economists--to attend tonight's session.

Campus Party Readies Slate For Coming Campus Elections

In a businesslike meeting held yesterday afternoon, the Campus party nominated an almost complete slate of candidates to represent them in the class elections next week and in the general campus elections of December.

Bob Haire of Winston-Salem was nominated to fill the vacancy existing on the Student council; Haire, a junior, is president of the Winston-Salem Carolina club and a member of the dance board.

In the junior class, Len Szafaryn of Ambridge, Pa. was selected as the nominee for president. Szafaryn, present president of the Monogram club is triply endorsed and will run without party opposition. Others nominated for junior class officerships include John York of Charlotte for vice president and Fred Fussel for social chairman.

For president of the Freshman class, Eric Cofield of Edenton is the nominee. His running mates on the CP ticket will be Bob Allen of Canton for vice president, and Ted Leonard of Greensboro for secretary-treasurer.

The list of those nominated for the legislature includes Jess Dedmond, party chairman, Walter Arnold, party vice chairman, and Bob Ormond, secretary of the interdormitory council, who will run from the dormitory district. Others nominated to run for the legislature from the men's dorms are Jim Vogler, Bob Birer, Ben Kistler, Garland Scruggs, Ralph Sherrill, C. B

SP Nominates Slack for Student Council; Szafaryn Endorsed for Junior President

UP Nominations Submitted to Winn

The University Party nominations for Junior, Freshman class officers have been confirmed and submitted to Al Winn, chairman of the board of elections.

Nominees chosen by the UP for Junior officers are, Len Szafaryn, for president; Stan Fox, vice-president; Martha Dan Payne, secretary; and Bill Thorpe, social chairman.

For Freshman officers, the following students were nominated, Herb Mitchell, for president; William Benbow, vice-president; Marvin Nathan, secretary-treasurer; and George Dunlop, social chairman.

In a nominations session which named Anna ("Chick") Slack candidate for woman representative to Student council and Len Szafaryn, endorsed by all three parties as candidate for junior class president, the Student party Monday night began rounding out its slate of nominations to be placed before voters in December elections.

Miss Slack, a native of Raleigh, is a member of the Dialectic senate and a sophomore in the School of Pharmacy. She is a member of the Carolina Independent Coed's association and of Kappa Epsilon, honorary pharmaceutical sorority.

Triple Endorsement

Szafaryn, president of the Monogram club and varsity football star, has a triple endorsement in his candidacy for junior class president. Originally nominated by the UP, he is a native of Ambridge, Pennsylvania.

Other nominees for junior class offices as announced by Chairman Charlie Long are, vice-president, Anne Wells, of Milledgeville, Georgia; secretary-treasurer, Sally Woodhull, of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; and social chairman, David Ferebee, of Vanceboro.

Additional candidates who have received SP endorsement, Student Legislature (dormitory)—Bruce Sanborn, of Gastonia. (town)—D. F. Blackwell, of Charlotte; David Orr, of Grove Hill, Alabama; and Hal Darden, of Orlando, Florida.

Tom Kerr, of Pasadena, California, was nominated for secretary and treasurer of the freshman class, after it

Sound and Fury Musical Comedy 'Gin Lane' Schedules First Performance for Tonight

By Paul Rothman

"Gin Lane," Sound and Fury's musicomedy melodrama, hits the boards at 8:15 this evening as the curtain goes up on the first performance of the Pete Strader-Ken Gammage brainchild.

Tomorrow night's curtain time will also be 8:15, but Friday night the production is scheduled for 8 o'clock, to avoid conflict with the Vaughn Monroe-Grail dance.

Sound and Fury has been hard at work for several weeks in order to whip the production into shape. The stage crew has been creating scenery under the direction of Tommy Thomas, a radio major from Richmond who has been acting as scene shop director.

Getting the dancing groups into shape for their performances has been Bill Corely, a journalism major from Atlanta who has also directed the dancing for part of the summer production and a few Graham memorial shows.

Voice direction has been handled by Forest Covington, a music major from Forest City. The music for the show was written by Frank Matthews, music major from Hemmingway, South Carolina, whose original music has been heard in several shows on the campus. Another member of Sound and Fury—Howard Meyers of Winston-Salem—will appear in front of the stage as the director of the band.

When the show gets under way, the audience will see the results of work done by John McBride, stage manager, and Colbert Leonard, who is directing the lighting for the show.

Not to be forgotten are the authors of the musical, Ken Gammage of Atlanta, and Pete Strader, Sarasota dramatics major who is also directing the production.

The ticket booth in the "Y" will be open until 3 o'clock this afternoon and tickets will be on sale at the door tonight for the 900 general admission tickets and those reserved seat tickets still remaining.

Duke Tickets Set for Sale At Gym Today

Several hundred tickets to the Carolina-Duke game to be played in Duke stadium Saturday will go on sale to the public at Woollen gymnasium at 2 o'clock today.

The Athletic office announced yesterday that the reasons for the availability of the tickets are (1) 12,000 portable grandstand seats have been torn down in Kenan stadium and rebuilt at Duke, and (2) the request here for student tickets has not been as large as was expected. Telephone orders for tickets will not be accepted.

Virginia Tickets

At the same time, the Athletic office set forth a new system of ticket distribution for the Carolina-Virginia game, which is scheduled for a week from Saturday.

All students must exchange their passbook coupons for seating assignments at Woollen gymnasium during the week beginning today and ending next Wednesday. Special windows will be open from 9 to 1 and 2 to 5 o'clock every day.

The new system has been installed to get an estimate of the number of students planning to attend the game in time to, if necessary, transfer the temporary stands which have been set up at Duke back to Kenan for the contest. Part of the portable stands will have to be set up anyway, stated the Athletic office.

Glee Club Tickets For Yuletide Musical Are Now Being Sold

Season tickets for the forthcoming concerts by the Men's and Women's Glee clubs are now on sale and may be obtained from the members of either club, or from Ledbetter Pickard's.

Under the new system, the purchase of one ticket will give admission to the Christmas Concert by the combined Men and Women's Glee clubs to be presented on Dec. 5 and 7, and to the Spring Concerts given by the individual clubs, the dates of which are to be announced later.

Because this one sale will eliminate the 3 separate ones previously held, the price of the season ticket will be $1.85, which is a substantial reduction over last year's price of $.85 for each concert. Those persons desiring to hear these concerts are urged to buy their tickets early in order to insure themselves seats at the concerts which last year had standing audiences.

Organist Robert Baker Will Give Recital Under Sponsorship of Music Department

Robert Baker, nationally known organist, will present a recital in Hill hall on tomorrow night at 8:30 under the sponsorship of the music department.

Well known in Chapel Hill, Baker is teacher of organplaying at Union Theological seminary, New York city, and is organist and choir master at the First Presbyterian church of Brooklyn.

His program will consist of "Fantasia in F minor," by Mozart; "Three Short Intermezzi," by Schroeder; "Rondo for the Flute Stop," by Rinck, arranged by Dickinson; "Adagio," from "Concerto in D Minor" by Vivaldi; "Prelude and Fugue in A Minor," Bach.

He will also play an Ancient Jewish Melody; "Divertissement," by Vierne; "Rhythmie Trumpet," by Bingham; "The Nativity," by Langlais; and "Fantasia and Fugue on Bach," by Liszt.

A member of the National council of the American Guild of Organists, Baker has played radio recitals from WNYC, has been guest lecturer and teacher at University of Michigan, Drake university, Illinois Wesleyan university, University of Nebraska, and at the National Music camp at Interlochen, Michigan.

Baker, who is rated tops among organists by critics throughout the country, received his bachelor of music degree at Illinois Wesleyan university, and his master and doctor of sacred music at Union Theological seminary. He has also done graduate work at Columbia university.

State Board Approves Use Of Capitol By Legislature

By Bill Sexton

Raleigh, Nov. 18—The state Board of Buildings and Grounds today approved use of the capitol here for the State Student Legislature November 28-29.

However, only one of the two General Assembly chambers will be available to the student law-makers. The board announced that the Senate hall had already been reserved for use by the North Carolina Education commission, and that only the House chamber could be used.

Former System

The Student Legislature in its 10 previous annual sessions has been patterned after the state General Assembly with two separate houses, a senate and house of representatives. The respective halls of the two regular chambers were used.

Whether the 1947 session will be made unicameral by necessity, or outside accommodations for one house provided, has not been determined by the reorganized Legislative council, sponsor of the student assembly.

Possible Alternative

Additional quarters may be available at State college or in Raleigh's Memorial auditorium, though distance between two separate meeting places would hamper functioning of the legislature.

Five members of the six-man Buildings board were present for the half-hour meeting this afternoon. They included Governor R .Gregg Cherry, Attorney General Harry McMullan, Treasurer Charles M. Johnson, Assistant Budget Director R. G. Deyton, and George Cherry, director of buildings and grounds.

Secretary of State Thad Eure, who earlier had ruled that a new permit for use of the capitol was necessary, did not attend.

Response Is Slow For Inoculations, Says Hedgepeth

Students are responding very slowly to the opportunity offered them of free influenza-preventative shots, stated Dr. E. M. Hedgepeth of the University infirmary yesterday.

Yesterday was the last day during this week that shots will be given at Memorial hall, but students may obtain the service during office hours at the infirmary at any time before December 1.

Dr. Hedgepeth said that Memorial hall will probably be used again next week on Monday to give the inoculations, from 9 to 1 and 2 to 5 o'clock.

Holiday Extension To Cause Stiff Fine

With the Thanksgiving vacation beginning at 3 o'clock next Wednesday and ending the following Sunday at 6 o'clock, a committee of University deans has announced strict fines to be imposed on any student who extends his own holidays.

By faculty legislation a student who misses classes on the last day before or the first day after vacation will be charged at the rate of $2.50 per class missed up to the maximum of three classes—a total of $7.50. According to Dean William Wells, committee spokesman, only in cases of extreme emergency to be passed upon by the committee of deans itself will excetpion be made.

Lodge To Instruct Philosophy Course

Professor R. C. Lodge will be visiting professor in the Department of Philosophy for the winter quarter of this year. Professor Lodge has taught in England, Canada, and the United States, and is the author of many books and articles.

Among the books which he has published are Plato's Theory of Ethics, Philosophy of Education, The Philosophy of Business, The Questioning Mind, and others. His special fields are Plato's philosophy, and ethics.

While here he will instruct the course on Plato and Aristotle (Philosophy 122).

Choral Body, Quartet Schedule Two Events To Present this Week

Two musical events of outstanding importance will take place this week in Hill hall. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Chapel Hill Choral club will present Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons," and Monday evening at 8:30 the University String quartet will be heard in a recital of chamber music.

Young Directs

Mr. Paul Young is director of the Choral club, a group composed of students and townspeople. Soloists for Sunday's performance will be Barbara Edwards, soprano; Carl Perry, tenor; and Andrew Griffin, bass. Accompanists will be Jeanne Fornoff and John O'Steen, piano, and John Ellis, organ.

The University String quartet is made up of Willis Gates, first violin; Mrs. Dorothy Alden, second violin; Edgar Alden, viola; and Miss Emily Porter, violoncello.

First in Series

First in the series of faculty recitals, Monday's program will include "Quartet in D Major," K. 499, by Mozart; "Quartet in A Major," Opus 41, No. 3, by Schumann; and "Quartet in G Minor," Opus 10, by Debussy.

The quartet is also appearing in Raleigh tonight under the auspices of the Raleigh Chamber Music guild, which was organized by Mr. Alden several years ago to provide chamber music on a subscription basis.

JAM SESSION

Jimmy Marshall, conductor of the eight-piece Carolinians orchestra, will moderate this afternoon's Graham Memorial jam session in the student union Rendezvous from 3-6 o'clock. Consisting of three hours of unrehearsed music, the program will feature spontaneous playing by four or five combos selected from those musicians registered at the session.

Huckster-Methods Out of Place

At least two organizations are more than a little peeved at the mammoth board advertising a dow-with-high-prices campaign which the AVC and SCHW are co-sponsoring. The size of the board is not the cause for the objections, not its position in the Y cours, but rather the fact that their names appear on the board after they declined the invitation to participate in the meeting.

It is true that underneath the names in small lettering is the statement that only those names with aa red check have accepted the invitation. But why put their names on the board in the first place?

The organizations which so strongly object to even being associated with the movement declined the invitation to attend several days before the board was so publicly displayed. They refused the invitation stating that participation in such a meeting was not in their scope. One said that their national organization explicitly forbids participation in anything which may develop into a political or partisian movement. Another organization refused the invitation stating that they were primarily a debating group concerned with international affairs, and therefore, they did not feel that they should participate in the meeting.

The idea of holding a down-with-high-prices meeting may be in itself a very worthwhile objection, but when making up their advertisements the groups should use more discretion and not associate organizations with a movement which is definately out of the scope of certain organizations and against the very nature of their organization.

Love That Weather

Yep, it's here.

Winter, of a sort, that is. At about 1:35 yesterday afternoon a blea knorth wind showered the city with a fine, stinging shower of ice.

Everyone seemed to welcome the decisive atmospherci nip-up. At least the coeds can wear their fur coats now without having women in cloth jobs calling them show-offs.

The former paratroopers in our midst can break out their jump boots.

If any sophomore has a racoon coat, he's welcome to wear it now.

Don English can light up his log fire down in the Rendezvous withous providing perspiration towels and dapper lads can wear white mufflers again.

Of course everyone realizes that this turn in the weather means the beginning of another seige of mud, but — as many have pointed out lately — isn't our own liquid earth part of the Carolina Wayuvlife?

At any rate, everybody seemed to be running around yesterday afternoon with considerable vigor, not to mention pink cheeks.

Let us say, in the manner of Erskine Caldwell, Carolina takes to winter like sparrows to a ginhouse roof. — B. S.

Repeat Performance

In Defense of Carolina Scientists

By Russell G. Baldwin

A scientist's place is in the laboratory. So says John Stump. He must never utter a word having political implications. It is not for him to be concerned about the problems of human relations and whether there shall be war or peace. If the politicians continue to muddle up human affairs with their pre-atomic age methods of dealing with them, then, it is the duty of the scientists to burn to a crisp in the consequent atomic war along with the reast of us. After all, neither we nor the scientists are political experts and if they don't save us from an atomic war, at least it will be their fault and not ours. The fact that we will probably be killed in that war is incidental and unimportant.

When a scientist—or anyone else, for that matter,— suggests that maybe a war with Russia isn't necessary, or that Russia might not be the only jeopardizer of the peace, or that the United States is anything less than spotless, then, he is unquestionably a "Red". Doesn't that make sense? How about it, you intellectuals?

Perhaps it would serve a better end to throw away the "Stump method" and get down to cases. Mr. Stump obviously made a seriously libelous blunder in his mis-reporting of the CCUN-Carolina Scientists Association panel on atomic energy. Everyone makes mistakes and Mr. Stump, being no exception to the rule, should be forgiven even though some of the scientists feel that is asking a lot.

Is the scientists's place in the laboratory only? You probably think so. If these were "normal" times, I would agree with you. But, these are NOT normal times. No one realizes better than the atomic scientists just how critical is the age in which we live. No one is better prepared to speak on that crisis than the atomic scientist. It is not only his right but his duty to leave the laboratory and tell the people what he knows. We can be thankful that many of the most brilliant scientists of our day—Drs. Albert Einstein and Harold Urey, to mention only two—have left their laboratories in order to inform the people of the implications of atomic energy.

Never before in modern times has the course of human events reached such critical straits that scientists have felt the need of laying down their test-tubes and mounting the Nation's rostrums. They do not make great orators, it is true, but they are eloquent. Their eloquence comes from "what" they say and not from how they say it.

On Thursday, four of the scientists who spoke on the panel on atomic energy of week before last—Drs. Straley, Rosen, Rice, and Bowers, by name— will speak on the implications of atomic energy. These men know what they are talking about, Mr. Stump to the contrary. If you are interested in the issue of peace versus war, or, if you are concerned by the inability of the UN to function effectively, here is an opportunity to learn some of the pertinent facts which have a direct and unmistakably decisive bearing on these issues.

Life With Father Is Very Hazardous

Milwaukee (UP)—Four-year-old Jimmy Roberts was racing his tricycle when the mudguard dropped off and fell into the spokes of the front wheel.

Jimmy sailed over the handlebars, landed on his nose, and got up minus two front teeth.

His father fixed the mudguard, but his mother didn't quite trust her husband's repair job. She started to walk the tricycle to the garage.

Her intuition was correct. The guard came loose again, fell into the spokes, and Mrs. Roberts landed on her nose.

She broke only one tooth, however.

Britain's Ministry of Works has sent Maj. T. A. Whitehouse to the United States to study American methods of brickmaking.

The Decline of Vandalism

By Foo Giduz

—Though we're still knocking on wood, it looks like the vandalism game, of some two score years traditional standing is on the way out for keeps . . . Concerted campaigns at Wake Forest, Carolina, Dook, and State (little late there) have turned the trick so that with the big game of the year only three days off now, there doesn't seem to be any apprehension of this costly playboy foolishness.

For the third time this year, after a Carolina team has won a football game, a man has dropped dead from heart failure . . . Just after leaving Griffith stadium in Washington on Saturday, Paul M. Grubb of Raleigh suddenly died while walking down Seventh street . . .

You would have expected more people to have fallen victim to the cold Capitol city climate Saturday than anything else . . . With the temeperature well below 40 in the stadium, and a gusty slanting rain driving right through even the covered grandstands, hundreds of fans decided it just wan't worth staying and watching. (P.S. It was) . . . The television sets in most of Washington's bars thus provided a far chummier and more "spirited" situation for these spectators.

Dunno where the rumors of a pre-game Griffith stadium sellout came from . . . Despite a seeming shortage of tickets, the house was only two-thirds full . . . Sign of the times for Sat's game: More passes were intercepted (4), than were completed (3)! . . . It was good to see many old familiar faces making the Terp tilt their true Homecoming game. . . . Best regards go through this corner to all from Bob Burleigh, director of Graham Memorial for 1944-5. Also very much in evidence around the scene was Arnold Schulman, last year's diminutive big-time campus promoter in matters of writing, and acting . . . Scarcely six months out of Carolina, Schulm, is already hitting the top along Broadway, and among other things is doing ghost writing quite frequently for a nationally known newspaper syndicated New York columnist.

Commoner!

Wally Still an Outsider

London, Nov. 19 (U.P.)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will not attend tomorrow's wedding in Westminster Abbey but there are many in Britain who had hoped the royal family would be able to end its ten-year ostracism of the American divorcee for so happy an occasion.

By its action in barring the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore, Md., from the wedding—and thus her husband—the royal family headed by 80-year-old Queen Mother Mary has made all too clear its unrelenting refusal to recognize the woman for whose love King Edward VIII abdicated the throne.

Curiously enough, had the duke not abdicated the throne, the marriage of the princess tomorrow would not have the significance it carries, for she would not be first in succession to the throne but second behind her father, who would still be Duke of York.

Iron Curtain Drawn

The social iron curtain fell on Wallis Warfield even before her marriage to the Duke of Windsor. In the rapid upsurge of events leading to the celebrated dinner party in 1936 when King Edward informed his shocked family that he placed his love for Mrs. Warfield above his family inheritance, she was made to feel what penalty marriage would carry.

The predictions were all too true. She became a duchess because her husband was a duke but all other prerogatives of his position were denied her. She was not raised to a royal highness—her husband always was. Thus even had they attended state functions together, there would be a humiliating disparity in precedence.

The duke as a royal highness ranks third behind his brothers the King and the Duke of Gloucester. But as the newest of the duchesses she would rank 35th.

The duke has refused firmly to attend any formal affair without his wife—an attitude which has won him considerable support from press and public.

Washington Hurry-Go-Round

Rover Boys On Capitol Hill

By Chuck Hauser

How Not to Help Harry Open up Congress:

Monday marked the opening day of the wide-famed special session on Capitol Hill, so the DTH managing and news editors, alias Washington correspodents, decided to stick around and miss just one more day's classes to see ho wour representation under the dome was behaving itself.

The serious congressional note would have been a fitting end to a perfect weekend of general festivity. Even the abysmal Saturday weather had been ignored in the light of that beautiful fourth quarter when the Tar Heels took over. The only people who were in need of sympathy were the poor souls who left the game at the half and at the end of the third quarter, disgusted with sitting in the rain and the sight of two football teams slimy with mud, sloshing around in what some people swore was a football stadium.

The Big Sleep:

Everything would have been fine, however, on Monday morning, except that old Chapel Hill ailment of ignoring the alarm clock recurred in the form of an acute attack. In addition, the car we had borrowed was extremely hard to find in downtown D. C., and as a result the two of us showed on Capitol Hill at approximately 12:15.

The House Office building did seem extremely quiet as we slipped in the back door, but it wasn't until a few minutes later that we remerbered that the special session convned at noon. The place was almost deserted, except for a few representatives' secretaries running around. But there was a bigger run around to come.

The Royal Run-Around:

"Sorry, but Mr. Durham left just a short while ag and the only pass to the session went out the door with some high school boy a minute before you came in. I'm afraid you're just a little too late." .... Yeah, too little and too late.

"Hello? No, Senator Umstead left just a little while ago. He said to tell you he was very sorry, but the pass he said you might have was already promised to someone else. He's been working on another one, but he had to leave to go to the floor. Do drop around and see us before you leave Washington."

We headed out the door and looked around for the nearest bar with a television set. We were going to hear Harry speak come hell or high water. But we never did. That's another story.

Atheists, Communists, Catholics.

Franklin park, the site of the big Carolina pep rally Saturday morning in Washington, was the scene on a nother rally, or actually several of them, Sunday afternoon. On one side of the park a terrific frowd had gathered to hear a bewhiskered Swede on ancient age discuss the merits of the Catholic church while three marines in dress blues gave him a hard time.

Thirty yards away a young man of about 25 was declaiming the obviousness of atheism. 'What has God ever done for you?" he directed toward his listeners, and when an elderly gentleman pointed out that God had given him everything he had, the young man stated that he wasn't so lucky; he had had to lay cold cash out for what he had. The third Franklin square group was participating in a hot discussion with a greasy-looking Communist who swore that the Constitution was full of prunes. ..... This was Washington on a chilly Sunday afternoon.

Promising Young Legislators Return from Washington:

Having failed to do Congress any good, we boarded the Silver Meteor Monday evening and turned our face south. The club car was crowded as we journeyed down to the old North State, but we didn't mind in the least.

The waitress in the bus station at Raleigh tried to give us a hard time, though. She swore the only grapefruit juice they served had nothing to do with gin. She should live so long. I doubt if she ever was a Carolina coed.

Drop Dead:

Just what we did as we hit the sack, tired and dissipated, after an unexciting bus ride to the Hill. You too, brother.

Come the Cavaliers

Head for the Hills, Men!

By Bill Buchan

One thing certain, come the weekend of November 29, this individual is heading for the hills, but fast.

As a matter of record, that's the weekend that the University of Virginia, in company with their football team, invades Chapel Hill. And, according to stories coming out of Philadelphia, that ain't good.

It seems that the Virginia students don't like to lose ball games, and when they do, they express their indignation in ways that aren't soon forgotten. For example, look what happened to the Friendly City when Penn conquered the Virginia boys:

At the Adelphia Hotel, cultured spot on Chestnut street, angry students threw chairs from windows, tore beds sheets, blankets, slats and all..to shreds, broke cigarette receptacles, and scattered sand over the premises.

At the Hotel Bellevue Stratford, one kindhearted individual did $300 worth of damage alone by turning on a fire extinguisher, and after liberally spraying the area, he threw the object down two flights of stairs.

Not to be outdone, visitors at the Ritz-Carlton hotel turned in a false alarm, causing 300 residents to vacate their rooms temporarily, and used not one, but 10 fire extinguishers in spraying the walls.

Now it is to be taken for granted beforehand, that Virginia is coming here for a defeat and under these circumstances, with the above conditions a matter of record, we heartily recommend the swearing in of a special police force, about 7,528, to handle any destructive ambitions that might exist after the game.

Or else, dispatch a committee of student representatives to Charlottesville, but fast, to teach the Virginians a bit of Carolina hospitality. And then, again, inasmuch as Chapel Hill has only one hotel, they could tear it down temporarily and camouflage the parts in the nearby woods.

Personally, we're gonna hit the road for the hills.

For Other Girls

Men Favor Daring Dresses

Confidential tip to the girls—men like daring dresses only on the other fellow's girl—not theirs.

That was the essence of opinion expressed by a group of collegians, including Eugene Rossides of Columbia football fame, who served on Cosmopolitan's magazine's male-tested fashion jury at New York's Stork Club.

"Believe it or not they voted consistently for gowns with some covering over shoulder or upper arm or with narrow shoulder straps," Kay Wister, fashion editor of the magazine declared. "The completely bare shoulder decolletage was something delightful—to them—only on the other fellow's girl."

Typical of college men throughout the country, many of them having returned from overseas service, they represented a cross-section of male opinion as to how they like their women to dress. They represented Yale, Princeton, Cornell, Amherst, Columbia, Dartmouth, the University of Missouri and the University of Nebraska.

"Generally the boys approved of dresses that had a sophisticated but not too exposed look." Mrs. Wister said. "In fact it's a look the boys pronounced 'dreamy'."

Rossides was particularly impressed with the slit hemline of one of the winning dresses which embodied all the fashion points that had been emphasized.

"It was a roval blue crepe gown that bared the shoulders but covered the arms completely," Mrs. Wister said "The skirt, with sophisticated hip-lin drape tapered to a narrow hemline, but the slit allowed plenty of freedom for dancing."

"Sophisticated and relaxing" was the way Paul Stessel of the University of Missouri described on of the winning dresses in the groups shown.

Bob Folan, Yale hockey player, and Bob Slocum, who pitches for the Princeton baseball team were inclined to "make haste slowly" in appraising some of the newer length dresses.

"We had better take our time and thrash this thing over," was the way Folan expressed it, while Slocum said "The length is too sudden a departure."

Pilferage remains a serious problem at ports in the Philippines.

Grid Play Checked By Rain; Ping Pong Gains Semi Finals

Intramural football championship playoffs were delayed another day due to rain yesterday but play will be resumed this afternoon on the mural fields, weather permitting.

Unhampered by the weather, the table tennis tournament has reached the semi-final round and the finals in both divisions will be decided tomorrow.

The top clash on today's grid slate throws the Grads against Lewis. A victory for the Grads will gain them the dormitory crown won last year by Lewis, which went on to cop the campus championship.

Today is the final day for registering and weighing-in for the intramural wrestling tournament which starts tomorrow. Those who have not yet registered may do so between 2 and 6 o'clock at the main entrance to the basket room.

In the fraternity division, Chi Psi has already captured the title, but play will continue to determine the runner-up positions. Phi Delt, DKE, and Zeta Psi will fight it out for the additional points gained from second-place honors.

Snavelymen Get Fill Of Wet Field Drills

Carolina's Tar Heels settled down to heavy work for their battle with the Duke Blue Devils on Saturday by staging a full-scale workout in the mud of Navy field yesterday.

An afternoon of sleet and rain left the playing field in very poor condition for practice, but Coach Carl Snavely's boys ought to be used to this by now. In the Maryland game this past week-end and in all the pereceding practice sessions in Chapel Hill before that game, there was enough rain to make the field a sea of mud.

The Tar Heels at least should be prepared for a rainy day on Saturday when they meet Duke, but Coach Wallace Wade has been facing the same unfavorable conditions in Durham in his efforts to whip his squad into condition.

Injured Players

Two of the Tar Heels' key players sustained injuries against Maryland that prevented their participation in the light workout Monday and yesterday. Sid Varney, guard, and Bob Cox, the extra point specialist, are the boys who are laid up, but the trainers are hoping to have them ready for the Devils.

Another cause of concern is whether Hosea Rodgers will be able to play. The big fullback injured his knee against Tennessee several weeks ago and the injury has been slow healing. Right now it appears that Hosea won't be able to play against Duke unless there is a big improvement soon. Fortunately for the Tar Heel chances, Walt Pupa has regained his form of last season and has been filling the fullback post well

Coed Table Tennis Set to Start Today

First round play in the coed ping pong tournament will get under way this afternoon at the Woman's gym, tourney director Helen Crockford announced yesterday.

Opening round pairing are listed below and these matches must be played before next Monday. All girls not playing in the first round have received byes and will begin play next week. These girls are asked to check the bulletin board at the Woman's gym concerning their matches.

Tables and other equipment for the competition are on hand at the Woman's gym and can be secured on request.

First round matches: (To be played by Nov. 24)—Farrell (3932) vs. Carter (6016); Tucker (3071) vs. Mitchell (6052); Norman (6016) vs. Davis (3002); Blackburn (4066) vs. Perry (8066); Dellinger (4066) vs. Blackwell (8036); Walker (7091) vs. Smith (F-3071).

Jayvee and Soccer Outfits Get Ready For Friday Battles

A week of hard work stared Carolina's soccer and jayvee football elevens in their collective faces this week, as both squads settled down to preparation for the tough contest slated for each team on local fields on Friday afternoon.

Although the jayvee gridders escaped unscathed except for a few minor cuts or bruises from last week's clash with the Virginia Squires, Coach Marvin Allen's booters were not so fortunate.

Sometime during the course of the game, Al Williams, the Tar Heel's ace goalie, severely sprained his left ankle and as a result will probably be sidelined during the Allenmen's finale on Friday against Virginia.

Sobel at Goalie

Coach Allen, however, was not too downcast over the loss for he has a very able replacement for Williams in Dave Sobel. Only Williams' added experience and poise had prevented Sobel from taking over the first-string goal tending position earlier.

Wayne Johnson may also miss the Wahoo tilt unless his ankle responds to treatment more encouraging than it has during the past few days. Al Singer's return to action has cast one ray of hope into the Tar Heel soccer camp, though. The wily forward's ball handling has been sorely missed by the Blue and White shinbusters during their last two outings.

Allen disclosed yesterday that he intends to spend this week polishing his offensive ball handling by keeping the forwards and halfbacks working on their passing and general ball handling.

Jayvee mentor Crowell Little was fairly well pleased with his charges' performance in Charlottesville last week, although a lapse by the Tar Baby pass defense allowed Virginia to set up and score their lone and tying touchdown. The Tar Babies will spend this week running Duke plays against their big brothers. On Friday they meet the Duke Blue Imps in Kenan stadium at 2 o'clock.

Foul Shots Receive Share of Cage Drills

With the old story that many a game is lost on foul shots well in mind, Carolina's 1948 basketball team took another step in avoiding such a loss with part of yesterday's practice session being devoted to foul shooting.

Cage Coach Tom Scott had the boys toeing the foul mark, sharpening their shooting eyes for the season's opener two weeks from today.

A new innovation in University cage circles appeared this week with the installation of glass backboards on the main court of Woollen. The change was made to eliminate the limited vision of those sitting behind the goals at the games.

The rest of yesterday's practice session was devoted to standard drills, with zone defense receiving emphasis.

Mural Open House

All students planning to play on the University badminton team are requested by the Intramural office to be present at the weekly open house held in Woollen gym from 7 until 9 o'clock tonight.

The open house program, sponsored by the Intramural department, will be held on Monday evenings after this week. The change to Wednesday night for this week was due to the basketball clinic held in the gym by Coach Scott.

Students May Give To Friendship Train

Although the Friendship Train will not visit Chapel Hill, students and citizens will have a chance to contribute to the train. Chancellor R. B. House launched the campaign yesterday by giving the first check to the University Friendship Train drive. Remembering the many starving people in Europe, the University Friendship Train committee, sponsors of the drive, realize that many students and citizens of Chapel Hill are anxious to contribute.

Only cash contributions are requested, and the money will be used to buy a carload of food, which will be added to the Drew Pearson Friendship Train. The various organizations on the campus and in town will be contacted by members of the committee.

The committee announced that appeals for support will be made in Lenoir hall and at the local theaters. Contribution boxes will be placed at various places on the campus to give interested persons a chance to contribute.

Harden Taylor Recommended To Research Professorship

Dr. Harden F. Taylor, marine scientist, was recommended to the position of research professor at the newly-launched University Institute of Fisheries Research, at yesterday's meeting of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees held in Raleigh.

The appointment of Dr. Taylor is the first major addition to the staff of the new University project on the coast at Ocracoke since Dr. R. E. Coker of the Zoology department was announced as the director.

The new professor comes to his position after 11 years of work in the United States Bureau of Fisheries, and many of marine research in private corporations. For the past two years he has directed the Survey of Marine Fisheries for the state.

The Executive committee also recommended Dr. Frank Cross to the position of assistant professor of Biblical Literature. Dr. Cross is currently doing graduate work at John Hopkins, and will come to the University, if he accepts the appointment, after September 1, 1948.

J. C. Lyons, professor of Romance Languages, was granted a leave of absence to start with the spring quarter of 1948, in order that he might work with Army Extension courses at the request of the war department.

Other committee action, subject to the approval of the board of Trustees itself, promoted the following associate professors to the rank of full professor: John V. Allcott, Art department, James L. Godfrey and J. Carlyle Sitterson, History department, and Walter S. Spearman, Journalism department.

The session convened at 9 o'clock Monday night in Graham Memorial's. Roland Parker lounge No. 1. Final nominations session for Student party, according to Long, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 in Horace Williams lounge.

PARENTS TO MEET

The next meeting of the Parent's club division of the Dames club sponsoring the program of education for responsible parenthood will be held at the Presbyterian church tonight, at 8 o'clock. Toys and books will be the topic discussed.

Choral Concert Set For Sunday

The Chapel Hill Choral Club will present its annual fall concert in Hill Music hall, Sunday, afternoon, 4 o'clock. The chorus of 100 voices will sing the autumn and winter sections of Josef Haydn's secular oratorio "The Seasons." Paul Young, associate professor of music, will conduct.

The solo roles will be sung by Barbara Edwards, soprano; Carl Perry, tenor; and Andrew Griffith, bass.

Jeanne Fornoff and John O'Steen, pianists, and John Ellis, organist, will accompany.

-Campus Party-

Mendenhall, and Allen Pettiway.

Martha Manning, Sue Stoker, Catherine Royall, and Rachel Woodley were selected to run as CP candidates for the legislature positions allotted to the women's dorms. Those who will compose the party ticket for Town district seats in the body are Charlie Hodson, Fred Adaire, John Zucker, and Bill Swain.

Another meeting, to complete the party's slate for December, will be held in GM tomorrow at 4:00 according to party chairman Dedmond. He emphasized that anyone wishing to come is invited.

-What's Up-

but the position is rather short on relief with Rodgers on the injured list.

Carolina will be trying for its sixth straight victory Saturday. The Tar Heels have beaten William and Mary, Florida, Tennessee, State, and Maryland in order to regain the national spotlight they had at the beginning of the season. A win over Duke and another over Virginia in the season finale would definitely place the Tar Heels in the bowl limelight for January 1.

Virginia will meet a foe from the North State this week when State travels up to Charlottesville to meet the Cavaliers. Carolina beat State, 41-6, with its best game of the season but State has improved since then, as evidenced by a win over Wake Forest, 21-0, last week. The State-Virginia battle nevertheless should give some indication of the comparative strength of the Carolina and the Old Dominion outfits.

PIERRE DE GAULLE (above), younger brother of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, early this week was elected president of the Paris City council — a post corresponding to the office of mayor—shortly before 25 Communist members walked out on a stormy session at which De Gaulle's Rally of the French People party took over the municipal government reins.

Local Groups To Hold Anti-Inflation Rally

By Kenneth Rothwell

Coinciding with President Truman's call for a special session of Congress to combat the rise in prices representatives of some 35 town and campus groups will meet this evening at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall for a public "Hit High Prices!" rally.

According to Aubrey Williams, Jr., chairman of the sponsoring group, all shades of campus opinion will be represented in the various groups that have been invited.

"If we overlooked any organization it is accidental and we hope they will attend anyway," he said.

Gillin to Moderate

Dr. John P. Gillin of the sociology department will act as moderator while Dr. Frank Kottke and Mr. Clay Cochran of the economics department will present the broad national picture of the price situation. Nelle Morton, executive secretary of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, is scheduled to tie in the effect of inflation on the local southern scene. Martin Knowlton will give a brief sketch of the current conditions among the farmer and industrial worker.

Open Discussion

"Immediately following the presentation of these speakers the floor will be thrown open for discussion of a concrete platform to be adopted by the audience. Since every group has been invited to present their recommendations we hope to arrive at a conclusion that will satisfy

Lab Theater Plans Printed Programs

A. E. Westover, director of the Laboratory theater production of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," said yesterday that the group plans to have printed programs for its showings on Sunday and Monday nights, although the play is being offered free of admission.

The arrangements are being made through Graham Memorial, joint sponsor of the student group along with the Carolina Playmakers, and the play will be staged in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Praises Work

Westover is very enthusiastic about the progress of the production and praised work being done by both the cast and technical crews.

He pointed out David Samples, Joliet, Ill., Frederick Johnson, Chico, Calif., Catherine Covington, Portsmouth, Va., and W. P. Covington, III, Winston-Salem, for special mention.

Paul Ramadier Quits Position as Premier At Crucial Moment

Paris, Nov. 19.—(UP)—Premier of France Paul Ramadier resigned tonight at one of the most crucial moments in the nation's history.

Ramadier and his Coalition cabinet gave up the job to head off a disastrous clash between French Communists and the right-wing forces of General Charles De Gaulle.

Their action cleared the way for the aging socialist leader Leon Blum to form a middle-of-the-road government to avoid a possible civil war.

General Strike

The fall of Ramadier's streamlined regime came as Communist labor leaders threatened to paralyze all industry in poverty-stricken France with a general strike. More than 350 thousand workers, most of them vital dock and mine employees, are idle as a result of the spreading wave of walkouts.

President Vincent Auriol is expected to appoint Leon Blum the new Premier of France tomorrow.

The 75-year-old Socialist has been talking with leaders of middle-of-the-road parties all day long but the new cabinet still has not been completed, according to latest reports.

The secretary-general of the Socialist party, Guy Mollet, says Blum's government probably would include 13 ministers and would carry 10 more votes in the National assembly than the 300 held by the old regime.

He hinted, however, that Conservative leader Paul Reynaud would not be handed a portfolio because he disagrees with the present economic program.

There is one bright spot in the French picture tonight, though, as the report that workers themselves are showing more and more opposition to a general strike is received.

Leaders of the powerful Confederation of Labor have met in emergency session over dissension in the ranks.

Durham Club

Plans are now being formed to organize a Durham-Carolina club with the express purpose of giving a Christmas dance over the holidays.

A mass meeting of all Durham Tar Heels will be called in the near future to organize the club. Time and place of the meeting will be announced later.

Clampitt Elected UVA Head; Group Adopts Constitution

Johnny Clampitt, campus Orientation committee chairman and NSA delegate, was elected president of the University Veterans association at a meeting early this week.

At the same time a new constitution for the association was adopted following a lively discussion led by Hugh Wells.

Clampitt, a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, will succeed Wells as president, having defeated his opponent, John Roeder, by approximately a two to one vote.

Hubert Aenchbacher will replace Jim Dean as vice president: Dick Cohan will replace Clampitt as treasurer; and Field "Doc" Clark will replace Patricia Connelly as secretary. The three-man board of governors has not as yet been appointed. All elections will be effective December 1.

The extensive reports compiled by committees appointed to investigate food prices and housing conditions in Chapel Hill were withheld until the next meeting of the organization at 8 o'clock next Monday night.

Phi Assembly Approves Law To Stop Lynching Actions

By a vote of 13 to 11 the Philanthropic assembly passed a resolution favoring the proposed Federal anti-lynch law at a weekly meeting Tuesday night in the Phi hall. The Assembly bill favors an act by Congress which will make federal law enforcement agencies responsible for the prevention and prosecution of lynching and crimes involving mob action.

Addressing the assembly Professor Clyde Cass Carter of the Commerce School spoke on the merits of such a legislative act. He stated that the states were either unwilling or unable to prevent mob action and that persons accused of lynching in the South stood little chance of being convicted by a local jury.

Upholds Act

Praising the F.B.I., Carter said that federal law enforcement agencies would be much more efficient in preventing lynchings than local agencies. He added that federal courts would be more impartial as federal judges and prosecuting attorneys, being appointed by the President, were unhampered by the fear of not being re-elected if they acted counter to public opinion.

Carter said that it was impossible to determine the constitutionality of the anti-lynch law which is scheduled to come before Congress soon ,as such a measure has never come before the Supreme Court. He thought, however, that such a bill would be ruled constitutional under the "due process clause" of the 14th amendment.

Leads Opposition

Leading the opposition to the bill, George Rodman stated that the bill was aimed at the South. He added that such an act would be unconstitutional as it gave the Federal Government power to determine whether local law enforcement officers were negligent in performing their duties. Other opponents of the bill argued that the measure is now useless as public opinion in the South is strongly opposed to lynchings and the number of such crimes have greatly decreased in recent years. They also claimed that the measure would be a violation of states rights.

Also passed by the assembly was a resolution favoring the State Student Legislature which is to convene in Raleigh.

CPU Membership Enlarged By Four

The Carolina Political Union admitted four students to its membership during the past two weeks. They are Mary W. Sledge, senior from Ada, Okla., James F. Southerland, sophomore from Willard, Marvin Nathan, freshman from Norfolk, Va., and Harold F. Elkin, graduate student from Philadelphia, Pa.

The membership of the union at present stands at 21, with nine vacancies to be filled in the near future, according to Pete Gerns, secretary. Application blanks can be had at the YMCA office and should be sent to Ben Perlmutter, chairman of the membership committee, c-o Carolina Political Union, Graham Memorial.

Oak Ridge Scientist To Discuss Implications Of Atomic Energy

Speaking at 4:30 this afternoon on "The Implications of Atomic Energy," Dr. Oscar K. Rice, member of the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers, will open the second panel-discussion within two weeks to be sponsored by the Association of Carolina Scientists.

Today's address by Dr. Rice will be followed by an open forum which will include, besides the speaker, Dr. Nathan Rosen, Dr. Joseph W. Straley and Dr. W. A. Bowers.

Presented by the ACS and the student chapter of United World Federalists, the program will be held in Roland Parker lounge, Graham Memorial.

Both the American plan and the Russian plan for international control of atomic energy will be discussed. The two plans will be compared with the view of exploring possible bases of agreement. The scientists will not only express their own views on the vital matter of international control but will also present the views of various scientific societies.

Each of the scientists will speak for ten minutes on a different aspect of the problem and necessity of international control of atomic energy. Russell Baldwin, president of the UNC chapter of United World Federalists, will act as moderator.

A similar panel was held November 6 sponsored by the Collegiate Council for United Nations at which Dr. Rice spoke on "Report from Oak Ridge—Atomic Energy Control." A report of his address by DTH reporter John Stump the following day caused quite a bevy of contributions to the DTH "Write Away" columns, in which Dr. Rice called Stump's writing "misrepresentation of the address."

Russell Baldwin, World Federalists chapter president, said today's meeting is being held to clear up the misunderstanding which came as a result of Stump's article.

Following the forum World Federalists will hold a short business session.

Friendship Train Drive Gains Momentum In Second Day of Existence on Campus

The Friendship train drive gained momentum in its second day of life on the campus today. Town and University organizations have shown impressive support of the campaign.

John Donovan, assistant to Drew Pearson, yesterday told the University Friendship train committee that all cash contributions and food commodities must be in Washington by November 30. But because of Thanksgiving holidays, the University committee announced that the campus campaign will end Wednesday, November 26, when all contributions must be in.

Four contribution boxes were placed today, one each at Lenoir hall, Carolina theater, YMCA, and Graham Memorial. Provisions are being made to give the town people an opportunity to contribute to the train fund.

"Myrt" Sherrard, head cheerleader of the University, said he would make announcements at the Duke-Carolina football game Saturday, asking for support of the drive. The facilities of radio station WDUK of Durham have been offered the committee for the purpose of raising funds.

Tuggle Webster, chairman of the Friendship train drive in Durham, said that the committee might buy their commodities in Durham and use the Durham train to ship the goods to Washington.

Marriage Lectures Passed By Senate Tuesday Evening

The Coed Senate Tuesday night passed a bill introduced by Bonnie Thrash providing for a series of lectures on marriage to be given to coeds. These lectures are to be given beginning in January, 1948, by Mrs. Ernest R. Groves, local authority on marriage, and during alternate years so that the same class of girls will not necessarily hear them twice.

The budget drawn up by the finance committee was presented to the Seneate by Doris Harrill, treasurer, and the Senate, approving the budget granted $1445 to Subsidiary organizations.

Pi Kappa Alpha To Give Trophy For Best Poster

An extra feature was added to the University club's Duke weekend pep rally when Graham Battle, president of Pi Kappa Alpha, announced the awarding of the annual trophy for the best banner or poster carried in the torchlight parade Friday night.

"Every sorority, fraternity, dormitory, and campus organization is invited to enter the contest," said Battle. "The award has been offered every year since 1941, and was won last year by the Sigma Chi's. There is no entrance fee, and all entries will be judged at the rally."

University club vice-president Emile Saleeby reported that the parade, with plenty of torches, will start at the YMCA court at 7 o'clock Friday night with the band in the lead. "Other plans are underway to make this big rally a colorful spectacle," Saleeby said, "but the real success of the rally depends on the students who have the spirit to stand up and cheer for our boys."

WNC Club to Give Dance Bids Tonight

Invitations for the annual Western North Carolina Club dance will be distributed tonight at the regular meeting of the club in Graham Memorial at 7:30 announced President Bud Reagan today.

Arrangements for the dance to be held in the George Vanderbilt hotel in Asheville on December 27 were completed this week, said Reagan, and the number of invitations are limited so distribution will be on the basis of first come, first served.

Final plans for a Thanksgiving holiday party in Asheville will be presented at tonights meeting by social co-chairmen Betty Brown and John Brady, also said Reagan.

The annual Christmas dance will be about the 30th for the club and the third since the cessation of hostilities. Last year's dance was limited to 300 people, all of which attended, and was a huge success.

Unlisted Students To Report To Yack

The following students who have had pictures taken for the Yackety Yack, and whose names do not appear in the new student director, are requested to come by the Yack office, second floor of Graham Memorial, to fill out "activity cards." It is essential that this be done immediately if pictures are to be in the yearbook. Overby J. Fleming, Forrest Lockey, Jr., Robert Mushabac, and Harry C. Pratt.

The Yack board of editors also stressed the importance of all other students who have not filled out these cards by doing so by Friday afternoon.

NO MOVIES

Due to the Sound & Fury production at Memorial hall the Monogram club will be unable to present their weekly football movies tonight.

An announcement will be made later as to what night the Maryland pictures will be shown.

CP Releases Qualifications, Statements Of Candidates Eric Coefield, Bob Haire

Qualifications and statements of two candidates, Eric Coefield and Bob Haire, running for president of the freshman class and student council member, respectively, were released by the Campus party yesterday afternoon.

Cofield, from Edenton, was the former president of his class and also of the student body during his last high school year. He resides in Miller hall on campus.

"In acceptance of the Campus party nomination for the presidency of the freshman class," he stated, "I pledge my support to the best interests and desires of the freshman class."

Bob Haire, a Winston-Salemite from Manley dormitory, is president of the Winston-Salem club and a member of the University Dance committee. In acceptance of the CP nomination Haire declared, "I sincerely desire to serve the student body in the capacity of Student councilman."

CP chairman Dedmond also announced a meeting of the Campus party to be held this evening at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 2 in Graham Memorial to nominate dormitory and town legislators and a coed to the Student council.

Vaughn Monroe Dance, Concert Tickets Go on Sale in Y Today, Announces Grail

An open ticket sale will begin at 8 o'clock this morning in the Y of Grail-Vaughn Monroe dance and concert bids, it was announced yesterday morning.

There are approximtaely 200 complete bids to the two dances left, and several hundred single tickets to the dances and concert tomorrow afternoon.

Sales will be made today to anyone who wishes to buy the tickets, and there will be no limit on the number of bids a person may purchase.

The stand in the Y will be open from 8 o'clock this morning until 4 o'clock this afternoon, selling dance ducats at three dollars each and tickets to the concert for one dollar.

It was pointed out yesterday that the dance will be semi-formal, not formal as indicated on the bids. This means, explained Grail delegata Jack Fitch, that men will wear business suits and women evening dresses.

The dances begin at 9 o'clock on Friday night, lasting until 1, and 8:30 Saturday until midnight.

The Vaughn Monroe radio show will be broadcast from Woollen gymnasium Saturday evening at 9:30, according to word received from the program's sponsor, and will last for the usual one half hour.

Organist Robert Baker Came to Chapel Hill Mainly to Play Golf with Professor Haydon

By Sally Woodhull

Robert Baker, nationally known organist who will present a recital tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Hill hall, claims that his chief purpose in coming to Chapel Hill was to play golf with Dr. Glen Haydon, head of the department of music.

But the program of his recital, and his previous accomplishments, give evidence that his recital will be of chief importance to the campus. Teacher of organ-playing at Union Theological seminary and organist and choir master at First Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, Mr. Baker will play selections by Mozart, Schroeder, Rinck, Vidor, Bach, Vierne, Bingham, and Liszt.

Dr. Haydon and I played golf every morning last summer, when we were supposedly teaching on the faculty of the University of Michigan," Baker said, "so. I certainly hope this weather clears up before tomorrow morning."

Although his main field is sacred music, Baker got his start playing a theater organ as a boy in the days when they flashed songs on the screen, and "you try to follow that darn bouncing ball—and then the screen would slip."

He received his bachelor of music degree at Illinois Wesleyan, and graduate degrees in sacred music at Union Theological seminary. He has studied under Clarence Dickinson and R. Huntington Woodman, a pupil of Cesar Franck, as well as taking further work at Columbia university.

Baker likes jazz—"Mrs. Baker, who is a pianist, and I frequently go on a jaunt to 52nd street, he says," to hear the distinguished exponents of that style. "He says it's a good thing for all musicians to have some groundwork in jazz—"it gives a flexibility in accompaniment."

Born in Pontiac, Illinois, Baker claims that he is something of a "biological sport," since there are no musicians in his family background. On this his first trip to Chapel Hill, he says he "loves it," and is tremendously impressed with. "The Sunny South, and that sort of thing."

Baker's recital, to be presented at 8:30 o'clock tonight under the sponsorship of the Music department, will include the following selections: "Fantasia in F Minor, Mozart; "Three Short Internezzi," Schroeder; "Rondo for the Flute Stop," Rinck, arranged by Dickinson; "Adagio," from "Concerto in D Minor," Vivaldi; Prelude and Fugue in A Minor, Bach.

Also on the program are Ancient Jewish Melody; "Divertisssement," Vierne; "Rhythmic Trumpet," Bingham; "The Nativity," Langlais and Fantasia and Fugue on Bach," Liszt.

DTH POETRY CONTEST

Tomorrow is the final day that entries will be accepted for the Daily Tar Heel poetry contest in answer to the "Ode to the Tarheels." The winner of the two game tickets will be announced early next week.

Tales of Woe from Perspiring Customers Exhaust Sellers at Duke Ticket Windows

By Herb Nachman

Strangely enough Carolina students seem to be interested in Duke tickets.

When it was announced yesterday that several hundred tickets would go on sale at the gym at 2 o'clock, the students responded, and brought their lunch with them.

Lady ticket sellers who were forced to listen to hundreds of explanations as to "Why I need a Duke ticket," reported that sleepy customers began lining, or sitting, up in front of the window before 10 o'clock.

By the time 2 o'clock rolled around and the tickets were ready to go on sale, one of the ticket sellers remarked, "This lobby looks like Grand Central station."

At 4 o'clock, it was even worse. Each prospective buyer that approached the window would "wipe the perspiration off" and proceed with his tale of woe.

Most of the stories fell into three categories, (1) Parents coming up, what to do? (2) Date coming over, what to do? (3) Wife needs ticket, what to do?

The three ladies behind the window, Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, Mrs. Marilyn Todd and Miss Susan Barbee remarked that they had certainly played Santa Claus—now "Frankie and Johnny can sit together."

After the 350-400 tickets available were exhausted, the gloomy announcement of "All Gone" sent tired but still hopeful students on their way.

Vernon Crook, ticket manager, said that these were the last tickets available for the game. Student wives were to have been given a chance to purchase tickets before 2 o'clock when they were then offered for general sale.

"The plan was to serve some 800 student wives first," Mr. Cook said, "many did not take advantage of the application privilege before they went on general sale."

Meantime, the traditional Carolina queue has exhausted both tickets and ticket seller.

Good News for Parkers-- Maybe

Someone has at last realized the need for additional parking facilities in Chapel Hill. The local post of the American Legion is at present discussing the possibility of laying out automobile parking space on the lot west of the Legion hut on Rosemary street, behind the business district.

If this plan goes through, it will certanly remove one of the worst bottlenecks in the Hill's downtown parking situation, that one created by merchants who park their cars in front of their business establishments for the entire working day and prevent shoppers from parking even long enough to pick up their day's grocery supply.

The directors of the Merchants association have already approved the plan, and according to L. J. Phipps, chairman of a committee which is studying the proposal, several merchants have stated their desire to rent parking places on the Rosemary street lot if construction is begun on the project.

No one yet knows definitely whether or not parking meters will be installed in the downtown section, but if they are, and the parking lot is available, at least students and residents of Chapel Hill will have some place to leave their automobiles when they drive to a movie which lasts more than two hours, whereas the meters would undoubtedly allow them a maximum of only two hours.

Many people question the lot's convenience, pointing out the long way around from Rosemary to Franklin street, but the alley and pathway which, at present, run between the Village theater and Berman's provide a satisfactory shortcut for even the laziest of individuals.

The Legion is wise to consider a proposal such as this one. It will aid both citizens of the campus and the community. More power to them for the completion of their idea.

Margolis in the Ivey League

Manny Margolis, one-time leftist whip on this campus, has moved to what may be greener pastures.

Late this summer Margolis polished off his final job for "the cause" at UNC, put his copies of Marx into his gladstone and headed back north (whence he came) to put in some grad work in the ivey-covered halls of Harvard.

Hardworking Margoiis, never slow on the trigger, lost no time in making his presence known among the many bankers' sons who call John Harvard's place home.

Margolis started organizing a progressive committee at Harvard in October — in almost exactly the same format he used in his last job on this campus.

His new committee will support the policies of Henry Wallace and, strange as it may seem, attempt to get Roosevelt's vice-president into the White House come '48.

The Wallace Club here, organized last August by Margolis, Mike Pochna, Paul Moorehead, Bill McGirt and others, seems long ago to have given up hope of getting the Iowan a job as chief executive. Quite sensibly the local group has concentrated on plugging the domestic and foreign policies of Wallace.

Morgolis' Harvard Wallace committee had not yet received official recognition from the administration there, but it is continuing, to quote the Harvard Crimson, "as an independent group with only loose connection with other pro-Wallace groups throughout the Nation. Their broad program is to 'support progressivism' locally and to attempt to organize State delegates throughout the country to support Wallace at the National Convention in 1948." — B. S.

A Helping Hand

Sound and Fury owes a debt of gratitude to Dave Boak and Bob Plumb for enabling the performance of "Gin Lane" to come off as scheduled.

Although the stage crew of the organization had been hard at work for a long time to get the scenery ready for the show, it was far from complete Tuesday night. In desperation, Pete Strader, who designed the sets, in addition to writing and directing the show, put out a call for help.

Dave and Bob answered Pete's call. They went to Memorial hall early Tuesday evening, and with paint brushes, saws, and hammers they set to work to help get the scenery ready They worked all night, leaving the building at 7:30 yesterday morning.

Neither Dave nor Bob is a member of Sound and Fury. It is seldom that a member of an organization will put forth the effort those two did to make its programs successes; when two outsiders do so, it is extremely rare. — P. R.

In the Raleigh Times recently: "Corsages of gardenias marked the places of Mrs. Champlin and Mrs Cherry, and nosegays of panties were at the places of the other guests."

AP copy reaching the Marshfield (Wis.) News-Herald read: "LANSING, MICH.—With the deadline for filling nomination petitions, four candidates had ther hates in the ring today."

Speaking about a radio quiz-down show, the Miami Herald said Jan Bart, the noted singer, "has come a long way since he was born in a hay waggon in Poland while his family was fleeing from a frightful program."

To weather economic storms, a nation must clear up its moral problems.

Book Review

Caldwell Is Getting Fat

By Bob Sain

The Sure Hand of God, by Erskine Caldwell. $2.75, Duell, Sloan and Pearce.

The sure hand of Erskine Caldwell, which has in the past ten years become almost an institution in "southern" writing, has faltered. Caldwell, in his latest book, is still funny, but his kind of humor—always of the raw, belly-laugh variety—has grown even heavier; it has become little more than slapstick of the fall-on-your-tail-and-yell-real-loud school.

Never given to sharpness in his writing, Caldwell has, however, in "The Sure Hand of God," made a weak pass at subtlety. Into his ribald tale of a Georgia lady of the town, he has injected a note of social protest which he doesn't seem to mean. It is not even mildly successful, since everyone realizes just what Caldwell is up to. With his earthy humor he is sugar-coating a pill. The reader feels that the sugar-coating is much more important that the pill.

Caldwell's plot, however, is entertaining and easy to follow. His central character—fat, blond Molly—who, as she moves toward middle-age, looks high and low for a husband for her beautiful, but illegitimate, daughter Lily. Molly, herself, found a husband—a sixtyish man, not Lily's father, who died a short while after their nuptials; but for Lily, Molly wants nothing but the best. She rejects for Lily young Perry Trotter, the boy next door, and, full to overflowing with her beloved red wine, tries to show Perry, who is ensnared by Lily's beauty, that there are really lots of other women in the world, including herself.

For Lily's husband she settles on Claude Stevens, young heir to the banking business in Agricola, where the story takes place. Stevens likes Lily but finds that if he marries her he will lose his bank. He marries someone else.

Throughout the story, Caldwell introduces his noted "characters"—one after another. There's Christine, renegade wife of the town preacher, who likes to come to see Molly and take "vitamin" shots from a hypodermic syringe. There's Jethro, Molly's snaggle-toothed brother-in-law, who can't make up his mind whether he wants to marry Molly or Lily, neither of whom would have him. There's fat, bald, traveling-salesman Benny, who likes to pat women's hips and tell them he's just one of the boys.

Though the book is possibly one of the least of Caldwell's accomplishments, the creation of Molly is alive in her great bulk, in her capacity for wine, in her wise naivety, in her curious figures of speech—to Molly, everything is comparable to the reaction of animals and birds to "a ginhouse roof." She is as happy "as a jaybird on a ginhouse roof," as confused "as a hog on a ginhouse roof." She has dozens of allusions.

In its essence, though, "The Sure Hand of God" is a plea for "the disinherited." Molly, at one time in the story, remembers her father telling her that the world was not made for poor folks like them, but for the rich, who, after they had gotten all they wanted, didn't leave enough to go around among the poor. Molly also echoes the theme of the book when she constantly whines about her more wealthy neighbors who are always "picking on" her, instead of giving her a break.

It just doesn't come off in this story. Molly has too much fun to be a fit example of the down-trodden poor. Many of the wealthy would like to be able to get the kick out of life that Molly gets.

Caldwell is getting fat.

It's Chill in the Village

By Dan Sapp

Gone from the Village scene is the darkened telephone booth. No longer will you try to dial for the night operator and find that you have your finger in someone's ear. We owe a vote of thanks to Hugh Wells and the UVA for their efforts and success in getting lights for the little booths that stand on the Village green.

While we're passing out compliments on successful efforts, Charles "Pot" Walker comes in for his share of the laurels this week. For some time Pot has been writing letters, begging, pleading and demanding that a better grade of coal be furnished the coal burning units, This week the better grade of coal was delivered and in view of the weather I'd say his timing was perfect.

On the gloomy or, rather, on the frigid side this week comes a chattering mutter from the Cliff dwellers, to be explicit, those who live in the barrack-type dwellings. The mutter concerns the underpinning (or what ever it is). Anyway they don't have that which keeps the wind out from under the house. One frost-bitten citizen with rare humor says he doesn't mind the fact that his apartment is cold, he can leave the icebox open and save on ice, but when the wind comes up through the cracks and blows the blankets off his bed that's carrying the thing a bit far.

There is one good solution offered to those of you who find it difficult to keep your bodies at body temperature. Go out for intramurals. Volley ball and table tennis teams have been organized and there is room for plenty more good men. If any of you fit into that category see Bert Brock at 217 Jackson Circle.

Report on College Costs

Fees Go Higher And Higher

Washington, D. C.—(I.P.) Student fees have increased to such an extent that many intellectually capable young people are unable to attend college, according to Dr. John Dale Russell, Director of the Division of Higher Education, United States Office of Education.

The cost of college attendance has risen and a large part of this higher cost is not met by student fees, more than 50 percent of which are paid today by the Fereral Government through provisions for veteran's education, Dr. Russell added.

"The cost of going to college will be too high for many family budgets, if student fees continue to go up and if no provision is made for increased financial support from other sources after the GI legislation expires," he said. "More and more Russell said, "this trend will limit college education to children of higher-income families —a counter democratic tendency."

These outstanding developments were apparent. Dr Russell disclosed, from a recent Office of Education survey conducted at the request of the President's commission on Higher Education:

1-Student fees, which in previous years have paid about a third of the total annual expense of the colleges, now provide for more than half of the total annual college education expenditures. Of this amount collected as student fees during the current fiscal year, the Federal Government paid more than half, or over $300,000,000.

According to Dr. Russell, the colleges have become increasingly dependent upon student fees as their chief flexible source of income to meet rapidly increasing costs of providing higher education. Costs have increased because of the necessity of serving record enrollments. The inflationary factor in the increased educational and general costs of the colleges is estimated to be only 24 per cent, much less than the national average increase in the cost of living.

Income from student fees in 1940 provided over $200,000,000 or 38.5 percent of college expenditures. During the past school year, according to the survey, income fees was more than $565,000,000, or 56.2 per cent of college expenditures

2-The rate of tuition charges to students, not including board and room, has been steadily increasing over a long period. According to the survey, the increases have been particularly marked since 1939.

For example, in privately controlled institutions in the past seven years, the average tuition fee for colleges of arts and sciences has increased 29.3 per cent, for engineering colleges 32.8 per cent, and for schools of dentistry 56.1 per cent.

In publicly controlled colleges and universities, the average fee for residents of the State was increased 31.4 per cent in schools of business administration, 45.5 per cent in graduate schools, and 56.3 per cent in law schools. Public junior colleges have increased their tuition fees for residents 40.9 per cent and for non-residents 80 per cent.

Pointing out that the rate of income from college endowment investments has steadily diminished, Dr. Russell said: Additional gifts from philanthropic sources could not be obtained as rapidly as enrollments have increased. Privately controlled colleges have therefore been forced to increase their rates of tuition for students in order to maintain services at the usual standards of quality.

"In publicly controlled institutions, the income State and local governments has not increased proportionately to the growth of enrollment. Therefore, public institutions have also been forced to increase the rates of student fees in order to support a program of standard quality.

Charges Against Lenoir Hall

Sir:

I am asking that my name be withheld because I know that I would lose my job at Lenoir Hall simply because of what I am going to say. This usually wouldn't happen, but the "Big Wheels" at Lenoir cannot let anything get in the way of their plans for themselves and their friends.

A few weeks ago a man came into Lenoir as an efficiency expert and within a week he was "promoted" to the class of the assistant managers (and there were plenty of them already.) Lenoir must charge higher prices than usual in order to pay the salaries of this constant flow of general managers, their friends, and assistant managers and their friends.

In order for Lenoir to break even under the load of managers, several essential people must be laid off—some for replacement by friends of the management, and some not to be replaced. I think I can truthfully speak for the bus boys in saying that I honestly do not know who my boss is, there are so many who could be.

It was all climaxed today (Nov. 18) when Carl Sparrow was laid off because "he was no longer needed." Mr. Sparrow has been with Lenoir for years and could ably control and instruct the Negroes in the kitchen. He was one of the few, very few, men employed at Lenoir that was worth his money.

If the students think the conditions at Lenoir are bad now, they should wait a few days, then take stock. It's a shame that the University Dining Hall of UNC should be operated in such a disorganized way.

Apologies

Sir:

The SCHW and AVC apologize to any organization which feels its reputation has been damaged or its purposes misrepresented because its name appeared on our sign as being invited to the high prices meeting tonight. We further apologize to any organization which by its nature is committed to not committing itself on anything.

We incorrectly inferred one official's remarks to mean that two of the organizations to which he belonged would be represented.

After reading yesterday's Daily Tar Heel editorial, we realize we used the wrong method to reach our purpose, which was to encourage campus-wide participation (not sponsorship: the sign reads clearly "Sponsors — SCHW, AVC") by listing the organizations invited so that their members would see the sign and follow our suggestion: "Be sure your organization is there."

UN Approves Little Assembly

By Lincoln S. H. Kan

Good news for the supporters of the United Nations and those who believe that lasting peace for the world can be reached in our life-time, broke over the wires Friday night. The General Assembly of the United Nations has approved by overwhelming vote the United States-conceived "Little Assembly" proposal as well as the Korean Commission to pave the way for a peaceful and prosperous Korea in the future. This encouraging move of the United Nations followed on the heels of a Russo-U.S. agreement on the Palestine question.

Probably not all of those who are ready thus realize the full importance of the setting up of the "Little Assembly." Most of us have bemoaned the inadequacies of the Security Council and the many "vetoes" that have been used within this body of national representatives.

The "Little Assembly" is a direct result of the frustration of the nations who have been on the Security Council. As it is planned now, the "Little Assembly" will be a permanent body of delegates from all nations in the United Nations to review and plan the agenda for the General Assembly when it meets again.

The implications are obvious. It means that many of the most pressing problems will be brought to the attention of the nations immediately, thus avoiding an issue being blottled up in the Security Council to be either pidgeon-holed or vetoed. What will happen may be that no problem of any importance will ever be stymied and will be instantly referred to all nations for discussion and action. It might well be that this is the first step toward a bi-cameral legislative body in the United Nations which in turn will devolve into the Supranational government which we all desire.

One word of caution should be interjected at this point. Although we all desire world government we must realize that it took the founding fathers of the United States many years, and their followers many mistakes before we had the Constitution as we know it now. The people of America and the states within the Union had to learn how to make the sacrifice for which they were called upon, and they had to learn how to adjust themselves to accept jurisdiction. The lessons of History are obvious.

The case for the United Nations is much similar to the growth of the United States. Today the United Nations is but only two years old . . . a mere baby. The peoples of the world and all nations first must know how to accept the sacrifices of sovereignty and personal control, before they will be able to understand world government. The discussions and agreements reached in the United Nations are indicative of the slow learning process we must go

A COLD DAY IN NEW YORK

It was a cold Monday in New York both from the weather point of view and also on the scoring end of the IC4A cross country meet as far as the Tar Heels were concerned.

However, even on the dark side there were some saving features, chief most being the excellent performance turned in by Jack Milne. Milne cruised to third place in the field of 186 starters. After a slow start, which saw him in about 30th spot after a mile, he picked up his feet and finished in a good position. Sophomore Sam Magill ran well up in the first ten runners for the first four miles and then dropped to the 18th spot at the finish. He ran the best race of his short career and he took one minute and 55 seconds off the time he turned in at New York last year. Magill ran a fine race and the boys that beat him were men that have been running on the cinders for many years.

Halstead Holden, a Durham sophomore, running for the first time in New York's spacious Van Cortlandt Park turned in 89th spot in the time of 28:52. In comparison with last year's finish this would have given him about a 21st place finish.

The meet itself was the fastest ever run with Bob Black, the winner from Rhode Island State, breezed in to the finish in 25:37.1, which topped the previous best mark of 26:06 by Les MacMitchell of NYU by 29 seconds. The whole field was fast as evidenced by the fact that Dick Lewandowski of Army, who finished 16th, was clocked in the same time as Curt Stone won the meet in last year.

The biggest disappointment to all was the performance of Alvin Smith. Smith finished a strong sixth last year but crossed the line in 114th position. The Tar Heels dropped from a fourth place finish last year to 12th this year.

Chuck Herty turned in a good performance as he fought his way to a spot just two positions behind Mark Burnham. Burnham finished a 137th after his last year's 27th spot.

The field's fine showing encouraged most of the coaches to believe that, by the 1952 Olympics America might well have some distance men to compete with the Scandinavians.

BEE HIVE IN RALEIGH

While the main forces were having their troubles in New York, the remainder of the squad ran into a bee hive in Raleigh. Jim Kehoe's strong Maryland harrier team gave the crowd something to talk about when they captured their first title by scoring 24 points and finishing all of their eight men in the first 15 finishers.

Many observers believe that even if Carolina had had their full squad in the Capital city, they would have had quite a battle. It was too bad that a dual meet could not have been arranged between these two conference powerhouses.

Bob Palmer, Terp freshman who took the individual title ran the race for Dad. This Riverdale, N. Y. lad was notified Sunday night that his father had died. He stayed on for the meet and turned in a fine 21:22 for the four-mile course.

The Carolina reserves could not cope with the power of these clubs after their ace Jimmy Miller had turned his ankle and was forced out of the race. If Miller could have remained in competition the Tar Heels would have made a much better showing.

THE ENCOURAGING SIDE

The very encouraging side of the conference run was the fact that nine schools were represented, six of them with full teams. This is a 100 per cent gain over last year's showing. It also indicates that the conference track meet to be held here, February 28, should prove mighty interesting in the mile and two-mile run.

We only hope that next year the IC4A and Conference dates will not coincide and a true picture of team strength may be determined.

It was a big day for the Magill family with Sam making a fine showing in New York and brother Frank, running for VPI, tying for ninth in the Raleigh affairs. These two lads have never competed against each other, and they had rather looked forward to meeting this season. However, it will not happen as Frank ran year and finally made way for a new tenant.

Among the coaches at New York were two gentlemen that put in time at the Pre-flight school. Ivan Fuquay is now tutoring at Brown University and Bob Grieve, one of the better American sprinters, is mentoring at Syracuse. He guided his club into second place. Frank Ryan, Columbia's great weight man and formerly at Pre-flight is helping coach at Yale.

Many of the coaches are contemplating sending teams to the Carolina relays in April.

On the Olympic subject all the Indoor meets this year are pointing towards the games. All of the old timers and ex-greats are training to make their comebacks. Such distance men as Les MacMitchell Don Lash, Jim Rafferty and Rudy Simms were all out working in Van Cortlandt park for the AAU cross country meet, which is scheduled two weeks hence. Men in the middle distance, sprints, hurdles and field events have all started preliminary training for the Olympic tryout meets. Next Monday the collegiate cross country picture is shifted to East Lansing, Michigan where the National collegiate run will be held. Besides all of the men that ran in New York, others will be represented from such strong schools as Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Drake and many other schools. Last year's winner over the four mile Michigan State course was Quentin Brelsford of Ohio Wesleyan. Coaches give this lad little chance to repeat this year due to the fast field.

Grapplers Continue Heavy Workouts; Jayvee Slate Features Eight Matches

The Carolina grappling squad is continuing its daily drills as the fall sports parade begins to fade in the face of old man winter and his athletic program.

Preparations for the first varsity meet of the season on January 13 seems to be at a virtual standstill. Assistant Coach Hoyt McKeever stated that the squad in its early conditioning drills is not looking up to the usual standards.

Exciting grunt and groan shows are will be the Southern conference tournament slated for State college on March 7-8. Another stellar attraction will be a jayvee schedule for those men who are not quite up to par with the varsity. This slate will include tiffs with junior teams from W & L, Virginia Davidson, Duke, State, Maryland, Navy and VPI. Two tentative meets are planned with Naval Apprentice school of Norfolk and Granby High of the same city.

Wrestling Tourney Commences Today

A slow drizzling rain halted intramural tag football play once again yesterday afternoon but the gridders hope to return to action this afternoon if the weather is favorable. The Grads are slated to face Lewis in the dorm playoff division while Zeta Psi tangles with Phi Delt in the fraternity bracket.

Another intramural indoor sport is slated to open this afternoon when wrestling enters the fall sporting picture. Matches in the lighter classes start at 4 o'clock in Woollen gym this afternoon. High interest is being shown in the fraternity mat bracket but entries in the dorm division are somewhat below expectations.

Ping pong play reaches its final stage this afternoon when Everett meets Aycock in the final dorm round and Phi Delt No. 2 plays ATO No. 1 in the fraternity finals.

Allenmen Crippled For Virginia Tilt At Home Tomorrow

According to the soccer schedule released early this fall, the Carolina booters have a game with Virginia here, scheduled for 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. However, if Coach Allen keeps losing members of his starting eleven at the rate that he has thus far this week, there probably won't be much of a game tomorrow afternoon.

The latest count disclosed that no less than six former regulars will see either very little or no action at all against the powerful Wahoo eleven. Four men will probably spend Friday afternoon either in a hospital bed or on the bench.

The definitely-sidelined quartet includes Al Singer, with an injured right leg, Hank Pallulat, with an irritated skin condition, Mac Hageman, with a weak right knee, and Basil Jackson, with a broken right leg.

Al Williams and Wayne Johnson may possibly be sufficiently recovered from their sprained ankles to see a little action against the Cavaliers, but they probably won't be able to play enough to advance the Tar Heel cause to any great extent.

This week's unusually large amount of precipitation has turned Fetzer Field into a quagmire and the Allenmen's preparations for their season's finale have suffered accordingly.

Thus Coach Allen was far from optimistic over his charges' chances for ending their season with a victory and moaned yesterday afternoon, "It looks like our season lasted a week too long."

Blue Devils Hit Hard By Injuries To Stars

Coach Wallace Wade has the Durham laundries working overtime this week cleaning his crying towels but, despite his lamentations over Duke's chances in Saturday's tilt with Carolina's red hot eleven, Wade intends, for better or for worse, to have a team on the field at kickoff time.

If the reports originating from the Duke publicity office are correct, Wade will apparently have trouble fielding eleven competent men. The latest information emanating from Ted Mann lists Duke's first two centers, Fletcher Wall and Perkinson, wingback Buddy Mulligan, fullback Paul Stephanz, and ferocious tackle Al DeRogatis as possible permanent occupants of the bench during the Carolina game.

Flashy Fred Folger, the Blue Devils' triple threat answer to Charlie Justice, will be handicapped by a broken nose and an injured leg. Folger was banged up originally in the Georgia Tech game but he also received a pretty thorough going-over in the South Carolina tilt.

Big Louis Allen, the Blue Devils' other first string tackle, had his shoulder banged up earlier in the season and has been hampered by it for the past several weeks.

Otherwise, the Duke squad is in pretty good shape for Saturday's traditional clash but this week's heavy rainfall has hampered the Blue Devils' preparations for the blood battle.

Gridders Pack Punch In Secret Drill Session

There was plenty of spirit and determination displayed by Carolina's Tar Heels as they went through an intensive afternoon of drills on Navy field yesterday as Coach Carl Snavely stepped up preparations for the all-important game with Duke.

The practice was closed to all inquisitive spectators who ventured onto the muddy field to witness the workout, and the type of work that the Tar Heels concentrated on during the afternoon is strictly top secret. This may mean that there will be a few surprises for the Devils on Saturday.

However, it may be said that the practice was one of the stiffest of the year, and Snavely has shown every indication of continuing the hard work today, although before previous games he has usually slowed up the drills for Thursday afternoon. The rain has hampered Carolina this week, but Snavely and his aides have been doing everything possible to have the Carolina team ready

The nation's sports writers have made Carolina the favorite by a margin of over one touchdown, but Coach Snavely probably has taken no hope from these predictions of a Tar Heel win

The Carolina mentor well remembers one November afternoon back in 1935, when he sent a highly-favored Carolina team up against Duke, which then was coached by Walalce Wade as is the case this year. The Tar Heels were undefeated and their lustrous record had placed them among the top contenders for the Rose Bowl. Duke won that game by a 25-0 score in an amazing upset that the Carolina prods still have a hard time believing.

With memories of that game still vivid, Snavely is sure to have his 1947 team on edge for Duke.

Big Crowd Expected

Some 52,000 fans will jam the big Duke horseshoe stadium for the renewal of the rivalry. Additional bleachers obtained from Kenan stadium have increased the seating capacity, and the crowd will be one of the biggest in the South this year.

The game will determine the Southern Conference

Tar Baby Gridders Seek Revenge Win From Imps Friday

Coach Crowell Little's Tar Babies will be out to avenge the 21-13 setback the Blue Imps of Duke handed them last season when the two elevens meet at Kenan stadium tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The jayvees will probably be without the services of Ed Bilpuch for the traditional tussle. Otherwise the Carolinians will be at full strength and expect to field the same team that opened in Charlottesville. However, the large number of injuries on the parent squad may necessitate the promotion of several of the first string juniors.

Coach Little will be working with Gerry Allen this week in the hope that he will be able to develope a place kicker who can make the extra point with some degree of consistency. Of the four touchdowns the Tar Babies have scored this season, only one conversion has been successful.

It was pass defense that cost the jayvees the victory against Virginia last Friday. Although the line played superbly throughout the game, the Squires completed three long passes that hurt the cause of the Blue and White. One set up their only touchdown of the game and the other went for the six points itself.

The first string backfield of Gus Purcell, Bob Koontz, Dick Bunting, and Merl Norcross were outstanding on the offense in that contest.

The much-heralded Maryland T-formation plays borrowed by the Tar Babies were little more effective on the soggy Virginia turf than when the original owners tried to run them in Washington the following day.

their last three outings have eliminated the Wademen from the 1948 bowl picture but a victory over the highly rated Tar Heels this weekend would put 1947 down in the books as a successful season for the Tobacco Citymen. So Wade is probably cooking up something special for Carolina as he did back in 1935.

through for the successful conclusion for which we are striving. The United Nations can and will succeed as we learn and fight for it.

It has been the policy of this column to propose a practical project by which we as individuals can assist in the fight for the United Nations. This weeks suggestion is that we all try to learn the songs of all the nations, both popular and classic. We could intiate programs in which our glee clubs, choirs and community sings will feature songs of foreign lands. All peoples of the world love to sing, as has been proven in the bathrooms of the world. Try this program. Go out and find out what the songs of the different nations are. Learn them and sing.

Returning Revelers Discover New Facts About University

By Sally Woodhull

The weekend was over, and the band of weary Tar Heels returning to Chapel Hill via the Southern railway were weary but happy. The situation called for one last cheer for a victorious, if muddy, team.

When they had shouted (in necessarily muted voices, since they were in the rear of a fairly well-populated day coach) their fair alma mater's name with pride and joy, they were righteously amazed to be accosted with the question, "Are you from the University of North Carolina?"

With true Carolina spirit they answered the query, and thus learned what every Carolina fan lives to learn: an added bit of glory for UNC. Not only are we the oldest state university in the nation, not only have we the finest mud-dobbers dabblers in captivity, but we also have, within our hallowed library walls, the first commercially-built book conveyor in the world, according to its builder, C. C. Waite of Jersey City, New Jersey.

Former vice president and works manager of Sneed and Co., internationally known builders of library equipment, Mr. Waite related to the football-happy fans the whole story of the building of UNC's book conveyor, which delivers to the main circulation desk a steady stream of volumes requested by ardent students.

He told them of how Snead and company, organized in 1849, had equipped UNC's former library, and was called upon again in the late '20's to make the new library efficient and up to the minute.

At that time there were in existence only three book conveyors :one at the Library of Congress, one at the University of Chicago, and one at the University of Michigan, each built by the mechanical staff of the library itself.

In answer to a request from the Yale library, Mr. White told the Carolinians that he looked over the conveyor at the Congressional library and submitted an estimate of its cost, adding his personal comment that it "really isn't any good."

Meantime, Carolina, spurred on Mr. Waite said, by its newly-hired assistant librarian Donald Coney of the University of Michigan, became conveyor-conscious. Not wanting to duplicate a conveyor that wasn't "any good," Angus Snead Macdonald ,president and guiding light of Snead and company asked his vice president to design a new conveyor for UNC.

Within two weeks, Mr. Waite had a working model of a conveyor which he showed to Mr. Coney, and which was, after struggles with engineering problems, installed in the library.

Mr. Waite spent six weeks in Chapel Hill during the installation of the equipment. "We found the town so dull that we worked evenings and Sundays to kill time," he said. Arriving on May 30, he was amazed to find the construction crews at work, until it was explained to him that North Carolina did not celebrate the Yankee-created Decoration day.

Mr. Waite is now retired, and acting in a consulting capacity to Virginia Metal Products company, of Orange, Virginia, which last January bought out Snead and company.

BSU to Entertain Foreign Students

A Thanksgiving banquet for all foreign students at the University will be held next Tuesday evening at 6:30 in the Baptist church. The Baptist Student union, the sponsoring organization, states that it is planning the affair "in an effort to help the foreign students join us in a friendly holiday spirit, since they are unable to be at home at this time."

Miss Clare Leighton, noted English artist and writer, will be a special guest at the dinner, and will speak on "Being at Home Away from Home."

Tickets for this social will be on sale until Friday at the Y office for one dollar apiece.

Atomic Bomb Scientist Advocates Compromise

Again advocating a thorough understanding of Russia's plan for international control of the atomic bomb, Dr. Oscar K. Rice, member of the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers, told a Graham Memorial audience late yesterday, "The UN atomic energy control commission needs a speedy discussion of the 'time-table,' with a view toward effecting a reasonable compromise. We need to stop supporting the extreme right in Europe, to recognize the desire in Europe for nationalization of basic industries and some of their socialistic trends of government."

Dr. Rice, one of four scientists to speak in a forum cosponsored by the Association of Carolina Scientists and the student chapter of United World Federalists, outlined the ills of the U. S. domestic situation, stating that the nation needs to overcome hysteria, to dissolve the House Un-American Committee, and to start working for civil rights in general.

Dr. W. A. Bowers began the discussion by developing the three points which Dr. Rice used at the first panel held two weeks ago in Gerrard hall: "(1) no secret, (2) no defense, and (3) international control of the atomic bomb as absolutely necessary."

Straley Speaks

Next in line was Dr. Joseph W. Straley who spoke on the American plan for international control. Straley emphasized that preventing of a surprise attack is the main feature of the Baruch plan. "Any nation violating the conventions," Straley said, "would surely be contemplating war."

The Russian plan of control was discussed by Dr. Nathan Rosen, who outlined the difficulties in the Russian plan as: (1) a matter of order, the "timetable" of the control commission; ("Russia wants the U. S. to destroy all existing bombs first, then she promises to agree to outlaw atomic weapons.") (b) Russia wants the control commission merely to inspect, not to own and manage, all atomic plants; and (c) the veto.

Russell Baldwin, president of the student chapter of World Federalists, acted as moderator of the forum which began at 4:30 yesterday in Roland Parker lounges.

Di Reinforces Truman's Plan

The Dialectic Literary society in its meeting Wednesday night voted decisively to endorse President Truman's proposal that Congress take immediate action to eliminate inflationary tendencies by controls on prices, consumption, and commodity speculation.

By a vote of 16 to 4 the Di approved a bill, first, to laud Truman's stand before the special Congress now in session and ,second, to go still further than the President to insist that the appropriate legislature be taken at once for new taxes on high incomes, speculative investment, and withholding essential goods from the market.

Arguments Made

The bill, once it was introduced on the floor by John Zucker, chairman of the Di ways and means committee, drew favorable comment from Bill Crisp, ex-member of the Senate, but was contested by Randy McLeod, present Senator. While the opposition to the proposed measure contended that the government administration today is already over-powerful and under-competent," the bill's supporters maintained that prompt action was necessary to avert "a depression cycle similar to the one after the last war."

Even before the main bill for debate was presented and passed, price controls brought verbal disagreement to the floor. After objecting to the tactics of the local chapters of the American Veterans committee and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in announcing on a publicity poster that the Senate had already agreed to send a representative to the anti-inflation forum which these two organizations co-sponsored yesterday, the Senate did name John Zucker as its delegate to the campus program in question.

Next Meeting

Charlie Long, speaker of the Di, announced yesterday that since there will be no regular Wednesday meeting this coming week in view of Thanksgiving holidays, the Senate will meet again next Tuesday night at 9 o'clock in New West for an executive session to transact important business.

WF TO BROADCAST

Russell Baldwin, president of World Federalists, announced yesterday that two radio programs will be presented by the student chapter next week.

Sunday at 12:15 over WDUK and Tuesday at 3:30 over WDNC, Durham, are the times and stations for the broadcasts, which will emphasize a need for world government.

Tuition Bill Covers Only Part of Cost

Evanston, Ill. — (ACP) — Something new in tuition bills will be begun at Northwestern University during the fall quarter. Bills will include a card entitled "The Cost of Education" and will bear the following message:

"This tuition bill covers only a portion of the cost of your education. A large share of the cost has been paid by alumni and generous friends, living and dead, through their gifts and bequests to Northwestern university."

These gifts amount to $54 million and were contributed by 100,000 individuals since the University was established in 1851 while student fees last year paid only 35 per cent of the budget.

Washington National Art Gallery Curator Will Present Illustrated Lecture Sunday

Fern Shapley, curator of painting at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Masterpieces of Art at the National Gallery" at Person Hall Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The collection of Art at the National Gallery contains masterpieces whose value runs to millions of dollars. Mrs. Shapley will present significant examples of art from medieval to modern times and tell what visitors may look for in them. The talk will be a short survey of art, as well as a presentation of the nation's wealth in art treasures.

Mrs. Shapley has been a lifelong student of American and European art. She has worked at the famous Berenson Library in Florence, where she was in direct contact with Italian Renaissance art. Now in charge of the collection of painting at the National Gallery, she has made studies which have been published in numerous magazine articles. This is her first visit to North Carolina, where she is to serve as a judge of the annual exhibition of North Carolina artists.

Miss Shapley's illustrated lecture is sponsored by the Friends of Person Hall.

Chicago University Students Devise Way to Win at Roulette

By United Press

Reno, Nevada, Nov. 20—Two bright students from the University of Chicago, Ray Walford of San Diego and Albert Hibbs of Chillicothe, Ohio, set Reno, Nevada, the town that jack built, squarely on its ear tonight.

With a 300-dollar bankroll that they nursed into being by careful saving, the two young men achieved the supposedly impossible and won $12,000 at two roulette tables by steady gambling.

They call their system, dreamed up between classes, "a progressive parlay system." It involves betting two to thirteen chips on the number nine, depending on the amount of play on other numbers.

Both Uneasy

The two students hitch-hiked into the nation's gambling capital last week both very uneasy on the outcome of their experiment.

At first they stood on opposite sides of the roulette wheel

Friendship Train Gains Momentum

The drive to collect funds for the Friendship train is snowballing its way across Chapel Hill and the University campus, and checks and cash are pouring in daily from fraternities and sororities, Lawrence Queen of the local drive committee announced yesterday.

In addition to student support, the business men of Chapel Hill are pushing interest of the drive in town, Queen said, and contribution boxes are to be placed in their establishments. The churches have pledged their support by printing appeals for contributions in the church papers.

Queen said that The Chapel Hill grammar and high schools were enthusiastic to support the campaign when contacted by the committee. Announcements will be made Friday, and Monday the students will carry their contributions to school.

Vandalism Slate Unmarred At Present; Students, Officials Ask Cooperation

By Frank MacDonald

As the Big Game draws nearer, football players, student leaders and administration officials are hoping for a complete absence of vandalism on Duke and Carolina campuses to make last year's record work just as well this year.

Thus far, work against any pre-game destruction of school property has taken concrete form in the committee which met at the Carolina Inn last month to fight against vandalism of any sort. The committee included representatives of both universities — student body heads, cheerleaders, administration officials, editors of the two campus newspapers—and decided to take a positive approach for sportsmanlike conduct between both student bodies.

From Justice:

The Carolina Choo-Choo, Charlie Justice, had this to say yesterday against vandalism: "There's no sense in painting each other's buildings and wasting a lot of money having them repaired. The difference between the two football teams will be settled enough on the football field. I'm glad to see that there'll be a lot of spirit. We don't want to beat that down, but we do want to beat down vandalism."

Said Co-Captain Joe Wright: "The game's spirit of rivalry should always help to make it one of the cleanest ball games of the year. We want to keep it that way."

Fitch Speaks

Jack Fitch, contacted while selling Grail dance bids yesterday in the "Y," said: "There has never been any serious animosity between the two teams on the playing field. We're glad to see that the student bodies last year and this year have shown and are showing good sportsmanship."

Student Body President Tom Eller made this statement: "As far as we are concerned, being above vandalism is as much a part of true sportsmanship as the game itself. We are deeply grateful to the students for their remarkable cooperation and feel it unnecessary now to keep reminding them of something so distasteful as vandalism was in past Duke-Carolina games."

Dean Weaver

Dean of Men Fred Weaver summed up the attitude of sports fans all over the South: "The Duke-Carolina game is a famous sport spectacle not only because of the keen rivalry and unpredictable results, but also because of the traditionally clean play and superb sportsmanship of the teams. It is to the credit of the students of both Duke and Carolina that each year, despite the growing rivalry, this game becomes more celebrated for the way it is kept unmarred by any unsportsmanlike incident between the teams or the supporting students, on the field or off, before the game or after. This takes constructive leadership."

Bonfire to Complete Pep Rally In Old 'Beat Duke' Tradition

In addition to the Pi Kappa Alpha award for the best poster or banner carried in the torchlight parade tonight, the grand traditional Duke-game pep rally will wind up at the scene of an old time bonfire on the intramural field.

This morning Coach Bob Fetzer will designate the exact spot for the bonfire. During the afternoon all students are encouraged to add to the pile. Chuck Voigt, University club president pointed out, "The size and success of the bonfire will be determined by the amount of fuel which Tar Heel rooters pile on it during the day. Everyone must dig into the tinder boxes and break out the bonfire makings."

Fraternities are urged to organize guard details of pledges to work in shifts after 5 o'clock to protect the inflammables from possible marauders who have in the past managed to ignite the fire before the rally.

At 7 o'clock, the band will lead the torchlight parade route to the scene of the bonfire. The rally there will include judging of all banners and posters carried in the parade, and the subsequent awarding of the trophy.

Maryon Saunders, University alumni secretary, said yesterday, "Students now at Carolina will recall for years the singing of 'Hark the Sound' before the big bonfire. The Duke game rally always stands high amoung the memories of our Alumni."

Head cheeleader Myrt Sherrard added, enthusiastically, "A real cheering and singing rally will serve to fire up the Choo-choo and the team and put them on the right track to another victory over the Blue devils. We can really heap on the coals at the bonfire tonight."

The Chesterfield Supper Club program, starring Perry Como and Jo Stafford, will pay tribute to the Carolina-Duke football game on their NBC program tonight at 7 o'clock.

Students Will Enter East Gates at Duke

Word was received from Duke university athletic officials late yesterday afternoon as to the procedure to be used by Carolina students to gain admittance to the Carolina-Duke game at Duke stadium on Saturday.

Student gates will open at 11:30 with six booths on the east side open to exchange the white cards for a reserved seat ticket.

After student obtains his ticket he may enter the stadium from any nearby gate on the east side. The booths are all located near the main east gates.

Each student must have in his possession his white ticket, his Athletic pass book and his student ID card.

Only the east side of the stadium may be used for student entrance and cooperation with the Duke officials will expedite the whole matter of gaining access to the game.

University Party Completes Nominations Of Candidates for December Elections

In nomination proceedings lasting two successive afternoons, the University party completed nominations for the Student Legislature Women's Honor coucil and Student council.

In Wednesday's meeting, thirteen nominees for the Legislature from men's dormitories were agreed upon by the party. Also four nominees to represent the women's dormitories in the legislature were selected.

Nominees to represent the women's dorms are Edie Knight, Louise Dobson, Lein Hughes, and Peppy Lucas.

Yesterday the UP announced eight men nominees from town for the legislature. They are Pope Harris, Bill Swain, Jack Girard, Paul Mensee, Wally Robinson, Ed Davenport, Tag Montague, and Norman Black.

The party also nominated Elizabeth Myatt, Teen Mason, and Lill Hotard for the women's council and Rita Adams received the party Nomination for the Student council.

Coed Get-Together Slated for Monday

Thanksgiving will be the theme of this month's Coed Get-Together Monday at 5 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Sponsored by the YWCA, the meeting is open to all coeds.

Each girl has been asked to bring a contribution of food to be placed in Thanksgiving baskets for Chapel Hill's need families. Staples such as coffee, flour, and canned goods are best suited.

Students, faculty and townspeople will participate in a program giving various ideas of Thanksgiving. A high school boy, a nine-year-old girl, a workman, a housewife, a maid, a mother, and a professor will present their views.

Wallace Democrats To Discuss Farmer Tobacco Relations

"The Position of the North Carolina Farmer in Relation to the British Tobacco Embargo" will be the topic for discussion when the Wallace Democrats meet this evening at 7:00 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham memorial.

According to chairman Martin Knowlton the meeting will be over by 8 o'clock in order to free members and visitors for Duke weekend activities.

There will be a brief organizational meeting following the discussion.

Travel Agency Has Many Satisfied Customers

By Elinor Woltz

With the approach of Thanksgiving holidays, the spotlight focuses on the Graham Memorial travel agency, tucked in the nothern corner of the campus in the student union office. Visited daily by dozens of students, the office arranges numerous trips to any point in the United States or even the world, and around vacation times students swamp the office.

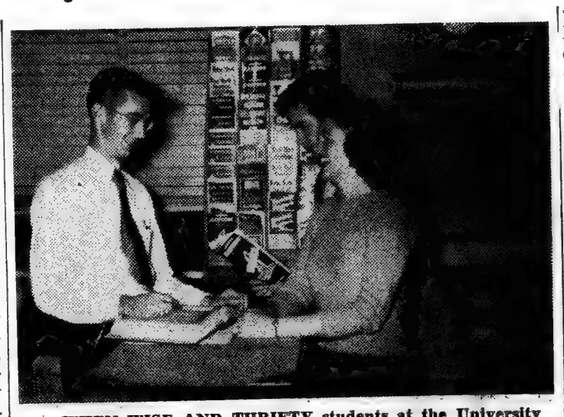
Chief of this University depot is lanky Bob Watson, a junior from Winston-Salem, who was instrumental in establishing the travel agency a year ago under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial. Ever since, Bob has avidly collected data such as timetables and travel folders with which to supply the prospective traveler. A telephone call (9881) finds Bob jotting down everything about the intended trip, consulting train schedules, leaving nothing left for the student except to pick up his ticket at the station.

Advance Payment

Though all travel agency services are free, payment in advance of all reservations is required to avoid endless red tape.

Watson's first inclination toward directing the agency probably originated in his childhood. His grandmother took him down by the Southern railroad in Danville, Va., where he could watch the locomotives roar past from all points east.

From them he turned to toy trains and further still to his now positive desire to become a future railroad president. During last summer, Bob earned valuable experience in working directly with Baltimore railroads by computing freight charges. He spent his years in the army traveling extensively in the Southwest Pacific and on the west coast.



Bob finds that his commerce major neatly allies with railroad vocation plans. He places special emphasis on geography which, incidentally, helps him at the travel agency. (It is helpful to know that South American mountains necessitate extensive air travel when several dozen students request inexpensive transportation to Colombia.)

Though he has never made a plane trip, fifty per cent of his arrangements at the travel agency are by air. Students from the western states devour most of the agency's plane accommodiations, particularly at Christmas and Thanksgiving. For this reason, he urges all holiday travelers to plan their itineraries far enough in advance to avoid delays and seatless rides.

Open Weekdays

The whys and wherefores of travel, familiar to Watson, facilitate his arranging trips from Chapel Hill to Shangri-La. He hopes to provide special train tours to the west and Mexico by next summer.

Students may take advantage of the travel agency every weekday afternoon and evening from 4 to 6 o'clock. He can arrange those vacation trips in nothing flat and save many a headache.— You'll be glad you didn't wait!

WHEN WISE AND THRIFTY students at the University feel like going any place, their starting point is usually the Graham Memorial Travel agency.

All parties seem happy over the outlook of a proposed trip here, as travel agent Bob Watson arranges an itinerary for Margie Taylor, while Charles McRae, in the background, awaits his turn. With Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays imminent, Watson appeals to all homeward-bound students to make their travel plans early.

Afterthought on Civil Rights

Some may think that comments on the Civil Rights committee report which has been cooling for several days are a little belated. We don't. Sometimes it is best to just sit back and watch the reaction from various sections of the nation and then state your comments, after the facts are more evident. This is what we have done.

The committee, which was composed of two southerners — one of which is our own president, Dr. Frank P. Graham, — began their intensive study on the state of American Civil Rights last December 5. Their report, stating the conditions which exist contrary to the principles of a democratic government are not unfamiliar to any of us. They cite the need for a federal anti-lynching law, anti-poll tax and fair employment laws. They denounced police brutality; "unfair" court trials of persons from minority groups; the wartime mass evacuation of Japanese-Americans from the West Coast; racial discrimination in the armed services; barring of some alien groups from American citizenship; and denial of voting rights. In all, there were 35 violations of the principles of Civil Rights.

But the one fault surveyed and brought to the attention of the American public which has caused the greatest comment, in the collegiate press in particular and also in the North Carolina dailies, is the section of the report devoted to segregation and discrimination against the Negro. They singled out "Jim Crow" practices and advocate the outlawing of discrimination based on race, color, creed, or national origin in such public places as buses, trains, theaters, hotels, eating establishments, hospitals, and schools. We shall confine our comments to the latter—schools.

In the South there is the practice of providing two school systems, one for whites and the other for Negroes. The "separate but equal" school system, according to the committee, "is one of the outstanding myths of American history because it is almost always true that while indeed separate, these facilities are far from equal."

According to an article appearing on the editorial page of the "News and Observer" of November 3, "...some members of the Committee on Civil Rights suggest that a '...threat of mixed schools should be enforced on the South from Washington..'.."

The southerner, in some respects, is as ornery as a Missouri mule when someone tells him how to alleviate his problems or tries to force anything on him. And often it costs him until he learns for himself. This is one of the more obvious reasons why "mixed" schools should not, and could not be adequately enforced on the southern population at the present time.

After looking at the practical side of "mixed" education even here in North Carolina, we are sorry to say that it will not work in this decade. If it would, we would advocate such a practice immediately. It would mean a better and less expensive school system.

Instead we see what could be an adequate solution to the problem shaping up in the Southern Governor's conference held this past fall. The governors began work on a plan for regional graduate schools for Negroes — a school which would train much-needed doctors, dentists, and teachers for the South. Regional graduate schools would provide at least "equal" educational facilities for Negroes, and would no doubt in many cases offer training which would surpass many of the firmly entrenched southern colleges. A system of this type could also be worked out along the college scope.

But regional schools would not approach the problem of training the children in graded and high schools. If the South is to stand pat on its policy which advocates "separate but equal" educational systems, then it is going to have to bear the brunt of the expenses. The South must provide equal instruction, similar lunch rooms, identical equipment, and carry out a school program which is virtually the same as the whites'. And legislation should be passed to set up machinery to see that the systems ARE equal.

At the same time, provisions should be made to enforce the North Carolina state law stating that all children between the ages of 6 and 16 must attend school. We are not of the same opinion as Philip Wylie, author of "A Generation of Vipers" who advocates that children who are not able, or will not, take to schooling should not made to attend school at public expense. be required to be a burden on society and Instead, we believe that if schooling is there for them, they should be exposed to education — education, the only sure way in which we can raise the South from its condition of ignorance and poverty.

It is appropriate that the Civil Rights report came simultaneously with the intense study of North Carolina's educational system which culminated with action Monday after planning for nearly a year. The State Education Commission, as authorized in the last General Assembly, has established 15 committees, composed of 250 prominent educators, business, and professional men of the State for an intense study. They will attempt to locate the apparent shortages of our system and project a plan to put North Carolina's education on a much higher level.

The "Ladies Home Journal," which will be released on the 25th of this month, carries an article on the theme "Hatreds can be Cured", by Margaret Hickey, which sums up the answer to the whole problem.

"Efforts are being made to solve the age-old conflicts between the Negro and the white man. In North Carolina, Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, and a group of outstanding Negro educators are working together on an educational program.

"Patient, steady approach brings real results."

Let Them Do It!

Coach Crowell Little had something to say about vandalism yesterday. Coach Little, who is papa to the jayvee team, says he doesn't remember seeing any football players in those destructive groups of Joe Collitches who figure that they enhance the team's chance of beating Dook by painting up gothic buildings.

Coach Little remembered that when he played for Carolina back in the late thirties, the football players themselves thought vandalism was pretty silly.

The situation hasn't changed.

This is the top of the year for Carolina football season, beyond a doubt, and spirit is rightly high. But let's leave the violence to the football team. They're pretty good at it. — B. S.

Too Many Clubs on Campus

By Pete Gerns

Students expressed the opinion that there are too many organizations on the campus at present, in spite of the increase in enrollment and favored abolishing some by a vote of three to one.

Martha Aiken, actively interested in student activities has this to say:

"There are not too many organizations for the number of supposedly 'thinking' students on campus; and students with a wide variety of opinions and interests, I presume.

"There are far too many organizations, with constructive programs, according to the number of student citizens interested in their own community (or anything much?) in democratic discussion, in participation, in group - work toward worthwhile goals.

"There's always room for more active, representative, and independent organizations; as in life, there's plenty of room when the competition is for the highest and truest values of life.

"There is far too little appreciation of the aims and hard work of other (individuals and) organizations. Sometimes, there is much duplication of effort; and often there is too little sympathetic cooperation between groups.

"I wonder if college students today are typical of a growing "laissez-faire" philosophy in our life. Do you think we can safely develop many more isolationists or parasites in public affairs or group work?"

Miss Aiken closes with "Believe it or not—I don't belong to organizations just to 'belong'. I dislike intensely meetings that just 'meet' or self-perpetuate; I see no excuse for committees which don't commit!"

Other, and shorter, comments follow:

"No, I don't think so, taking into consideration the school enrollment. A great number and type of organizations should be available to satisfy the many and varied interests which can come from 7,000 students." Floyd Jones.

"There are too many organizations on this campus. What we should have is one big club incorporating everything from the Chapel Hill Ping Pong assn. to the Carolina Athletic assn. Furthermore, this one big club could meet once per quarter in Kenan Stadium". Fred Burgess.

"It's not how many, but how they are organized!" Jack Park, "Cotton" Harris, Eddie Chappell, Graham Johnson.

"I think there are many organizations, but with our enrollment, there isn't one too many. It gives every student a chance to become affiliated with an organization of his choice because of the wide variety". Ben Kistler.

From what we've just read it seems that more people are in favor than opposed to the number of organizations. In accordance with our policy we have printed only signed statements; it is unfortunate that they who feel that there are too many organizations did not submit any concrete opinions. nevertheless, they did outweigh the other side as previously stated.

Playtime in the Balkins

Dear Sirs,

In the October issue of the magazine "Theatre Arts" is an article by one Miss Marie Seton. I should like to take the liberty of quoting from this article, which deals with the present state of the theatre in Yugoslavia. Miss Seaton, I must declare, makes no mention of how she passed through or under the Iron Curtain, or whether she suffered either bodily or mentally in doing so.

"Yet this rather conservative theatre (the Yugoslav) is exerting a revolutionary effect upon the majority of Yugoslav people in giving them the opportunity to see the work of leading dramatists of whom they knew little or noting before the war. At that time the price of seats was so high that only the educated minority could afford to go to the theatre; today the average worker earning from 175 to 225 dinars a day can attend regularly, for the price now ranges from six to sixty dinars or from twelve cents to $1.20, varying slightly within this range in the different republics."

At the risk of laying myself open to a dangerous charge, I want to state that I envy the people of Yougslavia their theatre prices! I should like to see a theatre in this country as sedulously interested in bringing the theatre to the average American wage-earners.

Quoting the manager of the National Theatre of Ljubljana, Janko Liska, Miss Seton states that it is their purpose to "make culture accesible to the greatest number of people and to improve public taste." Later in the article Miss Seton describes a visit to the theatre where "more than fifty percent of the audience was seeing opera for the first time."

"For a republic composed of 1,550,000 people, the Slovene government is gargantuan in its generosity to the theatre. It allocates 20,000,000 dinars or $400,000 a year to the theatre in Ljublajana and 10,000,000 a year to the theatre in Maribor."

Still another paragraph contains an even more interesting matter: "The theatre directors of Yugoslavia want to produce the best contemporary American play but they are being frustrated by the refusal of the American government to issue visas to Yugoslavs who wish to visit America to study the American theatre and get to know American theatre people. Last May, Matej Bor, director of the Ljublajana theatre, applied for a visa but it was refused and this act created an extremely bad impression in Yugoslavia."

It seems to me that the so-called Iron Curtain exists in the pages of our press that withholds such information. That phrase by the way originated with Goebbels. How about giving it back to the dead fascist. It isn't fair to use it without his permission.

Wouldn'tAStudentRosterHelp?

By Larry Berry

"Could you tell me where 'John Doe' lives?" I daresay this is a question most of us try to answer for strangers seeking out their friends in Chapel Hill at times during our college career. Of course during office hours this information may be secured through the "Y". Our little problem arises when the office is closed, and we try to mutter something to the stranger that at least sounds intelligent.

From this corner, the lobby of South building would seem to be a very good location for a permanent roster of the students. Of course the problems of torn pages, wrong addresses, and such would arise. This roster could be handled in conjunction with the one available in the "Y" and mistakes would be kept at a minimum.

The Student Directory is, of course, very good; but it represents the student body as of the September registration. Much will change during the year to make a public roster worthwhile.

A few days ago while engaged in a very pleasant conversation we were told that this column did not seem to go any further than the setting up of campus conditions, etc. Drooping out of the column I would like to say a few words about this. Most of these problems can be conquered by student cooperation or the work of some of the stronger campus organizations. I was also told that I was not critical enough of these problems. Maybe I'm not, but I hope that the students will do something concerning the betterment of themselves without being "raked over the coals". Go down and sit in on the Student Legislature or see about the possibilities of a student roster. You can find some defect in student life that will probably give you quite a bit of satisfaction to cure without overworking yourself.

I guess I am somewhat idealistic, but if the right persons do not find and correct faults; you can bet your bottom dollar that the wrong ones will make use of these faults. This is our school and the responsibility is up to us, as it will be when we get our "sheep skins". We can't put the blame on "Mame" for our world. No sudden outburst of energy is now expected, but of course some would be gratifying.

At times we wonder about the advisability of a Publicity committe for the campus. This group could act as a clearing house for various activities need ing publicity. Notes would be kept on results of the previous methods used and their success. A number of students are planning on entering the field of publicity upon graduation, and a nice record behind them would help out, both in experience and the chance of getting a job. The establishment of a strong public wide open here. If I'm wrong ity agency seems to us to be someone please correct me and a number of others in the student body.

Sound and Fury

With Their Best Foot Forward

By Bob Sain

An excellent line-up of campus talent and nostalgic tunes from the roaring twenties makes "Gin Lane", Sound and Fury's fall show, which opened at Memorial hall Wednesday night, a fine way to spend a couple of lively hours.

Despite loose organization and a number of bad breaks, opening night for the show provided all that could be asked in campus entertainment.

A bit too ambitiously billed as a musical - melodrama, "Gin Lane" was a top-notch campus musical, but nothing close to melodrama. The book, by Pete Strader and Ken Gammage, was negligible in its story but presented a considerable amount of bright comic patter for the principles.

Faith Adams and Mac Shaw carried the weight of the tale well and both exhibited more than the usual amount of comic ability. Well-cast, Faith Adams was appropriately brassy as the loose lady of the story, Trixie O'Toole. Her stage presence was especially notable.

Mac Shaw, however as bootlegger "Lucky" Luigi, deserves top billing for a terrific opening night performance. Shaw, more than anyone else in the show, seemed to be enjoying himself. Tommy Thomas, as criminal lawyer Claude Barrow, shared top male comic honors with Shaw.

But since the story didn't offer too much opportunity for acting, it was in its music that "Gin Lane" was chiefly enjoyable. Songs by Sam Greene, Coline Smith. Audrie Green and Forrest Covington were all that an audience could ask.

Greene's fine voice was notable early in the show on Gershwin's "Someone to Watch over Me". He was effective, too, in one of several surprisingly excellent tunes by Frank Matthews.

Coline Smith, as a jazz age "flapper", was an audience favorite in two songs and in some delightful stage antics which, for the lack of a better name, we are forced to call dancing. Her "Nobody Makes a pass at Me," in the first scene, got the show off on a good comic level. Her attitude, many will be happy to learn, was above reproach.

Audrie Green sang several blues numbers nicely. She carries a pleasant torch. That the blues tunes broke the comedy flow of the show wasn't her fault. Forrest Covington, whose voice is well-liked on the campus and whose work as choral director for the show deserves commendation, did one of Frank Matthews' tunes. (This reviewer was particularly impressed by the Matthews' music which didn't suffer from comparison in the show with such greats as Gershwin, Kern, Harold Arlen, and Cole Porter.)

Evidence of good direction by Strader was lacking opening night, but the show was big and sprawling and would have taken more time than Sound and Fury could possibly spend to get it into shape. Strader's own acting and sets were good, however, and everyone but dyed-in-the-wool perfectionists will overlook the show's faulty organization.

Sound and Fury, after an enforced wartime rest is getting back on its feet. In "Gin Lane" it has its best foot forward.

This Changing World

The American Art Form

By Bill Robertson

The subject I mention in this article is not one about which there is complete ignorance among students. It happens that those who use the facilities provided in our University buildings — and especially those provided by our library — do more than just study. Some of them are talented poets, writers, and artists. They compose poems, write essays and draw pictures in public places (or, more exactly, in semi-public places) and thus add to the general store of cultural products possessed by the University.

It appears to me that an open discussion of this subject is long over-due. Not so much because mere discussion brings about lasting changes in mental attitudes. It seldom does. But rather because a conscious criticism of our mental attitudes may lead us to question matters which we formerly took for granted — such as the inferiority of women and the permanency of certain social evils. As a matter of fact such discussion might lead us to think about broad social problems — to think about their causes and their remedies.

Such a discussion is all the more necessary at a time when our ideological rivals in the Soviet Union point with pride to the fact that prostitution has been eliminated from their country along with the elimination of unemployment.

But all I wish to do at the present time is to present the problem concretely. I shall do so by posing the following question: do our thoughts, as expressed in these "works of art", reflect an environment in which there is contempt for women and which is conducive to unnatural practices among men?

In this connection, I might add a few words about the humor of these "creations". The question might be asked: are they really funny? Why yes! The Satyricon of Petronius Arbiter was funny. It reflection the decay and corruption of the ancient Roman Empire. The Decameron of Boccaccio was funny. It reflected the decay and corruption of the mediaeval Roman Catholic Church. How accurately do our artistic products reflect conditions in Chapel Hill?

FIVE MORE VOTES

JINXES ARE OFTEN tough nuts to crack. But despite a handful of jinxes added to the Tar Heel burden in the annual football fiesta with Duke, today's issue hereby casts five more votes for a Carolina victory on the morrow. You can see them three columns to the right.

Our individual reasons for sticking with the home forces aren't simply cases of sentiment overriding good judgment, for in this particular instance good judgment is riding with Carolina—the little form sheets have so ruled. Instead, we don't think the Blue Devils, with whatever help they receive from the jinxes, can pull an upset similar to the one back in 1935, when they tripped up a Tar Heel eleven on the way to the Rose Bowl. And by a 25-0 score too

According to four of the five members of the board, the eight or ten points that the bookies spot Duke still leaves the Carolina taker with a good wager. In fact Billy Carmichael, with his 34-6 runaway, gives as his reason for picking it that way, "Let's face reality. It will be a track meet." Jake Wade figures that the Tar Heels can hold the Blue Devils scoreless, but the rest of the board gives them one touchdown. Says Bill Lamkin, "Duke scored on Wake Forest's big line and they'll probably get one against us."

Only one not giving Carolina at least a two-touchdown margin of victory is Morty Schaap, who forwards the opinion that "the rivalry will hold down the score." As for yours truly, we'll keep our fingers crossed and dream of a trip to Miami.

SERIES JINXES

IN REGARD TO the various jinxes surrounding this game in general and the game as part of the long series in particular, one can dig down into the Carolina football record through the years and come up with all sorts of facts. For instance, it's been 12 years—since way back in 1935—since a Tar Heel eleven has fashioned a winning streak of six games, an achievement that a victory will provide this weekend. It's been even longer since the Tar Heels have gained two straight triumphs. Starting in 1932, the Blue Devils have won at least every other game, and quite frequently they have done even better. That means another mark at which to shoot.

Then too are such smaller items as it being all of 10 years since Carolina has emerged on the long end of the score of a Duke scrap played in Durham. Jayvee Coach Crowell Little led the last such successful assault on the Tobacco City back in 1937, when the Tar Heels came through with a 14-6 triumph. Maybe Schaap believes in 10-year cycles.

And just by way of passing along some information, it might be pointed out that a Snavely-coached outfit has never downed a Wade-tutored team in Durham. Of course Carl Snavely has led only one team over to Durham—that time for the ill-fated '35 clash—but this is 1947 and it might be the year that Mr. Jordan has planned a Tar Heel victory.

FACTS AND FIGURES

WHILE LEAFING THROUGH the records on the ancient series, we ran across several interesting facts that might be of interest to others. Such as, for instance, that Carolina has rolled up the two highest scores between the two teams, 41-0 and 48-7 . . . and that the most Duke has scored is a 33-0 decision over a wartime Carolina club . . . and that the series is deadlocked, 14-all, with three ties.

WE'VE TRIED TO forget about the prognostications of last week. But several students refuse to let us—they keep reminding us that the results haven't appeared in the paper yet. It seems some of them wanted to see if all of us predicted as poorly as they had done. Unfortunately, we did.

For out of 20 games, the high mark on the list was an unimpressive 10—with Wade and Schaap getting that many. Lamkin scored on nine, yours truly had eight, and Carmichael followed with seven. Without a doubt, it was a rough week, with three ties (which are counted as losses) and six full-fledged upsets helping to provide the low score.

The eight-week total on 160 games:

	W	L	Pct.	GB
Bill Lamkin	101	59	.631	—
Jake Wade	99	61	.619	2
Morty Schaap	99	61	.619	2
Bob Goldwater	93	67	.581	8
Billy Carmichael (III)	85	75	.531	16

Bob Elliott Most Valuable in NL

St. Louis, Nov. 20—(U.P.)—As a reward for sparking the Boston Braves to a third place finish in the National League this season, third-baseman Bob Elliott was voted the most valuable player in the loop by a committee of 24 sportswriters.

Although he didn't win any titles, the records show that the heavy hitting infielder ranked near the top in most departments. He batted a robust .317 and his 176 hits included 35 doubles, 5 triples, and 22 home runs. He knocked in 112 runs to place fourth in the league.

Ewell Blackwell, elongated pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds, was favored to win the crown, but his total of 194 votes was second to Elliott's 205.

Others in the top ten were Johnny Mize, N. Y. Giants; Bruce Edwards, Brooklyn Dodgers; Jackie Robinson, Dodgers; Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh Pirates; Larry Janson, Giants; Peewee Reese, Dodgers Whitey Kurowski, St. Louis Cardinals; and Harry Walker, Philadelphia Phillies.

Blackwell has the distinction of being the only player named on all 24 ballots.

Tar Babies Battle Blue Imps of Duke; Game Starts at 2!

By Larry Fox

On the basis of their record this year, the Duke Blue Imps will probably be favored when they charge onto the turf of Kenan stadium this afternoon at 2 o'clock to battle the Carolina Tar Babies.

The Dukesters, coached by Bob Cox, have won three games this season, lost one and tied one. The high flying Blue Imps have run up 62 points against their opponents' total of 27 and all of those points were tallied by Navy in the only loss suffered by the jayvees from Durham.

Out for Revenge

The locals will be out to revenge themselves against the Coxmen who upset them last year, 21-13 to provide the Tar Heel's only defeat of the campaign.

Ed Bilpuch will be able to play today and that will put the Tar Babies at full strength for the inter-city contest. Coach Crowell Little expects to start much the same eleven that opened against Virginia.

The men from the Tobacco city will be sparked by George "Preacher" Skipworth, who plays quarterback when Duke uses the T formation and tailback in the single wing. Herb Hipps, who does the kicking, will play left half when they run from the T. Blocking back Ed Perini was a varsity guard in 1944 and 45, but he was moved to the backfield last season. He co-captains the team with lineman Jim Groome. Jack Jones rounds out the starting backfield at either right half or wingback.

In addition to Groome tackle Hugh Stone and ends Red Armour and Mike Souchak, the team's place kicker, are expected to shine on the forward wall.

Jack Brasington is finally in top condition after recovering from the hand injury that kept him idle for several games. Coach Little expects to use him a great deal in this contest. Also seeing a lot of action, although they won't be starting, will be Dick Bunting, Joe Gurtis Moe Bledsoe, and Ed Washington.

"They'll probably be much stronger an offense than we," moaned Coach Little, "They snowed South Carolina under, 24-0, while we barely edged them 13-0. They managed to roll up about 400 yards against the Gamecocks, too."

Milne to Be Sole Carolina Representative In NCAA Harrier Championship Monday

Jack Milne, stellar Carolina distance man, will be Carolina's lone representative in the National Collegiate cross country championship to be run at East Lansing, Michigan next Monday morning.

The meet will be run over the four mile Michigan State college course and will bring together the cream of the country's collegiate distance runners. Many others beside the men that competed in New York last week will be on hand. Besides men like Bobby Black of Rhode Island State, Horace Ashenfelter, Penn State, Jack Diannetti, Michigan State, and others that are high up in the IC4A there will be added from the mid west and southwestern schools. Among these is Quentin Brelsford, last year's winner from Ohio Wesleyan, Jerry Thompson, University of Texas, John Twomey of Illinois plus many runners from smaller schools.

Milne has had a fine record in competition and last spring he turned in a 9:20.5 two mile to take second to Curt Stone of Penn State in the Penn Relay event. This year he has placed up front in all of the duel meets and finished third in New York to be one of the few shining lights in a rather dismal team finish. Jack is a junior and has showed plenty of intestinal fortitude in getting back into shape after a five-year hitch in the army.

The rest of the Tar Heel cross country forces are drilling daily in preparation for their final meet with the University of Virginia on November 29. A five mile time trial will be run this afternoon.

The freshmen are going through their drills in order to be in shape for the return meet with State college next Tuesday afternoon. The yearlings will seek revenge for the beating the Wolfpack harriers handed them in their last outing.

Grads Edge Lewis To Take Dorm Grid Crown

Climaxing a full day of activity, three intramural championships were decided today as the Grads won the Dormitory division football championship and Everett and Phi Delt were victorious in their respective divisions of the table tennis tounrnament.

The fighting Grads team came from behind to edge Lewis dormitory, last year's campus champions, 16-14, to gain the dormitory division honors. Trailing by five points at half time, the Grads managed to push across seven points in the final period, while holding Lewis scoreless.

Lewis took the lead in the first half when Jim Mock scooped up a pass from Cliff Hemingway and raced from mid-field for the score. Dick Taylor's extra point try was good, and Lewis gained a seven point margin.

The deciding factor in the contest proved to be the safety scored by the Grads when an unidentified Lewis man was caught by Grad Jim Poole as he slipped in the mud behind his own goal.

Phi Delt and Everett will meet each other Monday as a result of their winning the table tennis championship of the fraternity and dormitory divisions. Andy Lavin and Tom Wadden copped the honors for Everett as they triumphed over Archie Goodwin and George Whitted.

In single matches played in the fraternity division, Ray Morris and Jim Jackson beat ATO team members Dave Boak and Harry Billerbeck. In the doubles contest Turner and Carr edged Wilder and Heinmiller.

The campus football championship will be decided on Monday afternoon when the Grads meet Chi Psi, fraternity division champ.

Tar Heels Close Heavy Workouts In Secret Drill For Duke Contest

Carolina's Tar Heels brought to a conclusion the major portion of their pre-Duke drills yesterday with a light but lengthy workout on Navy field yesterady.

Once again Coach Carl Snavely issued orders for a secret practice session and the field was cleared of interested sideline observers. There was on tackling during the afternoon, but the team concentrated on improving its blocking and timing. The Tar Heels coaches did not want to risk player injuries by holding a heavy scrimmage.

HOSEA RODGERS
. . . to see action

The Tar Heels probably won't get in omre than a light signal checkup today, but Snavely has had them working hard all week despite the rain.

Carolina To Be Minus

Carolina will be minus at least one of its key players against Duke. Guard Sid Varney, who has played particularly well against the Devils in other Tar Heel-Blue Devil battles, is definately sidelined for the game.

Hosea Rodgers, the lanky fullback who has missed the last couple of games, hasn't donned heavy equipment all week, but the Tar Heel trainers said that he will dress for the game and should be able to see service. He will be able to give Walt Pupa and Bob Kennedy some assistance with the fullback duties. Rodgers has the best running average on the team, making almost nine yards per try. His passing also should help the Tar Heels.

Other than Varney and Rodgers all members of the tea mwill be in good condition for the Dukes.

An afternoon of sunshine aided the Tar Heel team in its preparat practice yesterday, and Carolina followers also are hoping the letup in rain will continue through Saturday in order that the game may be played on a dry fienld. The big Duke horseshoe stadium has been covered by a tarpaulin this week, keeping much of the rain off, and a couple of afternoons of sunshine should bring about a solid turf.

Additional bleacher installments will make possible a crowd of 56,000 for the game. If the expected number turn out it will be a record crowd for North Carolina and Southern conference sports.

George Jernigan of Georgia kicked 47 out of 52 extra points in 1946 to tie the all-time college record set by Dick Walterhouse of Army in 1944.

Soccer Team After Sixth Win of Year Against Cavaliers

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's crippled soccer team winds up its second inter collegiate campaign and first season as a University-sponsored sport today when the Blue and White booters tangle with the University of Virginia kickers on soggy Fetzer field at 2 o'clock afternoon.

Although the Tar Heel eleven did nose out the Wahoos, 1-0, several weeks ago in Charlottesville, the loss of 7 regulars since then has thrown the local soccer camp into confusion and has killed almost all Carolina hopes for their sixth victory against three losses.

Coach Marvin Allen was rather pessimistic over his charges' chances of concluding their most successful season in history with a win and he saw their lone chance of coming out on top today lying in another spirited team performance such as the one they turned in against Duke on Fetzer Field last month.

May Play

A bruised hip muscle made Tom Williams the seventh member of the booters' injured list but two of the crippled booters, Al Williams and Wayne Johnson, may possibly see a little action today if their sprained ankles have responded to treatment sufficiently.

Hank Pallulat, Al Singer, and Mac Hagaman are the other recently sidelined shinbusters who will sit out the game. The shifty ball handling Pallulat and Singer will be greatly missed by the Allenmen today, especially since their team work during past two games has been far from sensational.

Seven seniors, all of whom are regulars, wind up their careers today for Carolina. Al Williams, Porter VanZandt, Frank Nelson, Frank Levy, sparkplug Gus Johnson, Jesse Greenbaum, Dave Boak, and Al Singer will either be playing or watching their last contest as a Tar Heel booter.

New Public Health Building Will Be Constructed Soon

Construction of a new public health building for the University of North Carolina will soon get underway, Collier Cobb, Jr., chairman of the Trustee's building committee, said today. George Watts Carr of Durham has been chosen as architect of the structure, which is scheduled for completion early this summer.

The building will be but a the eventual entire public health plant, Cobb explained. Construction on this wing is being rushed because of the present overcrowded conditions on the ground floor of the school's medical building in which the department now works. Cobb said the newly-chosen architect will consult with the University's Building and Grounds committee to determine the exact site of the structure as the new medical school and hospital provided for during last session of the state legislature are also to be built in the the same general area.

The whole public health plant, which is to be built onto the new wing some time in the future, is to house the Chatham - Orange county health center, and feild training officers and research laboratories of the department.

Stamp Collectors Get Fooled by Time

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 20—(UP)—Today was a big day at the Elizabeth post office as 5,000 letters were sent to stamp collectors all over the world.

Letters have been coming in for a month requesting they be returned to the sender with the city's post mark on them on Princess Elizabeth's wedding day.

Each letter was postmarked at 11:30 a.m. (EST). The royal wedding started at 11:30—London time.

This week's daily rainstorms had turned Fetzer field into a quagmire and confined the Allenmen to Woollen gym but yesterday's midafternoon appearance of the sun and high winds have probably dried the field sufficiently to keep the match from turning into a swimming meet.

The Cavaliers schedule has featured mainly northern elevens but the Wahoos tied Duke 3-3 early in October and then dropped a tight 2-1 decision to the Blue Devils last week. Virginia smeared Roanoke in Charlottesville about a month ago.

Today's starting Carolina lineup will have many new faces in it although all of the final game regulars have seen considerable action in reserve roles.

Placement Direction To Start in January

Filling a post vacant since before the war, the University administration has named Joe M. Galloway to assume in January the responsibilities of its full-time director of placement.

Galloway will come to the University and to an office in South building where he will work in co-operation with Miss Katherine Cooke to extend such vocational guidance as job offers for University graduates and counsel for underclassmen who have not selected a profession for themselves. Miss Cooke has formerly advised only women on such matters.

Galloway is now at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville where he is connected with the campus Bureau of Personnel. A graduate of the University of Tennessee himself with a degree in business administration in 1940, Galloway entered the army in December of that year and served throughout the North African campaign. Since his discharge, he has been doing vocational guidance direction in Knoxville similar to the work he is to do for the University beginning with the forthcoming quarter.

Charles Holder Wins GM Football Contest

It was not the prognosticators' day last Saturday, as entrants in Graham Memorial weekly football contest hit an all-time low in correct predictions. Winner of the crop, with 4 out of the possible 20 predictions correct was Charles A Holder, 212 Manley.

The general run of entrants batted only about .400 to .450 since three tie games and a half-dozen upsets were included on the contest blank. Placing second, with seven misses each, were Lewis August and Luthur McCombs. Tie games on the sheet were Florida-Tulane, Army-Penn, and Duke-South Carolina.

Despite the low and comparitively common score of the Tar Heel tilt, for the first time this year, no entrant predicted the 19-0 outcome. Nearest misses were handed in by Linn Hoover (20-0), and Charles Lambeth (19-6). Others ran from a low of 6-0 to an all-season optimistic prognostication of 65-0 in favor of Carolina, which was seen by William S. Pearson and Gran Childress.

But eight out of the total of 1978 entries predicted Maryland would win.

and jotted down winning numbers. After a week of jotting and watching, they began to play.

They took about $6,000 from that table in 40 hours during which each one would bet for an eight-hour shift. They quit when the club ordered the wheel changed.

The students are back, however, at another club, and so far they've picked up another $6,000.

Club-owner Harold Smith, the man who lost $250,000 on a single roll of the dice last fall, said that he wouldn't interfere with them "even if we lose a million dollars," as he put it.

The boys have him puzzled, however. Now he has a girl assistant who's also jotting down the numbers.

It's Carolina Vs. Duke In Today's Grid Classic

Groups Meeting Here Demand Lower Profits

By John Stump

A resolution calling for formation of a volunteer committee to combat high prices on both local and national levels by a letter writing campaign and boycotts was one result of the SCHW-AVC co-sponsored discussion on high prices held Thursday night in Gerrard hall.

The group also passed a resolution demanding national legislation to curb excess profits.

Presented by Kenneth Macrorie, the resolution was amended to provide that the committee be composed of all those present who would sign to serve on it. Both resolution and amendment were passed with no dissents.

Four Speakers

Four speakers were on hand with prepared comments on the situation. Leading off this group was Clay Cochran of the economics department who scored the political side of the subject, quoting figures on the actual rise in living costs since the death of OPA. After he explained that veterans, farmers, small business men, and white collar workers were the big losers in the present economic setup, he rendered a poem taken from the Democratic national committee publication blaming Senators Taft and Wherry and the National Association of Manufacturers with the 'killing' of OPA. This was greeted by laughter from the audience.

Kottke's Analysis

Dr. Frank Kottke, also of the economics department, attempted to explain the reasons behind present inflationary pressures and to suggest possible future results.

Kottke said that present available cash is five times its prewar level, that our goods are wearing out, and that there is a demand for postwar products. Thus there is natural competition for all consumer goods, resulting in high prices. He pointed out that Congressional tax reduction and repeal plus foreign demand for our scarce goods worsen the situation.

Forecasts Inflation

Although proclaiming that he was in no way condemning the Marshall plan, Kottke said that the Marshall plan will probably heighten these inflationary pressures. In the future, he reminded, Europe must continue to buy more than she sells without the power to pay for it.

"The people," he said, "fear more rises," and when these come they will be followed by an increase in wages. Then, business will feel that more price rises are necessary although labor will charge that the situation will be only a pretext for price rises.

Following Kottke's presentation of the overall situation, Nell Morton, executive secretary of the fellowship of Southern Churchmen, applied her facts to the local situation. She pointed out that at the present time the farmer is being caught in a squeeze between low prices actually being paid to him and blame for high prices being laid on him. She also reminded her audience that every time they buy an art-

France Lacks Leader As Blum Is Voted Out

The riot-torn nation of France was without a leader tonight after the national assembly refused to accept Leon Blum as premier of a new French Government. The aged Socialist who had hoped to lead his country down the middle road to political seeurity failed to get a vote of confidence by just nine ballots.

The vote came tonight after Blum made a blistering address alienating both extremes of the political spectrum. He charged that international communism has openly declared war on the French democracy. Then he turned to the right-wing forces and denounced the followers of General De Gaulle for trying to set up a dictatorship.

The 75-year-old Socialist asked the assembly to authorize a government that would steer a middle course between the right and the left. . . . A course dedicated to liberty, peace and social justice.

But the plea of the frail, white-haired statesman was turned down.

As the assembly refused to authorize Blum's program to save France from political chaos, strikers battled police in the streets of Paris. The clash occurred when workers tried to seize two factories.

Record Crowd Of 56,000 To See Durham Struggle

By Bob Goldwater

Today is D-day, C-D day, that is, with all the trimmings that always surround the annual classic. It's Snavely versus Wade, Justice against Folger, and so on right down the line. It's the clash both teams have pointed for all season long. The old North State, football fans throughout the nation, various bowl committees . . . all await the outcome. In short, today is the day that Carolina and Duke fight for supremacy on the gridiron.

Zero hour comes at 2 o'clock and the struggle will be waged on the Duke stadium battlefield. Over 56,000 people are expected to be present, making this the largest crowd ever to witness a football game in the South between Baltimore and New Orleans.

And they'll see quite a game too! Despite the fact that the Tar Heels are slight favorites and that the Blue Devils will not be at full strength physically, the intensity of the old rivalry—now in its 34th year—will be an incentive for each team to give it the old college try. And in keeping with the battles of past years, anything can happen today.

Seek Sixth in Row

Both clubs have more at stake today than just a triumph over their number one foe. For the Tar Heels, a win will carry them to their sixth straight win, the longest streak a Carolina eleven has rolled up since the big season of 1935. It provides a Blue and White team with its initial success on the Durham field since 1935. Then too—and it's useless to sidestep the issues—a win, which would be the seventh in nine games, would keep Carolina in the running for a bowl invitation.

As for the Blue Devils, they can capture the Southern conference title for the 10th time in the past 15 years should they emerge on the long end of the score. A Duke loss would place William and Mary in the enviable position of having only Richmond stand in the way of a conference championship. The Devils are also slightly victory-starved, having lost two straight contests before being held to a scoreless tie by South Carolina last week. Today's tilt being their final scrap of the season, the Wademen will be trying to end the campaign in a successful manner.

In one respect, the game shapes up as a battle between Carolina's highly-geared offensive, which only began to demonstrate its power in the past four outings, and Duke's defensive might. Coach Carl Snavely plans to use the backfield combination of Charlie Justice, Walt Pupa, Jim Camp, and Don Hartig, the same quartet that opened in 1946, as his offensive unit. Justice and Pupa will provide the one-two punch, Charlie supplying the lightning threat around the ends and the big fullback handling the thunder through the middle.

Rodgers Ready

Also ready to see action should he be needed will be the Carolina ramrod, Hosea Rodgers. The big boy from Alabama has missed the last two games with an injured knee, but he has been declared fit by the Carolina trainers and will take over for Pupa whenever called upon. Rodgers boasts the best running and passing averages on the team, with a .516 completion percentage in the aerial department and a

Snavely Sets Off 'Beat Dook' Rally

By Herb Nachman

In a spirited pep rally demonstrating the traditional Carolina, "Beat Dook" spirit, last night approximately 2,500 Tar Heels with flaming torches circled the campus gaining "momentum" with each note of the band.

Spirits were high, as well as the guys who had them. After building up into a through-and-through Tar Heel rally ,the group was veritably "set off" after coach Carl Snavely's speech in the middle of the intramural field.

As coach Snavely began his talk, a hush fell over the mass of students. "I want there to be no doubt that we are meeting a team that is at its peak. Several members of the team have remarked to me about the wonderful support which the team receives from you students. The team is depending on that spirit tomorrow," was Coach Snavely's essential remark.

At the end of practically every sentence shouts of "Beat Dook," "Get 'Em Tar Heels" and "We Got 'Em" rang through the group. Coach Snavely mentioned the so-called propaganda which has been circulated concerning the Duke stadium "jinx" and their injury riddled team. In commenting the coach urged the students not to be suckers for "propaganda" and to give the team wholehearted support.

Before the rally ended with the customary singing of "Hark the Sound" around the roaring bonfire, the Pi Kappa Alpha trophy for the best banner or float was presented to Sigma Chi fraternity for the second successive year. The float, with a figure of Coach Snavely on top was entitled "Snavely Goes Bowling."

Even the close of the planned rally put no clamps on several hundred students who followed Cal Blyth as he scurled marches on his Scottish bagpipes from the field back to Hill Hall, where they staged their own private pep rally.

UNC Student Elected President Of Council

Earl Fitzgerald, University junior from Ruffin, was elected president of the Executive council of the State Student Legislature at a meeting held Thursday night at State college in Raleigh.

At the same time the council refused use of the House chambers of the state capitol for November 28-29, postponing the meeting of the legislature until late February.

Date to Be Set

The exact date of the assembly will be determined at another meeting scheduled to be held in Raleigh January 10, to which all universities and colleges in the state are invited to send delegates.

Representation on the council included two other schools besides UNC. Representatives of State college and Meredith college were present. University delegates are Lucy Jordan and Wayne Brennegan.

Cranford Elected

State delegate James M. Cranford, a junior from Asheboro, was elected secretary of the council, which voted to continue the legislature for all races. The race issue resulted several weeks ago in dissolution of the Executive council, which since has been reorganized.

The legislature, the eleventh in the annual series, will go into its second session with no schools barred from attending because of race.

To Notify Eure

Cranford and Jane Middleton, Meredith delegate, were appointed to notify Secretary of State Thad Eure that the students would not be able to use the chambers of the House and to reserve the capitol for the February session.

Each state college and university is asked to have one campus organization sponsor the legislature.

Friendship Train Drive Nears $300

The Friendship Train drive, which got its official approval from the student legislature Thursday night, is already nearing the $300 mark. The boxes in Lenoir hall have yielded $60 to the fund as of today, and contributions are pouring in from the fraternities, sororities, and other campus organizations.

Meanwhile, the village has come to the support of the Friendship train, and boxes are now located in most of the business establishments. The deadline for the drive was reported in the Chapel Hill Weekly as Nov. 22, but Drew Pearson's Washington office has informed the UNC committee that the drive here may be extended through Nov. 26.

Arrangements are now completed to provide for a collection at the Duke game tomorrow just before kickoff time.

Every department head has been requested to forward faculty contributions to Chancellor House's office.

STASSEN HITS SHIPMENTS

Chicago, Nov. 21—(UP)—A candidate for the Republican Democratic presidential nomination says shipments of heavy machinery to Russia should be stopped immediately. Harold Stassen told a meeting of the National Editorial association at Chicago that it does not make sense to oppose Communism on one hand and send shipments of machinery to Russia on the other.

Presidency Given To UNC Chancellor

Robert B. House, chancellor of the University, was elected president of the North Carolina College conference for the coming year, at the group's 27th annual meeting in Greensboro Wednesday.

The group which Chancellor House will head is composed of 42 universities, junior colleges, and graduate schools throughout the state. The purpose of the organization is to set up and maintain educational standards and deal with the various problems that arise in the teaching profession in North Carolina.

U.S., RUSSIA AGREE

Lake Success, Nov. 21—(UP)—The revised Soviet-American plan for the partition of the Holy Land will be presented to the full Palestine committee tomorrow. Big power representatives have announced that Washington and Moscow both have approved changes in the U-N blueprint for setting up Arab and Jewish states.

HARLAND TO SPEAK

Dr. J. P. Harland, professor of archeology, will address the Baptist Student union supper forum at 6 p.m. this evening on the subject, "Confirmation of the Bible in Archeology." This will be the last supper forum of the month and preparations are being made for a larger than average crowd.

Lenoir Hall Is Difficult Nut to Crack Reporters Discover from Investigation

By Sam Whitehall

Conditions at Lenoir hall are not perfect, but in consideration of the problems involved it is impossible to make a blanket criticism of either the management or the employees.

That was the conclusion reached yesterday by reporters who attempted to survey the situation after letters and complaints about conditions in the dining hall had reached the Daily Tar Heel office.

At the outset of the attempted survey, refusals on the part of Lenoir employees to comment or cooperate hindered it severely. One employee who refused to permit the use of her name said, "They would as soon fire as look at us if we gave out information."

However, this situation was explained later by L. B. Rogerson in charge of University eating places, when he was reached at his office. Pointing out that he prefers statements on matters of policy to come from him, he stated that the obstructions met with earlier were no doubt results of liberal interpretations of his request.

In regard to employees' questions or complaints, he said, "If any employees have any grievances or complaints, they can come in here and find fairness without fear of losing their jobs." His statement was later backed up by an employee whose remarks appear on page 2.

Regarding the grievances which had come to the attention of this newspaper and others, he explained them in general terms, made a categorical denial of them, and introduced figures to prove his points.

He explained that the discharging of Carl Sparrow (referred to in Thursday's DTH) was because, "We just didn't need the services he had been performing anymore."

He denied the employees' charge that the Negro help was going to be laid off at Christmas time, stating that "our turnover is very small."

Asked to give his opinion in regard to employee satisfaction, he replied, "I don't know."

He closed the interview by stating, "I want to cooperate with everybody." However, he refused to permit the Daily Tar Heel to quote several of his statements.

Russell Is Peeved By Open Dictionary

Phillips Russell, whose classes in creative writing have been ranked among the top in the nation, seems to think of journalism students and the large dictionary on his desk simultaneously.

While conducting his short story class yesterday, Mr. Russell looked at his dictionary, almost sighed, and said, "For 17 years we have tried to find a journalism student that will close the dictionary after looking up a word. We haven't succeeded yet."

A young Australian newsman named Davenport, a member of the class, looked around him at some of the budding journalists, smiled, and replied, "Perhaps they haven't got the strength."

Proud Duke Students Confident Of Victory

By Dick Jenrette

When Duke and Carolina come to battle again this afternoon there will be some 56,000 fans present whose attention will be centered on 22 men in the big Durham horseshoe stadium, but the reason that this series ranks as one of the most colorful and interesting in the South is not just the fine games that the two teams usually play but also the rivalry between the two neighboring cheering sections, memories from past games, two well-drilled bands, and the roar of a mighty crowd in unison to applaud some great play.

Almost all the pre-game experts have named Carolina as the winner in today's contest, but the proud Duke students generally seem to scoff at the odds. One avid Blue Devil rooter, when questioned by a Daily Tar Heel reporter about the outcome of the game, fairly shouted, "You won't beat Duke!" When this student was asked to state the reasons for his statement, he could come up with no more conclusive proof than "Duke's got a better club."

Folger Better Than Justice

Another Dukester added that Carolina has an average good club but that it doesn't have a chance against what he termed a "superb Duke line." This student also insisted that Fred Folger is better than Charlie Justice. There are a lot of folks who will dispute this with the Duke boy, but the argument should be settled this afternoon.

One prominent Duke student declared that he was glad that Duke was the underdog. He evidently thought it was time for an upset since there hasn't been a deviation from the form sheet in the Duke Carolina series since 1940, when the Tar Heels won, 6-3.

There actually was a Duke student who confidentially informed us that Duke really didn't have much of a chance against Carolina. His name must remain secret as he desires to continue his studies at the Durham institution.

There was another question that was fired at the Blue Devil supporters, and that was what happened in the Duke - South Carolina game (0-0 tie) last week. Most of them were stumped by this but one finally came to the rescue with the very logical answer that Duke was psychologically down for that tilt and this same astute observer thought the Devils would be on edge for the Tar Heels.

The student attitude at Chapel Hill is one of universal optimism, but many students expressed concern over

Vaughn Monroe Radio Program Will Be Broadcast at Dance

By Donald MacDonald

Vaughn Monroe's 9:30 radio show will be featured during tonight's final Grail dance when the Columbia Broadcasting system sends a nationwide salute to the Carolina-Duke football teams from the floor of Woollen gymnasium.

Sponsored by Camel cigarettes, the half-hour show will include its regular Saturday night contingent of stars—the Moonmaids, Singer Beryl Davis, Colonel Stoopnagle and Announcer Bert Parks.

Tickets Available

Although the Monroe dance is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock, Grail officials ask all persons who plan to attend the broadcast to be inside the gymnasium by 9:15. Instructions concerning applause will be given the audience at that time. Grail officials also said that a few tickets will be available at the door.

During the program the score of today's football classic will be announced, and the Monroe orchestra will present a medley of Carolina and Duke football songs. Later, a second medley will feature the Monroe and Moonmaids' renditions of "Carolina Moon" and "Carolina in the Morning."

Songs and Comedy

Beryl Davis, English singing star who has received recent publicity in "Life" magazine, and Colonel Stoopnagle will be on hand to provide vocal and comic talent to the broadcast. The orchestra will play two numbers which it has recently recorded, "Ballerina" and "You Do."

WDNC, Durham station, the local outlet for the Columbia Broadcasting system, and all CBS stations will carry the broadcast. The William Esty company's production staff has come here from New York to manage the production. Members of the University Communications center have been invited to observe the technical portion of the broadcast.

Although the broadcast ends at 10 o'clock, the dance will continue until midnight.

Gypsy Has Nothing Over Grappler Tag

Student legislator and Deke Tag Montague may have won his intramural wrestling match by four points to three in Woollen gymnasium Thursday afternoon, but according to Tag, he got the pants whipped off of him.

Not realizing what had happened until the referee tapped him on the shoulder, said "Break" and asked him to pull up his pants, Tag was slightly confused about the whole affair.

To his mixed male-and-coed audience, however, he looked just like Gypsy Rose Lee, G-string and all.

Some Notes on Coed Elections

To clear up the confusion on the part of some coeds and some political parties as to who shall nominate candidates to the Coed Senate and the Woman's Council the following statement has been issued by Barbara Cashion, speaker of the Senate; Jack Folger, speaker of the Student Legislature; Donleen McDonald, president of Women's council and Al Lowenstein, Student council member and member of Constitutional committee.

First: No student in the University can, in the final analysis, be denied by student government the right to seek any elective office independently, or in the ticket of any party which may select him as a candidate and on which ticket he may agree to run.

Second: The wisdom of electing to certain student government offices on a partisan basis is open to serious question and ought to be carefully considered by individuals and parties alike; for instance, there would seem to be much merit in a judiciary selected on a non-political basis.

Third: An enactment of the Coed Senate, which must remain in effect until amended or until successfully contested on Constitutional grounds before the Student council, sets the procedure of nominating of certain coed offices, and this enactment obviously holds in the elections scheduled for one week from Tuesday.

Fourth: Consequently, every coed may, of right, seek elective office in such manner as she may see fit insofar as her political affiliations are concerned; and every political party may, of right, nominate any student for any elective office, provided only that the student shall agree to accept the nomination tendered to him; as an expedient for the immediately pending elections, we would most urgently recommend that any political party desirous of nominating for those offices covered by the Coed senate law do so in the manner prescribed by law: namely, that a slate selected by a party, which may of course be given due publicity in the Daily Tar Heel and elsewhere, be formally placed in nomination by a coed member of the party at the open meeting decreed by Senate law.

It is possible that this method of nominations for certain coed offices may effect a lasting compromise acceptable to everyone, but if it does not do so, the fair and unconfused December election, the good-will manifested and the understanding generated by this experiment will have a worthwhile affect nonetheless.

What About Peron's Argentina?

Edward H. Hecht

Included in the difficult task of forming the United States Foreign Policy, one topic which requires much attention is how are we to deal with Argentina. In analyzing this question it is best for us to review briefly Argentina's actions in the second World War which so many have condemned. This deals primarily with her attitude towards the Axis and her reasons for not entering the war against it prior to 1945.

A reasonable explanation lies in the fact that since she had not been molested by the Axis powers she saw no need of cutting off her export trade which was carried on mostly with Germany and Italy. Not until 1945 did Argentina ratify the Act of Chapultepec and declare war on the Axis. The delay was caused partly because Argentina's Congress felt that such a pact would cause her to lose her independence and sovereignty. For justification of this action, we may look at our own country which in 1939 passed a Neutrality act and a Cash and Carry act in order to remain out of the conflict. Then came December 7, 1941. We had no alternative. Argentina, on the other hand, had no Pearl Harbor.

Another question we should ask ourselves in this matter is, what kind of a government does this country have? President Peron says it is fashioned after our own New Deal. However, many observers say that the government is Fascistic. There is no doubt that Peron has dictatorial powers, but it has further been said that personality rules in Argentina. What this means is this: The people follow the leader if they like him. This is apparently an inherent characteristic. If we are to find a name for such a government we may examine Democracy, which places the law above the individual. Fascism places the nation above the individual and so on. However these do not seem to fit Argentina. If personality rules, it seems to indicate that a different type of government is in existance there.

Since personality is the factor that seems to dominate, it will be well to take a glimpse at Juan Domingo Peron. He is Argentina's young, dynamic president. Thus far he has proposed and put into effect a five year plan. He has made a treaty to utilize Chillean Pacific ports and also one for greater economic unity with Uruguay. He appeals to the masses, addressing them in shirt sleeves, and using common language which they, the descamisados, (shirtless ones) can understand.

The control which Peron has over the country is virtually complete. Bank deposits and loans are directly under the government's thumb. Farmers are forced to sell their products to the Government, who in turn resells them for big profits to foreign countries, pocketing the difference. Newspapers also are under direct surveillance with the possible exception of La Nacion and La Prensa.

The Five Year Plan started with a purge of the teachers in the universities, under the direction of one Senor Machinandiarana who is an ex-gambling casino operator. It is said that the Education field was chosen to start this plan since the students were so opposed to Peron's election.

The Plan is to run from January 1947-1951. Its 27 basic laws encompass all sectors of national activity which range from complete reorganization of government departments to general reforms of the customs laws. Its cost will be about six billion pesos for the five years. The cornerstone of the plan is industrialization in which industry will be protected and expanded. Salaries, personnel, industrial processes, and communications will also be expanded. Socialized medicine will be prominently featured. A Social Security plan is being introduced. There are provisions for woman suffrage. Furthermore the military machine is being modernized with one year compulsory military training being extended to two years for men 20 years old or over.

In this brief analysis of pertinent questions which have to be considered in forming US Foreign Policy, one problem remains: Just how far should the US interfere in Argentinian affairs? In our past history it has been proven that if we mind our own business we will be better off. The Argentinians are no different than we. They dislike being told what to do, and they don't want interference from other countries in matters per-

His Work's Improving

Robert Baker

Bad Pedal Mars Concert

By John K. B. McDowell

Mr. Robert Baker, organist, appeared in recital at Hill Music hall on Thursday evening, November 20th.

Mr. Baker possesses a quite competent technique, but his playing suffers from serious faults in the matter of registration, and from his unbridled use of the crescendo pedal.

The opening selection, the Fantasia in F minor of Mozart, was performed with a commonplace and heavy registration. The whole line of the work was spoiled by its excessive loudness. Three short intermezzi of Schroeder were next played and these were followed by an atrocious work by Rinck. A carnival spirit prevailed and all that was missing was the peculiar vocal artistry of the late Florence Foster Jenkins.

Mr. Baker, in this reviewer's opinion, did his best playing of the evening in the adagio movement from Vival di's Concerto in D minor. His registration showed taste, and the unfortunate lushness of tone which is frequently showered upon many of the works of Bach and Vivaldi was absent in Mr. Baker's interpretation. The next work, the Prelude and Fugue in A minor of Bach, was played, as was the Mozart, with a heavy registration and with so much pedal that the latter part of the Fugue was blurred and the effect of the work destroyed.

There followed three works of no distinction; one a traditional Jewish melody arranged by Saminsky, an effort of Seth Bingham strangly entitled Rhythmic Trumpet, and a Divertissement by Louis Vierne.

Following these works Mr. Baker played The Nativity by Langlais, a contemporary and distinguished musician. Mr. Baker played this fine piece with feeling and good expression.

The last selection on the program was the Fantasia and Fugue on B-A-C-H by Franz List. Mr. Baker gave a competent reading of this very difficult work. But is this piece, as well as most of Liszt's compositions, worth all the effort involved in mastering them?

As an encore the organist played a ridiculous recueil of notes by the late Pierto Yon. For too long has the questionable, and sometimes appealing music of Mr. Yon been perpetuated.

Mr. Baker's program, unfortunately, did not represent the best in organ literature. His playing, a product of the romantic school of the organ, was noticeably lacking in the baroque spirit so necessary in performing the Bach work he selected. The organ available to him, however, was little comfort to him in this matter.

The program might have benefited by some of the works of Sowerby, Messiaen or Karg-Elert — to name a few — but this reviewer finds gratitude in his heart for having been spared the Toccata from the Widor Fifth Symphony.

Is It Still a Clean Slate?

By R. Foo Giduz

Here's a hefty and hopeful hallelujah, brothers, that this morning finds the campus here and at Methodist Flats nine miles east, as unscathed vandalistically as they were at press time. . . . No small measure of credit for this accomplishment is due also to the University's forethought in posting all-night watchmen in five strategic posts about Tar Heelia for the past week. . . . This makes two years' clean slate now. Who'll make it three?

It doesn't particularly matter but here's wondering how come: Dooksters are receiving complete coverage by Pic magazine, and possibly Life and Look on their we(a)k-end festivities. . . . Whereas the staid student legislature of UNC soundly voted against allowing or inviting national mag photogs to snap the goings-on from the CH end. . . . They said it would be unfavorable publicity. . . . Okay, okay, so we hope Dook gets unfavorable publicity. . . . And a final prayer that the two-hour Dook stadium lines of year-before-last will be avoided today through the brainstorm of advance coupon sales. . . . Carousel, taking no chances, is already in line! . . . Last one there's a rotten egg . . . YELL!

DTH will henceforth miss the services of one of its hottest newshounds: Bill Scoop Sexton, the Culver (Indiana) carpetbagger, left school this week to take over full-time duties with United Press in Raleigh. . . . The rag will be hard-up for latest inside poop on Who's Who in the local pokey. . . Closing down their best show in five years last night, hard-working S and F'sters deserved every bit of credit they received. As usual with student-produced shows they ran into troubles after more troubles. In addition to losing two lead players on dress rehearsal night their dance (?) director also dropped out and many choral (?) changes had to be thrown in. . . . But the show was undeniably a success as entertainment, and amazingly enough, successful financially, too.—To top it off, the administration also liked the production!—Truly a milestone for Sound and Furyers!

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Cabinet Quartet Said No

Washington. — Inside fact is that before the President delivered his militant message demanding price controls, four membrs of his Cabnet remonstrated with him against it. They were: Secretary of National Defense Forrestal, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson and Secretary of Commerce Harriman.

This Cabinet quartet felt that Truman should have laid greater stress on the fact that he didn't intend to use the compulsory price and wage controls which he requested of Congress, unless voluntary measures failed. This was their main criticism of the speech. Otherwise they went along.

Anderson and Harriman were particularly outspoken. At a White House session on Sunday, the day before the message was delivered, both argued that the two chief ghost-writers—Clark Clifford and Leon Keyserling of the President's Economic Council—had gone too far in expressing the need for compulsory controls.

"This is going to make Congress sore," complained the Secretary of Agriculture. "Some of us who will have to go up to the Hill and fight for enactment of the program will have a tough job if the message is delivered the way it's written now."

Commerce Secretary Harriman also suggested that the message be revised along "more conciliatory" lines.

"You ought to make it very clear that while you are asking for authority to control prices and wages, you do not intend to use them unless voluntary controls fail," Anderson told Truman. "I gathered from what you have said in our Cabinet meetings that that was your idea also. But this message doesn't read like it."

"That is my idea," replied the President, in substance. "I hope I never have to use these powers and I still believe it won't be necessary if everybody cooperates in keeping prices down through voluntary methods."

He added, however, that he didn't want to raise any false hopes by minimizing the chances of price and wage controls being invoked, because it was impossible to tell at this time that they won't be necessary. This would not be fair to the public, the President said.

The President explained that he couldn't promise absolutely that compulsory measures wouldn't be taken; therefore, it was better to have this authority, even though never used, than not to have it and take a chance on economic collapse.

Late Sunday afternoon the President's message was changed somewhat to meet the Anderson-Harriman objections. But something else was added that the Cabinet members still don't like though, being good soldiers they will not admti it publicly.

The original draft of the Truman message called for controls on only food, clothing, fuel and rent. However at the last minute, Truman added to the proposed control list a catch-all phrase "vital commodities in short supply that basically affect industrial production."

This takes in virtually every consumer commodity, and Anderson and Harriman have told intimates that it will make the Truman program that much tougher to sell to a hostile Congress.

The Anderson - Harriman prediction is now fully confirmed. Republican leaders are seething. Undaunted, the President still believes his policy was right. Federal price compulsion won't be necessary, he believes, because the psychological effect of having compulsory powers, plus voluntary cooperation, will be enough to do the trick.

He estimates that about 90 per cent of American industry will voluntarily agree to police prices in their own fields, while the other 10 per cent can be whipped into line by the threat of compulsory controls—that is, providing Congress gives Truman the power he wants.

Carry Gripes To Proper Place

To Editor:

First I would like to say that I am also employed by the University and therefore have no prejudice toward University employees or their rights and privileges.

Secondly, I have no doubt that there exists at Lenoir an administrative set-up which has much room for improvement. It is not my intention to argue this point, since I do not know a great deal about it.

However, I do know that the DTH does not run Lenoir Dining hall. Why did not this anonymous writer carry his gripe, if he considered it legitimate, to the proper place. When Friday rolls around, he doesn't go to the office of the DTH to get his pay check. Yet, something goes wrong and he doesn't like the way his boss-man is running the place, so he takes off at high port like a recruit headed for the Chaplain's office.

According to his statement, he was afraid of losing his job if his name were used in connection with the letter he wrote. With absolutely no idea as to who he might be, I would like to express my opinion that if he has reached the point where he is afraid to express his earnest belief, then he is wasting his time trying to work and further his education, and might as well lose his job anyway.

I happen to know of some cases where students in the employment of the University decided that they had legitimate gripes and carried these gripes to the proper persons. In not one of these cases was a student fired for expressing his opinion, or even denied a hearing; and in many cases adjustments were made in favor of the students.

As I said before, it is probable that faults exist in the management at Lenoir Hall—nothing is perfect. But this management is subordinate through a chain of authority right on up to the highest offices in the administration of the University. Does Mr. Anonymous think that the whole administration would be unreasonable? Personally, I wouldn't be here any longer than it would take me to pack if I thought such a condition existed; but I know that it doesn't. I haven't been here long, but I've already become quite attached to Chapel Hill and the people here; and it irks me to know that a student could be so thoughtless as to needlessly incite a controversy which can cause a great deal of misunderstanding and be injurious to our usually neighborly campus life.

Finally, I would like to give the editor of the DTH my permission to write my name at the bottom of this letter in three inch bold type if he so desires. This is not intended to be anonymous.

Writer Pans Lenoir 'Expert'

In Thursday's DTH an anonymous person made charges against Lenoir Dinning hall. I would like to ditto his charges and add a few to them. Since I likewise am an employee of this wonderful institution, it is necessary that I also withhold my name. This I do with due regret since there are about a dozen of the several dozen managers that should know what I think of them. One in particular.

Our unknown friend mentioned a so-called efficiency expert who moved in and became assistant to the assistant-manager or some such title. I think the students of UNC who are paying his wages should know what an "expert" he is. One of his "requests" to increase efficiency was for the bus boys to refrain from rattling dishes when picking them up. Now can you imagine carting away several thousand pieces of dishes without rattling them. Another "request" was for the Negro help in the kitchen to refrain from singing while working since the noise disturbed people eating. Anyone knows that the Men's Glee club could give a two hour concert in that kitchen and the people outside would never hear a murmur. And what kind of working conditions is that for the colored help to work under? Efficiency expert? Maybe—but I have my own opinions.

Tar Babies Down Blue Imps, 13-7; Booters Top Virginia

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

DAY OF DAYS

AS PREVIOUSLY REPORTED, Carolina plays Duke today. And some 56,000 rabid football fans will pack spacious Duke Stadium this afternoon to see or to be seen after paying the privilege price of from $3.50 up. Whether or not they will get their money's worth, remains to be seen.

For this Duke-Carolina meeting lacks much of the color and spectacle of most of the former games. The feeling of pre-Duke week has not charged the air about with its usual electricity, but instead, left almost the flat feeling of just another football game. The reason may be the fact that the Tar Heels are somewhat heavily favored to win, or it may be that college football has lost much of its "rah-rah" spirit that once was so obvious.

The former statement is relatively true, for the sports writers and bookies, who have their fingers on the pulse and pocketbook of the public, respectively, seem to think the Tar Heels will have little trouble in disposing of their arch rivals. Coach Wallace Wade, a great coach, but a reknowned user of tears and towels, puts his shoulder behind this wheel by repeatedly crying out that his undermanned and heavily-injured Blue Devils will do little more than show up for the game. Wade says the only thing his team has left is spirit, a commodity, though, that can win ball games, especially those of the Duke-Carolina nature.

That this is true can be shown by drifting one's mind back to 1935 when the Tar Heels, under the tutelage of a gentlemen named Snavely, were Rose Bowl bound etc. until a Wade-led group of diehard and determined Blue Devils derailed and demolished the Tar Heel victory train with a stinging 25-0 win. Let us hope that lightning, a dangerous and destructive element, does not choose to strike again in the same place today.

MIND OVER MATTER

IF THE BLUE DEVILS, the gods forbid, should pull an upset, it would be a triumph of mind over matter, for the Tar Heels obviously have their opponents outmatched in ability and depth, especially with the Dukesters sporting a long list of injured players, who will be, at game time, of doubtful playing condition. Duke will, therefore, be forced to count on a psychological edge for their main threat of the afternoon. They are on the rebound from two straight losses to Georgia Tech and Missouri, and a tie to theretofore impotent South Carolina and should be in the perfect frame of mind to give the Carolina entry the proverbial hard time. Their big hope is that the Tar Heels will be down, but they will probably be disappointed to find that the lads from Chapel Hill never had it so good in the spirit department. After two disheartening losses at the start of the season, the men of Coach Carl Snavely know what it is to hit rock-bottom, and will go a long way to prevent another downward trip.

As one fellow put it, the Tar Heels have had a lot of "zip-in-their-doo-dah" throughout their workouts this week, and will be hell-bent for victory this afternoon.

Another factor that can contribute to the Duke cause this afternoon is the weather. Duke is a great bad weather team, and if the Tar Heels run a foul of foul weather conditions, Carolina supporters might well hang on to their hats. Rain, sleet, or their cousin, snow, will certainly hamper the offensive activities of both teams, more so the Carolina lads since they seem to have more offense. This, logically, will keep the score down and force the patrons to sweat violently no matter how low the temperatur may fall.

Duke has profitted many a time by the weather, only this year neutralizing Georgia Tech to a mere seven point win on a day when the dew, heavy in nature, covered Atlanta like the Journal. Way back in 1938, if you care to venture that far, the Blue Devils called for snow and a frozen gridiron one day, and got it, along with a 7-0 win—good for an all-expense trip to the Rose Bowl—from the Pitt Panthers, who came south without their ice skates.

LADY LUCK

ALL OF WHICH brings one to the subject of the great Duke luck, which numerous times has pulled the Blue Devils out of some rough spots. Yet, a good team makes most of its luck and makes the most of its luck, so if the Tar Heels are what the boys in the pool rooms and taverns say they are, they have nothing to fear to use a familiar slant—but fear itself.

Which brings one to the conclusion that the Tar Heels should win today, bar, as usual, an act of God, and impressively too, no

Norcross Accounts For Winning Tally

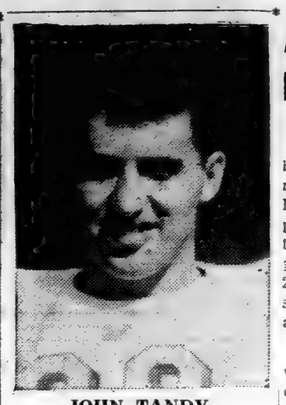
By Larry Fox

The Tar Babies from Chapel Hill upset the Duke Blue Imps yesterday at Kenan stadium by a score of 13-7 and the game was even closer than that.

The local jayvees looked as if they were going to score before Duke would have a chance to handle the ball as they took Duke end Mike Souchak's kick-off on their own ten and drove all the way down to the Blue Devil 15 where a fumbled pass gave Duke possession.

The Durhamites were forced to punt out and this time the Tar Babies marched to pay-dirt. Wingback Billy Britt ran to a first down on the three and fullback Bob Koontz made good on his third try through the middle for the first score. Gerry Allen's attempted conversion was blocked by Souchak.

There was no scoring in the second quarter, but the jayvees from the Tobacco city quickly went ahead as soon as the last half began. Two first downs marked the drive that started on the visitor's ten yard line and ended with quarterback George "Preacher" Skipworth passing eleven yards to halfback Herb Hipps for the six points Souchak made the extra point and Duke led, 7-6.



Carolina's final and winning touchdown came midway in the fourth stanza. Tar Baby tackles Stan Marczyk and Pete Rywak charged through the Duke forwards to smear Jack Jones 12 yards behind the line of scrimmage on a statue of liberty play that backfired. Carolina then intercepted an errant lateral by Skipworth on the Dukester's 30. Koontz picked up nine yards on two line bucks, Jack Brasington lost a yard, and then wingback Merl Norcross scooted 22 yards around end to put the Tar Heels back in the lead. Allen's boot was good and the score was 13-7, Carolina.

However, the tension didn't end there. When the final gun sounded, the big Littlemen had just taken over on downs on their own five yard line.

The unofficial statistics show just how evenly the two elevens were matched. Carolina gained a total of 258 yards while Duke racked up 252. The Tar Babies made 12 first downs as compared to 11 for the Imps.

The visitors took advantage of Carolina's severe case of galloping fumblitis by pouncing on all four of the Tar Baby bobbles. However, they weren't able to convert any breaks into scores.

Duke's forwards played well, if erratically, throughout the traditional tussle When they were hot they gave their backs all the protection necessary, but it wasn't often they could budge the light Blue line.

Snavely Recalls 1935 Duke Upset

the possibility of rain and a muddy turf Saturday. One Carolinian summed it up with "anything can happen on a wet field." It might be a comfort to this person to know that Duke stadium has been covered with a tarpaulin while it rained. Nevertheless, the field took a bad banging in the mud battle between Duke and South Carolina last week.

There is at least one person in Chapel Hill who isn't sure of a Carolina win. That would be Carl Snavely, Tar Heel coach. Three times Snavely has sent his teams against a Duke team coached by Wade and on two of these occasions the Tar Heels have won. However, that one Duke victory, over a favored Carolina team in 1935, was probably the saddest game in Carolina sports history. The Tar Heels were undefeated with a Rose Bowl bid assured if they could beat Duke. Carolina didn't get the bowl bid or the perfect season for Duke surprised the nation with a 25-0 triumph.

The history of that game is already well known to all loyal Tar Heels but it must always be repeated to any Carolina team, especially like the 1947 outfit which is favored on the eve of the Duke tilt.

Allenmen Win, 2-0 In Season's Finale

By Bill Kellam

Six seniors bowed out in a blaze of glory yesterday afternoon on Fetzer Field as Carolina's rejuvenated and injury-plagued booters punched over two last period goals to top Virginia's rough and tumble eleven, 2-0. The Allenmen notched their sixth triumph of the season against three defeats.

The Blue and White booters were almost as sharp as yesterday afternoon's penetratingly cold weather and they managed to keep the usually red-hot Wahoo attack pretty cool throughout most of the tilt.

A pair of Davids made the Carolina shots that finally dispatched the fiercely struggling Virginia Goliath early in the last quarter. One of them, Dave Boak, had a foot in both tallies. Dave Ferebee drew first blood for the Tar Heels early in the period when he took a pass from Boak and booted it into the net for his second goal of the year.

Boak tallied a few minutes later when he followed up his own corner kick and deftly slipped the ball into the corner of the goal for the final Carolina tally of the season.

The two forwards' goals broke up a hard fought contest that was apparently going to end in a scoreless deadlock. Although the Tar Heels spent most of the first three periods mixing it up with the Wahoos in front of and around the Virginia goal, capable last ditch defensive performances by the Cavalier goalie and fullbacks kept the Blue and White booters from turning the game into a rout.

Throughout the first three periods it was the stellar ball handling of Al Singer, who turned in a brilliant all-round performance despite an injured leg that was supposed to keep him on the bench, co-captain Gus Johnston, Dave Boak, and Bill Moore that kept the ball in Virginia territory and the Wahoos in hot water.

Singer, Johnston, and Boak all played their last games for Carolina unless they should return next year as graduate students. Johnston's head work and general hustle and Boak's sh ball handling along the sidelines were other bright spots in the Tar Heel victory.

The members of both teams were somewhat hampered by the slippery turf and several of the Tar Heels, notably Al Singer nine-yard average on his 25 rushes.

Main interest in the fray will center around the individual duel to be staged between Justice and his counterpart on the Blue Devils, Fred Folger. Folger is the lone obstacle between Justice and a second nomination as All-Southern tailback. How each performs today will certainly be a big factor in who gets the post in this year's balloting.

Ready for Freddy

Carolina's big and sturdy forward wall appear fully ready for Freddy when he comes their way this afternoon. Delighted with the success of his two-team system, Coach Snavely will again alternate his players with separate units for offense and defense.

Among the leaders in the attacking forces will be the two flankmen, Art Weiner and Bob Cox, both of whom rank high among conference ends in pass-receiving. The defensive line will include Bill Wardle, whose sparkling play placed him among those mentioned for the outstanding linemen of last week's games.

For Duke, five key men, including four regulars, are not expected to see much action, and Coach Wallace Wade has bemoaned the crippled appearance of his team for such an important clash. Fullback Paul Stephanz, wingback Buddy Mulligan, tackle Al DeRogatis, and centers Fletcher Wall and Carl Perkinson will be used sparingly.

The Blue Devil backfield will probably open with Bettis Herlong, Ben Williams, and John Montgomery accompanying Folger. But Duke has nowhere near the reserve depth that the Tar Heels boast, and will not be able to call on a whole new team as will Carolina.

Miller Races Dodds In Charlotte Event

Jimmy Miller, one of the top men on the Carolina harrier team, has been invited to participate in a special half-mile race tonight in Charlotte and will race against Gil Dodds.

Dodds, known as the flying parson, is holder of all of the 1947 indoor mile titles. He is in Charlotte for a special revival meeting sponsored by Billy Graham. The race is the only athletic event on the program and it will give southern track fans an opportunity to see Dodds perform.

Four Davidson runners will also be in the field to make up some fast company. Dodds, incidentally, will preach a sermon to the crowd when the race is over.

West Coast Tilt Tops Grid Slate

All the eyes of football fandom are focused on the Pacific Coast today for out in sunny California this afternoon Southern California's mighty Trojans and UCLA's upset-bent Bruins will fight it out to determine who'll be the Coast Loop's representative in the Rose Bowl on January 1.

To the winner of this afternoon's clash in the spacious Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum will probably fall the rather unpleasant honor of tangling with Michigan's high scoring Wolverines who wind up their season against impotent Ohio State.

Notre Dame entertains unhappy Tulane, SMU tangles with Baylor, and Penn State undefeated teams.

Alabama's high-flowing Crimson Tide continues its surge toward a Sugar Bowl date on New Year's day but unless it washes over LSU's unpredictable Tigers, its bowl chances will probably ebb away to nothing.

Georgia Tech's Rambling Wrecks, who were banged up by Gilmer and Company last week, will probably spend a quiet afternoon with Furman while Georgia's Bulldogs will probably chew up feeble Chattanooga. Tech's bowl chances hinge on their traditional meeting with Georgia next Saturday.

Virginia's bowl-minded Cavaliers tangle with rebounding N. C. State in Charlottesville. Air-minded Kansas will attempt to sew up the Big Six title and a possible bowl bid by greasing the skids for rapidly slipping Missouri.

Alpha Epsilon Delta Initiates Nine Men

Nine pre-medical students were initiated into Alpha Epsilon Delta, national pre-med fraternity, recently. They are Stuart Bondurant, Richard Borden, Richard Boren, William Butler, Bert Grossman, Eli Perry, William Rogers, Frank Stallings, Ted Young.

Officers of the fraternity are Benson McCutcheon, president; Bob Sing, vice-president; Conway Rose, secretary-treasurer. Dr. S. B. Knight is the faculty advisor.

AED, founded at the University of Alabama in 1926, lists as its purposes to encourage scholarship, to stimulate appreciation of the importance of pre-medical education, to promote cooperation and contacts between medical and pre-medical students, to bridge the gap between med and pre-med schools, and to bind together similarly interested students.

Nash To Conclude Lecture Series Monday Evening

Dr. Arnold Nash on Monday evening at 7 o'clock will bring to a conclusion the course of lectures that he has given this term on the place of religion in the American university.

As his last lecture Dr. Nash is to summarize the functions of the new Department of Religion which he heads here on campus, describing its relations in Chapel Hill with the religious activities of students and faculty. In previous weekly speeches he has discussed higher spiritual education on the European as well as the North American scene.

Before Dr. Nash came to the University in September of this year, his career as an educationalist began in England. He is a graduate of the University of Liverpool, Oxford, and the London School of Economics. After coming to the United States in 1939, he wrote "The University and the Modern World" which was first published by Macmillan a few years ago and has since been reprinted in England and translated into German and Portuguese.

matter what the weather or Duke may hold in store for them. Carolina has not won a game in Duke Stadium since 1937, when they turned the trick by a 14-6 score, and Snavely has never beaten Wade in Durham, as Wade has never beaten Snavely in Chapel Hill, which gives the local lads a little more to reach for in the way of accomplishment.

The die is cast, and it looks to be Carolina's day. Yet as long as football is played by humans, and not robots, there is room and margin for error, which is the reason that the majority of grid games, though theoretical lead pipe cinches on paper, are played in the first place. Players, coaches, teams, and years come and go, but one fact remains self evident:

'Tis the score on the scoreboard they pay off on, brother.

icle at inflated prices they are making a personal contribution to the high price situation.

She suggested that experience of similar groups elsewhere shows a co-op system could work here. The existence of the Orange county credit union and of the Victory Village co-op was pointed out in support of this thesis.

The final speaker was Martin Knowlton, president of the Wallace Democrats organization here. He attacked the "superficial analysts, paid propagandists, and 'trigger men' who are being paid to put the blame for high prices on the farmer." Promising to tell what high prices have done to labor, he pointed out that these same 'trigger men' blamed labor for the economic situation last year and that the result was the Taft-Hartley bill.

Citing department of agriculture figures, he pointed out that the farmers' "real" income is down 15 points from last year's. He then cited "Time" figures in an attempt to show the audience whose income was up. According to him, "Time" referred to the 'whopping profits' of the meat producers, and the New York "Sun" showed that business was making so much money that they were endeavoring to hide them behind stock splits.

Argentina is now taking an active part in promoting good will among the 21 American republics, as was evident in the recent Act of Rio de Janeiro. She is participating actively in all questions pertaining to western hemisphere solidarity. Furthermore, Argentina has several proposals before the United Nations General assembly whereby Peron's delegates, headed by Dr. Jose Arce, are proposing abolition of the Veto in favor of a 9 nation majority vote and also a proposal to amend the Italian peace treaty.

The question of dealing with Argentina can be answered best by and through the United Nations. It is this organ through which we can acquaint ourselves with problems of our sister republic and she with ours. Here we meet on common grounds; airing views of both sides. Finally, through cooperative endeavor we are certain to reach full accord on all problems confronting both nations.

He: It's the best offer I've had today—but I'd rather have a Pepsi.

He: Darling, is there nothing I can do to make you care?
She: D. D. T.
He: D. D. T.?
She: Yeah—drop dead twice!

She: Right now I'm interested in something tall, dark and handsome.
He: Gosh! Me?
She: No, silly—Pepsi-Cola!

Yep, we pay three bucks apiece for any of these we print. You never had it so good.

Future Vehicle Inspectors Go to Class Monday Morning

Classes are beginning at 8 o'clock Monday morning at the highway barracks on Raleigh road for 40 applicants who will spend three intensive training weeks to become North Carolina's first motor vehicle inspectors.

The Institute of Government is sponsoring the school which will graduate, according to an announcement by its director, Dr. David G. Monroe, approximately 200 motor vehicle inspectors by the first few months in 1948. Dr. Monroe said that over 3,500 men have made entrance application for the training.

27 Courses

In accordance with Article 3A of the state's motor vehicle laws passed by the 1947 General Assembly, all vehicles are required to pass a bumper-to-bumper inspection test in 1948 to insure greater safety on the highways. Twenty-seven different courses, everything from "headlight inspection" to "traffic laws and rules of the road" will be offered. There is even a course in "first aid" which the men will be required to take.

Sundays are included in the school week, and schedule time lasts from 8 until 5 o'clock each afternoon. There'll be night classes, too, said Dr. Monroe, calling the program "a very intensive one which is in every way a screening process, and only those men who pass the rigid tests will qualify."

Instructors Arrive

Representatives of the mechanical inspection division of the State Department of Motor Vehicles will act as instructors. Some of them, who began arriving in Chapel Hill this week, are: Mrs. Cora Rice, L. V. Blalock, William L. Bishop, Arthur T. Moore, W. E. Koonce and George I. Dale.

Staff members of the Institute of Government who will serve as instructors are Dr. Monroe, Albert Coates, and Terry Sanford. Members of the state highway patrol will serve in an advisory capacity.

W. H. Squyers and R. Logan are technical engineers from the Weaver Equipment company who will be in charge of the inspection equipment used during the school.

Tar Heel Victory Complete Team Triumph; Justice and Cox Take Care Of All Scoring

By Bob Goldwater

DUKE STADIUM, DURHAM, NOV. 22—Dark skies overhead could not keep today from being a bright day for North Carolina. It was bright because the Tar Heel grid machine, steaming full speed ahead on both its ground and aerial cylinders and with Charlie Justice choo-chooing at his very best, passed and ploughed the way through an outclassed Duke eleven to register Carolina's second triumph in the ancient series and continue down the victory trail with its sixth straight success—this one by a 21-0 count.

Playing before the largest crowd—some 56,000 fans—ever to witness a grid contest in that part of the South between New Orleans and Baltimore, the Tar Heels displayed an all-around team performance to gain the well-deserved win. The linemen blocked well on defense and climbed all over the Duke backs on defense, turning the Blue Devils back with a net rushing mark of minus 12. And the Tar Heels assigned to advance the ball did just that to perfection—they ran hard and passed accurately to compile a total net gain of 317 yards. Eeverything went fine, to say the least.

But despite the outstanding play of the whole Blue and White aggregation, Justice easily stood out among the offensive leaders. He ran for the first touchdown, whipped a short pass to Bob Cox for the second, and took an aerial from Walt Pupa and scooted across for the third. Cox was off-form in his conversion attempts, missing all three, but he more than made up for these lapses with some classy pass-catching and a field goal from the 22-yard line.

The much-heralded duel between Justice and Duke's Freddy Folger never came off. The Blue Devil tailback tried hard, but he didn't have the line or backfield support that Justice did. And Charlie definitely made the most of his help to virtually clinch the All-Southern tailback position both were seeking.

The triumph—the sixth in a row for the Tar Heels—gave them their longest winning streak since the seven-game streak of 1935. It was also the first time that Carolina had won by as much as three touchdowns since trouncing Duke by 48-7 in 1929. The Tar Heels now lead in the long rivalry, 16-15, with three games ending all even.

For the Blue Devils, the defeat in their 1947 finale cost them the Southern conference championship and gave them a season's record of four wins, three setbacks, and a pair of ties. William and Mary now appears as a shoo-in for the loop title, with only Richmond standing in the way. The Tar Heels, last year's champions, have moved into the number two spot behind the Indians.

Carolina performed ignobly in only one respect—that being in the yardage lost through penalties. Duke, in fact, gained most of its yardage this way—150 yards in all. Folger also held a slight edge over Justice in the punting department.

It took the Tar Heels slightly more than a quarter and a half to move into the lead and the issue was never in doubt thereafter. Throughout the first period, the game was mainly a punting duel, with the lone threat coming when two Pupa passes and the same number of Justice aerials moving the ball down to the Duke 25. But the scoring opportunity fizzled—penalties and fumbles finally re-

Successful Gladiators Revel In Trip Back to Chapel Hill

By Morty Schaap

It was a jubilant and happy group of Tar Heels that boarded the two busses that were to take them back to Chapel Hill and the refreshing hot showers.

The backs were praising the play of the linemen and the linemen were praising the all-around play of the backs. It was back pummeling at its height. It also exemplified the spirit of the squad. No man could be singled out for his individual play; it was a team win.

The day, as dreary as it was, could only give Duke the solace of having seen their Blue Devil mascots sending Rameses into quick retreat before the game; however, the old ram retaliated quickly when he realized it was his job to butt at the Dukesters. Duke met a better ball club, no question about it, but the lads in the white shirts never quit, they battled all the way and their play drew much plaudit from the Carolina team.

Coach Snavely said that it was not the best ball game that his club had played, but it was a good game. He said that Don Hartig played a fine game, but added that he always plays well.

Coach Wallace Wade met the Tar Heel mentor in the

Students who almost swore off when they saw an automobile parked between the pillars of Memorial hall needn't worry—it was really there.

The car, a station-wagon type of light truck, was being driven through campus on Cameron avenue toward the Carolina Inn by Andrew Moore Keenan, a student here, who was allegedly going at a "considerable" rate of speed.

The vehicle first struck a parked Buick owned by student Pete Gascons, hurtled over the grass by Old West dormitory, striking several trees and a lamppost, careened back across the street and gracefully hopped up the Memorial hall steps to make a three-point landing between the building's front pillars.

Chapel Hill Choral Club Will Present Haydn's Oratorio In Hill Hall Today; Paul Young Will Direct Performance

By Sally Woodhull

The autumn and winter sections of Joseph Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons," will be presented this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall by the Chapel Hill Choral club, under the direction of Paul Young, associate professor of music.

Soloists will be Andrew Griffith, bass, singing the role of Simon, a farmer; Barbara Edwards, soprano, as Simon's daughter; and Carl Perry, tenor, as Lucas, a young countryman. Jeanne Fornoff and John O'Steen, pianists, and John Ellis, organist, will be accompanists.

The Seasons" is on a plane much less ethereal than its better-known predecessor, The Creation." The music is [illegible] even frivolous at times, although it was written during the composer's last years, The oratorio is musically interesting as one of the earliest secular oratories.

The text was arranged for Haydn from the writing of James Thompson, an English poet of the 18th century associated with Goldsmith and Gray in the revolt against classicism.

The Chapel Hill Choral club has been performing choral works twice yearly for nearly 20 years. Originally an organization strictly for the community, it has been expanded to take care of students who enjoy the performance of oratorio, and now numbers nearly 100 voices.

The club's spring concert has become a traditional part of commencement week. Last year their performances were Bach's "Christmas Oratorio" and Faure's "Requiem."

Franklin Street's Hamelin Town Piper of Chapel Hill Wasn't 'Pied', But His Followers Appeared 'Pie-Eyed'

By Donald MacDonald

Chapel Hill, like Hamelin Town, has a piper. He wasn't exactly "pied" when he made his first appearance Friday night along Franklin street, but some of his followers were slightly "pie-eyed."

And who could blame the revelers? Here were the bonnie tunes of bonnie Scotland played on a bonnie bagpipe by a sandy-haired, blue-eyed Canadian named Cal Blyth. The piper's pie-eyed followers were only "deidheill air fion", which in Gaelic means "fond of spirits." And so they followed the piper, like the rats of Hamelin Town, across campus from Mangum dormitory to Harry's—then to the University cafe, the Campus cafe, Jeff's and the Marathon.

Blyth, a graduate student from Guelph, a little town in Ontario, is the pride and joy of Mangum dormitory. At first he was just a wee bit leary of playing the pipes after the pep rally, but his pals and the crowd that collected outside Mangum decided they wanted more. And so, for a' that the breath he could muster (try playing the pipes, if you don't believe me), Cal was off to Harry's—with thirty or more revelers behind him. Across campus he played old-time Scottish marches he learned in a kiltie band back home, and some he learned from his grandparents who came over from Scotland years ago.

Inside Harry's Cal paused long enough for three or four choruses of the Carolina fight song, and a swirling piper's version of "Hark, the Sound."

The bagpipe is one he used in the band at home, and its tartan is that of the MacDonalds of Clanranald. Cal said that the Blyth family is not sept of any clan, since his people were Lowlanders who lived near Glasgow. A graduate of Queens university, Cal is doing graduate study here in mathematical statistics.

Some of the pie-eyed "rats" said the bagpipes were definitely a victory symbol, a good omen, because Duke—hoot, mon—didna have a chance!

Help from the People Themselves

Several weeks ago Drew Pearson, Washington columnist, compared the manner in which the Russians sent foodstuffs to France some time ago with the United States method. His comparison resulted in the Friendship Train, which is now collecting food from the people of this country.

He found that Russia sent her food to French ports; and in advance, she launched a tremendous propaganda campaign relating how the Russians were skimping in order to furnish foodstuffs for the destitute Frenchmen. They had brass bands on the decks to welcome the ships of food which the Russians avowed came directly from the Russian people. In reality, the food was sent directly from the Russian government and the Russian people knew little about it. It was a small quantity in comparison with the amount the U. S. gave around the same time.

Pearson believes that this Friendship Train of foodstuffs, coming from the housewives and families of the nation, will be much more welcome than a comparable amount from our government.

A Friendship Train has been launched on campus. Naturally we who are not operating a household and are unacquainted with the purchasing of household commodities do not know how to buy food. For these reasons the local committee members are asking that we give our money to be used for purchasing food. Although the national campaign closed in many communities Friday, Pearson's office has advised the local group that they can extend their deadline until Wednesday because of a delayed start.

There are contribution boxes in the local movies, Lenoir hall, the Y, and business establishments. Money you give will be used to purchase foodstuffs for the destitute peoples of Europe. There may not be a brass band when the food you give arrives in Europe, but we can assure the receivers that it did come from the American people and not our government.

About Us

It Happened, They Say, In Chapel Hill

(The DTH reprints this news story from The Harvard Crimson, in view of its local interest.)

"Sixteen Negroes and whites put their lives in jeopardy this summer to take a trip through the Southland testing the effectiveness of the Supreme Court's ban on Jim Crow interstate travel. Their story of arrests and constant fear of the lynch mob will be told to the College tonight . . . (Nov. 12).

"Splitting up into racially-mixed pairs or groups of four, the travelers would board busses and seat themselves well toward the front of the car. The driver's attempt to put the Negroes in the Jim Crow rear seats was always met with a polite, 'I'd rather sit here.'

"Sometimes it worked, and sometimes it didn't. . . .

"Released on bail after an arrest in the University town of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, several of the men fled to the home of the Presbyterian minister with two carloads of angry cab drivers behind them.

"The mob threatened to burn the minister's home if he did not turn the Jim Crow violators over to them, and the Negroes escaped lynching only through the strong action of the minister, whose family was ultimately forced to leave the town for several weeks."

Sunday Counselor

Your Aim in Life

By Rev. Herbert Spaugh, D.D.

What is your aim in life? Some people's lives seem to be aimless; they may even admit it. Others have very definite aims. Some set their goals in life early, some later, some never set them at all.

There are the greatest variety of goals and aims in life: a good time, pleasure, power, social prestige, wealth, influence, service to God and to others.

It is the latter which brings inward tranquility, peace, happiness and satisfaction.

Previous discussion of this has brought to mind the account of Matthew's call to the apostleship by Jesus Christ. The account is found in the first three Gospels: "And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom. And he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him."

What a change came into this man's life. The three stories which tell of his call relate that he was sitting at the "seat of customs," the place of gathering money. He was a tax collector. The more taxes he collected, the more money he gathered for himself. Evidently money was his first aim. Then Jesus called him. Luke says, "He left all, rose up, and followed him." The Bible never denounces wealth as such, but it does say, "The love of money is the root of all evil."

Jesus Christ called another man who loved money, "the rich young ruler." The record says that Jesus saw him and loved him. He called him to follow him, but the young man couldn't make up his mind to place Jesus Christ first in his life.

Following Jesus Christ does not imply poverty.

When a man or woman truly meets Christ, hears His call to follow Him, it gives new aim and meaning to his life. He no longer desires to seek wealth as such to produce peace and power. But he secures and uses it as a steward of God. His whole attitude in life is changed.

What is your aim in life? Where is the emphasis in your life? What are you seeking first? Your future happiness depends upon it.

Love Ethics Topic Planned for Talks

A discussion based on Mrs. Arnold Nash's seminar, "Ethics of Love and Marriage," will be heard at Wesley foundation tonight following the weekly supper at 5:45 o'clock in the basement of the University Methodist church.

Student members Effie Westerveld, Bill Parker, Joe Ficarro, and Sam Langell well lead the discussion.

More Fascism for Italy?

By John Burrowes Sevier

The current political situation in Italy is complicated by the resurgence of fascism in Common Man Party" and the Movimento Sociale Italiano, and aided and abetted by some "rightists" in de Gasperi's Christian Democratic Party, possibly with the tacit approval of the Vatican. Both the Christian Democrats and the Socialists are split into "right," "moderate," and "liberal" factions.

The Communists are always ready with a positive program for Italian recovery, and they are militant leaders of the progressive movement for peace, security, and democracy. And, of course, there is the attitude of the United States, of continuing to wage its "cold war" against the Soviet Union, through the political pressure engendered by the possibility of the Marshall Plan, and indirectly, through attacks on the recovery programs of Italian communists and other progressives.

The political situation in Italy boils down to these simple questions: will the Italian people, coerced by vague promises of assistance from America plus possible political pressure from "rightists" at home and political opportunists abroad, permit the emergence of a fascist strong man with the resultant preservation of the "status quo"? or will they, correctly diagnosing the economic situation, elect a progressive government committed to a program with an immediate objective of combating inflation, and with the ultimate aim of peace, security, and democracy? This is the issue.

But below this political superstructure is the obvious fact that, despite the government's "planned deflation" program, and despite pitifully small outside economic assistance, the Italian masses are starving. One need only note the increasing number of strikes, both of industrial and of agricultural workers, plus eye-witness accounts of conditions such as appeared in a recent issue of New Republic, to be aware that this is true.

The black market is still unchecked. An equitable and just tax program has not as yet been established, even though the de Gasperi government has partially conceded to the people by removing some of the taxation immunities held by the wealthy.

There is still a threat of mass unemployment this winter and spring, and the economic planning of the de Gasperi government is not broad enough to insure a permanent rise in the living standard of the mass of Italian workers and farmers appreciably.

The thing that most observers agree is needed for Italy is large scale assistance for Italy from abroad, without political strings and with administration by the United Nations, coupled with an over-all economic plan, democratically supported and administered, to help put Italy on her feet economically.

Field Open for Y Work

By Sally Woodhull

For girls who are looking forward to graduation soon, the visit to the campus of Miss Olive Walser of the personnel bureau of the National Board of the YWCA should have especial significance. Other girls, too, will find the material which Miss Walser left with Miss Katherine Cook, vocational director, of great help in planning courses in preparation for a career in the YWCA or in other types of social work.

The YWCA has interesting job opportunities open in many sections of the country, Miss Walser said, and the fields in Y work are varied. Although the main hiring period is in the summer, for periods to coincide with a nine-months school year, there are some vacancies now and there may be more later in the year.

Miss Walser listed among personal qualifications necessary in a good Y worker the following: a positive and growing faith in God; leadership ability; belief in social progress and change; and good health—physical and mental.

Educational qualifications include graduation from an accredited college with study in social sciences, religion, education, and the arts. Graduate professional education is desirable, and a YWCA orientation course is essential. Experience in teaching, recreation, and community organization is valuable.

Miss Walser pointed out that since there are job opportunities in YWCA's of many types of communities, including college campuses, and in the national and world movements, professional advancement may come in several ways, and may prove extremely interesting.

Girls with an interest in social work should see Miss Cook in her office in South building for more information.

Hits Telephone Service

Sir:

I think it is high time that some action be taken to improve telephone service in Chapel Hill. Perhaps I should be registering my complaint directly to the Southern Bell Telephone Company, but somehow I feel that only public indignation will produce any concrete results in the matter. I think that if resentment were strong enough, action would be taken.

During the war telephone service was necessarily reduced in efficiency because of personnel and material shortages, but the problem today seems to be based primarily on a reluctance of telephone officials to supply the number of switchboard operators needed to meet the increased demand. Certainly personnel must be available now. Could it be that Southern Bell is guided by penny-pinching motives?

Population and student enrollment in Chapel Hill have nearly doubled in the last several years, but the telephone company has seemingly made little effort to keep pace with it. Between the hours of seven and ten every evening it is virtually impossible to place a long distance call without the patience of love and a considerable sacrifice of valuable time. Frequently it is even impossible to place a local call during the "busy" hours. This delay not only constitutes an inconvenience but could be a very serious matter in cases of emergency where a quick contact is needed for medical or other services. It is often impossible to contact one of the switchboard operators for fifteen or twenty minutes, because they are trying to handle a volume of calls that would keep twice their number busy. The blame, it seems to me, if it lies anywhere, lies with the Southern Bell Telephone Co. officials who, for some reason, are so reluctant to increase switchboard personnel and equipment in Chapel Hill. Perhaps there is a logical explanation for such inefficiency. If there is, a great many of us would like to hear it.

Varied Parties Held By Local Sororities

By Jane Mears

The local chapter of Pi Beta Phi entertained the Duke Pi Phi's Thursday evening at a buffet supper, and along this same line, the Alpha Gam pledges played hostess to the pledges of the four other sororities at an informal tea held last Wednesday afternoon. A football theme was carried out, with miniature goal posts and football field as decorations. Songs, readings and a football skit formed the entertainment. Cocoa and cookies were served as refreshments.

Last Tuesday night the Tri Delts entertained the Dekes and the Zetes at a weiner roast. Because of rain and cold weather the party was given at "Dutch" Jones' private cabin where crowded conditions only added to the gaity. There was always room for one more and high spirits outshone the foul weather.. The Betas also came through and gave a delicious dinner party for the Pi Phi pledges last week.

HURRAH!

Mission: Beat Dook—is successfully accomplished.

The Tar Heels did it in fine championship style, too, tromping the Blue Devils physically, statistically, financially, psychologically, and to boot, by 21 points on the scoreboard. It was unbelievably painless.

Carolina won the toss and started from there. They took some twenty-odd minutes to push across a score, but from the kickoff to the final gun, they were in complete control. The Tar Heel line played like it says in the press notices and left little to be desired. The backs too, turned in delightful performances, both on offense and defense, and deserve their share of the victory gravy.

A big bouquet, though, goes to the Silver Fox, himself. His adversary for the day, Wallace Wade, threw a seven man line, overshifted to the strong side, against the Tar Heels, leaving only the weak side backer in the immediate secondary. The Tar Heels ran this poor fellow crazy, throwing up the middle all afternoon almost at will. It was obvious that the victors were prepared for anything, and showed it. The Tar Heels' theme for the day was—seven man line, suits us fine—and it did.

The weather wasn't good, but it wasn't too bad. The ball and field were comparatively dry and running and passing attacks did not suffer too heavily from the elements. Yet, it did rain a little, which allows one to sum the day up as—good weather for ducks, but not Dukes.

Duke obviously suffered more from injuries than anything else. Though had all hands been on hand, the Blue Devils still wouldn't have been a match for the Tar Heels, it is remarkable what a difference a few players can make sometime.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN

Carolina might have won by a larger score had not the officials decided against giving either team a chance. They called 150 yards of penalties against the winners, some easily justified, some questionably, and some that were downright insults. They were equally hard on the Blue Devils at several points in the ball game. Duke gained three times as many yards on Carolina penalties as they did running and passing.

Big Art Weiner set up the first Tar Heel score midway in the second period after the Tar Heels had dilly-dallied up and down th field in the first quarter. The Newark lad swept his own right flank on his favorite end around play, loping down the sidelines for 27 yards to the Duke 10, where a Blue Devils halfback, who had been hanging on for about ten yards by the seat of his (Weiner's) pants, pulled the big end to the turf.

Charlie Justice took over the running reins at this time, whipping wide to the left all alone on a Sally Rand play for five to the 5, and sweeping back to the other side on the next play to squirm into the end zone right at the flag for the winning six points. Cox amazed everyone by missing the extra point.

The Tar Heels came right back after another score, but didn't quite get one, until Jim Camp who ran the reverse all day as if it were tailor-made for him, shook loose on one such play, bumping into Pupa as he took the ball, but moving successfully on, through a rather gaping hole, down the sidelines to inside the Duke 10, from which line he carried one tackler, and bulled over another for many yards before they could make him holler uncle. Camp plopped part of himself, and most important, the ball into the end zone, but the referee didn't see it that way and put the thing down somewhere between the 1 and the 2. Pupa, attempting to plunge on the next play, fell down short, with Justice also failing to gain the necessary yardage on the following play.

At this point the Choo Choo, deciding that things had gone far enough, passed to Cox, who made the proverbial shoe-string catch, on the succeeding play for the Tar Heels' second score.

Duke, which showed the majority of their offensive power in the last 30 seconds of each half, here penetrated to the Carolina 8, on a fantastic pass that several of each team kept tipping up the field until Mulligan pulled the ball down being pulled down in turn by Sparger from behind as the half ended.

MARCHING ALONG TOGETHER

The Tar Heels marched to their third score at the start of the third period, Pupa passing to Justice, Justice passing to Cox; then Camp moving 23 yards on the reverse behind some lovely blocking to the Duke 10. Here the big machine was brought to a halt, but on fourth down, with the 14-point bettors holding their breath, Pupa passed into the flat to Justice, who dodged, eluded, and sidestepped three would-be-tacklers to score standing up and all alone. Cox failed to convert for the third time.

But the extra-point specialist was yet to show the folks just how it was done, and he finally did it the hard way. It all started when Folger kicked to the Tar Heel 41, the Carolina boys deciding 'twas time to start marching again. Running from short punt, Justice slashed gaily up the middle to the Duke 26, and a couple of plays later, Weiner went twelve more yards to the Duke 12. Here the bogdown came again and by the time Cox could get into the game, the ball rested back on the 15. Cox kicked though, from a lousy angle, but showed everyone he'd only been kidding before, by splitting the posts for the last three points.

From here on out the Tar Heels threatened again and then again, but penalties, staunch Dukesters, and maybe a little lack of punch, kept the score from going any higher.

Tandy got the ball, though it later went to Joe Wright. Wade and Snavely shook hands at the middle of the field for the sake of tradition and a lone photographer, and then everyone went home.

'Twas the end of a perfect day.

Tide Accepts Bid To Sugar Bowl Tilt

By United Press

Alabama became the first grid power to take a major bowl bid when they accepted an invitation from the Mid-Winter Sports Carnival to participate in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, January 1.

The bid came after the Red Tide galloped all over the Tigers from LSU, 41-12, to sew up the Southeastern conference championship.

Michigan and Southern California all but locked up the occupancy of the Rose Bowl when they bowled over their last opposition in the way of their conference championships. The mighty Wolverines completed an undefeated season by downing the Buckeyes of Ohio State, 21-0, while on the West Coast the Trojans of Southern California outlasted a game and scrappy UCLA team, 6-0. All that remains to make it official is the telegrams nominating the two teams.

Elsewhere on the football scene Penn State finished an unblemished season when they got by the toothless Panthers of Pittsburgh, 29-0. Kansas also finished undefeated by nosing out Missouri, 20-14. Notre Dame showed its scoring power by romping over helpless Tulane, 56-6. Maryland bounced back from its loss to Carolina last week and beat Vanderbilt, 20-6. The big upset of the day was turned in by Northwestern who ran over a highly regarded Illinois team, 28-13. State spilled Virginia, 7-2, to provide a Southern shocker.

Team Play Features Carolina Offensive

sulting in the home forces gaining possession on their own 30.

That's the closest either team came until after the second stanza had gotten under way. After an exchange of punts on which Carolina benefited to the tune of 23 yards, the Tar Heels took over on their own 45. Pupa, who accounted for 97 yards during the afternoon, rammed right through the middle of the line for 15 yards and a first down on the Duke 30. Carolina appeared on the way.

After Walt bucked through for one more, he faded back and heaved a long aerial—and the threat ended when it came down. Waiting for it on the Duke 16 was Tom Hughes and the Blue Devils took over.

But not for long. After Folger ran for two plays, he punted downfield and Carolina roared back for its first score. Bill Flamisch, who starred on defense in the Carolina backfield, showed his offensive skill with a seven-yard gain off right tackle. Pupa collected two and big Art Weiner swept around on an end-around to move 27 yards to the Duke 10. Justice turned left end for five and on the next down swept wide to the right, crossing the goal line after being hit on the two. The time was 8:50 of the second quarter and the score was 6-0, Carolina.

Six minutes later, Carolina was again knocking at the gates and once again made good. Duke held the ball for the three downs after the kickoff and then Carolina took over on its own 42. A 10-yard gain by Pupa was called back by an offsides penalty, but Pupa unleashed a long pass to Weiner, who took it over his shoulder on the Duke 36 and kept going down to the 17. Justice lost six and passed incomplete to Cox. On a reverse, Jim Camp moved the ball down to the one, but two line plays lost three yards. And then Justice flipped a pass right over the line and Cox took it as he stepped into the end zone. Carolina 12, Duke 0, with 45 seconds left in the first half.

Never let it be said that Duke didn't give it the old college try in those 45 seconds. George Clark took the kickoff on the five and hustled it back to the 33. Clark proceeded to pick up 12 more yards off right tackle, getting into the open but being hauled down by George Sparger on the Duke 45. Here Dick Hodges took over, passing to Buddy Mulligan for five and then heaving a long aerial that Flamisch and Bill Maceyko tipped into the air, Mulligan making a beautiful catch on the Carolina 10. But Sparker again saved the day—and the shutout—by tackling the Duke wingback on the eight as the half ended.

After 10 plays of the second half, six more points were added to the Tar Heel score. Folger punted on second down following the kickoff and Carolina began to move from its own 45. Pupa passed to Justice for 18, Justice tossed to Cox for nine, Camp scampered 23, and Carolina was way down on the Duke 10. Justice picked up four yards on two plays and Pupa passed to Charlie in the flat, Justice weaving the rest of the way into paydirt. Five seconds under four minutes gone in the third period and Carolina was ahead by 18-0.

It was here that Duke had one more chance to score, its only time in possession in Carolina territory. Camp fumbled on a reverse handoff and Bill Davis of the Wilson-Davis football clan recovered on the Carolina 25. But three plays got Duke absolutely nowhere and Maceyko intercepted on his own five to nip any scoring ideas.

After Justice punted out of danger, Hodges again took to the air. But on second down, Ken Powell hit the tailback as he cocked his arm for the throw and Bill Pritchard fell on the bounding pigskin on the Duke 16. But four plays were good for only seven yards and the Blue Devils took over.

The National Football League attracted 1,732,135 fans to 55 games in the 1946 season.

of the game and said that Carolina has a fine team and couldn't see how anyone beat them.

It was a true Duke-Carolina game and as the 56,500 fans wended their way into the stadium before kickoff time, many voices could be heard making the comparison between the day today and one some 12 years back, 1935 to be exact, then the high-flying Tar Heels were handed and ignominious defeat by a battered Duke team. The weather and the situation were the same again, but the outcome was different. It was the worst beating that Wallace Wade has ever had at Duke and the 21-point loss that Missouri gave him two weeks ago, at least saw Duke score.

Both University bands performed well at half time and their execution of designs on the wet turf was almost remarkable. It was a great show and the huge crowd gave the bands a well deserved hand.

Both schools cheerleaders joined together to guide the Duke cheering section through their new fight song which was written especially for the game. Perry Como introduced it on his Friady night radio show.

It was a rough game on Carolina's football jerseys, Jusetice all but lost his completely in the first half and Pupa had several good size holes in his blue shirt in the second half.

The Tar Heel bus almost left Coach Snavely in Durham, but some fast footwork by the Silver Fox enabled him to catch the vehicle be-

Football, Table Tennis Finals Set For Monday

Campus intramural champions in two sports will be crowned tomorrow afternoon when the finals in football and table tennis are held.

Chi Psi and the Grads will be the opposing clubs in the grid title fight. Both teams are undefeated thus far this season and an extremely close contest is expected.

In the table tennis tournament, the Phi Delts and Everett will battle for top honors. Both breezed through their schedules with ease, and this too should be quite a contest.

The Carolina badminton team, sponsored by the mural department, opposes a Durham club in Durham tomorrow.

Tomorrow's volleyball schedule:

4:00—Court 1: Phi Gam 3 vs Beta 1; court 3: Phi Delt 3 vs Sig Nu 2.

5:00—Court 1: Phi Gam 1 vs Sig Nu 1; court 3: Phi Delt 2 vs Phi Gam 2.

University String Quartet to Give Recital Tomorrow Night

Included on their program will be "Quartet in D Major," K. 499, by Mozart; "Quartet in A Major," Cpus 41, No. 3, by Schumann; and "Quartet in G Minor," Opus 10, by Debussy.

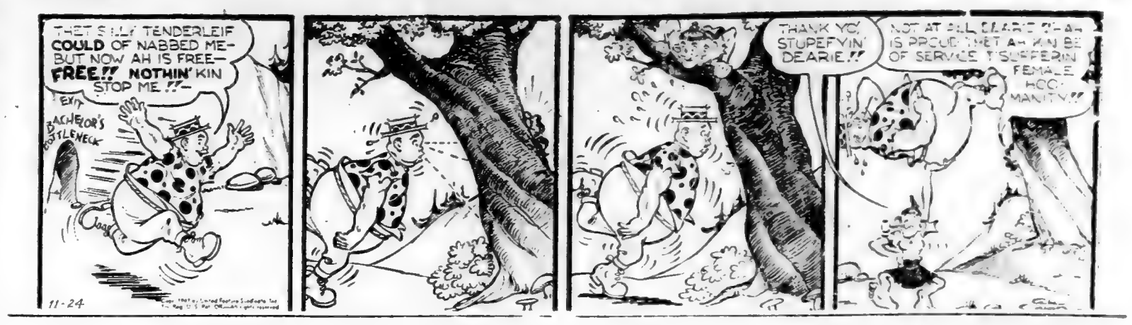
Mr. and Mrs. Alden, who frequently appear together as a two-violin team, were students at Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio, and before the war taught at Meredith college, Raleigh. Mr. Alden made several foreign appearances during his army service. Both are now teaching and doing graduate work.

Miss Porter, a graduate of Woman's college, Greensboro, is teaching cello and taking graduate work. Gates studied at Peabody conservatory, Baltimore, and is in his third year as graduate student and instructor here.

Coeds to Hold Program in GM

Coeds will meet at a Y W C A-sponsored Get-Together tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial for an informal program on Thanksgiving.

Though sponsored by the Y, these meetings, held on the fourth Monday of each month, are designed to give all coeds an opportunity to meet together and become better acquainted.



Each girl has been asked to bring some article of food to Monday's meeting to supply Thanksgiving baskets for needy families.

Various ideas on Thanksgiving will be presented during the program by members of the community and the student body. A professor, a child, a workman, a housewife, a maid, a foreign student, a high school boy, and a mother will each present his idea of the holiday's meaning.

Students participating in the program include Faith Adams, Virginia Nash, Edna Dooley, Lil Hotard, and Ann Wells. Sally Lee, Y membership chairman, is in charge of the meeting, and Ferne Hughes of music.

All Y committees will dispense with their weekly meetings in order to attend tnis general affair.

NCEA Head Charged Of Misappropriation In Teachers' Payrolls

Lenoir, November 24 (UP) —R. L. Fritz, Jr., of Hudson, president of the North Carolina Education Association, was indicted this afternoon by a grand jury at Lenoir on charges of false pretence in connection with juggling state money and padding teachers' payrolls in the Hudson schools.

The trial date has not been set, but Fritz may be brought to trial before a jury at the end of this term at court. Fritz was indicted after the grand jury had examined only four witnesses. His father, President R. L. Fritz, Sr., of Lenoir-Rhyne college, also testified before the Caldwell county grand jury.

The indictment is the latest development in the stormy case of the Hudson principal. Fritz was elected president of the teachers' organization last year after waging a losing fight for the so-called South Piedmont plan of teacher pay raises.

Then a special audit revealed his unusual bookkeeping methods, and the State Board of Education revoked his teaching license. The county school board fired him as principal of the Hudson school, but he refused to give up his job as president of the North Carolina Education Association.

Meanwhile, leaders of the North Carolina Education Association have decided to wait until the trial is over before taking any action to get a new president. Vice-President Amos C. Dawson of Southern Pines has been declared acting president.

Yugoslavs Hold GI's Along Trieste Border

Trieste, November 24 (UP). Army headquarters in Trieste identify the six American G.I.'s seized by Yugoslavia troops today on the Trieste-Yugoslavia border only as a staff sergeant and men of the 88th Cavalry Reconnaissance troop, in accordance with a new War Department ruling that the names and addressess of such captured men cannot be released for 48 hours.

The Americans were on regular patrol between two United States outposts that face Yugoslavia in the extreme northern corner of Trieste. When the men failed to report to their base, a search party was sent out along the border and was informed that the soldiers had been grabbed by the Yugoslavs. Asking for the return of the six men at once, the Army was told that the case would have to go through higher headquarters.

DTH Notice

Publication of the Daily Tar Heel will be suspended for the Thanksgiving holidays following tomorrow morning's issue. Publication will be resumed on Monday morning with a special edition carrying qualifications of candidates running in Tuesday's general campus election.

Publicity managers of all candidates are requested to turn in any desired information not later than 6 o'clock this afternoon since the DTH offices will be closed after that time.

A special meeting of all Daily Tar Heel Staff members in the news, sports, and editorial departments has been called for 3:30 this afternoon in the editorial of-

Philanthropic Assembly Will Discuss Wage, Price Control Measure Tonight

The Philanthropic Assembly will discuss Wage and Price Controls tonight at 9 o'clock, debating a bill introduced by John Giles. The bill favors the system of "selective rationing" placed by President Truman before the current special session of Congress.

"This bill," John Giles, Phi speaker announced, "is vital to the American people, as no other methods can safely be counted upon to protect our people from the dangers of excessively high prices and ruinous inflation."

"It should be noted that the proposed ceilings are not contemplated for delicacies or luxurious or plentiful clothing items," Giles continued, "but only for a 'selected group' of items in short supply which basically affect the cost of living or industrial production and, therefore, such a system of rationing, as outlined by President Truman, is essentially a short run insurance policy against the impairment of our prosperity, or future development.

Opposition to the bill, which is expected to initiate heated discussion, will be led by Charlie Britt and John Webb while Ruth Bradley, Bill Duncan, and Wimp Erwin will speak on the affirmative side.

UNC Student Leads Discussion Group in European Broadcast

Knut Erik Tranoy, a Norwegian student studying philosophy here, was moderator last Friday on a special goodwill radio program which was shortwaved to Northern European countries.

The program, arranged through the Norweigan Information services in the United States, featured a discussion between three Norweigan students now studying in this country and three American students who attended the University of Oslo last summer. The group discussed education and life in America and Norway.

The special program was a feature of the non-profit, non-commercial World Broadcasting foundation's overall campaign to promote international understanding and friendship through enlightenment.

The three Norweigan students are attending Columbia university, Kent State university in Ohio, and the University of South Dakota. The three American students represent Massachsette Institute of Technology, Wilson college and Pennsylvania State university.

Jack Kennedy Wins Grid Poll; Cassie Byrnes Places Second

Nine weeks of following the national grid scene showed results last week as the general run of entrants in the Graham Memorial football contest went up to about a .650 average. Winner was Jack Kennedy of 2416 Huron street, Durham, who slipped up only on Harvard's loss to Yale and Kansas' win from Missouri.

Runner-up in the contest, which for a change came out without any tie games, was coed Cassie Byrnes, 211 Spencer, who missed three prognostications. Six sharpies, headed by GI wife Elizabeth Fortune, turned in entries with only four wrong guesses. The others were: Randy MacLeod, J. W. Duke, James M. Gwynn, Jack Stratford, and Fred D. Brammer.

Entry blanks for this week's final contest of the year, were distributed yesterday and must be turned in by Thursday noon. Early deadline has been set this week, since seven of the games listed are to be playd on that date. Traditional toughies such as the Army-Navy, Georgia-Georgia Tech, Cornell-Penn, VMI-VPI, and SMU-TCU contests are the main hurdles drugstore quarterbacks must leap in the contest.

But eight entrants foresaw the Tar Heel's 21-0 victory over Duke: Basil Sherrill, Jim Jackson, H. Lebed, G. E. Jones, John C. Bunch, Duke Smith, Oscar Lovelace, Norwood McLamb. Former winner Dan Sullivan likewise prognosticated the correct score, and in addition handed in an entry with only four misses.

Predictions ranged from an extremely optimistic prediction of 56-0 for Carolina, foreseen by Wally Ausley, a half-dozen-odd pessimists who believed the Tar Heels would lose, and all by two or more touchdowns.

Reserved Seat Ducats For Ibsen Production To Go On Sale Today

The sale of reserved seat tickets for the Carolina Playmaker showings of Henrick Ibsen's play, "An Enemy of the People," will start today, according to John W. Parker, business manager. The tickets will be available at Ledbetter Pickard's on Franklin street, or at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall.

Season ticket holders are urged to make reservations by mail, telephone, or in person as soon as possible so as to insure their choice of seats on the night they desire to see the play. Unclaimed reservations will not be held at the box office later than 8:15 on nights of performance.

"An Enemy of the People," the second major production of the Playmaker season, will be staged on December 3, 4, 5, and 6, with curtain time set at 8:30 in the Playmaker theatre.

"We would like to remind students," Parker said, "that tickets may be reserved in advance and paid for on the night of performance."

This translation is one of eleven Ibsen plays prepared in a modern American staging style by Kai Jurgensen of the drama department, and by Robert Schenkkan of the radio department. Several of their Ibsen plays are to be given tests in other university theaters, but this production will be the first of the eleven to be presented to the public. A book of their Ibsen translations is to be published soon by Henry Holt company.

"An Enemy of the People" tells the story of Dr. Stockman, health officer for a small resort town in Norway, in his struggle against corrupt city officials, including his brother, when he tries to expose the danger in the new water system. It is a powerful story probing the dangers of prejudice, propaganda, and mass hysteria.

The production is being directed by Jurgensen, who, in addition to being one of the translators, is an assistant director of the Playmakers.

Laboratory Players Hold Over 'Importance of Being Earnest'

Having hung out the SRO signs for their past two nights, performances, the Laboratory theater presentation of the recent Broadway play "The Importance of Being Earnest" will be held over tonight for a third showing. The three-act comedy by Oscar Wilde will begin at 8:30 in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Nearly a hundred were turned away from last night's showing.

'Earnest' opened on Broadway last March and played for three months to packed houses. The show was brought to New York by John Gieglud after a successful run in London. In New York it was directed by Gieglud, who also played the title role of "Earnest." David Samples plays "Earnest" tonight. Margaret Rutherford, who starred in the movie comedy Blythe Spirit took the female lead role of Lady Bracknell in the Broadway playing and Katherine Covington plays that part in the Lab Theatre presentation.

Described by its late author Oscar Wilde as "a trivial comedy for serious people," "The Importance of Being Earnest" is, in a nutshell, a comedy of manners. The action takes place in England around 1895 and is woven around the aristocratic society of that period.

Show director Buddy Westover summed up the plot, explaining it concerns a young gallant who is unable to convince his friends his name is really Earnest—hence the pun within the title. In the end he proves his name to be legitimately Earnest.

"The true comedy in the play comes in the social patter and gossip over teacups," said Westover. "It is in fact a sophisticated and quite stylized comedy."

Westover also expressed his thanks to the Carolina Playmakers staff and the 16 members of the Laboratory Theatre company.

Shakespeare Exhibit Is Placed in Library

An exhibit on Shakespeare, including rare editions of his work and research on it, has been set up in the main lobby of the library by Olan V. Cook, assistant librarian.

Included in the exhibit is an orginial second folio, a very rare book, valued at more than $1,000. It was presented to the library by UNC alumnus William A. Whitaker of New York city on May 2, 1947.

A copy of "Essays of Shakespeare," by Dr. George Coffin Taylor, Kenan professor of English, and newspaper and magazine publicity on this work is also included, under the title, "Products of Important Research Done at UNC."

Much of the material used is taken from the Childers collection for the study of English literature, including a bust of Shakespeare presented by James Saxon Childers, and several facsimiles of folios and quartos.

Under the title "Eighteenth Century Editions" are copies of Shakespeare's works edited by Dr. Samuel Johnson, Alexander Pope, Nicholas Rowe, and other important Shakespeare scholars.

Tickets Go On Sale For Twin-City Ball

Sales will begin today in the "Y" lobby for tickets to the dance to be given by the Winston-Salem Carolina club on the roof of the Robert E. Lee hotel Wednesday evening in the Twin City.

Bids for the informal dance for which Jimmy Marshall and his Carolinians will play from 9 till 1 o'clock will be sold for $2 each. Every Winston-Salemite now enrolled in the University is eligible to buy two bids for $4 and then to sell one of his pair to a friend.

The tickets that will be available in the "Y" lobby between 12 and 2 o'clock today and tomorrow are also available from the following officers and dance committeemen: Bob Haire, Jack Burke, Marty Hinkle, Henry Welfare, David Robinson, Lenus James, Charlie Gibson, Ed Brennegar, and Jim Paschall, ing.

Raleigh Club

The Raleigh-Carolina club will meet at 7:45 tonight in the Pi Kappa Alpha house. At that time important business will be discussed concerning final preparations for the annual Christmas dance to be staged again in the Capital City. New officers will also be elected at this meeting.

Milne Cops National Collegiate Harrier Title In Michigan Event

(Special To The Daily Tar Heel)

East Lansing, Mich. Nov. 24 — Jack Milne, wearing the light blue of the University of North Carolina, today breezed home in first place over 200 competitors from 33 schools to win the National Collegiate cross country championship.

Milne, who was third in the IC4A run last week, thus became the first Tar Heel to ever win a national championship in any sport. Although there was some six inches of snow on the ground and the weather was close to freezing, the Carolina lad took the lead early and held on to be clocked in 20:40.1.

Horace Ashenfelter of Penn State was second, some five seconds behind. Quentin Brelsford of Ohio Wesleyan, last year's winner was in third place. Jerry Thompson of Texas was fourth, Bob Karnes of Kansas held the fifth spot and Gerry Karver of Penn State was sixth.

Penn State captured the team honors with 60 points and Syracuse placed second with 72. Drake university, last year's winner. was third.

Milne, a junior from Toms River, N. J., was Carolina's only representative at the meet. He is expected back in Chapel Hill early Tuesday morning.

Besides annexing his first national title, he adds to his personal record which also includes the fastest two-miles ever run by a Southern intercollegiate runner. This came when he was clocked in 9:20.5 for second place in the Penn Relays last year.

JACK MILNE

Milne entered the University in 1940 and after an exceptionally fine freshman year in which he sent many yearling records flying, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps where he spent five and a half years. He was discharged in time to compete during the 1946 cross country season.

Polls to Open Today In Freshman, Junior Elections of Officers

The polls will be open this afternoon from 1 o'clock until six o'clock to allow students to cast their ballot in the election for officers of the freshman and junior classes.

Al Winn, chairman of the board of elections, announced last night that students must have their ID cards in order to vote. Winn also announced that

Al Winn, Chairman of the Board of Elections, announced yesterday that nominations for the general elections being held on December 2nd will be closed as of midnight tomorrow November 26th.

11 freshmen have qualified to be placed on the ballot for the four offices. Five Juniors have qualified.

In a meeting of the freshman candidates last night, Winn told the group that one of the reasons he had been appointed was to provide a fair freshman election. He assured the candidates that they will get a fair election.

The other candidates present were introduced and the social chairmen were called upon to speak. The only candidate present was George Dunlop who spoke concerning the suggested freshman dance. Bob Allen, SP candidate for vice-president also said a few words.

The candidates for freshman president are Herb Mitchell, UP; Erie Cofield, CP; and Fred Thompson, SP. Candidates for vice-president in the same party order are William Benbow, Bob Allen, and Bill Swaim.

Candidates for secretary-treasurer named in the same order are Marvin Nathan, Ted Leonard, Tom Kerr. There were only two qualified candidates for social chairman, Max Lindsey, SP, and George Dunlop, UP.

The junior class candidates include Len Szafaryn, a UP nominee endorsed also by the SP and CP, for president.

The office of secretary-treasurer will go to one of two coeds, Sally Woodhull, SP, and Danny Payne, UP. There were three candidates who qualified for the office of junior class social chairman, they are Fred Fussell, UP; David Ferebee, CP; and Bill Thorpe, SP.

COED MEETING

There will be a mass meeting of all coeds in Memorial Hall at 5 o'clock this afternoon for nomination of coeds to run for four seats in the Coed Senate and three seats on the Women's council.

Local AVC to Discuss Housing, Prices, Expansion of Membership at Meeting

$300 Is Raised Here As Friendship Drive Reaches End Today

The campus drive for contributions to the Friendship Train has netted $361.31, Larry Queen, chairman of the fund-raising drive at the University announced yesterday.

A planned appeal to the audience at the Duke-Carolina game Saturday by Myrt Sherrard fell through, because the public address system at Duke Stadium was in use during half-time exercises.

Contribution boxes have been placed in the "Y", Lenoir Hall, the downtown theatres and in many of the stores downtown. Contributions may be made also at Chancellor House's office in South building.

The committee plans to close the drive today at 3 o'clock.

Housing, prices, and expansion of membership are among the items to be discussed at the meeting of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee, to be held at the Presbyterian church at 7:30 this evening.

Biggest subject on the evening's agenda is the national housing - for - veterans rally scheduled for January in Washington. Veterans' groups from all over the nation will meet in the capitol under the sponsorship of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., to secure passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill to provide more adequate housing for veterans. The Chapel Hill AVC chapter is now considering plans for sending delegates.

Also before the group will be a request for advice and support of the Durham AVC chapter, which is commencing a new membership drive. The Durham chapter has sought information from Chapel Hill about how it can best expand the scope of its operation in connection with its current drive.

The Chapel Hill chapter will hear a report on last Thursday's campus price control rally.

Meeting Called to Set Up Yule Vacation Plans Here

An open meeting of all students who plan to stay in Chapel Hill over Christmas holidays has been scheduled this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Parker lounge No. 1 of Graham Memorial. Purpose of the session, according to Chuck Hilty, assistant director of the student union, is to set up a definite program of activity for everyone who will be in town during the sixteen-day vacation period.

"We want to organize entertainment for everyone who will be here." said Hilty. "This means the foreign students, Victory village residents, those who live too far away, who can't afford to go home, the ones who just decide to stay over, and, we hope, the football team."

Managing the entertainment side of the program will be the Town Girls association, headed by Betsy Ann Barbee. Suggestions and temporary plans advanced thus far include caroling parties, game nights, a dance, and an open house in Graham Memorial throughout the holidays.

"We want everyone to make Graham Memorial their headquarters during the holidays," said director Bill Shuford. "Being the student activities center, we want to brighten up the usually 'dead' scene during the Christmas interlude, but we'll need the cooperation and participation of everyone who will be here

Student Accounts Must Be Cleared

All students, before picking up their class cards for the next term, must settle their accounts with the University cashier's division in the basement of South building, according to an announcement today from Edwin S. Lanier, head of the central records office.

Those students who still have bills payable to the University at the middle of next month Lanier warns, will not be able to pick up their schedule tickets for the winter quatrer in the registration hall, Venable annex, on time on December 15, 16, or 17.

Now It Will Be Blind Man's Bluff

In the past when anyone mentioned the University of Texas to us we immediately thought of the big, broad-minded Daily Texan and the Texas which Henry Wallace in an address here last spring described as making a bid for North Carolina's reputation of being the most liberal of the southern states. We now call Wallace's hand and point out the latest movement by the University of Texas administration forbidding any avowed Communist the right to express himself on the campus. The administration's decree came after a discussion group invited, with the administration's consent, a member of the Communist party to participate in a meeting.

The Texas administration used little forethought in reaching such a decision, and only enlarged the fold for more Communist sympathizers rather than sterilizing the agar of Communist culture. By their decision they turned their backs to the fact that there are Communists who do not claim the ownership of a membership card in the party, and with decrees such as the Texas one there will be more of these individuals. The American Communists are living from hand to mouth and if they are made martyrs it makes them feel that their cause is all the more urgent. J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, summed it all up when last March he took a stand against the proposed outlawing of the Communist party and advised our government against taking "any course which would give the Communist cause to portray and pity themselves as martyrs."

Another fact the Texas administration forgot to consider, according to the Daily Texan, was the psychological effect. Their "'forbidding' an open discussion is a positive way of cloaking that discussion with a mysteriousness which will attract many students who want to find out what the deep, dark secret is all about."

The decision by the Texas administration was not a smart move. From now on out they will be playing a game of blind man's bluff. They have put a blindfold over their own eyes and paved the way for Communists to tease, antagonize, and even get in some good licks while they stand and try to grasp out in the dark and fumble for a catch.

We argue that the American system is in a better position to squelch the Commnuist doctrines out in the open by comparison of virtues as they are practiced. Under the Bill of Rights, as discussed in an article by Bill Crisp published in this publication several days ago and cited in a Greensboro Daily News editorial as the "keenest analysis" of the complicated problem of the Communist existence under our governmental structure the Communists are protected in so long as they do not attempt (1) an advocation of the overthrow of government by force or violence; (2) an incitement to riot; (3) an advocation of changing the status quo by some unlawful means; (4) an intention provocation of the commission of any crime; (5) an intimidation of parties concerned with an impending judicial decision; (6) a giving of aid to the enemies of the United States; or (7) a revealing of government secrets to any person or government not in the confidence of the United States for that specific purpose.

So let the Communists talk if they will. Give them a chance to express their views. Their fallacies will come to the surface and they will not be aided by martyrdom.

Additional Honor for Carolina

Yesterday marked a historic day in the history of the University of North Carolina's intercollegiate athletics. For the first time since 1888, when the first team was fielded, the University can boast a National champion.

Jack Milne, a junior, captured first place in the National Collegiate cross country championship at East Lansing, Michigan from a field of some 200 runners representing 33 schools.

This boy deserves the plaudits of the entire school as he battled the weather elements that were as bad as could be described and even harder on a lad representing a southern university. However he went into the race with no other thought than that of winning and proceeded to do just that.

Milne is a true top flight athlete and today showed the school just why the Monogram club elected him last spring as the outstanding all around athlete at Carolina and bestowed upon him the Adam Hat trophy.

It was a great triumph for a man in a minor sport and should prove a lift to all of track in the south as well as all sports. Milne has brought the south the first cross country championship and also the respect that should be due to the smaller and less recognized sports on the campus. We can now truthfully answer the skeptics in many northern schools who claim that the schools below the Mason Dixon line indulge only in football.

We knew it before but now the loud noises may be silenced by the headlines. Let's get the campus out in full spirit to welcome back a true champion and a great competitor.—M. S.

Down with Cliches

Professors Phillips Russell and Charles Eaton, instructors in creative writing, contend that the use of cliches is abominable and that students should train themselves to steer clear of trite and hackneyed expressions in both speech and writing.

The professors certainly hit the nail on the head this time, and we believe they deserve a pat on the back. We want to declare here and now that we all use cliches more than we realize. Before we know which end is up our conversation begins to include these worn-out and out-moded expressions. To fall heir to such a practice is as easy as falling off a log.

We might as well face the music and keep a stiff upper lip about this. Getting down to brass tacks, we are as guilty as the next one. The main way to keep from murdering the King's English is to nip the cliche in the bud. We should think twice before we begin to put our two cents worth into the pot. When we hear others going to the dogs, we should remember not to fly off the handle or to cross bridges before we come to them. It will only take time before some people begin to see the light; then perhaps we'll be able to grab the bull by the hornes and bring cliches to a screeching halt.—D. M.

This Is It

World Must Know Peace

By John Roeder

At its last meeting the American Veteran Committee gave its full support to Congressional Joint Resolution number 24. This resolution is now being studied by the Senatorial Foreign Affairs Committee.

I am certain few readers of this article would oppose the endorsement of the opening phrase of the bill: "all the world desires durable peace."

"But How," we cry. "How can there be durable peace when each nation fears its neighbor's agression?" How can there be peace when Russia is preparing for war; announcing to all the world that it has the atomic bomb; when she reaches out and attempts to smother the world in Communism.

Or when those who are huckstering the wares of Russia accuse the United States of "war-mongering"; when they accuse the United States of building tremendous stockpiles of atom bombs in preparation for an imperialistic war.

How can there be a durable peace?

During the war the United Nations was created. The layman looked at the newspaper articles and said, "This will save us." But now we wonder! The Charter of the United Nations, as well as the implication of the very title "United Nations" guarantees the sovereignty of each individual member country. To quote Article 2, section 1 of the charter: "The organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its members."

Sovereignty means that each nation is a complete entity. Under this doctrine a nation can do as it wishes no matter how detrimental its actions may be to the other nations of the world. The sovereignty of a nation has nothing to do with the individual freedom and rights of the peoples who are citizens or subjects of the sovereign nation. Individual citizens do not make war. War is forced upon the people by the will of the powers which control the destiny of the sovereign nations.

These inadaquacies are recognized by the proposed resolution: "Experience  indicates that the United Nations in its present structure is not fully adequate for this task of creating a durable peace."

Realizing that the Charter of the United Nations, in Article 109, provides a procedure by which the charter can be revised, and understanding that those nations which are intent on creating this lasting peace are waiting for the leadership of the United States, the authors of the resolution have asked Congress to resolve that the president take "the initiative in calling a general conference of the United Nations  for the purpose of making the United Nations capable of enacting, interpreting, and enforcing world law to prevent war.

There seems to be one method by which this can be done. The charter must be revised in such a way that it will no longer be a loose confederation of the sovereign nations of the world. It must be changed into an enforcable federation; a government of, by and for the people must be created. It would be a super-sovereignty capable of controlling munitions; a world government which could enforce the democratic laws of the people in a manner similar to that of the Federal Government of the United States.

If such a world government is not created we are faced with two other possible courses of action. The United States must launch a "preventive war" and conquer the rest of the world before the rest of the world conquers us. This would lead to a world government under the complete domination of the United States. Or we wait, allowing Russia, as well as other nations, to arm herself to the teeth. Then we fight. And then?

It has been said we are not ready for World Government. That may be so.

At least the time has come when the President should act as proposed in the joint resolution. The world must learn to know peace.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Americans Give To Help Europe

By Drew Pearson

Aboard The Southwest Special Friendship Train.—A lot of my editors are probably wondering when I am going to quit collecting food and get back to being a newspaperman (so, also, is my wife). However, when the people of the Southwest announce that they've been blessed with a big wheat crop and want to share it with others, and when they go out and raise some 150 carloads of wheat with no urging from anyone and no help from their Government—then that, in my opinion, is news. Furthermore, it's invigorating, stimulating news that I get a lot more kick out of writing about than I do peeking through keyholes in Washington.

One of the hardest things to tell in print, however, is the enthusiasm, the generosity, and the enterprise of the American people when it comes to giving food for friendship. This was the most spontaneous movement toward world brotherhood and friendship this country has probably ever seen and chiefly behind it is the belief that, whereas battleships can win wars, food can help win the peace.

For two weeks now I have been riding three different sections of the Friendship Train, from Sunny California, through snowy Wyoming, across the brown plains of Kansas and through the smoke-begrimed industrial cities of Pennsylvania. But, regardless of geography, weather or industry, the response has been equally warm and thrilling.

This has not been government aid from diplomat to diplomat, but from people to people. Every conceivable cross section of American life has cooperated. Railroads and railroad employees, small towns and big towns, all religions, all races, rich and poor—all turned out at the railroad stations to help build the bridge of friendship between Europe and the United States.

In Ft. Worth, Texas, bighearted Amon Carter, who usually gives away broad-brimmed Texas hats, this time gave away 15 carloads of flour (along with other Ft. Worth residents) and had the flour bags especially stamped with messages to the French and Italian people.....In Secaucus, N. J., the farmers, under the leadership of Mayor John J. Kane, sold pigs and contributed the cash equivalent of one pig each to the Friendship Train—total $2,800....David C. White, a big wheat farmer 20 miles south of Dodge City, Kansas, gave five carloads of wheat because, as he expressed it, "in the 25th chapter of Matthew, Christ says—'as ye have done unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"....Dick Long, managing editor of the Wichita Eagle, practically quit being a newspaperman in order to organize this Southwest Special of the Friendship Train....Hundreds of newspapers used up tons of precious newsprint telling their readers about the train and scores of radio stations sacrificed valuable advertising to do the same.

In Sedgwick County, Kansas, the school children collected wastepaper, ran errands, saved their money until they raised enough to buy one whole carload of wheat (and that's a lot of wheat)....In Philadelphia, the children of the John Bartram High School contributed seven times as much money as the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association-Joe Grundy's high-tariff outfit which used to write U.S. tariff laws. . . . In Grand Island, Nebraska, the teamsters union, headed by Bill Noble, furnished twenty men to load cars....In Trenton, N.J., Mrs. Laura Marsavitz, a teacher in a Negro school, had won a war prize for making parachutes. The prize was a Bible. When the train passed through Trenton she came to the station with her school children and asked that the Bible be sent with the train to Europe.

In Newton, Kansas, the Mennonite church scoured the adjacent wheat-growing counties until 28 cars of wheat and flour were attached to the Friendship Train....The Tall Corn Network in Iowa staged an all-out radio drive for food and funds later reported that, for the first time, people who phoned in to the radio stations pledging money gave more than they pledged.

Down in Texas the eight district managers of the Lions Club worked so intensively that carload after carload came in from all over Texas—Long View, Odessa, Austin, Amarillo, Plainview, Lubbock, Sherman, Beaumont. Other service clubs plus local radio stations and newspapers, worked with them. The Rock Island Railroad and the Missouri Pacific helped the Santa Fe by bringing these off-the- mainline cars to Wichita, where the Santa Fe Southwest Special started. In Pennsylvania, the Reading Railroad also cooperated with the Penn RR in hauling off five cars.

Greenville, S.C. decided to attach one boxcar to the Friendship Train, but, before it finished, hooked on two. Reporter Broadus Bailey of Greenville: "For many years I have helped our community campaigns, but never have I seen such a voluntary response."

In Toledo, Ohio, Arthur Wieland, vice president of Willys Overland, organized a fleet of station wagons and jeeps to pick up donations.

Out in Colorado's dust bowl, Baca County sent two carloads of wheat, the Springfield, Colo., Lions Club one and Walsh, Colo., one—genuine generosity from an area which may not have a crop next year.

And so on and on.....The rollcall of American generosity is too long to tabulate here but it's bills of lading spell out just one thing—the heartfelt desire of millions of Americans to help and to live at peace with

Freshmen Should Vote

Dear Fellow Freshman:

You and I have the privilege of being freshmen in one of the finest universities in the United States. Perhaps we might not think so at times, when we live in a Q. Hut with 19 bunk-mates or in a barracks with around 100 bunk-mates. But let's agree that we still think that it is a great university since we haven't left yet. One of the most renowned features of U. N. C. is its student government. Next Tuesday, at Gerrard Hall between the hours of 1:00 and 6:00 p.m., we Freshmen will have the privilege of electing officers for our class. We know from past elections that we have seen this fall quarter that most of the student body at Carolina aren't interested enough to even bother to vote. Also, we should realize that some few years in the future, the large portion of the responsibility for the growth, continuation, and administration of this powerful student government will lie upon our shoulders.

Isn't is our duty to Carolina to appear on Tuesday and place our vote with some candidate for this office? If we knew of a Freshman who failed through pure inertia and disinterest to make his appearance at that all-important Carolina-Georgia game back in September, we would immediately declare that he was not showing the Carolina spirit and backing of UNC that he should. It is just as important that we support other phases of the Carolina way of life. On Tuesday, let's show the rest of the student body that we Freshmen are interested in Carolina and are willing to do our part for the smooth function of our well-known student government. If we all vote we are sure to get the best man and there can be no kick from anyone and no stigma attached to the topics of Freshmen elections. Let's do away with the knowing, tolerant smiles of upper classmen when Freshman elections are mentioned.

It's important! Let's put our vote in for someone!

Honor System Here To Stay

The honor system is here to stay according to a large majority of students who voted on this issue during the past week. 250 students were asked to answer: "Is the honor system a beneficial institution from your viewpoint?". 226 students answered in the affirmative; 7 abstained, holding that their opinion could not validate the issue as they had been in school only 2 months.

Some affirmative opinions are given here:

"Very effective; Why do some teachers stay in the room while an exam is being given, though?" E. G. Russell.

"It is not very effective at present, but could be with more indoctrination". P. McNeer Dillon, Jr.

"The honor system is as effective as it can be under the present system". Fred Burgess.

"It would be more effective if the frat house 'files' were abolished. Maybe this doesn't contribute to dishonesty during the actual quizes but it might lean a little toward such immediately before them". Charles W. Kumings.

Opposing these views are the following:

"If the honor system is effective, why is there any controversy over the House Privileges board visiting fraternity houses to check on their honesty as far as drinking is concerned?" Betty Allen.

"As a whole, the honor system is not too effective. Take each person individually and the honor system receives more sanction. Our honor councils are very effective when flaws are detected but have a lot of trouble finding out about them" Gean Childress.

"Let's not kid ourselves. Most of us have seen cheating and haven't reported it. You're fighting human nature with people who have no self-conscience when you use the honor system; however, I do not know of a more effective system that could be used in its place.

'Put Up Your Dukes!'

By R. Foo Giduz

----Just peachy all the way! Those mellow words come to mind in retrospect of Saturday's sports saga . . . And incidently, Co-Capt. George Sparger is one silver dollar richer for answering the kick-off question correctly just before the game. . . Always wondered what kind of coin the Ref. flipped, and what happened to it. Joltin' George says it's always a silver dollar, furnished by the referee himself (?) and the guy winning the toss keeps the coin.

Spirit, though dampened in one way, and very wet in another equally tangible way, seemed pretty good from Carousel's row A seat . . . (See what he got for being the first guy in line!) . . . Though we figure it's a shame "Tarzan" Lath Morris didn't help out on the yelling end for this, the second straight week. —Tarzan, Farmville's far-famed hog-caller was seen wandering around shaking hands down on the sidelines . . . Sorry he didn't try out his traditional responsive yell on the studes. —Hoping he'll be back in form for the Cavalier contest this Sat.

Dook Day Diatribe: — Understand duckets were being hustled at the bargain basement price of $.98 per just before kickoff. . . That spontaneous yell, synchronizing stunt with the Dook cheering section was pretty neat. An innocent bystander said the Tar Heel rooters won the duel hands down. . . . Good it is also, to note that for a change NOBODY dropped dead from the pre or post-game excitement. . . . But the five-way West Durham auto wreck in the terrific traffic jam after the game, pretty near broke the record.

Rameses' new bearded and trusty guardian for the game was a very likeable chap name of Jim Cook. (And the whiskers were the real Mc C., gents!) —Jim, who says he's 51-years old this month, came down to Orange county from the mountains up around Haywood county section last year, and settled down in the farming section out near Enfield. . . .Says he's been working with the Hogan boys a good bit (Rameses' owners) and they asked him to take care of the sturdy mascot Saturday. . .And Cook did a bang-up job . . .He really got Dook's goat when they tried to scare the ram, anyhow. . . To all of which we merely say, in summing up: Put up your Dukes!

POETRY WINNER

The winner of the Daily Tar Heel poetry contest in answer to Virginia's "Ode to the Tarheels" will be announced in tomorrow's paper, and the winning poem will be published on the sports page.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

THE LITTLE EXTRA THINGS IN LIFE

THE THING ABOUT last Saturday's romp over Duke that has the most people talking that is, besides the officials and Jack Horner, is the way Bob Cox, Carolina extra-point specialist missed three straight conversions, and then came back to boot a 15-yard field goal from an angle that was strictly for the birds. Such things start people to wondering.

The explanation, so the story goes, is that Cox got wind that the Blue Devils had been practicing a special play to break up the conversion all week, and with this in mind, the Tar Heel ace was a little overanxious and hurried the kicks for fear of being trampled by a rumbling herd. After the three misses, Cox must have decided his boys up front were thoroughly capable of coping with any little plans the Dukesters were brewing, for on the field goal try, he took a wee bit more time and split the goal posts in true Meriwell fashion. After this, Cox jumped with physical glee and skipped off the field into the arms of waiting teammates. Cox seemed more worried about his fourth miss—the one sitting in the stands who he weds in December.

ALL OF WHICH goes to prove that it takes a lot of little things to make up a successful conversion. First, it takes a good pass from center to the holder, who in turn, must put the ball down accurately and quickly for the kicker, who does the actual booting. Meanwhile the line and two flankers must hold out the opponents, which makes the play a team proposition. The actual booting takes place about seven yards behind the line of scrimmage, the nearness to the line being accounted for by the fact that the linemen form a ring of protection in which to kick.

NO PEEKING ALLOWED

A SURPRISE TO some is the reality that the majority of good placekickers never see the ball split the uprights. Good kickers usually watch the spot where the ball is placed, and the New York Giants of the National pro league are so insistant of this practice, that Giant holders flash a certain number of fingers after each kick, the booter being required to relate the figure.

Field goals are a common performance in the pro leagues partly because there are more experienced specialists in the circuits, but mainly for the reason that the goal posts are on the goal line. This condition, which many are fighting to return to college football, promotes field goal kicking, with a fourth down on the opponents 28, being the perfect place to call on the team's true toe for a quick three points. The pros kick goals of 30 and 40 yards every week, with a few 50-yard boots to be found in the record books.

There are those in football who would do away with the extra point completely, saying that it is unfair for two teams to battle on even terms and have one emerge winner by a single point. They should have been around in the old days, when touchdowns counted only two points, and the conversions went for four. And there are those who would change the field goal points from three to four points to promote that department of the game. After all, they call it football, don't they.

THE ANCIENT ART of drop kicking is all, but forgotten these days, with the placement kick being used by 90 per cent of today's booters. This can be accounted for by the fact that the modern football is much narrower than the ball used some years back, which was more adaptable to drop kicking procedures. There have been some great modern day footballers who drop kicked though, the outstanding examples of being little Albie Booth, the Yale great, who is now a big time grid official, and Nile Kinnick, Heisman and Maxwell trophy winning All-American from Iowa, who was killed in action in the Naval Air Corps. Kinnick's greatest performance was the day which he single-handily defeated mighty Michigan by scoring a touchdown and adding the extra point by the drop kick method to edge the Wolverines, 7-6.

COX'S FIELD GOAL, the longest he had ever kicked, was the second of his college career. The other came against Georgia in the Sugar Bowl last January from the Bulldog 10, to give the Tar Heels a short-lived 10-7 lead. Field goals have figured in other Duke-Carolina contests. Tony Ruffa gave Duke a 3-0 half-time lead in 1940, the year we doubled the score to win 6-3. Duke, incidentally, almost won the Rose Bowl in 1939 on another Ruffa field goal, only to be defeated in the last seconds of play by two third-stringers named Nave and Krueger. Their fabulous story appears in this month's Sports magazine. Harry Dunkle beat Virginia, 10-7, with a field goal in 1940.

WHICH ALL BOILS down to the conclusion that the extra point and the field goal are two of the more interesting plays in the game and will continue to be the margin of victory in many a grid contest.

Three Jayvees Hurt in Blue Imp Victory

Three Tar Babies are now on the injured list as a result of the 13-7 victory over Duke's Blue Imps last Friday.

End John Stoioff, the most seriously hurt, is now in the hospital with an injured kidney. He was hurt on the kickoff that followed Carolina's second touchdown. Center Joe Swicegood and end Ed Bilpuch both received shoulder injuries. Bilpuch suffered a recurrence of an injury from early this year.

Only one penalty, fifteen yards for holding against Carolina, was called in the game that saw the Tar Babies gain their third victory of the campaign against one tie. South Carolina, State, and Duke were all defeated by the locals and Virginia held the Littlemen to a 6-6 stalemate. Thus far this season the jayvee gridders have rolled up 38 points to their oppositions' 13.

The Tar Babies will close out their schedule this Thursday when they journey to Annapolis to meet the Middie jayvees. Before leaving for the Naval academy, they will impersonate the Virginia varsity in scrimmages their big brothers prepare for their own finale.

Frosh Harrier Team Faces State Today

Carolina's freshmen cross country runners will seek its first win this afternoon when they tangle with the State college cub pack at Raleigh.

In an earlier meet the Statesters took a 25-32 decision after Carolina's Dave Hiatt had been disqualified for taking a wrong trail. Bob Black was the individual winner and will lead the Tar Heels again today.

This will be the last meet for the freshmen and will close out the harrier season except for the varsity meet with Virginia Saturday morning.

Coach Joe Hilton requests that all men be present by 2:30 o'clock so as to get to Raleigh in time to go over the course.

Last Saturday night in a race at the Charlotte armory Jimmy Miller was nosed out by a scant yard in a duel with Gil Dodds, national mile champion. They were not clocked officially over the flat half-mile distance. The event was staged as part of a religious festival in which the flying parson was guest speaker.

Swimmers Sparkle In Practice Meet

The Tar Heel tank team journeyed over to meet State college's swimmers last Friday afternoon in a practice meet and showed up very promisingly.

Though the paddlers looked good in some events, Coach Dick Jamerson emphasized that the boys looked far from perfect and still need much work in conditioning.

In the 50-yard sprint, Floyd Drew, Steve Osborne, and Hall Ingram turned in good times. No one sparkled in the 100-yard event but in the distances, both Co-captain, Mike Morrow and Ike Norwood were the leaders for the Blue Dolphins. Jerry Cook paced the breaststrokers while Gil Beam and David Griffith were the best new drivers.

Daily drills are still continuing with the boys laying their greatest efforts to getting into shape to stand the stiff pace of the coming season.

Everett Cops Campus Table Tennis Crown

By Kyle Cox

Another championship was decided yesterday afternoon in the fall intramural program. The victor was Everett dorm, who captured the campus championship in table tennis by defeating the fraternity champion, Phi Delt, by a 2-1 score. Everett was crowned after almost two weeks of hotly contested ping pong play in both dorm and fraternity divisions.

The fight for the campus championship in tag football was held off once again yesterday when rain further drenched the playing field. Since the field will probably still be sloppy today, P. A. Lee, assistant mural director, announced last night that the title battle between the Grads and Chi Psi, as well as any other remaining football contests, will be postponed until after the Thanksgiving holidays.

Today's volleyball schedule

4:00—Court No. 1: Chi Psi vs Sig Ep No. 3; Court No. 3: Kap Sig No. 2 vs Zeta No. 1.

5:00—Court No. 1: Phi Delt No. 3 vs Sig Nu No 2.

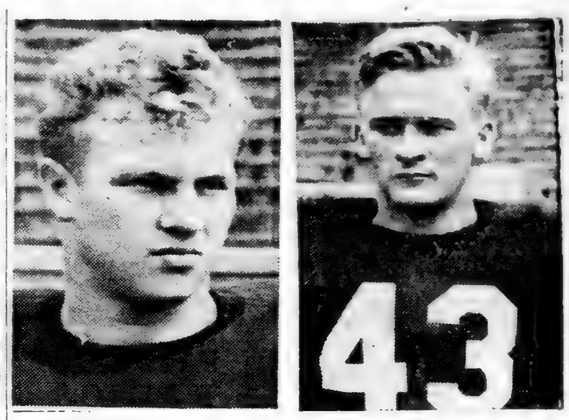
Carolina Gridders Get Day Of Rest Before Starting Work For Virginia

Carolina's Tar Heels received a well-earned day of rest yesterday following their smashing 21-0 victory over Duke. Coach Carl Snavely's outfit next faces Virginia in its season finale in Chapel Hill this Saturday.



Followers of the Tar Heels who have seen their team march to six straight victories are jubilant over Carolina's recent success. In order, wins have been scored over William and Mary, 13-7; Florida, 35-7; Tennessee, 20-6; State, 41-6; Maryland, 19-0 and Duke, 21-0. This lustrous record has moved the Tar Heels into the national spotlight, and optimistic Carolina fans have been talking of a bowl bid for the past week.

The Cavaliers of Coach Art Guepe have been beaten but one other time this season. Pennsylvania's undefeated powerhouse stopped the T-formation-minded Virginians, 19-7. Virginia had rosy bowl aspirations until losing to State.

Back in Chapel Hill, the Tar Heel trainers reported that there were no serious injuries sustained in the Duke game. There were numerous bruises but all hands should be ready to go against Virginia in the annual encounter. It is also hoped that fullback Hosea Rodgers and guard Sid Varney will be able to return to action.

One of the main reasons for Carolina's success has been the two-team system that Snavely has been employing recently. Coach Wallace Wade of Duke was particularly impressed with it.

Bill Maceyko, Bill Flamisch, Bobby Weant, Bill Smith, and Mike Rubish were the standouts on the defensive team that Snavely has been using lately. Snavely was high in his praise of Don Hartig, who put in several key blocks against Duke players. "That's the best game Don has played, and he's played some good ones, the coach exclaimed.

AMONG THE behind-the-scene players who were outstanding in the win over Duke were blocking back Don Hartig, left, and tailback Bill Maceyko, right. Hartig threw key blocks both times Charlie Justice crossed into pay dirt, while Maceyko performed well in the defensive safety position.

Justice Makes NEA Second Team

Charlie Justice has been named to a second team position on the NEA All-American squad as selected by the nation's football coaches, scouts, and writers.

Accompanying the Tar Heel star in the second team backfield are Bobby Layne of Texas, Harry Gilmer of Alabama, and George Taliaferro of Indiana. The first team backfield included Notre Dame's Johnny Lujack, Bob Chappuis of Michigan, Charlie Conerly of Mississippi, and Doak Walker of SMU.

Davis of Army scored 20 touchdowns in 1944.

VIRGINIA TICKETS

The Athletic Association has announced that Wednesday noon is the deadline for obtaning student tickets for the Virginia game.

Tickets may be had upon the exchange of the student passbook in Woollen gym lobby from 9-1 and 2-5 this afternoon.

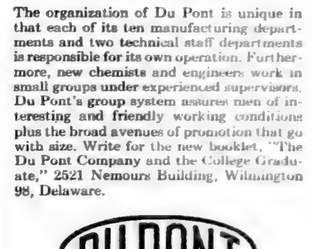
Development of dyes requires both physical and organic chemistry

The synthesis of a new dye in the laboratory or even the development of a manufacturing process from that synthesis may still be a long way from the realization of the full potentialities of the new compound as a coloring material. This is illustrated by the commercial history of the exceedingly fast bright blue dye indanthrone and its halogen derivatives.

Indanthrone was the first known anthraquinone vat dye and has led tonnage sales of vat dyes in the U.S. since its introduction, despite the commercial use of well over 200 types. In 1901, Bohn first synthesized indanthrone by KOH fusion of 2-aminoanthraquinone, but the yields obtained were in the range of only 25-30 per cent. Because of the industrial importance of indanthrone, and the low commercial yields obtained by the original fusion procedure, a great deal of research time has been spent in its study.



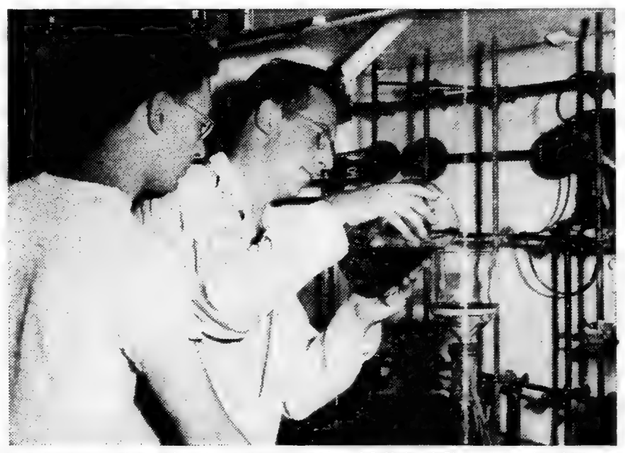
Several U.S. patents record the fact that Du Pont organic chemists have made outstanding contributions in this field, particularly by developing the intercondensation of 2 moles of 1,3-dibromo-2-aminoanthraquinone and replacing the bromine by chlorination to give 3:3'-dichloroindanthrone ("Ponsol" Blue).

This fixes the chlorine in the desired positions to give a product with greater bleach-fastness than indanthrone and minimizes extraneous substitution that always accompanies direct chlorination of indanthrone. The commercial yields of 3:3'-dichloroindanthrone now being obtained by Du Pont are markedly greater than those obtained by Bohn and his workers.

It is just as important, however, that a water-soluble dye be made in a physical form that gives optimum shade and working qualities, such as perfect dispersion, freedom from specks, rapid reducibility and storage stability. A significant Du Pont contribution to the production of vat dyes in optimum physical form is called "turbulent flow drowning." In this procedure, the color is dissolved in strong H_2SO_4 and then diluted by a large volume of water in a constricted tube. High turbulence is maintained during dilution and produces uniform dye particles.

In this development the work of physical chemists and physicists, aided by electron microscopy, ultra-centrifuging, infrared and ultra-violet spectrometry and other modern techniques, was of major importance.

One of the three wings of the Jackson Laboratory, where a large portion of the basic research on dyes is carried on. The new $1,000,000 addition on the right is nearing completion.



The conversion of laboratory findings to a plant operation often presents unique and difficult problems that require unusual ingenuity on the part of chemists, chemical, mechanical and electrical engineers. The work on the indanthrones was no exception. The outstanding commercial success of "Ponsol" vat colors, typified by "Ponsol" Blue is one example of the results achieved through cooperation of Du Pont scientists.

Questions College Men ask about working with Du Pont

WILL I GET LOST IN A BIG COMPANY?

The organization of Du Pont is unique in that each of its ten manufacturing departments and two technical staff departments is responsible for its own operation. Furthermore, new chemists and engineers work in small groups under experienced supervisors. Du Pont's group system assures men of interesting and friendly working conditions plus the broad avenues of promotion that go with size. UP NOMINEES

All University Party nominees for the coming December student legislature elections and the student council and honor council nominees will meet tonight in Graham Memorial, Roland Parker 3 at 9 o'clock, party officials announced today.

DURHAM-CAROLINA CLUB

The Durham-Carolina club will hold its initial meeting tonight at 7:30 P.M. in Memorial Auditorium. Officers of the club will be elected and plans will be made for a Christmas dance. With an estimated 200 Durhamites attending the University, a great need is felt for an organization of this sort. All residents of Durham, men students and coeds are urged to attend.

LUTHERAN FILM

The local Lutheran Church will sponsor the showing of a film entitled "And Now I See" at Gerrard Hall Tuesday night from 8 to 9 o'clock. The picture, produced in Hollywood, is a production of the National Lutheran Church.

COED CLUB DANCE

The Coed club of the Durham YWCA has invited students of the University to attend a Thanksgiving semi-formal dance set for 8:30 tonight at the Durham YWCA.

Tickets will be available at the YWCA in Durham or from Fred Sternberger, 115 Lewis Dormitory, who is the coed club representative here.

Restaurants Here To Save Meat, Eggs

A majority of the restaurant owners of Chapel Hill met last Wednesday in the Town Hall to discuss the suggestions of the National Food Conservation committee relative to the advisability of following the present play of meatless Tuesdays and eggless Thursdays.

It was decided that henceforth no beef, lamb, or pork would be served on Tuesdays; and no eggs during the breakfast meal on Thursdays.

It is of special interest to note that prices have declined in sections of the country following this program.

Among those present at the meeting were Mayor Madrey, Professor Shearin, Charles MacRay representing the student body, and the owners of the following restaurants; The Porthole, Danziger's Gooche's Cafe, The Campus Cafe, and the UNC Cafeteria

Forty-Eight Believed Dead in Sea Disaster

By United Press

Kitchikan, Alaska, Nov. 25—A lieutenant commander in the Coast Guard has radioed United Press a report on the wreck of an Army freighter off the coast of British Columbia, in which 48 are believed to have perished.

Lieutenant Commander O. P. Weed flew over the stricken freghter Clarksdale Victory. He reports that the vessel has broken in two. He says that only the bow is visible, and that the stern apparently slipped off the reef into deeper water, carrying the crewmen to death.

Weed says he saw only three men clinging to the bow, and that he doesn't see how any of the other 48 members of the crew could possibly still be alive.

The 7,000 ton freighter ran aground during a heavy storm. Several Coast Guard and merchant vessels are standing by, but the mountainous waves and gale-force winds are making it impossible for small boats to reach the wrecked ship.

Dedmond Announces CP Action to Fill Slate for Election

The Campus party has taken action to complete its slate of candidates for the Student Legislature elections of next week according to an announcement made yesterday by party chairman Jess Dedmond.

New members of the party slate include Bud Rhinehart, vice president of Lewis dormitory, Joe Johnson, ex-Men's Council member and president of Old East, and Stan Smith of Asheboro all of whom will be candidates for men's dorm seats in the legislature.

From the women's dorms, the party has added the name of Lindsay Tate of Charlotte to their list of candidates.

W. B. O'Neill, a member of Delta Sig, honorary commerce fraternity, and Ernest Currin of Olivia have been nominated to represent the Town district.

Referring to the slate as a whole, as well as to the nominations most recently made, party chairman Dedmond commented last night that he believed the CP was "offering an excellent slate" and had an "exceedingly good' chance of electing it.

Dedmond requested that all CP candidates submit a list of their qualifications These will include activities at schools other than the University and must be submitted at the office of Graham Memorial before 2 o'clock today.

He added that there will be a meeting of all candidates this afternoon at Graham Memorial this afternoon Memorial. He said, "This meeting is to discuss business for the December elections. All candidates must attend to arrange for their final publicity plans."

Presbyterian Thanksgiving

A community Thanksgiving service will be held at 10:30 tomorrow morning at the Presbyterian church. Services will be led by the Rev. Henry Ruark, the Rev. J. W. Manley, and Dr. P. H. Epps.

Card Chain Sold In Big Transaction

St. Louis, Nov. 25 (UP)—The St Louis Cardinals have been sold in the biggest transaction in the history of baseball. A syndicate headed by ex-Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan paid $3,500,000 for the Cardinals and their farm club system.

The sale was announced today by Sam Breadon, who has owned the franchise for the last 27 years. The transaction was completed shortly after Hannegan had announced his resignation from the presidential cabinet.

UP Candidates

All University party candidates are asked to submit their qualifications and personal platforms to Miles Smith, party chairman, according to an announcement made late last night.

It is asked that this be done tomorrow before individuals concerned leave for Thanksgiving. They may be submitted in writing to Smith at the Daily Tar Heel office or at his room in Stacy dorm.

Library hours during Thanksgiving holidays will be as follows: Wednesday: 8:45 to 5 o'clock; Thursday through Saturday, 9 to 5. Sunday it will be closed all day.

Duke Returning 12,000 Seats To Kenan Stadium

Coaches and players are not the only busy folks in football circles here this week.

The tremendous job of removing from Duke stadium approximately 12,000 portable grandstand seats and returning them to Kenan stadium, where they will be used for Saturday's Carolina-Virginia game, is taking place.

These seats, property of the University Athletic association, were used at Duke stadium last week and helped accommodate the record-breaking crowd of 56,500.

R. L. Hutchins, Athletic association foreman, supervised the work of transferring the bleachers to and from Duke stadium, and has been highly commended for the efficient way in which the job has been done.

Indications point to a crowd of 35,000 or more attending the Carolina-Virginia game, which means that most of the portable grandstands will be in use at the 2 o'clock kickoff. Kenan stadium normally seats only about 24,000.

Three Girls Entered In Writing Race

Julia Ross, Miriam Evans and Benedicta dos Santos have been selected by Mademoiselle magazine to compete in the contest for positions on the College Board of Editors which will put out the college issue of Mademoiselle next August. The girls were selected on the basis of the features which they wrote last summer concerning an unusual aspect of the University of North Carolina. Miriam Evans wrote on orientation; Julia Ross, Duke-Carolina rivalry, and Benedicta dos Santos, CCUN.

Three Jobs

Each girl has been given three assignments by Mademoiselle to write.. In June, the twenty girls who have written the twenty best articles from the assigned topics will go to New York to put out the August issue.

Along with their manuscripts, the girls were required to send accounts of their college activities, character sketches, outlines of travel experience and a photograph.

Ross Lists

Julia Ross listed the following activities: a senior from Burlington and an English major, she is a member of Chi Delta Phi literary sorority of which she is secretary. She is on the liteary staff of the Caroilna Mag; secretary of the Publications Board; secreatry of Valkyries; member of Yack staff; member of Coed Senate; member Woman's Handbook committee; member Senior Class Steering committee; served as member of YWCA cabinet and is present secretary; student advisor.

Miriam Evans, senor from Asheville and journalism ma-jor is a member of the WAA council; member of CICA; member Daily Tar Heel staff; Carolina Mag staff; Graham Memorial board of directors; student advisor; senior class Steering committee; house president of Smith dormitory; member of Interdormitory council; served as president of the Interdormitory council and as member of Woman's council during the summer quarter of 1947.

Szafaryn Elected Junior President; Mitchell Takes Freshman Presidency

By Chuck Hauser

Len Szafaryn and Herb Mitchell walked away with the presidencies of the junior and freshman classes yesterday, triply-endorsed Szafaryn being uncontested and University party candidate Mitchell taking a good majority over his two opponents.

Szafaryn, another UP nominee, had received the endorsement of both the Student and Campus parties. Mitchell received 65 votes to 44 for Fred Thompson (SP) and 16 for Eric Coefield (CP).

The vice-presidencies of both classes remain open pending runoff elections between juniors Wells (SP—43 votes) and Fox (UP—36), with York (CP—19) following in third place, and between freshmen Benbow (UP—57) and Swaim (SP—34), with CP candidate Allen runner-up with 29 ballots.

Close Race

Coed Danny Payne, running on the University party ticket, took the position of secretary-treasurer of the junior class with 50 votes while SP candidate Sally Woodhull ran a very close second place with 46.

Nathan (UP—54) will undergo a runoff election with Leonard (CP—38) for the secretary-treasurer post of the freshman class. Kerr (SP—32) followed up in third place.

While University party nominee George Dunlop copped the post of freshman social chairman with 68 votes over Max Lindsey's 48 (SP), Bill Thorpe (UP—44) will be in the runoffs with Dave Ferebee (SP—27) for junior social chairman. CP candidate Fred Fussell took show money with 25 ballots.

One write-in vote came out of yesterday's light balloting in Gerrard hall—Speaker pro-tempore of the Student Legislature and Student party Chairman Charlie Long received one ballot for the position of junior class president.

SBI Director Will Make Talk To Institute Police Graduates

Graduation exercises for the Institute of Government's school in basic police procedure which began November 2 are scheduled for 6 o'clock tonight at a Carolina Inn banquet meeting.

Terry Sanford, assistant director of the school, made the announcement yesterday when he said Walter Anderson, director of the State Bureau of Investigation, will be the banquet speaker.

Twenty-seven graduates have completed the four weeks of training in firearms, patrol techniques, first aid, photography, traffic control, fingerprinting and preservation of evidence. The school operated with the cooperation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the state highway patrol and the State Bureau of Investigation.

Operating expenses of the school, said Sanford, including the costs of firearms and ammunition, were covered by the Institute of Government as a part of a service rendered cities and counties which are members of the Institute. The officers were housed at the highway barracks on Raleigh road.

Small, Black Puppy Is Lost on Campus, Wants to Go Home

The Daily Tar Heel business office and lost dogs just don't seem to get together these days, decided two sad souls at about 8:30 last night when they walked into the DTH news offices wanting to place a lost ad for a fuzzy black puppy of unknown heritage.

The dog belongs to Mrs. Barabara Harmon, of 157 Daniels road, and may be returned there to her or husband John, or to the pup's "godfather," Leonard Oettinger, at the Kappa Sig house.

Last seen on the practice field, the three-month-old puppy is reported to be suffering from a cold already, and the winter weather descending on the Hill undoubtedly isn't helping it any.

The dog answers to the name of Cookie, has a white, left rear foot and a little tail, and wants to go home to its mother very, very much.

Truman May Cut Curley's Sentence

Washington, Nov. 25—(UP)—Government sources in Washington report that Mayor James Curley of Boston probably will be released from jail tomorrow by a presidential commutation of his sentence.

Curley is serving a federal sentence for mail fraud in the federal prison at Danbury, Connecticut.

According to the reports, Curley, who also is a former Democratic congressman, will be released in time to spend Thanksgiving with his family. The elderly mayor will be eligible for parole on December 26.

VET'S CLUB CLOSES

After tonight the Vet's Club will be closed for the Thanksgiving holidays but will reopen immediately after the game Saturday to all members and their friends.

President Truman is shown talking with Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, guest-of-honor at a luncheon given by Democratic Senators, during an unexpected visit to Capitol Hill. McGrath was recently named Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, succeeding Postmaster General Robert Hannegan. (International)

Molotov Ties Up Opening Session Of Big Four Meet

London, Nov. 25—(UP)—The opening session of the Big Four conference here has been tied up by a dispute over Austria, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov having flatly turned down a proposal that the Austrian peace treaty be considered before the German question.

Secretary of State George Marshall led the fight to get the Austrian treaty first on the agenda and he was fully supported by the foreign ministers of France and Britain.

Marshall pleaded that Austria was the first country to fall to the Nazis and should receive justice. He warned Molotov that the conference must reach an agreement on something quickly, as he put it, "to reassure the people of the world."

Molotov insisted that the German question is more important than Austria and should come first. If Molotov gets his way, it means that if there is no agreement on Germany—and none is expected—the Austrian question will hang in the air for a long time to come.

PILOTS

Pilots wishing to fly to Atlanta on Friday, November 28, must report to the Air ROTC building to pick up form 64 Physical and place their name on the flight schedule. This must be accomplished by Wednesday noon.

A regular meeting of all pilots will be called immediately after the Thanksgiving holidays Watch this paper for the notice.

Anti-Inflation Group Forms For Action on High Prices

The Chapel Hill Anti-Inflation council at its first meeting at the Y last Monday, organized permanent committees for national and local action to lower prices.

The council set up at the "Hit High Prices" rally last Thursday in Gerrard hall, is composed of students and townspeople who volunteered to investigate the feasibility of co-ops here, to urge merchants to lower prices, and to act as a central agency for the publication of facts on inflation and price control in the community.

Ken Macrorie, temporary chairman, said. "With the willingness to work and the intelligent suggestions we found at our first meeting, we feel sure the council will not simply talk about the cost of living, but will act to lower it."

President Of IRC Out Until January

Bill Patterson ,president of the International Relations club, is in the hospital following an operation and will not be able to return to University until January, it was announced at the regular IRC meeting Monday night by Ed Hecht, vice president. Patterson, a sophomore from Winston-Salem, is now on the road to recovery, according to Hecht.

The International Relations club continued its regular meeting with a "Report on Italy" by John Sanders, who gave full information on the status of Italy's resources, occupational divisions, and politics. The report was followed by a discussion with the entire group participat-

Organizations Investigate Chances for Skating Rink

Possibilities of erecting and operating a roller skating rink on campus are being investigated by a committee composed of representatives from several campus organizations, according to an announcement made yesterday by Emily Ogburn, chairman of the YW's recreation committee.

Feeling that recreation facilities on campus and in the community are too limited, the WAA last year discussed the idea, and this year the YW recreation committee has begun work on it, with the support of Graham Memorial, the Monogram club, the YM, and the Inter-dorm council.

Faculty and administrative officials contacted so far seem to be in favor of the idea, and definite building specifications and estimates of cost are being secured. The committee is anxious to measure student reaction before plans have gone too far, and students interested in working with the group should contact the Graham Memorial office.

GM Has Full Schedule for Holiday Weekend

By Sam Whitehall

Students staying over the holidays, or returning for the Virginia football game, won't be hard up for weekend entertainment, from a look at Graham Memorial's Saturday schedule.

The new Johnny Satterfield orchestra, directed by cat drummer Nelson Benton will play for a free informal dance in Woollen gymnasium from 8:30 to midnight, in addition to an open house in the student union building and the weekly Saturday night bingo session.

Special guests at the hop will be University of Virginia students who have been especially invited to the dance by the Graham Memorial staff. Directors of the dance Mark Barker and Nancy Tucker requested men to wear coats and ties, even though the affair is completely informal.

John Van Hecke will conduct the Bingo party in the main lounge of Graham [illegible] at 8

Who Wants a Hundred Dollars?

There are more lines and more money in store for veterans. It seems that someone up in the Veterans Administration has turned up with a surplus between $1.5 and $2 billion, which "just growed" out of installments paid by GIs and Swabbies during their service careers.

No one seems quite sure how much extra money there is to be returned to ex-GI pockets, they only know that there's enough to give an average dividend of $100 per veteran.

There's no need to include the extra cash in your Christmas stocking, however, because the most optimistic estimates say 18 months at least, will elapse before payments can begin. Congress, of course, has to appropriate money for the task of bookkeeping and even then, it will take a year to complete the job of passing out checks to 19 million former servicemen.

One would think that some bright-eyed boy in Washington would hit upon the idea of merely applying the surplus cash to insurance payments for those who are still carrying their NSLI. That method would certainly save time and effort and the handling of much money. Even a better idea would be to simply have Congress pass a bill designating the extra cash to be used by disabled veterans or war widows. Either of these methods, however, will not give unnecessary employment to thousands of typists, clerks and bookkeepers, nor will they save the American people money in the long run, so you can rest assured that the $2 billion or whatever the final surplus is, will be distributed with much fanfare and excitement to millions of waiting hands.

After we have it, then we can quitely give it back to pay the saleries of those who gave it to us.

Drama at Bargain Prices

Some days ago the DTH got a letter concerning the high price of theatrical entertainment in this country as contrasted with low costs in Yougoslavia.

We don't know a great deal about the Yugoslavia theatre and we don't know whether the government there has any ulterior motives in wanting to get its people into the theatre. But we do know that it takes a fist full of currency to get a look at such current Broadway hits as "High Button Shoes" and "Allegro," not to mention the more serious productions.

In connection with this situation, Mark Summer, enterprising Playmakers press-agent, pointed out to us the other day that you could see the best in drama on this campus for less than the price of a good meal. He was referring, of course, to Playmaker productions like the beautifully-done production of "Saint Joan" last month.

Shaw's play—done as well as anyone could ask—took but sixty cents out of the pockets of season ticket holders and one dollar from regular ticket-buyers.

Of course, we realize that Broadway overhead is tremendous and that such luch productions cost much more than the Playmaker efforts—or, for that matter, the Yugoslav jobs. Nonetheless, it is still a fine thing that students here can see good shows without hocking their watches.

Same thing goes for Sound and Fury and the music department.—B.S.

Laboratory Theater

'Ernest' Was Good Job

By Bob Sain

Though it is not part of the good DTH policy of reviewing only "major" Playmaker efforts, this reviewer found Sunday night's Laboratory theatre production of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Ernest" such an entertaining and excellently done job that it behooves him to pass on the good word to theatre fans who might move around to see the next job this fine organization does.

Actually I don't deviate too much from the policy, since this is a "major" production in sense except the official. A. E. (Buddy) Westover's direction, performances by David Samples, Fred Johnson and Pat Palmer would have done credit to the revered boards of the old Playhouse.

Luckily, "The Importance of Being Ernest" was particularly

Webster's Word

Little has been said about Thanksgiving this year. There was no squabbling from the student body to the administration saying that we need a vacation. All of the states are celebrating the occasion on the same day—Truman has not tried to turn up the calendar and lengthen the space between Christmas and Turkey Day. Even Mr. Luckman let us down by elaborating on his plans for poultryless Thursdays to include a fowl Thanksgiving. In fact, there remains little to be said about Thanksgiving, except to wish you a happy Thanksgiving. This we will do — Happy Thanksgiving

So lack of an issue worthy of Thanksgiving we turn to Webster's International Dictionary and find:

Thangsgiving Day—(thanksgiving) (ed's note: he can't even spell it) In the United States, a day (usually the last Thursday in November) now generally appointed or recommended annually by the Federal and State agencies as a legal holiday to be set apart for thanksgiving and praise to God for the mercies of the year past. It originated with the New England colonists and has been regularly observed since President Lincoln's proclamation in 1863."

We guess that we will have to be satisfied with Webster's interpretation of the occasion, but we don't see how any red-blooded American can be Thankful with merely being Thankful.

Write Away

Dr. Rosen 'Re-summarizes'

Dear Sirs;

The Daily Tar Heel deserves to be complimented on the great improvement of its article on the second discussion of atomic energy control (DTH, Nov. 21), compared to the first article which caused so much controversy. the only criticism I have concerns that portion of the article dealing with my part of the discussion, where the orginal meaning has been slightly altered. I should therefore like to resummarize that part, as follows:

After outlining the Russian proposals, I pointed out that there were three essential differences between the Russian plan and ours: (1) The Russians want first to outlaw atomic weapons and then to introduce international control, while we favor the reverse order. (2) We want the international control commission to own or manage the atomic energy plants, while the Russians want the commission to inspect all phase of atomic energy production, but not to own or manage the plants. (3) The Russians want to retain the veto in questions of punishing violators (although not in the day-to-day functioning of the commission); we are opposed to the veto.

I then discussed possible compromises between the two plans, as proposed by British scientists. However, opinion was that, before a compromise could be attained, both sides would have to be willing to compromise, and that is was therefore necessary to build up a certain amount of mutual trust and good will if any plan of international control of atomic energy was to suceed.

Lenoir Again

To The Editor:

I am not a university employee. I just read the newspaper and eat at Lenoir Hall, the latter as seldom as possible.

Last week, in this column, Mr. Schoolfield attacked an anonymous Lenoir Hall employee who had used this facility to express a grievance against that institution. Mr. Schoolfield said that this person should have delivered his complaint to the management instead of the DTH.

There are several weak points in Mr. Schoolfienl's argument. He claims that he has no prejudice against University employees on the grounds that he is one himself. Yet, he is obviously prejudiced against one such employee or he would not have written his letter.

Mr. Schoolfield also declares that if one is afraid of his employers then he is wasting his time, not only in working but in striving for an education. I can not see the logic in such a conclusion. Surely it is worth while to earn a living. Fear of employers is not an infrequent condition. If Mr. Schoolfield's philosophy were practiced universally, then the unemployed would probably greatly outnumber the employed. Too, I should think that fear of one's employer would be an incentive to securing an education since educated people are better equipped to put themselves into the employer class.

Then he argues that the anonymous one would have been treated fairly had he complained to Lenoir officials, because there officials are a part of a chain of command which extends all the way up to the highest university offices. Here, again, I fail to see the logic. Is it probable that one's boss will tell his boss what a punk boss he himself really is?

Finally Mr. Schoolfield critizes the anonymous employee for threatening the tranquility of our "usually neighborly campus life." I should like to question that tranquility. I, for one, have long had a far from tranquil attitude towards Lenoir Hall. I've found any number of commercial establishments about the state where I can eat better and cheaper than at Lenoir Hall. I would like to know why. The anonymous one may be trying to tell me why. He couldn't have chosen a better place to do it—in the newspaper. It's an old American custom.

In closing, it seems to me that by analogy, Mr. Schoolfield would have sought out the anonymous employee and delivered a personal rebuttal, but that is not to say that I am opposed to Mr. Schoolfield's (or anyone's) privelige of airing his views in the paper.

Hark! The Sound Of Trouble

Ed's Note: The article published below was received as a contribution to our Write Away column, but because it is about three times the length which we permit we are printing it as a personal opinion of a housewife in the trailer court.

By Mrs. Helen Roundtree

One bright Hawaiian spring not long ago I ran into a group of Carolina Gentlemen homeward bound from the war. Life was pleasant, marking time on Hawaii's lovely beaches, and yet all seemed to be obsessed with one idea: getting back to the Hill. Between off-key choruses of "Hark the Sound" I heard the Carolina legend. It all sounded pretty wonderful—the sylvan surroundings, the quiet university town, the school spirit, etc. But then someone always remembered that I was from the commercialistic, monopolistic, capitalistic, money-loving, damn-yankee North, and I wouldn't appreciate such things after all.

I married one of those dyed-in-the-wool Tar Heels. When we decided to come back to the Hill for Law School, I was overjoyed. I had lived for two years in a small state university town and thought I knew what to expect. The school there was everything. The town people appreciated the fact that the town owed its very existence to the school and students, and they acted accordingly.

I wasn't in Chapel Hill long before that bubble burst. I learned that we had to pay a premium price even for the privilege of eating. I heard of the very monopolistic, capitalistic, money-loving Chapel Hill Merchant's association with its conspiracy to keep prices up. We joined the Co-op in Victory village and partially overcame that difficulty.

Then I learned another startling thing. It wasn't just the merchants of Chapel Hill who were making a rake down on the students. The Book Exchange seems to be doing all right for itself. The stories of its exhorbitant prices are legend. But after all the Vet's Administration paid those bills, so we weren't so very much concerned with that.

The blow fell this fall when the University decided to enter the race to rake down all they can from the veterans. We had been able to come to Chapel Hill last year only because we had invested money in a place to live, a trailer. We didn't complain last year about our $8 a month rent because that included electricity, cold water, and bath house facilities. However, we did wonder why we should have to pay rent to live on property belonging to the State of North Carolina.

But we didn't complain either about the low voltage every night around meal time, the dirty rest rooms after every football game, and the cold water and cold shower rooms many times. When $5 of the $8 went for electricity (according to signs prominently posted by the University), those seemed like little things. But this October a meter was installed for each trailer, and our rent was reduced—one dollar. If we use the $5 worth of electricity as claimed by the University (based on special University rates), our total rent will come to more than $12 a month. Our rates are the high residential rates. Also, the little things I mentioned above have not improved.

A committee was formed to discuss this matter with the powers that be in South building. Only two things came out of that meeting. First, the University had made an investment of $16,000 in its veterans (the two bath houses in the trailer court)—period. Victory Village was built by the government.

The University has evidently forgotten all about the hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of permanent improvements built by the Navy for this University. They forgot the thousands they are making every month by merely having veterans in this school. Their only consideration has been to get that $16,000 back in four years. But strange thing is that some must have slipped up in arithmetic. At a rate of month now charged for space, the University will paid its investment back in than two years. Figure yourself. There are more 100 trailers in the court 100 trailers the University making $700 a month for months a year. We pay for months—not just the time actually in school. Twelve $700 is $8,400. In two that makes a total of $16,

The second thing we learned was, quote, "We didn't want you here anyway," unquote.

Doesn't it seem strange that one part of the Greater University of North Carolina (Chapel Hill) is charging exhorbitant rent, while another part (State college) is charging no rent at all? Doesn't it seem strange that we pay rental rates for the electricity to an electric company owned by the state university. State college students pay special rate to a privately owned electric company (The Carolina Power and Light Company).

Doesn't it seem strange that married students of the school must buy their own residences, pay rent for a place in which to park them, pay exhorbitant rates for electricity—for the very privilege of staying up late to study, when unmarried students living in the dormitories have no investment, pay a lower rate of rent per quarter, pay for no electricity or heat, have a shower within a few feet, have no problem of expense of upkeep"

Maybe I'm wrong, but to all this a slight money hungry commercialistic odor? I'm assured that the good people of North Carolina who realize that this University would not approve of this school's damn-yankee practices. Maybe there are ways of finding out how the good people of North Carolina do feel about this situation.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

More About Meyers And Money

By Drew Pearson

Washington.—Now that the Senate War Investigating committee has dipped into the personal bookkeeping practices of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, it might also take a good, penetrating look at the way he kept top-secret records of the Army Air Forces Material Command during the war.

The Senate committee has developed the fact that General Meyers concealed hundreds of thousands of dollars of personal income. But if it looks thoroughly into the Air Corps, it will discover that Meyers kept three sets of books on Air Corps procurement.

Even such top-flight War department officials as then Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson had difficulty getting the true facts about the Air Corps buying program from Meyers. And when Patterson finally sent several aids to see Meyers to determine whether the Air Corps was wasting federal funds, they learned that Meyers kept three sets of books.

Set No. 1 told the facts about the Procurment program. This was for the eyes of brass hats only.

Set No. 2 was for The White House and was calculated to show Roosevelt how able and brilliant top Air Corps officers were.

Set No. 3, again different from the other two, was designed to show Congress how hard up the Air Corps was and why it needed more money.

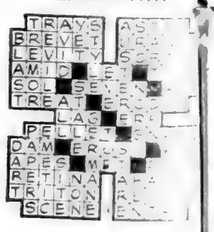
Patterson's ex-assistants say that General Hap Arnold, Meyers' superior, was fully aware of Meyers' bookkeeping practices. At one point when Patterson ordered an assistant to make a survey of Air Corps procurement practices, Arnold and Meyers even fought the survey, and it was only by calling in private engineers that Patterson was able to calculate the exact statue of Air Corps procurement

This survey showed that Air Corps buying policies strongly resembled a man drinking coffee and eating doughnuts. If he had half a doughnut left over, he ordered another cup of coffee; if he had half a cup of coffee left over, he ordered another doughnut—thus making for an endless cycle.

In the case of the Air Corps, when the brass hats had too many pilots, they ordered more planes. When they had too many planes, they ordered more gasoline and pilots. When the quantity of pilots, planes and gasoline got out of proportion, they ordered more air bases.

Patterson finally had port read to a meeting Arnold's air staff. which Arnold acidly

"How many copies of port are there?"



"Three," replied Pat aide.

"Put them in the side Arnold turning on his heel storming out of the room

What Arnold didn't know til later was that there was fourth copy of the report was taken to Harry Hopkins Isador Lubin, then a House secretary. Hopkins moned Arnold to The White House and showed him the of the report charging Air waste. Arnold claimed there no truth to it whatsoever

CCUN, Lions Hold Statesville Parley

By Bill Buchan

Citizens of western North Carolina learned a lot about democracy and its operations during the conference on United Nations in Statesville sponsored by the Collegiate Council for United Nations and the Statesville Lions club last Thursday and Friday.

In typical small town fashion, delegates to the conference were used to hearing speeches and discussions by state politicians or, at the most, Washington diplomats. They got more than their share in Statesville, however, when guests included ambassadors from Argentina and Yugoslavia and the counsellor from New Zealand.

Ambassador Sava N. Kosanovic of Yugoslavia did his full share of providing excitement for the guests by emphatically denouncing the Marshall Plan, Winston Churchill, Greece and Turkey, our intervention policy in Greece and Turkey, and wound up by declaring that Greece was the only country left in the world where fascism was practiced. He came across as was to be expected, by proudly supporting the Russian policies in Eastern Europe. If he was mild in his speech in Chapel Hill last October, he made up for it in his fifty minute oration Friday night at the Statesville Country club.

Hero of the conference was tall, dark and handsome Oscar Ivanissivich, Argentina's ambassador to this country. In addition to being a famed surgeon, Mr. Ivanissivich also proved that he was a well-bred and wise servant of his people by completely captivationg his audiences where ever he went during his four day stay in this state. Typical of his actions was the purchase of a pair of boots for a ten-year-old youngster who burst into the Vance Hotel Thursday, just after the ambassador had arrived, to tell his father of the boots he wanted for Christmas. Much to his father's embarrassment, the Argentine took the boy by the hand and together they went down the street to purchase the desired boots.

Uppermost in the minds of all who attended the conference was the work of the United Nations and the CCUN, co-sponser of the sucessful gathering. Over seventy college delegates, in addition to more than two hundred Lions and their ladies, joined together to discuss and plan future work for the Council. Lions from various cities throughout the western part of the state expressed enthusiasm for the work being done by the Collegiate Council and offered any halp possible.

College delegates from Chapel Hill and other schools left Statesville with renewed hope and interest in the belief that peace is possible only through the United Nations and that the UN will be successful only if all the American people support it wholeheartedly. If the interest shown by civic leaders this past week is any indication, there is no other alternative but success.

Archaeology Courses of Dr. Harland Are Proven Most Popular; Professor's Admittance 'My Courses Are Crips' Packs Classes

By Roland Giduz

"That's where I fool 'em," smilingly mused the genial gentleman who looked and talked a great deal like "The Timid Soul" after a dose of Wheaties. "The students take my courses because I admit they're crips, but when they have finished, the yusually discover they've learned something — often in spite of themselves."

So it goes with Dr. J. Penrose Harland, professorial "czar" of archaeology here. The popular professor of pyramids and Parthenons, who has been packing the students into his classes on the Chapel Hill campus since 1927, is noted for his droll wit, which is casually, but invariably, brought into his classroom.

Last year more than 625 students signed up for his eight courses, which include Greek Sculpture, Archaelogy, and the Bible; Egypt and Mesopotamia; Aegean Art and Hellenic architecture; Greek Civilization, Ancient Architecture, Greek Mythology, and Greek Arts.

Popular Elective Courses

They might sound dull to the layman, but the fact that they are collectively the most popular group of elective courses at the University is proven annually as Commencement when a check will usually show that more than

Cornerstone Ceremonies Scheduled For Planetarium-Art Gallery Saturday

Morehead to Present Building; House Will Accept for University

By Raney Stanford

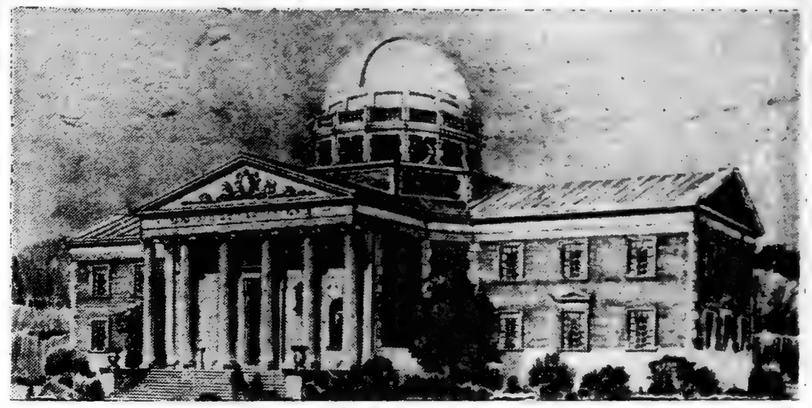
The construction of the new Morehead art gallery and planetarium building will be officially launched Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, when John Motely Morehead, the donor, and a distinguished group of visitors will attend the cornerstone-laying of the structure and its presentation to the University.

Chancellor Robert B. House will preside at the ceremonies, which will be the subject of a half-hour radio broadcast the presentations being made by Mr. Morehead. Accepting for the University will be Chancellor House; for the student body, Tom Eller, president; and for the school's trustees, Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte.

The actual unveiling of the stone, which is to be laid on the north-west corner of the site, will be by two young relatives of the benefactor, Jean Morehead of Charlotte and Julia Harris of Danville, Virginia.

A special compartment has been provided in the cornerstone for a self-sealing, metal box which will contain various mementoes and significant items connected with the University and the donor's family. Contents of this box are tentatively planned to include a copy of this edition of the Daily Tar Heel, a University catalog, a student directory, a copy of the Alumni Review, a copy of the provisions of the Morehead foundation, a genealogy of the Morehead family, and a biography of Governor of North Carolina John M. Morehead, the grandfather of the building's donor.

J. Maryon Saunders, in charge of the arrangements for this occasion, said the ceremonies will be conducted from a small platform either over the stone site or beside it. Spectators can best reach the site from Franklin street or from the path alongside Graham Memorial, Saunders explained.



Dr. Howard E. Rondthaler, president of Salem college and a former classmate of Mr. Morehead's, will deliver the invocation to open the ceremony. Following this, Governor R. Gregg Cherry of North Carolina, and Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia, and Colgate Darden, president of the University of Virginia, will speak briefly.

Music for the occasion will be provided by the Durham High School band, which has been chosen from over a thousand scholastic musicians who are to be on hand for the Carolina-Virginia football game. As a special request from Mr. Morehead, they will conclude the ceremonies with the playing of "Dixie".

Besides the visiting dignitaries from the Old Dominion state, coming for the gridiron spectacle as well as the building presentation, a distinguished group of Mr. Morehead's friends and associates will accompany him on his two-day stay in Chapel Hill.

Among these are New York State's Boxing Commissioner Col. Eddie Egan, a neighbor of Mr. Morehead in the latter's present home in Rye, N. Y. Otto Eggers, national-

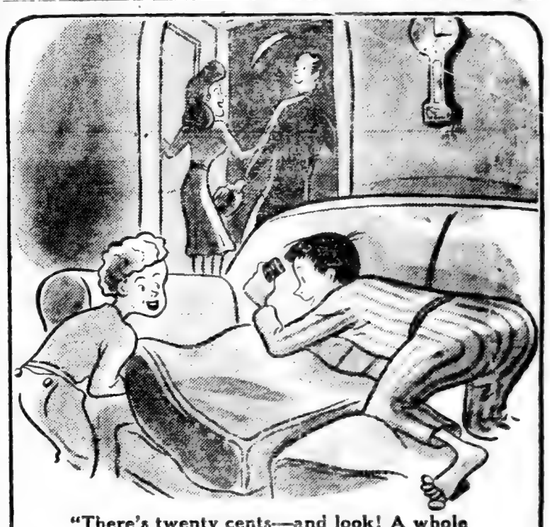
Visiting Dignitaries Will Get Feet Muddy When They Descend Into Gaping Clay Hole

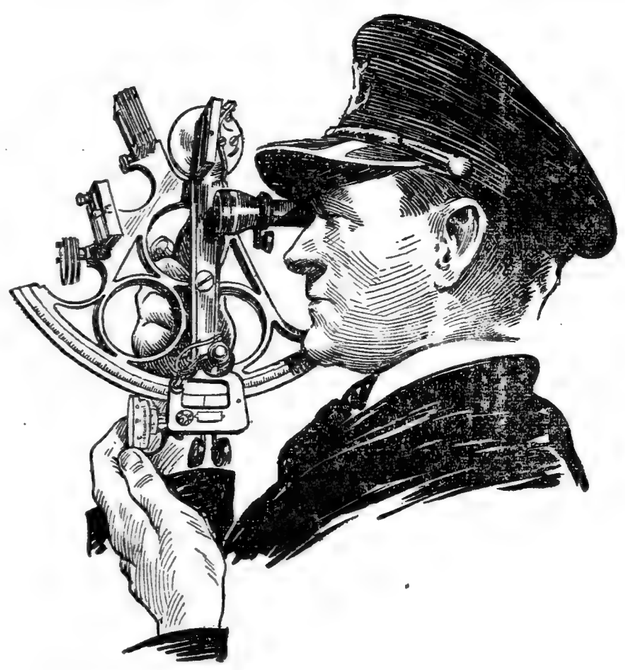
By Donald MacDonald



The muddy metamorphosis of a gaping, red-clay hole into John Morehead's six-col- officially begins Saturday. And mud has had a great deal to do with it from the beginning.

A lot of people who hadn't dared stick their feet into the slick soil before will be present to get their pictures taken and their names in the newspapers when the cornerstone is laid.

Heretofore several interested University officials in overshoes, the J. A. Jones construction workers wearing hip-boots, a few eager-beaver geology students too interested in granitic weathering to care what they were bogging down in — and this reporter — are about the only persons who have descended into the yawning cavern. Reason: Chapel Hill rain has turned the excavation into a slippery miasmal mud-flat.



Interested squirrels can see from the trees overhead — the trees that remain, that is, after the axeman's blow. And fro mthe northeast corner of Alumni's third floor a human can get a squirrel's-eye view. The vie wis pretty good from the fourth floor of Ne wEast, too, for several reasons. If you're on the fourth floor you're in (1) geology lab and it's like going on a field trip without the drudgery of walking; you're in (2) the Philanthropic Literary society and the chasm is more interesting than the enactment of wage-price control; or (3) you're still tight from the Duke weekend and

IN the telephone business, much of the knowledge of "where we are" and guidance as to "where we are headed" comes from the analysis of statistics.

Telephone statisticians and engineers are constantly studying trends and figures. They assemble the facts, analyze them, correlate them, discover their significance, draw guidance from them.

The work of these men is vital to our never-ending task of improving telephone service. In such work many college-trained men have found satisfying and rewarding careers.

And this is but one of the many interesting phases of the telephone business.

There's opportunity and adventure in telephony.

Je Pense Que Je Suis...

Three New Books, A Kind Reviewer, And Some Comment

By Bob Sain

Two excellent new Frence novels and a rather uncertain survey of a young man's mind have been more or less consumed by the reviewer in the past week.

First in importance and in quality is Jean-Paul Sartre's difficult but rewarding novel, "The Reprieve." Some have complained about obscurity and denseness in Sartre's first first novel, "The Age of Reason." They will fond in "The Reprieve" a book to make its predecessor nursery-rhyme simple.

Sartre has tried to scoop up with his two hands European thought of the year 1938; and he has succeeded. But his technique, which contributes much to the difficulty in reading the book, completely ignores the more obvious forms of transition. His characters are scattered over Europe from Paris to Prague and he doesn't hesitate to take you from one set to the other in mid-sentence.

His much-discussed Existentialism is present in "The Reprieve," though it would take an expert to isolate it and put a finger on it. (I'm taking the word of others. I think the philosophy in the book is Existentialism. It may be Tibetan transmigration.)

"The Reprieve," second in Sartre's trilogy "The Roads to Freedom" is desk and student lamp reading. Wait for the Christmas hiatus, or even better the summer holidays, to read it.

Albert Camus, on the other hand, has offered a 154-page, three-hour novel called "The Stranger." Camus writes in a clean, matter-of-fact style much removed from the more literary manner of Sartre.

He tells of a very ordinary man who lives in North Africa (Algiers) and goes about his business quietly. The little man gets involved in living and finall kills someone. The killing wasn't really necessary. It was just part of living. Camus is an ultra-pessismist and his little man of Algiers is one of the most pitiful characters in contemporary literature.

Bill Mauldin, the author of "Back Home," was, unlike the poor man of Algiers, not drawn into life — but thrown in, hed first. Mauldin's book concerns the politics and life of Mauldin. It tells of the young, popular GI cartoonist who came back from the war in Europe to find himself a celebrity and a widely-recognized political wizard.

His first civilian political steps were toward the far left. These, however, were more or less retraced as Mauldin got richer and richer and lost his identification with the massses. Now, like many young semi-leftists, he is not greatly concerned with politics. His pen(and typewriter) have been turned to the civil rights front.

"Back Home" is, as the publishers' blurbs always say, "profusely illustrated" with Mauldin's well-known brand of cartoonery.

Campus Parties in Brief . . .

Greek Letter Groups Fete Imports, Alumni

By Sally Woodhull

As though the Duke game and the dances weren't enough activities for one week end, fraternities and dorms sceduled parties at just about every spare moment during the three-day period. Alumni and imports flooded the campus, and pinnings were numerous.

Vaughn Monroe and his Moonmaids were entertained at dinner following their Friday afternoon concert by the Sigma Chi's, whose Sig Sevtet furnished entertainment.

Following the Saturday night dance, the PiKA's entertained brothers, pledges, and alumni and their dates and wives at breakfast from 11 until 1 o'clock. Earlier in the evening a buffet supper was served to about 200 of those who managed to struggle through mud and traffic back to Chapel Hill after the game.

PiKA PLANS

The PiKA's are also planning to welcome alumni and friends this coming weekend when Carolina meets Virginia. As in past years, many enthusiastic visitors are expected down from Alpha chapter at Virginia.

Zeta Beta Tau alumni, guests, and brothers from the Duke chapter were entertained Friday and Saturday night at the house, with a colored combo providing music. Some 40 guests were given breakfast Sunday morning.

The Dekes served their regular buffet luncheon for alums before the game Saturday, and the ATO's gave a buffet supper Saturday night after the game and a breakfast following the dance. Phi Gams threw a "Beat Dook" party Friday night, and were hosts to alums and guests at a buffet supper Saturday night and at breakfast following the dance.

Pre-game highlight for McIver girls was a dorm breakfast served Saturday from 9 to 10 o'clock in the apartment of their hostess, Mrs. Cooke. Assisted by Lynn Blanchard, Mrs. Cooke served from a lovely silver tea set.

The TEP's weekend activities were highlighted by the pinning of two brothers, Jud Kinberg and Wiley Robinson, both to imports from W. C.

Plans for a party during the holiday are being made by the SAE's. To be given in Greensboro, the party will honor John Berry. whose marriage to Margaret Stone will take place in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida on December 20.

Pi Phi Alums back for the weekend were entertained at supper Sunday night. Among them were Nancy Laid, Joanne Miller, Rusty Hancock, Ann Robinson, Betty Kendricks, and Ann Cutts. On Monday night Jean Basnight gave a surprise bridal shower at her home for Sara Buchanan who will be married to Bill Porter in December.

Chi Omega pledges were entertained by the Beta's Thursday night, and they are planning a party after Thanksgiving for the pledges of the other sororities.

Among ADPi's entertained back for the weekend were Betty Cheatam, whose engagement to Jim Volger has just been announced; Caroline Storn, Virginia Wilson, and Mary Pierce Johnson.

We hear that Mr. and Mrs. James O. Miller were honored guests at the Billy Graham revival meeting in Charlotte last Saturday night. Miller ran in a special race against Parson Gil Dodds and after the race Mrs. Miller's inspirational guidance was part of the text of Rev. Dodds' special sermon.

half of the graduating class in the College of Liberal Arts have had one or more archaeology courses.

Basis for this amazing popularity is the personal touch. Though many of his classes have more than 120 students, he gets to know each one and their individual idiosyncrasies by the end of every quarter. And he'll probably remember them when they send him a postcard from some museum years later or drop in on him at Commencement.

He has a cure-all remedy for those he doesn't get to know so well at first because they seem to have othr negagements. "I keep a Black list of those," he said. "Then, when I casually mention a few names on the Black List in class, the word usually gets around, and they all come floating back. Also, a little quiz will usually throw them of and fill up the classroom again. I just humor the students or let them think I do."

And humor them all he does, from the first day they walk into the precipitous classroom, the 111 Murphy hall auditorium, through the last minute of the final examination. Jokingly, but with an undertone of seriousness, Dr. Harland refers to his classroom as the worst constructed auditorium in America and as the poorest possible environment for archaeological study.

Lectures Are Illustrated

The seats in 111 Murphey are too close together; there's no place to take notes; it's too stuffy; the lighting is poor, and the acoustics worse: and if you're not careful, you are likely to fall out of the steeply banked rows of seats and hurt yourself.

But the advantages of seeing the lectures via illustrated slides which accompany all of his lectures invariably liven up the period and help the class forget these discomforts. Dr. Harland has often said that if any student can get the room remodeled he'll try to name the new auditoriu mafter him.

Legend around the campus has it that no student has ever failed a Harland course — a tale which the jovial

Dorothy Clarke to Wed Koch, Son of Founder of Playmakers

The wedding of Dorothy Clarke, daughter of Reverend and Mrs. D. A. Clarke of Roanoke Rapids, and William J. Koch, son of Mrs. Frederick H. Koch and the late Professor Koch, founder of the Carolina Playmakers, will take place Friday afternoon at 5:30 in the Duke chapel

A recent graduate of Meredith college, Miss Clark also attended Carolina and Duke where she became a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

The bridegroom-to-be, a University lab instructor graduated from Carolina and Chapel Hill high school, where he was editor of the annual. He saw war service in the Navy, and was also here with the V-12.

Mrs. Frederick Koch announced that no invitations to the wedding had been sent out, but that all friends were cordially invited to the ceremonies.

The bride and groom have known each other for approximately seven years, according to Mrs. Koch.

PICKING POEMS

IT WAS CLOSE, very close! We're referring to the job of picking a winner in the Daily Tar Heel poetry contest. For out of 19 poems submitted in answer to the "Ode to the Tarheels" from up Virginia way, there was little to choose between two or three of them that seemed better than the rest.

At one time, we actually considered calling it a tie between the two that were favored by all four judges, but in different order. Prompted as we were by lack of space in which to publish them both as well as the feeling that only one should be chosen, we finally narrowed it down to the one winner and a runner-up. And we were fortunate in being able to obtain four tickets—two for each budding poet.

Enough for preliminaries and on to the results. In first place with a three-stanza ode is J. Gray McAllister, Jr., a Chapel Hill resident. And the one so very close behind is Jim (Yo-Yo) Dickinson, who according to the student directory is a junior from Rowland. Both men may pick up a pair of Virginia ducats this afternoon in the sports office.

Oh yes, the winning poem:

"OWED TO VIRGINIA"

"One day, from Old Virginia, from the town of Charlottesville,
An illuminated missile was dispatched to Chapel Hill,
And tho we doff our toppers to the literary skill,
The wit and ingenuity, it quite behooves us still
To question its prophetic bent for in no subtle way
It said that Ole Virginia would take the game away.

Now history has written on its pages, sad tho true,
Are our scores with Old Wake Forest and the mighty Texas crew,
But there's one thing not on records and we feel that well you may Know the glorious ovation which our team received next day,
For the Carolina spirit in defeat is none the less,
But gives fire and inspiration for our team to give its best.

And if you've read more history you'll see we're riding high
And our victories are increasing as each weekend passes by
W acknowledge your fine season and give honor to your team,
But your prophecy, we're confident, is off the well known beam.
U.N.C. will be VICTORIOUS, but when you go away,
We'll wish you all the best of luck till next Thanksgiving day."

IN OUR OPINION, McAllister does a fine job in responding to the poem by Virginia's William D. Hart, Jr. But there are several good features to point out in Dickinson's literary effort, especially the two prophetic lines that follow:

"But one sad thought looms in our mind, to do with N. C. State,
Will Wolfpack tear the 'lier to bits and leave us just the bait?"

STATE DOOD IT

THOSE TWO LINES bring to mind one definite idea that seems to be spreading over the Carolina campus—namely, that Virginia ought to be a pushover for the Tar Heels if State could drub the Cavaliers. Lots of teams have lost football games because of such overconfidence.

As shown in the predictions down below, we personally pick Carolina by a 34-6 count. True, this isn't exactly an indication of a toughie, but the way the Tar Heels have been moving as of late, they're capable of turning in such a performance. Remember last year?

Without a doubt, though, Virginia's loss to State didn't help Carolina at all. For one thing, it further proves that the Cavaliers were pointing for the local eleven—even to the extent of overlooking the Wolfpack. Then too, there's always the old "rebound" angle—that a team that loses one week will be gunning all the more for victory the following Saturday. And lastly, the prestige that might have been gained from a triumph over Virginia just won't be there now that the Charlottesville lads have been bowled over for the second time. In other words, there's little to win by winning and lots to lose by losing .

FINAL FORECAST

IT'S PREDICTING TIME again, both for results of last week and for heralding the final display in the 10-week series coming up today. And the big news is that Jake Wade has pulled into a deadlock with Bill Lamkin for the top rung of the forecast ladder.

Wade and Billy Carmichael led the parade last week with classy 16 for 20 performances. Morty Schaap and Lamkin followed with 14 and this observer could hit on only 13. So with just the 20 games that compose this week's list remaining, only the battle for first is still in doubt.

The nine-week total on 180 games:

	W	L	Pct.	GB
Bill Lamkin	115	65	.639	—
Jake Wade	115	65	.639	—
Morty Schaap	113	67	.628	2
Bob Goldwater	106	74	.589	9
Bill Carmichael (III)	101	79	.561	14

Netters in Contest On Friday; Harriers Run Meet Saturday

The football team won't be the lone Tar Heel unit to oppose Virginia this weekend. Carolina tennis and cross country outfits will also do battle with the Cavaliers, the netmen scheduled for their annual practice match against Virginia Friday afternoon and the harriers running the Charlottesville lads Saturday morning.

Of main interest on the tennis courts will be the number one battle pitting Carolina's Ray Morris against Virginia's Harold Burroughs. When the two teams met last Spring, Burroughs pushed the Tar Heels' number one netter, Vic Seixas, to the limit before losing in the third set. Seixas, now drilling with the basketball squad, will not play in the tennis match.

Team Lineup

The rest of the Carolina lineup will have, in order, Charlie Rice, Jack Kenfield, Heath Alexander, Stan Gruner and Bert Ingram. Coach John Kenfield is not certain of his doubles assignments but has named Morris and Rice, Kenfield and Alexander, and Ingram and Gruner as the probable combinations.

The match is slated for 2 o'clock Friday, but should bad weather interfere, it will be held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

Harriers In Finale

Rain or shine, Saturday morning will also see Carolina's cross country squad in its final meet of the season starting at 11 o'clock when the Blue and White harriers trot over the four-mile course in competition against Virginia's hill-and-dalers. The meet will start and end at Fetzer field.

The Tar Heels will be paced by the newly-crowned National Collegiate cross country champion, Jack Milne, who will join with Jimmy "Preacher" Miller, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Halstead Holden, John Briston, and Chuck Herty to make up the starting team. The Cavaliers are led by their two-mile star, George Traeschel, who finished second to Milne in that event last Spring.

Carolina will be shooting for its 17th straight win in dual meet competition extending over a three-year span. This season, Coach Dale Ranson's charges have captured wins from Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Duke, and N. C. State.

The event will mark the farewell cross country appearances for two members of the team, Miller and Bristow, both of whom have completed their eligibility. Miller will attempt to keep intact his record of not having been out of the first place finishing in dual meets for the past two campaigns.

GAME WORKERS MEET

All men working as gatekeepers, ushers, and fence-watchers for the Virginia game Saturday are requested to meet at Gate 7 at 11:30, Pete Mullis announced yesterday.

Intramural Cagers May Reserve Floors

Intramural Director Walter Rabb announced yesterday that due to the fact that the Tin Can will not be available for intramural basketball practice, the Open House program will reserve in advance basketball courts in Woollen gym for teams expecting to enter the mural tournament.

Team managers who wish to reserve courts for their unit should notify the intramural office not later than four o'clock on the Monday on which they wish to play.

Rabb also announced that the swimming pool will be open on Monday and Wednesday evenings to groups wishing to have splash parties. Someone from the group must check with the mural department in advance. Parties must contain at least fifteen persons to be accepted.

Going through the entire open house program, Mr. Rabb stated that on Monday nights the following activities will be conducted: Intramural basketball practice, badminton (both league and novice play), hand ball, squash, table tennis, swimming (if the pool is requested), and fencing.

On Wednesday evenings the following activities will be run: Table tennis, fencing, volleyball, squash, handball, badminton and swimming, if requested.

The Carolina badminton club, playing in its first engagement, lost to Durham last Monday, 4-2.

The club will play every Monday night with teams from Raleigh, Durham, and Burlington.

Tar Babies to Battle Navy Jayvee Tomorrow

By Larry Fox

At eight o'clock this morning the Tar Babies, temporarily under the direction of assistant coach George Radman, will depart for Annapolis, Md., where they will play the Navy jayvees tomorrow morning in their final game of the season.

Fresh from their 13-7 victory over Duke's Blue Imps, the Carolina jayvees will be far from full strength when they square off against the future admirals. Injuries and raids from the varsity have taken their toll of men. Fred Stoioff, Joe Swicegood, and Ed Bilpuch are all sidelined with injuries received in the Duke fracas. Kenan Rand is still out with an early season injury and Merl Noreross has been ordered up to the varsity. Gus Purcell, who is due to start at tailback, may also receive promotion.

All that the Carolina high command knows about the Navy jayvee gridders is that they will probably run from the T formation and that they beat the Duke jayvees, 27-21.

The junior gridders will arrive in Annapolis at 4:30 in the afternoon and will engage in a short practice. After the game, which is scheduled to begin at 10 in the morning, they will return home.

Purcell will probably open the game at tailback for the Blue and White. If he stays with the varsity, Jack Brasington, who performed so well against Duke, will start. Bob Koontz, Bob Reynolds, and Billy Britt will be in at fullback, blocking back and wingback respectively.

Indians Accept Bid For Dixie Bowl Tilt

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 25. (UP)—William and Mary has accepted a bid to play in the first Dixie bowl game here on New Year's day .

An opponent for William and Mary has not yet been announced, but it is expected that the other club will be chosen from among Kansas, Mississippi, Virginia, Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech.

Five Girls Advance In Ping Pong Event

Five girls have advanced to the second round in the coed table tennis tournament currently being conducted by the Women's Athletic association.

The results posted thus far are: Nancy Carter (Chi O) over Marion Farrell (Town); Nancy Tucker (Alderman) over Sibyle Mitchell (Smith); Mary Davis (Carr) over Nancy Norman (Archer); Ethel Perry (McIver) over Molly Blackburn (Pi Phi); and Sarah Walker (Kenan) over Beverly Smith (ADPi).

The tourney consists of seven rounds with the finals slated for December 15. The second round must be completed by December 2.

Freshman Harriers Down State, 25-31

Raleigh, Nov. 25—Carolina's freshmen cross country team gained revenge today by downing the State college frosh, 25-31. Bob Black of Carolina captured the individual honors in 17:12 for the three-mile course.

This was the finale for the yearlings and closed out the season with a win and a loss, both against State.

Jim Vernon of State was second, with Dave Hiatt and Frank Hooper of Carolina third and fourth. Bill Steed of the Wolfcubs was fifth and Dick Carr and Bob Barringer finished out the Tar Heel scoring in sixth and 11th positions respectively.

Jerry Lewis, Dave Schermerhorn, John Brockmann and Waite Wallenhorn were other Tar Heel competitors.

Coach Joe Hilton was very well pleased with his team's performance and remarked that the boys showed much improvement during the year.

Squad Meet Slated for Matmen

Daily drills are still going on for the Carolina wrestling team, though they are somewhat hampered by the intramural tournament which is now in progress. The fact that the varsity matmen are being used as officials has all but stopped regular practices.

Still stressing conditioning, the bone-benders are pointing to an intrasquad meet which is to be held next Thursday afternoon.

Coach Hobie McKeever has just received some NCAA movies which will be shown to the team and the public in Woollen gym next Monday evening, at 8 o'clock. All those interested are invited to attend.

There is still a shortage of lightweights, especially in the 128-pound class, and all freshmen and sophomores are urged to come out for the squad. It is hoped that some good lightweights may develop from the intramurals.

Grid Elevens Clash In 52nd Encounter Of Ancient Series

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina and Virginia, two of the South's oldest rivals, will meet for the 52nd time on Saturday in a renewal of the colorful series which dates back to 1892. Kickoff time is 2 o'clock.

The game will ring down the curtain on the 1947 grid season for the Tar Heels and the Cavaliers. Both have enjoyed successful seasons, with each losing but two games; and there is a strong possibility that the winner will receive a bid to one of the major bowls on January 1. There will be representatives from these post-season classics watching the game.

Carolina has been made the favorite by virtue of six straight victories over top-flight opposition. Virginia bang and didn't lose a game until Pennsylvania beat them 19-7, several weeks ago. Penn is rated as one of the strongest teams in the nation.

State Did It

Virginia's only other defeat was administered by N. C. State last week, 7-2, in a startling upset in Charlottesville, Va. In all the other games, Virginia encountered little trougle in scoring a win. It will get its biggest test against Carolina on Saturday, but Virginia has been pointing for the Tar Heels all season. In fact this is generally believed to be the reason that State was able to beat the Cavaliers. Virginia evidently overlooked the scrappy Wolfpack in its preparations for Carolina.

Carolina has won 25 games, Virginia has copped 23 and there have been three ties in the ancient series. Carolina won last season's meeting, 49-14, and directly after that win the Tar Heels accepted a bid to the Sugar Bowl. Carolina fans would like a similar occurance after the 1947 Virginia game.

Notables Present

The game will be the 27th consecutive meeting between the two teamss. Not since 1918, when the World War ended proceedings, have Virginia and Carolina failed to meet.

Among the notables at the game will be Governor and Mrs. R. Gregg Cherry, of North Carolina, and their guests. Governor and Mrs William M. Tuck, of Virginia. A crowd of about 35,000 is anticipated for the Thanksgiving holiday tilt.

Coach Carl Snavely let his boys have a day of rest on Monday of this week as a reward for their fine work against Duke. Perhaps the Carolina mentor felt the team had reached its peak and he didn't want to run the risk of losing this edge by overwork. Heavy sessions were resumed yesterday and will continue today, with light

Phantoms to Continue Practice For First Contest Next Week

Preparing for their first game of the 1947-1948 season, Coach Tom Scott's cagers will continue practice through the Thanksgiving holidays in order to be ready for their initial contest with the Catawba Indians next Wednesday in Woollen gym.

So far, no definite starting lineup has been announced, but such stalwarts as team captain Bob Paxton, Nemo Nearman, Norm Kohler, Bill Miller, and John Dillon will probably lead the Tar Heel attack. Others with a hand in the shooting will be Rip Ryan, King Cole, Dan Nyimic, Roger Scholbe, Fred Swartzburg, Dick Hartley, Coy Carson, and Vic Seixas.

Twelve games of a 25-game card will be played on the home court. The first four games scheduled are home affairs, with Guilford, Elon, and High Point following the Catawba club into Woollen gym.

Jimmy Miller, Chunk Simmons Receive Invitations to Race In Mid-Winter Sports Carnival at New Orleans Next Month

By Morty Schaap

Two of the finest Carolina track performers from last year, Jimmy Miller and Chunk Simmons, have been invited to take part in the mid-winter sport's carnival in New Orleans this December.

Miller is co-champion in the conference two mile and will run in the 3,000 meter event. Last year he finished second to Earl Mitchell of Indiana. It was the first big time meet that the slender lad from Erie, Pennsylvania had ever competed in. He did very well in beating such boys as Fred Feiler, Drake, who was Mid-western distance king. Jimmy had a successful season on the cross country trail, leading his team in all the dual meets to date. He has a personal record of not having been out of first place for two seasons in the dual meets.

Last year he won the Conference title by setting a new course record and this season was forced to drop out because of an ankle injury. He was running a close second when the mishap took place.

Simmons is probably the leading hurdler in the South and for the past two springs has led the Carolina team in competition scoring valuable points in the broad jump, high jump and the javelin throw. He is conference champion in both hurdles events.

After school last year Simmons competed in the National AAU event at Lincoln, Nebraska with good results. He captured the junior title in the high hurdles in 14.3 which was just a tenth of a second off the record. The next day he came back to run second in the senior high hurdles behind Harrison Dillard.

As a result of his fine showing he was selected to make a European jaunt through the center of the continent. On his way to New York he took part in the National decathalon and finished in third place.

In Europe he was undefeated in the timber topping event, scoring wins in Prague, Fatowice, Poland, Istanbul, Athens, Vienna, Brno (Czechoslavakia) Budapest and Bratislavia (Czechoslavakia).

So, when Sugar Bowl time rolls around this winter the Tar Heel football team may not be on hand, but there will be Tar Heels on hand.

well-suited to the informality forced upon it by its presentation in not-too-large- main lounge. Clever, utilitarian sets by James Riley covered a minimum of "stage" space and Westover's direction moved the cast smoothly through the three-act comedy. This production almost makes one believe that Wilde wrote his plays for drawing room presentation.

The small supporting cast, following the lead of Samples, Johnson, and Palmer, turned in uniformly excellent performances. W. P. Covington was outstanding, while Catherine Covington and Eileen Smith contributed workmanlike jobs. Betty Jane Blaylock, the ingenue, was quite good enough not to harm the production, but she seemed too knowing and exuberant for her role. She may have been miscast.

Originally scheduled for only two nights, the turn-out of an overflow crowd in the lounge Sunday night has caused the Laboratory Theatre Steering committee to extend the run of the play through last night.

pedagogue hastens to deny. "But anyone so bad in one of my classes will usually make up his work later," he explained.

Most popular of his classes is the course in Greek sculpture, taught each spring term; but the doctor offers no connection with the season for this popularity, basing it simply on the fact that the class is "first floor, 10 o'clock," evidently an ideal spring chaice when coupled with this interesting subject.

He confesses that the course he enjoys teaching most is a special class of his own cooking-up in archaeology and the Bible. Summing it up simply, he said: :I don't try to save souls, and few of thm hit the sawdust-trail after they've finished, but it does help many students to realize what the little black book is they've seen around their homes and hotel rooms."

Backs Up Bible

In this section he shows how science and archaeology substantiate the Bible and also fills in some gaps in the Bible. For instance, he recalls the Biblical story in Kings II where the Syrians were fighting the Israelites. There was a three-year lapse in their battles which is not explained in the Bible, but, according to archaeological research, and Dr. Harland, the two warring nations stopped fighting each other during ths period in order to defend themselves mutually against the Assyrians. And at the end of this time, they fell to fighting each other again.

Dr. Harland says he was bitten by the archaeological bug while at Princeton. Despite razzing from his three roommates, all varsity football players, he took every archaeology course offered there, and even went out for the football team a few weeks at the behest of his roommates, two fo whom were All-American players in 1913.

After serving as an ensign in the Navy convoy service during World War I, he resumed his studies and teaching and ended up at the University of Cincinnati in 1925, where he married the first girl he met there.

Since coming to Chapel Hill in 1927 he has been active in faculty and student affairs, is chairman of the Student Entertainment committee and a member of the Town Planning commission.

Dr. Harland thinks that if more people studied archaeology, the world would be a much better place to live in. Taking him as an example and checking back through his record of personal achievements and popularity with his students, who would want to disagree with him??

Move To 10th

The afternoon off Monday wasn't the only reward the Tar Heels got for beating Duke. In the weekly Associated Press poll Carolina jumped up to the 10th position from 13th of the week before. The Tar Heels also received several votes for the top position in the nation. A win over Virginia possibly might move the Tar Heels even higher.

Like To Wallow?

We don't advise going down into the canyon, where only bulldozers and cement-mixers dare to tread. Don't go unless you're particularly fond of putti-putti and mud-baths in November. But if you happen to be strolling along nearby with a pig, the hole might prove a good place to wallow in.

When the metamorphosis is complete, out of these muddy depths will have risen a Monticello-like architecturmasterpiece for which the University will forever be proud.

Parties Release Election Statements, Candidates' Qualifications

CP Dorm Candidates, Platform Published

Attempting, according to party chairman Jess Dedmond, to limit its promises to what it can realistically expect to accomplish, the Campus party yesterday released for publication a statement of its objectives and a list of its candidate's qualifications.

We feel," stated Dedmond," that the strength of student government depends upon a successful orientation program, and, feeling as we do, we shall attempt in cooperation with the orientation committee to keep orientation up to or higher than the level reached this fall."

Chairman Jess Dedmond advises all CP candidates that their expense accounts are due by 6:00 PM today. He requests that each candidate see him at Graham Memorial between 2:00 and 5:00 PM to complete this business.

Intercom System

He promised that, "We will exert our efforts to secure an inter-communication system to facilitate phone calls coming into the men's dorms."

With these two statements, the Campus party took its position and enunciated its policies for the benefit of the voters in the elections scheduled for tomorrow.

Leads Ticket

Leading the party ticket in tomorrow's elections will be Bob Haire, a junior, who is president of the Winston-Salem Carolina club. Haire, upon accepting the nomination stated, "I sincerely desire to serve the student body in the capacity of Student councilman." Candidate Haire is president of Manley dormitory and a member of the University Dance committee. A member of Delta Sigma, commerce professional fraternity, he is one of three candidates for the Student council post.

Candidates offered by the party to fill posts from the men's dormitories include Jess Dedmond, party chairman, and Walt Arnold, party vice-chairman. Dedmond's qualifications include service with the AAF, membership on the staff of Graham memorial and on the orientation committee. He is a member of the Interdormitory council and past president of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary fraternity.

Joining them on the ticket is secretary Bob Ormond of the interdormitory council. Ormond is also past president pro tem of the Di senate, president of Grimes dormitory, and an ex-member of the student legislative assembly in Raleigh.

Jim Vogler, senior warden of the commerce professional fraternity, is also a member of the CP ticket being offered to the men's dorms. Vogler served in the AAF, is a member of the legislative committee and chairman of the Constitution committee.

Campus Party Picks Six Men from Town In Legislature Race

Six men have been named to run as Campus party candidates for seats from the Town district. They include Delta Sigma member W. B. O'Neill and Ernest Currin of Olivia. Also on the ticket are John Zucker, president pro tem of the Di, and Bill Swain. Swain, a Phi Gam is the advertising manager of Tarnation magazine. Statements from Town CP candidates Di Senator and debator Charlie Hodson and Fred Adair were also unavailable at presstime.

Women Candidates

The four candidates for women's dorm positions in the legislature have also had statements of their qualifications released. ADPi pledge Martha Manning is co-chairman of the foreign students' division of the CCUN. She is a transfer from GC where she served as secretary of the IRC and on the school paper. Candidate Sue Stokes transferred from George Washington where she was active in a number of campus organizations. Here she is Social chairman of TPE, chemistry sorority and a member of the Yack staff and of the Canterbury club. She is an Alpha Gam pledge.

Royall and Tate

Pi Phi pledge Catherine Royall is a member of the Splash club on this campus. Before entering the University, she was vice-president of her class and president of the Women's Athletic association. Lindsay Tate, a transfer from Randolph-Macon is exchange editor of the Carolina mag, a member of the Tarnation advertising staff and a member of the Yack staff. She is a Kappa Delta and a member of the Stray Greeks here.

UVA Meeting Tonight Concerns Allotments

Newly elected officers of the University Veteran's Association will preside over the regular monthly meeting of the association being held tonight at 8 o'clock, in the clubhouse.

Present plans for the meeting include the reading of reports submitted by the committees appointed to investigate food and housing problems, and the planning of a concerted effort to have the present amount of GI subsistence raised by the next congress.

FRENCH PREMIER ROBERT Schuman is shown here shaking hands with MME. Germaine Poinsot-Chaouis, only woman member of his recently-formed coalition cabinet. Schuman last night was voted almost dictatorial powers by the French National Assembly to deal with the 2,000,000 workers now on strike.

Campus Soap Drive To Open Wednesday

A drive to collect 3,500 bars of soap to send to Egypt to fight the cholera plague will begin in Chapel Hill Wednesday, December 3, in cooperation with the International Union of students, an organization representing students of more than 35 countries.

Since cholera is a filth disease, it was decided that, with the current shortage of soap, the most direct means of fighting cholera would be by helping overcome filth problems through Egyptian students who will distribute the sanitary supplies.

The drive ,planned jointly by Joe McArthur, Vera Scales, Martha Aiken, and Bill McGirt, and supported by Jehan van de Velde of AVC and Aubrey Williams of the SCHW, will begin in conjunction with International Students' Week. Joe McArthur's four Boys' Clubs of Chapel Hill high school are sparking the town and high school drives. Carolina students will participate in collecting the bars of soap from boxes placed in the YMCA, Graham Memorial, the Library, Lenior hall, Carolina Inn, Scuttlebutt and Ab's Bookshop.

It was considered by the group that, in this time of political and social confusion reflecting the profound need for unity among cultures and men, this drive to help a stricken country with a tangible gift would graphically symbolize the interdependence of all peoples.

A bar of soap from everybody would more than double the quota set for Chapel Hill.

'Future of Cities' Lecture Scheduled

"The Future of Cities" is the subject of a lecture to be delivered here Wednesday by F. J. Osborn of Welwyn, England. Osburn, an author, lecturer, and town planner is touring this country under the sponsorship of the American Institute of Planners.

He will appear here at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in 403 Alumni hall. The Britisher advocates limiting the spread of big cities and the preservation of 'Green Belts' of agriculture in this country.

As chairman of the planning association, he has testified before several committees investigating civic planning, and the reports of these committees have substantially endorsed his recommendations

Slack, Mackie Lead Ticket Of Student Party Hopefuls

Charlie Long, speaking as chairman of the Student party, stated yesterday that the slate of candidates being presented by the SP in the campus-wide elections to be held tomorrow is one of the finest ever to be offered by any party in any election.

According to Long, the SP is appealing in this election, to the campus for support for its candidates in order that the record of progressive government of the past six months shall be endorsed and assured of continuing success. He stated that, "The SP's candidates go into this election pledged, regardless of the issues, to but one thing — to carry forward the banner of student government."

"Vital Necessity"

Explaining the party's failure to issue statements of the qualifications of individual candidates, Long said late last night "I do not wish to go over the individual merits of each candidate at this time, but I do wish to point out the vital necessity of placing on the councils in particular and into the legislature people who know student government and who have not only the desire but the qualifications necessary to fill these positions adequately."

Leading the party's ticket, Chick Slack and Bill Mackie will be running under the SP banner for the Student council. Mackie, a law student, is chairman of the legislature finance committee. He is a former vice-president of the IRC, a member of Phi Gamma Delta, of the Di, and of the Debate council. Miss Slack, a pharmacy school student, is a KE and is in the Pharmacy senate. She is a member of the Presbyterian church choir, and of the Women's Glee club and of the CICA.

Women's Council

The student party is offering for the consideration of the coed voters four Women's council candidates. They include Carter Taylor from Charlotte who is from McIver dormitory, Patsy McNutt of Greensboro from Alderman, Iris Bost of Concord from Spencer, and Mimi Massey of Milledgeville, Georgia from Spencer.

The party has also nominated a full slate of candidates from the women's dormitiries. These women, running under the banner of better student government, include three from Kenan dormitory and one from Alderman. The three are Jo Farris of Danville, Kentucky, Ruth Manning of Pittsburgh, and Gloria Peter of Allentown, Pennsylvania. Edie Knight, UP nominated candidate from Alexandria, Virginia has been endorsed by the SP. She is from Alderman dormitory. Effie Westervelt from Chapel Hill is also running on the SP ticket from the women's dorms. Mary Swann also is be-

J. M. Morehead Presents Building In Cornerstone Laying Ceremonies

By Raney Stanford

"The building, which is now above ground, and the planetarium, which has arrived in Baltimore, are now in your hands, sir."

With these simple words, John Motley Morehead, noted industrialist and alumnus of the University, formally presented the new Morehead Art Gallery and Planetarium building to the University at the building's site Saturday morning.

The presentation followed cornerstone laying ceremonies and was viewed by a throng of spectators which overflowed the wooden platform on the northwest corner of the site and spread to the earthen hillocks and the cement foundation of the building itself.

The ceremonies were scheduled to begin at 11 o'clock, but were a little late due to Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia being snarled up in the pre-game traffic. Upon Governor Tuck's arrival, the invocation was delivered by Dr. Howard E. Roundthaler, president of Salem college, and Governor R. Gregg Cherry thanked Mr. Morehead in the name of the state of North Carolina for his service to his school and country.

Governor Tuck and Colgate W. Darden Jr., president of the University of Virginia, then congratulated Virginia's "neighbor to the south" on her son and the state's achievements.

The mortar for the cornerstone was then laid by two attractive young relatives of Mr. Morehead. Julia Harris of Danville, Va., and Jean Morehead of Charlotte. Workmen of the J. A. Jones Construction company, under the supervision of Superintendent G. E. Wise, lowered into place and levelled the cornerstone, on which was carved the year "1947". Mr. Morehead packed the special metal box, for insertion into a slot provided inside the stone, with mementoes of the occasion; including a copy of the Daily Tar Heel, one of the Chapel Hill Weekly, one of the Alumni Review, a book of genealogy of the Morehead family, and several coins placed in for luck by surrounding newspapermen. The box

No Los Angeles Trip Says Faculty Verdict On Post-Season Games

High hopes prevalent on the campus of seeing the glory-laden Tar Heels play a post-season football game in Los Angeles, the Dixie Bowl, or other rumored locations were extinguished yesterday with the announcement that no post-season game bids would be accepted by the University Athletic committee.

The statement, released by the faulty committee on athletics at approximately 5 o'clock, read as follows:

"The University appreciates the many invitations but feels compelled to decline them, due to the fact that the team has completed a difficult schedule in a most creditable manner and feels it would not be in the best interests of the football squad to prolong the season."

With rumors running rampant from half-time Saturday up until yesterday evening, many students had already wired for reservations in Los Angeles and other cities.

Christmas Program Is Set for Tuesday

A community Christmas program, titled "Christmas in Dance and Drama" and sponsored by the YWCA, will be presented in Memorial hall on Tuesday, December 9 at 8 o'clock, as the first of a series of annual programs.

Stephen Vincent Benet's drama, "A Child is Born," will be given by the Wesley Players, dramatics group of Wesley Foundation, Methodist student organization. Marty Pearsall and Mrs. Madeline Sutherland are directing the play.

Modern Dance

The Modern Dance club, under the direction of Byrd Green Cornwell and Betty Doss, will do three origional dances to Christmas carols. Bill Hooks is choreographer for "Coventry Carol," and the choreography for "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen" and "Carol of the Bells" was done by the group.

Gray Simpson is chairman of the committee arranging the program, and her committee is as follows: Sunny Sunstrom, costumes; Sally Lee, ushers; Marty Pearsall. lighting; Joan Schlossberg, make-up; Harriet Sanders, programs; Ruth Evans, photographer; Jim Moon, scenery, Marilyn Blackwell, Kate Connor, and Mary Neely, posters; Jim Moss and Margie Cameron, publicity; and Ferne Hughes, music.

Community Singing

Scenery will be done by Jim Moss and the newly organized Junior Art league. Costumes will be furnished by the Playmakers and the Episcopal Canterbury club. Community singing during the program will be led by a chorus made up of members of the various church choirs and the Glee Club.

Cast of "A Child is Born" includes John L. Dameron, Martha Pearsall, Robert M. Allen, Milton Stewart, Ethel Perry, Sibyle Mitchell, Robert Bunch, Robert Parham, and John Gignilliat. Voices are Raymond Mills, Claude Wilson, Ted West, Robert E. Allen, Robert Bunch, and Wilton Stewart. Music, which was written and arranged by David Arner, will be performed by the Methodist choir under the direction of Eugene Stryker.

COUNCIL TO MEET

Chapel Hill's anti-inflation council will meet tonight at 7:30 on the second floor of the Y according to Ken Macrorie, temporary chairman.

UP Lists Candidates, Announces Platform

For the consideration of Carolina's students in tomorrow's campus-wide elections, the University party is offering a slate which is pledged to "thoughtful support of stronger student government at this University.

UP Chairman Miles Smith, of Salisbury, is anticipating the largest student body vote of any of the three election days this quarter. Smith said yesterday, "No matter who is elected, we want Tuesday's vote to be representative of a majority of student body opinion. The University party is sincerely trying to play fair."

Party Objectives

Most of the individual candidates have not made separate statements, but all of them are expected to subscribe to the party's objectives. "Qualifications for each candidate are given in order that individuals may be judged by their personal merits, not by the promises of a party or what others have done in past elections," said Herb Nachman, publicity chairman.

Men Nominees

Men dormitory repersentatives for Student Legislature are listed with the following qualifications:

Bill Thorp, of Rocky Mount, is a representative to the University club.

Bob Kirby, of Charlotte, is a freshman and an officer in the Charlotte-Carolina club.

Dan Logue, of Clariton, Pennsylvania, is a varisty football player who lives in Manley dormitory.

Ed Silver, of High Point, is a freshman. He lives in Alexander dormitory.

Steve Jones

Steve Jones is a member of the junior class and a native of Clinton.

George Dunlop, a freshman of Asheville, was elected last Tuesday as freshman class social chairman.

Thorne Gregory, a freshman of Halifax ,lives in Alexander dormitory.

Kyle Barnes, freshman from Winston-Salem, holds a dormitory office in Nash hall.

Stuart Bondurant, a Winston-Salem, is a member of IFC, was secretary of his freshman class, and is on the UP steering committee.

Bill Hedrick

Bill Hedrick, vice-president of Alexander dormiaory, is a University club member. He is a freshman from Lexington.

Dick Boren, sophomore of Greensboro, was secretary of Phi Eta Sigma honorary freshman fraternity.

John Stump, sophomore and a transfer from Washington and Lee university, is a member of the DTH and Yackety-Yack staffs and of IFC.

Neal Patrick, of Wilmington, was a member of the student legislature of New Hanover high school and was battalion commander of the ROTC unit there. Ed Holmes, freshman of Leaksville, was president of his senior class in high school and captain of the basketball team.

The following are UP candidates for town legislators:

Bill Swain, of Winston-Salem, has received a triple endorsement. He is a member of Phi

Women Nominees

Edie Knight, of New Orleans, one of four women candidates for dormitory representatives to Student Legislature, said yesterday, "I am sincerely interested in the development and perpetuation of good student government. I hope to do my share in the Legislature by fairly representing those who elect me." A transfer from Smith college, Miss Knight is secretary of the North Carolina chapter of Collegiate Council for United Nations. She is also a member of the Dialectic Senate and an Alpha Delta Pi pledge. Miss Knight has also received endorsement by Student party.

Other Women

Other candidates for women's dorm legislators include:

Ferne Hughes, of Rainelle, West Virginia, is a transfer from Greenbrier college where she was active in student government. At Carolina she is business manager of the Women's Glee Club, chairman of the YMCA's music committee, and a member of the Chapel Hill Choral club.

Peppy Lucas, who transferred from Virginia Intermont college, where she was sceretary of student government and a member of Phi Theta Kappa, scholarship fraternity, is a native of St. Petersburg, Florida. She is a member of the YWCA here.

Louise Dodson

Louise Dodson of Miami, Florida, was president of her freshman class at Salem college, from which she transferred. She was a sophomore representative to the Salem legislative body and for her junior year had been elected house president of her dormitory.

Marietta Duke, a transfer from Randolph-Macon Woman's college, is UP woman candidate for town representative to student legislature. She was a member and the publicity chairman for the Randolph-Macon debate council.

The following women are University party candidates for woman's honor council:

Person Hall 'Jugtown Pottery' Exhibit Begun Yesterday as Memorial to Busbee

By Margaret Gaston

Friends of Person Hall sponsoring an exhibition of Jugtown Pottery" which opened Person Hall Art Gallery yesterday at 4:30 with a talk Julianna Busbee. It is a memorial exhibition to Jacques Busbee who made Jugtown a pottery center know to craftsmen and collectors all over the world.

In Moore County, Busbee found a community of craftsmen living independent of the outside world. They made their own furniture, cloth, and what he called "dirt dishes." The jugs, churns, and pickle jars they made differed little if at all from the ones made in England when the first Staffordshire Potters came to this section.

Busbee searched the countryside for old pieces that were signed and dated. He found several from the eighteenth century, and some from the nineteenth century. The Moore county potters had been conscripted by the Confederate army to make military supplies such as mugs, chow bowls, and medicine jars.

Using originals as models, Busbee trained the local potters to reproduce the ware made by their ancestors, By changing a line or a curve slightly, he reproduced these purely functional and often clumsy wares into objects of interest and beauty.

Shown with Jugtown pottery will be examples of hand weaving by Trude Guerinonprez, of Black Mountain College, North Carolina.

Friends of Person Hall is a club of North Carolinians interested in art. The chairman is Mrs. Paul White of Chapel Hill.

Eastern Carolina Colleges Are Expected To Send 150 Delegates to Peace Meeting

Over 150 delegates from Eastern Carolina colleges are expected to attend an adventure in applied Christianity during the "Road to Peace" program being held in the Alumni building on December 8.

Principal speakers at this one-day student conference will be Dr. A. J. Muste, secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and Dr. Stuart Nelson, Dean of the Department of Religion of Howard university.

Doctor Muste's talk on "Applying Christianity in world Affairs" will begin at 10:20. Following this, Doctor Nelson will tell of his experiences during his conferences with government officials in India, from which he has recently returned.

Workshops will provide the students with an opportunity to talk informally with these leaders on world peace. Four areas of discussion will take place in the following areas of the problem; "Organization of Peace", "Spiritual Bases of Peace,", "Struggle for World Power," and "Economic Bases of Peace." The leaders for these groups will be announced later.

Statewide sponsorship of this conference is by The American Friends Service Committee and The North Carolina Council of Churches. Local planning is under the direction of a committee headed by Hibbard Thatcher. He is now urging all interested Carolina students to plan to attend these meetings.

Tomorrow Is Election Day -- Ho Hum

Tomorrow is election day, but the majority of the student body will say "Who Cares?" and let it go at that. The last two elections substantiate this only too well. Last October 15 less than one-seventh of the student body, or 1,051, took enough interest to cast their vote for editor of the Yackety Yack, a position which will expend $45,000 this year. Last Tuesday, juniors and freshmen were to go to the polls and select their class officers, but figures show that most of the ballots were unmarked — only a small percentage of the two classes cast their vote.

The who-cares attitude is detrimental to student government. There are too many on campus who prefer to belly-ache all during the year about the work of the student legislature, and the councils and then refuse to use their one method of insuring student government of the best men available.

We don't propose a compulsory voting system. We don't favor the Russian method of having a single candidate for an office and if the voter does not like him he must scratch his name from the ballot—at the risk of being a marked man himself. We do not favor this method even if it does insure the candidate a large vote. But neither do we condone the practice of staying away from the polls and students taking an indifferent attitude.

Some may think that student government is "kid's stuff". Others have remarked "How did that fat-head get into office?" He got into office because you were too lazy to vote for a man who you thought would be better fitted for the job.

Student government and its functions can thrive only if the masses are behind the leaders of the program. If you do not take the initiative and at least cast your ballot at the polls, then it shows that there is something sadly lacking in student government and the officers elected by a light vote are inclined to take little interest in the job they were "elected" to perform.

We cite the deplorable freshmen elections as an example. This year, as last year, enraged freshmen protested the first election date because they stated that there was insufficient time and publicity to nominate candidates. The legislature, board of elections, and political parties were willing to delay the election and reopen nominations in the hopes that they would be able to coax more interest in the election. But what happened on election day? Scarcely more than 100 freshmen voted in the balloting.

The only belly-aching that is warranted by an election of this type would be from the candidates and not the voters. It is the candidates who are not given a fair break and not the voters.

A Great Football Season for the Annals

Coach Carl Snavely can mark up another successful season in his football annals and credit his fighting Tar Heels with a season that is surpassed by few teams. Beginning with a tremendous build-up from the nation's sports writers, the Silver Fox and his scrappers can go back to their lair with a feeling of a job well done, despite the fact they dropped two games — one to the mighty Texas eleven and the other to the hard-driven Wake Forest team. The fame of the 1947 football machine has done much to acclaim the greatness of the University with a record that can stand on its own.

And when you as a spectator review a game from the stands you see little of football itself. We are inclined to forget the hours spent in learning plays and polishing them down to precision time and exactness. We forget the five managers who work each afternoon issuing equipment and looking after the needs of the players, and who often run errands during the game to fish out needed materials. We erase from our minds the hard knocks that players get during the week-day scrimmages — the sore muscles and bruises they collect daily — the scouts who visit rival teams in the hopes of figuring out weak points and fortifications. No less in importance are the trainers who patch up ailing players and the backfield and line coaches who spend tireless hours working for teamwork and skill.

All of these are necessary ingredients for a great football team. And the efficiency with which these necessary details were carried out accentuate the greatness of the University team.

Constantly there has to be some emphasis placed on the future and the Jayvees squad is one method. The Jayvees have a record which speaks for itself. They have completed an undefeated season. In five games they have chalked up four wins and one tie. Many of the Jayvee players have won berths on future varsity teams.

Bowl game or no bowl game, the players, and Coach Snavely, assisted by a staff of essential helpers, have made the 1947 schedule a season that will live long in the minds of the University and those who love the game.

UNRRA Boats Idle in Greece

Washington. — Members of the Senate Appropriations committee, just returned from Europe, inspected the Dachau Concentration camp with its gruesome gas chambers and other instruments of death.

Afterward they went into a courtroom where a number of Nazis, including two Dachau hangmen, were on trial. Committee Chairman Styles Bridges of New Hampshire asked a guard what the charges were against the prisoners.

He noticed two of the Nazis listening with interest as the guard said briefly that they were former SS Troopers, Gestapo members and executioners. Bridges then asked the guard to point out the two hangmen.

Immediately the two Nazis who had been listening shot their hands up and, with broad grins, identified themselves to the senator.

It wasn't only the Nazis who used English, however. In English, the Pope later told the Appropriations committee, during a visit at Castel Gandolfo on All Saints Day, that "I think I have met half of the American Congress this Summer."

Payoff was the visit of the nine senators to the docks of Piraeus, near Athens. There they inspected a group of 10 American fishing boats sent to Greece by UNRRA but never used by the underfed Greeks because — the senators were told — Greek fishing magnates refused to permit competitive boats to leave the docks regardless of how much their countrymen needed food.

A crowd of Greeks gathered as the senate groups inspected the boats. Finally, one ragged Greek pushed his way forward and, in broken English, asked: "are you Americans?"

When the Senators nodded, the Greek inquired: "What are you going to do? First you sail these boats over here—Now did you come to sail them back?"

Brusque Harold Knutson, a power in the House and Rock-of-Gibraltar Republican, was sitting at a cluttered dinner table in the House cafeteria, dissecting Senator Bob Taft to California Republican Bertrand Gearhart and Georgia Democrat Gene Cox.

"He made a lousy speech in San Francisco," snorted the gentleman from Minnesota, "then went to Seattle and made a lousier one."

He mashed his cigar in a dirty plate, cleared his throat and fired at an imaginary spitoon on the floor.

"I'll tell you," he continued, "Taft is smart but he's got no character!"

When Republican Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire was touring Europe with the Appropriations Committee he asked Austria's Foreign Minister, Karl Gruber, how the Russion-occupied zone in Austria compared with the U.S.-British zone.

"Well, it's like this," replied Gruber. "Russia got the great agricultural lands, the key industrial cities and the oil fields."

"What did the Americans and the British get?" Asked Bridges.

"Oh, they got the scenery."

Note—the U.S.-British Occupation zone takes in most of the beauty spots, including the Austrian Alps and the vacation resorts, but is mainly non-productive.

You can write it down that Gael Sullivan won't remain on much longer as executive director of the Democratic National Committee.

Sullivan stayed on as party director reluctantly after Senator Howard McGrath succeeded Hannegan as chairman of the Democratic National committee. McGrath and Sullivan grew up together in Rhode Island, however, they haven't clicked at the National committee.

For one thing, McGrath has embraced such Tories as Jouett Shouse, one of the original Liberty Leaguers, who Roosevelt would never let come anywhere near policy matters.

Best guess is that McGrath will soon be left alone to steer the Democratic ship of state for better or for worse—probably the latter.

By unofficial messenger, the emperor of Japan has sent his personal thanks to Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah for saving the Imperial Palace from being bombed during the war.

The hitherto untold story on Tokyo bombings is that President Roosevelt was urged by certain generals to order the bombing of the emperor's palace. So he called on Senator Thomas, once a Mormon missionary to Japan, for advice.

Thomas recommended strongly against the bombing. He argued that the Japanese people would be embittered and no military advantage gained.

"The palace will not be bombed," Roosevelt promised.

After the war this story eventually got back to Emperor Hirohito, who asked an American to deliver the Emperor's deep appreciation to the Senator from Utah.

Iowa's grizzled Senator George Wilson was so infuriated when the State Department refused to show him the Wedemeyer report that he assigned a research team to study the feasibility of legislation to force the report loose. The researchers advised against it, and Wilson has decided instead to block the Administration's program for China until all the facts are divulged.

Note — Secretary of State Marshall promised a program for China "Two or three weeks" after the stopgap aid for Europe was proposed. It hasn't been offered yet.

Defends Former Co-Workers

To the Editor:

Please allow me to stick out my neck in defense of my former co-workers, the busboys at Lenoir Dining hall. I refer to a very clever and cunning letter, written by an individual named Schoolfield, which appeared in a recent Tar Heel.

In the first place, I wonder if mention of the fact that he is a University employee but not a dinning hall employee was made in order for people to know that brother Schoolfield does - or does not - know whereof he speaks?

In the second place, I have also seen too many legitimate and respectfully-put gripes of busboys gung aft agley after their submission to "proper persons". Moreover, student (?) Schoolfield doesn't seem to have much faith in our mighty organ of student opinion, The Daily Tar Heel (stick around a little longer, citizen), and he is obviously oblivious to the fact that the management of the dining hall goes into paroxysms of twitchings, wincings, and mincings that are reminiscent of an artificial neurosis whenever the name of this august organ is sounded. In fact, I have never seen a more perfect example of the conditioned reflex.

Surely the boys who go to work at the dining hall realize that they are to work under certain conditions, but it is a sad state of affairs and a horse of a different color, to corn a phrase, when the management abuses its position by suddenly announcing a wage cut without rhyme or reason. The fact that the wage for student help has changed from 40 cents an hour plus a one-third reduction on all meals to a flat 55 cents an hour shows that someone either does not know what a fair wage is or that corners are being cut at the expense of the student workers - or both.

As for the "chain of command", I wonder if anyone with the I. Q. of 65 could not declare that it was only after repeated failures with this procedure which often involved one or more "missing links" that the buck started airing their grievances via a method which epitomizes the American way?

Come Out From Behind Post

Rev. Herbert Spaugh, D. D.

What excuse-makers we are! What foolish and silly things we do in trying to cover up our own laziness and failure! We think we fool others when in fact we scarcely fool ourselves.

A friend of mine, a succesful business man, recently told me of an experience of his college days which he has never forgotten. He was in class one morning with lessons unprepared. He had spent the night before in social activity. There was a post in the classroom in front of his seat. Feeling guilty, he tried to hide behind it. The professor noticed it, singled him out by saying, "Come out Mr. ———. You'll never make your mark behind a post."

We will never succeed in life by trying to escape reality. Such procedure is like the ostrich trying to hide his head in the sand.

The Alcoholics Anonymous, that organization which is doing so much to reclaim chronic alcoholics, has discovered that most victims of this disease have acquired it trying to escape reality. Science has proven that alcohol is not a stimulant to the nervous system, but a depressant. It offers its victim only temporary escape from his problems.

Life's problems cannot be escaped by fleeing from them; in the end they always catch up with us. All of us were placed on this earth by Almighty God, who has an individual plan for each individual life. That plan contains the solution for every problem which will face us. When we find the plan, we will find with it the solution. Our main task is to find that plan. We will never find it by "hiding behind a post," no matter how big that post may be.

In that book of Biblical wisdom, The Proverbs, we read, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding (selfish wishes). In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths."

All of us want to lead happy lives. We want success and the acclaim of our fellow man. We all want to feel important in our relations with others. Self-sufficiency is hard to acquire, and impossible to maintain. God-sufficiency is the only answer. It enables us to say, "Our sufficiency is of God." When we have that, when we are in partnership with Almighty God, we can say with Saint Paul, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me."

You will never make your mark by hiding behind a post. Come out and meet your God and face your fellow man. You will then be able to live in peace and happiness.

Intellectual Fever

Dear Sir:

Occasionally upon picking up the Daily Tar Heel lying at my door, I brouse through its pages and come across an article or letter bearing traces of true scholasticism. It is really gratifying to find that there are a few students left, usually of General College, who have not yet fell to the fever of the intellectual frustration that claims the ranks of our upperclassmen.

When I use the word intellectual, I do not imply the meanings which seem so frightening to the average person. I do imply those meanings, however, which imply an intelligent reaction to the intellectual stimuli all around us. When I say that so many of us are intellectually frustrated, I simply mean that for some reason or other we have allowed our natural mental impulses to be supressed, even in the face of the most potent intellectual stimuli. There is a law against such action which says that "any supression of a natural law is bound to cause reaction, by producing the same result with a slightly perverted detraction."

The natural law in this case is that a certain species of animal called the Homo Sapians must by the nature of their heritage think. If we of the species choose to thwart this impulse, the reaction is that we think; but with a "perverted attraction" there is created a void section of the brain called the preconscious. Here the desired thought take place, but with no consequence to the state of awareness that we now have assumed. This new state of awareness is Social consciousness. Under its influence we are only aware in a sense that life becomes a panorama of ego compensations, such as making social noises at one another, eternally trying to act natural in an unatural society, and covering up blunders caused by sudden bursts of the preconscious. The effects of all this is intellectual frustration. Nature requires that we who goe to college think, but at this University nature certainly suffers a delusion. In an atmosphere of what should give rise to perfect development, I find the odor stale.

Students to Grade Faculty

Ann ARBOR, Mich. — I.P.— Student ratings of their instructors and courses will be a part of a new and inclusive plan for evaluation of faculty services recently adopted by the faculty of the University of Michigan College of Literature, Science and Arts.

Expected to go into effect on an experimental basis during the current academic year, the plan also calls for judgement of faculty services by faculty committees from each teaching department. Results of such evaluations of teaching, research, administration and public service are to be available to the faculty members themselves and also to university personnel officers.

"Successful teaching is to be regarded as a primary factor in the new evaluation system," a report by the Committee on College Problems points out. "It is a first obligation of an educational institution to provide good teaching and encourage proper advisory relationships between a teacher and his students."

In addition to the student ratings of instruction and course content, the evaluation of a faculty member's teaching effectiveness will include information concerning enrollment and grades in his classes, teaching activities outside the classroom, and reports of colleagues and counselors, the report notes.

Students will be asked to "grade" their instructors according to a printed form distributed in the classroom at the end of the semester. These ratings ask the student to check the quality of instruction under such headings as "clarity of assignments, presentation of subject matter, success in keeping students alert in class, availability for consultation with students." Each student will also be asked to rate the course, regardless of the quality of instruction.

Goldfish Fad May Return

By R. Foo Giduz

The campus chain letter craze seems to have been replaced recently by Creeps, Turtles, and holiday hopefulness....But N. C.'s No. 1 promoter Carl Goerch had a neat new twist on this scourge on his Sunday evening broadcast:—Says an inspired gent recently sent United States Controller General Lindsay Warren (UNC Alumnus, too) a chain letter from Reno....No money required. Just send copies of the letter to five friends, wrap up your wife and send her to the name at the top of the list....When your name comes to the top you should receive 2438 women!..... One jerk broke the chain and got his own wife back!

From here it doesn't seem the Freshmen can have any kickback on their elections which were held Tuesday....And from the whole freshmen class, only 19 turned up at an elections mass meeting Monday.... All credit should go to Elections board chairman Al Winn anyhow, for doing a fops job of carrying out the rules despite the customary poor voting response....

Creeps took a popular twist last week as the evil geniuses of the ATO house came up with the decision that diminutive Peggy Pierce was the peoples' choice for Creep of the Week, and practically Creep of the Crop .....It seems Creeps are being surpassed in popularity by a new membership organization: High Grand Snapper Al Moore just sold the 120th membership card in the local Turtles club yesterday. This bunch has a real and constructive purpose, though not particularly printable....Al says the outfit started in Richmond during the weekend of the William and Mary game. When their hotel room got too crowded they decided to allow only members of the Turtle club entrance..... And the idea proved so practical it's now spread to the Maryland, Harvard, Yale, and South Carolina campuses!

.....Dunno, but here's a hunch the days of goldfish swallowing are on the way back!
